AUGUST 15, 1900, the following notice, was sent to the many members of the Pike Family in America:—

The Reunion of the Pike Family will be held at Salisbury, Mass., Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 11 and 12, 1900.

Pursuant to the above call, upon the said Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 11th and 12th, 1900, at Hotel Cushing, Salisbury Beach, Mass., was held the first grand reunion of the great family of Pike and their descendents in America.

Over 2,000 of the above circular letters of invitation to this reunion had been sent out over the continent wherever the name had been found, by Dr. Clifford L. Pike of Saco, Me., who with the Hon. Edwin B. Pike of Pike's Station, N. H., and others had conceived and carried this idea to its final completion.

A committee had been chosen in behalf of the family and its friends, to look after the interests of the reunion. This committee consisted of John Broadhead Pike as chairman, John Q. Evans, Secretary, and True B. Pike, Dr. Jacob F. Spalding, Fred G. Brown, Amy Pike Brown; Miss Hattie Pike of East Boston, Mrs. Lizzie C. Pike, Derry, N. H., Capt. John F. Pike, Worcester, Mrs. Annie Pike Snow, Newburyport and Mrs. Mary Lewis to whose uniting efforts the success of the occasion was largely due. A Brass Band of sixteen pieces had been provided: the Postoffice closed by an order from Washington, D. C; reduced fares on all electric roads; the homes of all the old settlers had been looked up and the Hon. Wm. H. Moody, Congressman from the Sixth Congressional District of Massachusetts, had been invited to speak to us in honor of the occasion and every comfort and convenience was provided by the manager of Hotel Cushing.

THE PIKE FAMILY OF SALISBURY.

MR. CHAIRMAN:—You may somewhat wonder at my being selected to speak to you of the "Pike Family" of Salisbury being not closely related to them, but as of the eighth generation from Major Robert Pike whose daughter Elizabeth married William Carr and also by a second line from Israel the sister of the Major's, who married Henry True; I consider myself as in good and regular standing in this reunion.

As a resident of the town of Salisbury I join with others in extending a welcome to each and all of you to the old town of your honored ancestors. A town which has for 260 years been the home of the family and from whence have gone out many representatives who have honored the name of Pike. Nevertheless we have within our town many representatives of the name and our voting list shows no less than 30 names out of our 400 voters.

When John Pike and his five children landed in this country in 1635 and took up their residence on the banks of the Parker river in Newbury they found awaiting them the task of subduing the wilderness.

Such men as John Pike and his two stalwart sons, John and Robert must have been a valuable addition to the little settlement and have found ample scope for all of their energies.

Of John we know little beyond the names of his family. That he came in the "James" from Southampton and while called "Laborer from Langford" "this may have been but a deception to conceal a more noted person from tyrannical regulations."

The probabilities are that John Pike was a man of liberal education and much natural ability not only from his having two sons, who ranked so high in later years in the history of this colony and that of the New Jersey, but from some evidence of John's personal ability. The court records show that he acted as attorney in two cases and successfully in each occasion.

He seems to have made his home in his last years with his son, Robert in Salisbury where he died in 1654, leaving property to the amount of £230, comprising nearly £15 in clothing. His home and land at Newbury and land at the new town (Salisbury.) His will made two days before his death gave his estate to his sons and £20 to each of his three daughters, Dorothy, Ann and Israel.

John, the elder son, continued to live in Newbury until about 1670 when he moved to Woodbridge, N. J., where he became the leading man of the community. Its president and the ancestor of that branch of the family. One of his sons Joseph continued to live in Salisbury and Hav-erhill for some years.

When the town of Salisbury was settled in 1638 we find the younger son Robert then a young man of 22, one of the 60 odd pioneers who crossed the Merrimac to dispute with the red man and the wolf the possession of the soil. In the choice of a house lot fortune seems to have favored him with two acres in the corner of the way to Hampton and way to the great neck (now the beach road.) This land being now in possession of Mr. D. M. Deal. Here he built his home and where was born to him a family of three sons and four daughters, who reached mature years. Together with others of the "commoners" he received allotments of land in all of the divisions, the chief of which were his pasture now the home of the Pikes on the old ferry road, 100 acres at Batt's hill and a large division at Amesbury. This land he mostly disposed of by deed of gift to his children during his life leaving only a moderate estate at his death. His home and lot of three acres he gave to his grandson Robert, son of Robert, the year prior to his decease, who later sold it to his father-in-law, William Hook, Jr., and moved to Exeter. To his younger son Moses he deeded his pasture where he later settled and which has been in the family to this day.

Of Robert Pike's public services I shall have little to say leaving to others more competent the task of eulogizing one so eminently entitled thereto.

He early took a prominent position in the militia being a Lieutenant at 32, captain at 37 and Major when 41 years of age. During King Philip's war, he was in command of all the forces of Norfolk Co., Mass., and those located in the State of Maine. As early as 1650 he was what would now be called a trial justice and in 1672 an associate judge of the courts of Norfolk Co. In political life a member of the General Court when 32 and of the Governor's Council from 1682 to 1696, when having reached the age of 80 years he retired to the private life of the farm.

In local affairs a selectman from 1661 to 1677 and on many responsible committees. Of his public services his denunciation of the General Court for enacting a law to forbid any but ordained ministers from preaching and for which he brought down upon his head the viols of their wrath. This and his defense of the witches so far as to question the value of testimony given against them were events in his life which were far-reaching and the right of petition as well as the right of honest and impartial trial have been legacies left by him for which the whole country yea the world itself can do homage to his memory.

It has been said that he was a man of much strength and of a robust constitution. Tradition states that on the voyage to this country he asked the captain for an increase of rations. When questioned as to his need of more food by a display of strength he took a large iron bar and bent it into a U form. This so surprised the captain that his request was granted.

Again his trips to Boston when 80 years of age on horseback a two day's ride shows that a rugged physique must have been given him. The last ten years of his life was passed in the quiet of his town, where he died Dec. 12, 1706, at the age of ninety-one.

His son John in his Journal says his father was very temperate in eating and drinking. Buried in the old yard on the Beach road no stone now marks his resting-place.

There is in the rooms of the Massachusetts Historical Society a painting which has been copied and thought by some to be that of Major Robert Pike. It is however more probable that of Dr. Robert, son of Rev. John Pike of Dover.

Of his children, Sarah married Wymond, son of Thomas

Bradbury and for her second husband, John Stockman. She lived near the present residence of Dr. Spaulding. A son, Wymond Bradbury, married Maria, the daughter of Rev. John Cotton of Plymouth and the sister of the wife of Rev. James Allen, the third minister of Salisbury, and were ancestors of Theophilus Bradbury of Newburyport, a noted judge and representative to Congress.

Pardon a slight digression but I wish to speak a few words of Thomas Bradbury, the co-worker and relative of Major Pike. The first town clerk of the town holding the office for some fifty-four years, a selectman, captain of militia, the first school teacher of the town, a man of thorough education, he wrote most of the legal papers all of which testify to his excellent penmanship and thorough education. His wife in her old age accused of witchcraft, was released, (in large part) through the efforts of her old friend and neighbor, Major Robert Pike. Another daughter, Dorothy married Joshua Pierce and for her second husband, John Light, while Elizabeth married William Carr, son of George, the noted shipbuilder and ferryman.

Of his sons, John married Sarah, daughter of Rev. Joshua Moody. He preached at Dover and Hampton. A leading minister of the times using no notes. Of his eight children one Robert was a physician of some note.

The second son made his home with his father and died in 1690, leaving a son Robert, who received the homestead of his grandfather.

The third son, Moses, ancestor of the Pikes of Salisbury received of his father a large tract of land on the ferry road. Here he built his house and here his descendents have lived to the present day. His wife was Susanna, daughter of Timothy Worcester and grand-daughter of Rev. William, the first minister of Salisbury and a man of great learning and piety.

Of his eight children, two sons settled out of town, Timothy at Newbury where a son, Timothy moved to Maine and his son William resided in Calais. The father of James Shepherd Pike, the famous war correspondent of the New York Tribune and another of the "New Puritan." A brother, Frederick, was one of Maine's most able lawyers, Representative to Congress, who gave many thousand dollars to the erection of the public library of that city.

The youngest son, Joseph, settled in Kensington, his son Joseph moved to Maine and was the ancestor of Dr. Clifford L. Pike to whom we are all under obligations for the success of this meeting.

Of his other two sons, who stayed in town, Elias was a captain in the militia and selectman for eleven terms. He married Joanna, daughter of Rev. James Allen, and had two sons, Moses, who was ancestor of the branch of the family represented by the Pikes now living on the ferry road and among his descendents are Rev. James Pike, a noted clergyman in the Methodist church, was graduated at Wesleyan University and a presiding-elder for several terms, Representative to Congress for two terms and Colonel of the 16th N. H. Volunteers. A brother, Moses K., was of the board of selectmen and emigrated to Minnesota. His son, James Frederick, is now one of the leading lawyers of Seattle, Washington.

The remaining son, John, probably lived on the homestead of his father and had five sons. Jacob and Elias are the ancestors of the Rings Island branch of the family, while Capt. James probably inherited a portion of the property of his father. He had twelve children, six sons and six daughters. The oldest, John, married Mary Pet-tengill and had sons, James, John, Nicholas and Joseph. Another son, Silas, lived on the road to the beach and had sons, John, William, Josiah, Israel, Joseph and Charles.

The Pike Family of Salisbury have been given largely to agricultural pursuits and I find no records of their being engaged in manufacturing and only to a small extent in the way of trade.

The strong robust constitution seems to have come down through all the generations and is today perceived in the members of the family. Many stories are in existence of the ability to labor by certain members of the family, one of them mowing a three acre field before breakfast and then hurrying home to get ready to do a day's work or of working all day unloading a cargo from a vessel at Newburyport coming home and mowing a five acre piece of marsh, during the night and at work unloading the vessel the following day.

Again the Pikes have married well and in their veins courses the blood of Worcester and Allen, leading ministers of Salisbury, Bradbury of whom I have spoken, of Rev. John Cotton of Plymouth, of the Moodys, Stevens, Frenches, Hooks, Smiths, Eatons, Pettengills and others of the most substantial families of the town.

As a result of the mingling of such blood has been produced a family who have been a credit to our town. In most cases of some means, if not absolutely well to do citizens, of high moral character.

During the more than two and a half centuries which have elapsed since the family was first established in the town many and vast have been the changes which have taken place on every hand. From the horseback ride of two days to Boston to that of the time by steam to only a single hour might serve as an illustration of the march of progress, or as the few farmers who came to the beach for their salt hay as compared to this beautiful village by the sea with its spacious hotels and electric communications. Of Major Robert Pike's brave defense of the nearby towns from attack by the Indians to the present time when we all dwell in absolute peace and safety.

Mr. Chairman my time has expired and I close with my best wishes for a prosperous session, a pleasant visit to an old town and grand old beach and that when you go from us you may retain pleasant memories of this visit and the wish to continue to hold your re-unions here in future years.

A TRIBUTE TO ROBERT PIKE.

AN ORIGINAL POEM.

No standard hold our peaceful days,
To weigh the great man's meed of praise.
To him, and such as with him came,
For love and truth, and not for fame
We cannot render honor due,
We cannot feel the ills they knew.
The watchful nights, the toilsome days
The hungry waiting for the maize.

Have we been forced to guard our own
Our wives or children and hearthstone
From dreaded beasts that prowl at night
And the fierce red man's savage might?

He never must his guard forego
Although the corn might need the hoe,
Though all the store of winter's wood
A waiting giant oak tree stood,
He, who must bear his heavy sack
Of grain to mill upon his back,
Through forests pathless, wild and dark
And echoing with the grey wolf's bark.
No grocer came with book in hand,
Anticipating each demand;
No meat in heavy piled-up cart
For him to choose the choicest part.

His daughters seven though fair, I ween
In silk attire were never seen.
The little hand-loom's busy toil
Must furnish them with wardrobes, all.
The rude brick oven, grim and black
Held place within the chimney stack,
And yawned each week, with mouth wide-spread,
To swallow pans of coarse, brown bread,

Which hurrying girls must mix and knead,
Then hie them back, their wheels to tread.

When, with his boys he came at noon
In answer to the sounding horn
Did he not long to rest, I trow
Beneath the spicy balsam bough,
While August suns were fiercely hot,
And rustling corn was tasseled out.
To dream of English lanes so cool,
The hedge-rows white, the dimpling pool
He loved in early childhood days?
The red-cheeked boys who shared his plays?
Ah, no such bed of ease for him,—
But work, and watch, and battle grim.

Arm! Arm! the word passed swiftly on,
The call for men to march and join
In one strong band, to check the wrath
And barbarous Pequods, from the north!
No stately highway led him on
From village into village borne;
No fiery locomotive screamed
A summons as he sleeping dreamed;
No trolley halted at his door,
To bear him straight to Boston shore.
There to embark on craft that flew,
Swift as the wind the water through,
But painful walk in oozy slime
That to the knee rose many a time,
Or tangled undergrowth of thorn,
Or snaky fen, or goblin's torn.

Above the narrowness of creed;
Down to our ears has come his deed,
That bade the titling man beware
To use the lash, but rather spare
The weeping woman of renown
Who walked a culprit through the town.

Would I could paint him for you now,
Just as he lived so long ago,
Three hundred years and fifty more,
But, as I mentioned once before;
We have no standard in these days,
To weigh the great man's meed of praise.

Voted to adjourn, to meet again at Hotel Cushing, Salisbury Beach, some time during the early part of the summer season of 1901, at such time as shall be fixed by the Executive Committee.

Adjournment of the Meeting.

HOW THE WOMEN WENT FROM DOVER.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

The following is a copy of the warrant issued by Major Waldron, of Dover, in 1662. The Quakers, as was their wont, prophesied against him, and saw, as they supposed, the fulfillment of their prophecy when, many years after, he was killed by the Indians.

To the constables of Dover, Hampton, Salisbury, Newbury, Rowley, Ipswich, Wenham, Lynn, Boston, Roxbury, Dedham, and until these vagabond Quakers are carried out of this jurisdiction.

You and every one of you are required, in the King's Majesty's name, to take these vagabond Quakers, Anne Colman, Mary Tomkins, and Alice Ambrose, and make them fast to the cart's tail, and driving the cart through your several towns, to whip them upon their naked backs not exceeding ten stripes apiece on each of them, in each town; and so to convey them from constable to constable till they are out of this jurisdiction, as you will answer it at your peril; and this shall be your warrant.

RICHARD WALDRON.

Dated at Dover, December 22, 1662.

This warrant was executed only in Dover and Hampton. At Salisbury the constable refused to obey it. He was sustained by the town's people, who were under the influence of Major Robert Pike, the leading man in the lower valley of the Merrimac, who stood far in advance of his time, as an advocate of religious freedom, and an opponent of ecclesiastical authority. He had the moral courage to address an able and manly letter to the court at Salem, remonstrating against the witchcraft trials.

The tossing spray of Cocheco's fall
Hardened to ice on its rocky wall,
As through Dover town, in the chill, gray dawn,
Three women passed, at the cart-tail drawn!

Bared to the waist, for the north wind's grip
And keener sting of the constable's whip,
The blood that followed each hissing blow
Froze as it sprinkled the winter snow.

Priest and ruler, boy and maid
Followed the dismal cavalcade;
And from door and window, open thrown,
Looked and wondered gaffer and crone.

"God is our witness," the victims' cried,
"We suffer for Him who for all men died;
The wrong ye do has been done before,
We bear the stripes that the Master bore!

"And thou, O Richard Waldron, for whom
We hear the feet of a coming doom,
On thy cruel heart and thy hand of wrong
Vengeance is sure, though it tarry long.

"In the light of the Lord, a flame we see
Climb and kindle a proud roof-tree;
And beneath it an old man lying dead,
With stains of blood on his hoary head."

"Smite, Goodman Hate-Evil!—harder still!"
The magistrate cried, "lay on with a will!
Drive out of their bodies the Father of Lies,
Who through them preaches and prophecies!"

So into the forest they held their way,
By winding river and frost-rimmed bay,
Over wind-swept hills that felt the beat
Of the winter sea at their icy feet.

The Indian hunter, searching his traps,
Peered stealthily through the forest gaps;
And the outlying settler shook his head,—
"They're witches going to jail," he said.

At last a meeting-house came to view;
A blast on his horn the constable blew;
And the boys of Hampton cried up and down,
"The Quakers have come!" to the wondering town.

From barn and woodpile the goodman came;
The goodwife quitted her quilting frame,
With her child at her breast; and, hobbling slow,
The grandam followed to see the show,

Once more the torturing whip was swung,
Once more keen lashes the bare flesh stung.
"Oh, spare! they are bleeding!" a little maid cried,
And covered her face the sight to hide.

A murmur ran round the crowd: "Good folks,"
Quoth the constable, busy counting the strokes,
"No pity to wretches like these is due,
They have beaten the gospel black and blue!"

Then a pallid woman, in wild-eyed fear,
With her wooden noggin of milk drew near.
"Drink, poor hearts!" A rude hand smote
Her draught away from a parching throat.

"Take heed," one whispered, "they'll take your cow
For fines, as they took your horse and plow,
And the bed from under you." "Even so,"
She said. "They are cruel as death I know."

Then on they passed, in the waning day,
Through Seabrook woods, a weariful way;
By great salt meadows and sand-hills bare,
And glimpses of blue sea here and there.

By the meeting-house in Salisbury town,
The sufferers stood, in the red sun-down,
Bare for the lash! O pitying Night,
Drop swift thy curtain and hide the sight!

With shame in his eye and wrath on his lip
The Salisbury constable dropped his whip.
"This warrant means murder foul and red;
Cursed is he who serves it," he said.

"Show me the order, and meanwhile strike
A blow at your peril!" said Justice Pike.
Of all the rulers the land possessed,
Wisest and boldest was he, and best.

He scoffed at witchcraft; the priest he met
As man meets man; his feet he set
Beyond his dark age, standing upright,
Soul-free, with his face to the morning light.

He read the warrant: "*These convey
From our precincts; at every town on the way
Give each ten lashes.*" "God judge the brute!
I tread his order under my foot!

"Cut loose these poor ones and let them go;
Come what will of it, all men shall know
No warrant is good, though backed by the Crown,
For whipping women in Salisbury town!"

The hearts of the villagers, half released
From creed of terror and rule of priest,
By a primal instinct owned the right
Of human pity in law's despite.

For ruth and chivalry only slept,
His Saxon manhood the yeoman kept;
Quicker or slower, the same blood ran
In the Cavalier and the Puritan.

The Quakers sank on their knees in praise
And thanks. A last, low sunset blaze
Flashed out from under a cloud, and shed
A golden glory on each bowed head.

The tale is one of an evil time,
When souls were fettered and thought was crime,
And heresy's whisper above its breath
Meant shameful scourging and bonds and death!

What marvel, that hunted and sorely tried,
Even woman rebuked and prophesied,
And soft words rarely answered back
The grim persuasion of whip and rack!

If her cry from the whipping-post and jail
Pierced sharp as the Kenite's driven nail,
O woman, at ease in these happier days,
Forbear to judge of thy sister's ways!

How much thy beautiful life may owe
To her faith and courage thou canst not know,
Nor how from the paths of thy calm retreat
She smoothed the thorns with her bleeding feet.
