PREFACE.

The following pages contain what I have been able to gather of the history of the descendants of John Smith, born in Ireland in 1686, died in Uwchlan, Chester Co., Pa., December 19, 1765; and his wife, Susanna, born in Ireland in 1691, died in Uwchlan, Chester Co., Pa., December 24, 1767.

The search for material for this record has been prolonged for thirty-three years, and while something more could still be found by patient work, it is not worth while to withhold longer from publication what has been collected.

The inquest really goes a little further back, to John Smith, born about 1655, who never left Ireland, but of whose children, three came to America, and are known to us. Of the second child, Mary Smith, who married William Fulton, some record is preserved for four generations, her family record ceasing, so far as it is hereinafter disclosed, with her great-great-grand-children. The descendants of the younger brother, Joseph Smith, are followed for three generations, and cease with his great-grand-children.

But the two younger members of the family who came to this country are merely introduced herein to connect them with John Smith, their older brother, and to give to any one who wishes to follow out the history of those families a start where the traditions may be a little blind.

Much care has been taken to get all the facts that have been here assembled, though it has been mostly expended in the last few years.

It will be seen that, of the fifteen children of John and Susanna Smith, who were mostly born in America, and are herein called Generation XVI, four persons are unnamed; two more, Jacob and Samuel, did not marry, and of five more, John, Abraham, Isaac, Elizabeth and Susanna, I have found no record coming down to the present time; this account is therefore largely of the descendants of the remaining children, James, Robert, Mary and Sarah; and of these, the oldest, James, has not left much record, so that the story hereinafter told concerns chiefly at the present time the descendants of the three remaining children, Robert, Mary and Sarah. In the last Generation that has approached completion, XXI, which contains 848 names, 11 of them are descended from James Smith; 558 from Robert Smith; 254 from Mary Smith, and 25 from Sarah Smith, so that the record is largely of the families of Robert and Mary Smith.

Several causes may be assigned for this marked variation in the number of recorded descendants. Six of the original fifteen are supposed to have died unmarried, the only doubt being in the case of Jacob, of whom it is thought by some persons that there may have been descendants, he having gone West in early life. The record is too obscure to follow; at all events, there are no descendants of his recorded in this place. Isaac's family is known to have run out with his son Edward. The families of John, Abraham and Elizabeth probably removed to the South or West, and no trace of them remains, while the family of Susanna seems to have left Chester county.

The family of Robert is the best known of all the children of John Smith, and they have been traced up most completely; and the family of Mary have been the next most carefully traced, though they have scattered through the Southwest, and more of them, perchance, are missing.

The net result is that we have a pretty full history of these two children's descendants, and the rest are fragmentary and partial, James' descendants being but few, and Sarah's but innumerable, though they, too, are scattered, and have not all been found.

The record may be said to be fairly full down to the XIX Generation, the births in which ran from XIX 12, born in 1807 to XIX 248, born in 1866, being mostly born from 1820 to 1860. These are now all people of adult years, and were ready to give some details about themselves; but after that time dates of birth became more difficult to secure, and had to be omitted in many cases. After that Generation the details are more meagre, many persons who were applied to failing to give what was necessary, and some showing unwillingness to contribute much information.

The net result that has been achieved is to link the present Smith family to the earliest records now known, and to trace a number of them so far down that each can take it up for himself, if he wishes to continue the search further.

Pains have been taken to get as much information as possible in regard to everybody whose name has been mentioned in the record, but the fullness of the account in some cases, compared with the slightness in others, will show the different accessibility of the information desired. Several persons took up the search quite willingly, and pursued it zealously, but in general it was more sparingly followed, and with much less success.

There will probably be some errors in the dates given, though care was taken to get correct ones. Family records have not been kept in many cases, and several of the existing dates are somewhat conflicting.

The residences of the various persons named are only approximately accurate, as many of them may have removed elsewhere by the present time.

More accurate records are desirable. If any one thinks that he can correct any errors of statement found in this account, he is requested to write to the compiler of this book, and should any considerable amount of information be obtained in this way, it can be published at some future time, and distributed to those who may have bought the record.

Let it be understood that the purpose of this publication is chiefly to bring together what can be gathered now, and to let it be printed before it shall be forgotten.

THE SMITH FAMILY

EARLY HISTORY.

BUT little is accurately known of the history of the Smith family before the emigration of John Smith to America in 1720.

An early tradition asserts that the name was originally Macdonald, and that one of the family, apparently a farmer with some skill in farriery, replaced for King William III a shoe which had been cast by his horse about the time of the battle of the Boyne (July 1, 1690). The action was of sufficient importance to give the man a surname, "the Smith," which, as names were frequently given in those days on account of some personal peculiarity, or from some incident in a man's history, became in time adopted as the name of his family.

There is much reason for accepting this tradition as true. It has currency among several branches of the family, which, though separated from each other from the first generation of the residence of the family in America, still keep this story in their recollection, so that it apparently came here with the emigrants.

Joseph Smith (XVII 19), a grandson of the emigrant, who was born at the old family home in Chester county in 1770, only five years after his grandfather's death, was a merchant of Philadelphia in the early years of the nineteenth century. He was engaged in the eastern trade with China and India, and about one hundred years ago he imported for his own household two sets of dinner china. One of these, of "the willow pattern," was for ordinary use, and the other, for important occasions, was of white china, decorated to order in China with what he always maintained were the Smith arms. Pieces of this service are still in existence, and persons familiar with heraldic devices say that the arms which they bear are unquestionably those of the clan Macdonald.

Joseph's son, Persifor Frazer Smith (XVIII 65), an able lawyer and therefore a judge of evidence, said many years ago that the tradition was a very ancient one, and that he had no doubt of its authenticity; and in the family of Isaac Smith (XVII 18), another grandson of the emigrant, it is held that the Macdonald who first took the name of Smith was named "John," and that he was the father of the emigrant.

The truth of this statement is assumed in this record.

Mark Antony Lower, in his book on family surnames, says that the name of Macdonald is certainly one of the oldest and most important in Scotland, and that the chiefs are descended from Somerled, Lord of Argyle and king of the Isles, who flourished in the twelfth century.

Andrew Lang, in his history of Scotland, gives a table showing the descent of the Macdonald chieftains from Somerlett, Lord of Argyle, who married Ragnhildis, daughter of Olave the Swarthy, in 1140, and died in 1161. His grandson, Donald Macdonald, of Isla and South Kintire, married a daughter of Walter the Steward, who was the ancestor of the Stewart kings of Scotland and England. From this marriage the present family of Macdonald is descended.

The islands of Islay and Kintire approach the Irish coast very nearly, less than fifteen miles of water separating the latter island from Antrim, and intercourse across the narrow channel has been frequent from very remote times.

In 1400 John Mor (Big John), the second son of the head of the Clandonald (another appellation of the Macdonalds or sons of Donald), married Marjory Bisset, heiress of "the Glens," in Antrim, Ireland, and the clan thus acquired a permanent footing there.

Other marriages by cadets of the clan followed, and the Macdonalds steadily strengthened their position in Antrim until their increasing influence aroused the jealousy of the other settlers, including the O'Neills and the O'Donnells, who had previously been paramount there, and in 1565 the Macdonalds suffered a severe defeat at the hands of Shane O'Neill, Earl of Tyrone, Tyrone being the next county west of Antrim.

In the next twenty years, however, they recovered themselves, and made great headway under their chief, Sorley Buy Macdonald, stirring up such serious strife thereby as to cause the English to interfere in the quarrel between them and the neighboring chieftains. Sorley Buy was defeated in the appeal to arms, and in the negotiations which followed was forced to surrender some of the property which he claimed, and to content himself with four districts, which were assigned to him in permanence.

His eldest son, Sir James MacSorley Buy, known as "MacDonell of Dunluce," succeeded him, and was a strenuous supporter of James VI of Scotland upon his accession to the throne of England in 1603.

The branch of the Macdonald family in which we are specially interested removed during the seventeenth century from Antrim, journeying about sixty miles to the southwestward, into county Monaghan, in which county there is still a village called Smithborough, on the line of the Ulster canal.

At the time when this family history commences they were living in county Monaghan, and were warmly attached to the Presbyterian church. They were farmers, holding their lands under lease. When their leases expired, about 1718, not only was an increased rental demanded as a condition of renewal, but the tenants were required to subscribe to the doctrinal articles of the Church of England, under the provisions of what was rather absurdly called the "Toleration Act."

Neither of these conditions was satisfactory to these sturdy people, who were staunch Presbyterians, and as they had but little property interest in Ireland, and no hereditary attachment to its soil, they decided to follow the current which was then setting westward across the Atlantic so strongly as to threaten to depopulate the whole province of Ulster. Six thousand persons came from that province to America before 1729, and before the middle of the eighteenth century the migration was at the rate of twelve thousand annually for several years.

John Smith (XV 1) is said to have married about seven years before his emigration, and to have had five children upon his arrival in America. He left Ireland with his family, probably early in the year 1720. The voyage was so tempestuous that the emigrants encountered great danger, and were much delayed, but they came at last safely to land with all their belongings, and with one more child than they started with, Robert having been born during the passage across the ocean.

On their arrival in America they proceeded promptly to what was then called "the Brandywine Settlement," in Chester Co., Pennsylvania, which had been started by some of their countrymen who had very shortly preceded them, and which developed in the first half of the eighteenth century into a great Scotch-Irish community. The country near Philadelphia had been largely taken up by the earlier emigration of the Quakers, who were mainly from southern and western England. Back of them, and to their northward, in and about the Great Valley of Chester county, the Welsh settlers had made their home, and the north-of-Ireland men, when they came, pushed on to the hilly country in the northern and western part of what is now Chester county, occupying the territory which forms the several Uwchlan and Brandywine townships, and stretches thence southward along the boundary between Chester and Lancaster counties down nearly to the Maryland state line.

Racial and religious animosities were vigorous among the hardy pioneers, who, though they all wanted freedom of worship, thought it could best be had by each sect, if it settled where nobody wanted to worship in a way differing from its own. It thus came to pass that this part of Pennsylvania was largely divided into small independent communities, each homogeneous as to race, as to religious form of worship, and as to creed.

John Smith settled in what is now Upper Uwchlan township, on the Conestoga road, where Black Horse creek crosses it, and near the confluence of that stream with Marsh creek, both being tributaries of the East branch of the Brandywine creek. The place is about two miles west of Byers station on the Pickering Valley railroad.

The land was not quite so fertile there as in the western part of the Great Valley, which was still unoccupied, but that section was probably more heavily wooded and somewhat damp, while hilly Uwchlan was dryer. The limestone water of the valley is said to have been distasteful to the newcomers, and it is also probable that they settled themselves near some of the families which had been their neighbors in Ireland, and had migrated a year or two earlier.

John Smith's great-grandson, Rev. John N. C. Grier (XVIII 28), who spent his long life at Brandywine Manor, five miles to the westward of John Smith's home, said that John Smith very soon after his arrival in America bought a farm in Uwchlan township, and moved into the house then standing upon it. Many years afterward he built another house on the same farm. This house was repaired, from time to time, without much alteration, and is at present a substantial stone dwelling in fairly good repair, with good out-buildings around it.

John Smith and Susanna, his wife, prospered in their new place for nearly half a century, so far as to make a comfortable home for themselves and their numerous band of children; but they were too busy to leave much written note of what they did during their lives.

The public records show that this John Smith was among the holders of real estate in Uwchlan township in 1753, and was, in 1756 and 1757, one of the subscribers to the support of the Presbyterian church in the forks of the Brandywine, now usually called the "Brandywine Manor Church;" but we know little more of the details of their history.

They were both buried in the eastern of the two graveyards attached to that church, and their tombstone, a large slab of marble, covering a rectangular erection of stone masonry, bears the inscription:

"Sacred to the memory of John Smith who died Dec. 19, 1765.

Ætatis 79, and Susanna his wife who died Dec. 24, 1767.

Ætatis 76, parents of fifteen children.

An honest man's the noblest work of God.

The virtuous woman's a crown to her husband."

John Smith's will was made February 12, 1761, and the codicil was executed January 16, 1764. The will was proved May 28, 1766. Letters were granted to the executors, his sons John and Abraham, August 26, 1766.

The will names his children in the following order: Sons—James, John, Abraham, Robert, Isaac; daughters—Elizabeth, Susanna, Mary and Sarah. These were evidently all that were living at that time. As the will names all the sons first, and then names all the daughters, we can infer nothing as to the order in which his children were born, except that we may conjecture that the list of sons and the list of daughters each puts the children in that list in the order of their seniority.

The will states that all of his daughters were married except Sarah, the youngest. His sons were all married, though the will says nothing about that fact. It does say that each of his children had previously received his or her portion; it leaves the home farm, which was in Robert's hands, charged with the maintenance of his mother Susanna, and provides that after her death the remainder of his estate shall be divided between James, John, Abraham, Isaac, Susanna, Mary and Sarah; Robert and Elizabeth, for some reason, being omitted from the list of residuary legatees.

The family name of John Smith's wife Susanna is not known, nor has any tradition reached me in regard to her history or her personality. She outlived her husband two years.

When, after her death, John Smith's farm was sold in final settlement of his estate, it was bought by one of the grandsons of Henry Lewis, probably Evan or James Lewis. It is still owned by one of Henry Lewis' descendants.

Mary Smith (XV 2) probably emigrated with her brother John, unmarried. After her marriage to William Fulton they settled in or near to Lancaster, Pennsylvania, about thirty miles to the westward of John's home. It was well remembered in the family of Robert Smith (XVI 4) that the occasional visits of the family to their aunt Fulton required great preparation. Provision for man and beast was necessary for the journey, which seemed, at least to the younger members of the family, only less important than a return across the ocean to the old home would have been.

The history of Mary Smith's husband must be taken from somewhat discrepant accounts, but the following seems to reconcile fairly the authorities. William Fulton, of Kilkenny, Ireland, was born 1600, and died 1667. His grandson was William Fulton, who, as above stated, married Mary Smith. Their son Robert (XVI 12 of this record), married Mary Smith (XVI 15), who was his cousin, being a daughter of Joseph Smith (XV 3). The occurrence of the two Mary Smiths in different generations has made some confusion in the several published accounts of the ancestry of Robert Fulton, the inventor.

Joseph Smith (XV 3). It is probable, though not certain, that Joseph Smith, who was the youngest of the family, migrated with his brother and sister. He lived in Oxford township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, about twenty-five miles southwest of John's home, the immediate locality being known as "Beetown" from the swarms of honey bees which were kept there.

His will, dated May 22, 1760, probated June 12, 1760, names his wife Isabel, and their children in the order given in the table on page 16; speaks of his daughters Mary and Elizabeth as married—the former to Robert Fulton, the latter to James Criswell—and of his brother John Smith.

No serious attempt is made in this record to trace the descendants of Mary or Joseph Smith, its purpose really being to make note of those persons of whom John Smith (XV 1) is the ancestor. Mary Smith's family is followed somewhat further than Joseph's, but that is chiefly because I found the genealogical record already made. I have made no investigation myself.

The order in which the children of John Smith (XVI) were born is not accurately known, and the time of the birth of several of them is a problem which, after many efforts, I must confess myself unable to solve. The tombstone over the remains of John and Susanna Smith states that they were the parents of fifteen children. It was placed there some years after their death by their children, but this statement can no doubt be relied on.

In John Smith's will he names nine children, and there is a reasonable presumption that the sons are named in the order in which they were born, and that the daughters follow in the order of their birth. The other six children were dead when the will was written in 1761, tradition stating that several of them died in infancy.

It is probable that Rebecca Smith's list shows the order of these children according to the tradition in the family of her grandfather John Smith (XVI 2); that of Elizabeth W. Smith follows the tradition derived from her father Joseph Smith (XVII 17), and that of Henrietta F. Boyd that current in the family of her grandfather Isaac Smith (XVII 19). But each of them presents difficulties, and after a good deal of study I have adopted the order given in the will, which is at least the oldest authority, and agrees with the order given by Rebecca Smith, except that Rebecca has inserted the names of two sons, Jacob and Samuel, who are not named in John Smith's will, and who may have died before it was written.

When we take up the question of the dates of birth of these children we meet other difficulties. Accounts differ as to whether four or five children came with John and Susanna Smith to America. The four authorities cited above concur in naming James as the oldest child. Robert, who was probably the fifth, there being one among the first five who died in infancy, is said to have been born during the voyage from Ireland to America in 1720. But the tombstone in the graveyard of the Upper Octorara church in Chester Co., Pennsylvania, says that James Smith died December, 1785, aged 66 years. This would make his birth in 1719, leaving an interval of only about a year between the first and fifth of the children.

Again Isaac is said to have been born in 1739. He is named next after Robert in his father's will, though an interval of nineteen years appears to separate their births, while only one year elapsed between his birth and that of Sarah, the youngest of the family, between whom and Isaac there were apparently five children.

I have spent a great deal of time trying to evolve some consistent theory as to the order and the dates of birth of the children, and have come to the conclusion that with the existing data the problem is insoluble.

I have, therefore, in the genealogical tables, inserted what dates we have, without attempting, by changing the record as to the order of birth of the children, or by assuming that those who lettered the gravestones have made mistakes in the years of birth, to reconcile the now conflicting data. In placing Jacob and Samuel in the list of the children, as the will of John Smith throws no light on their position, I have followed the next oldest authority, that of Rebecca Smith.

The other four children, who are nowhere named, I assume to have died in infancy.

James Smith (XVI 1) owned and lived upon a farm in what is now Highland township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, about one and a half miles south of Parkesburg. This was his home from 1749 to 1780, in which year he sold it to his son James (XVII 1). He is buried in the graveyard attached to the Upper Octorara Presbyterian church, his tombstone stating that he died December, 1785, aged 66 years.

His will, dated April 12, 1782, probated January 6, 1786, mentions his wife and his children as they are named on page 27. He left to his sons James and John each a plantation, and legacies in money to each of his other children.

His wife, Sarah Wilson, born 1724, died July 11, 1812, was a daughter of Hugh Wilson, of Fallowfield township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, who died in 1725, and his wife Ann. Sarah Wilson is buried at Upper Octorara church.

John Smith (XVI 2), usually spoken of in the records of the day as "the younger," was of East Caln township, Chester county, near Downingtown, Pennsylvania. His name is on the list of those who were owners of land in that township and also in Uwchlan township in 1774. He and Matthew Robertson were, May 5, 1761, granted by the proprietors of Pennsylvania a patent for the land on which was built the Brandywine Manor Presbyterian church; which land they conveyed, May 18, 1761, to Rev. John Carmichael, the pastor, and the trustees of the church. The church edifice which was built at that time was the third in which this congregation worshipped. The first was built of logs in 1734; the second was a frame building, erected in 1744, and the third was a substantial stone building, the largest then existing in northwestern Chester county.

One John Smith is named as an ensign in Captain William Porter's company of the Associated Regiments of Chester county, February 8, 1748. As one of these regiments was raised almost wholly in the townships of East and West Nantmeal, West Calu, Uwchlan and Charlestown, in which section of the county the John Smith under consideration lived, and as he was then of suitable age for this service, it is probable that he was the ensign in question. He was one of the executors named in his father's will.

John Smith "the younger" left no will. Letters of administration upon his estate were granted to Robert Smith, Esq., and James Hayes, October 20, 1803.

His wife, Ann Wilson, was a daughter of Hugh and Ann Wilson, of Fallowfield township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, and was a sister of Sarah Wilson, wife of his brother James Smith.

Abraham Smith (XVI 3) was known as Col. Abraham Smith. I can find no record of his career, except that Elizabeth W. Smith (XVIII 71), in her account of the family, says that he went West. There was a person named Abraham Smith, who obtained distinction in Cumberland county during and after the war of the Revolution, who, as County Lieutenant, had the rank and title of Colonel; but I have no means of identifying him with the subject of this paragraph, and I do not think the two were the same person.

His nephew, Joseph Smith (XVII 17), said in his later life that the prayers made during family worship by his father, Robert Smith, and his uncle Abraham, were the best that he had ever heard. As Joseph was born in 1770, and as he left home about 1788, it is probable that his uncle Abraham must have been in Chester county as late as about 1785, but after that no record of him exists, so far as I know, except that his grand-niece Elizabeth, above quoted, a well-informed woman and a careful inquirer into family history, says that he went West, first to Ohio and afterward to Kentucky. It may be, however, that he went to Virginia. Kentucky seems to have been rather a vague term one hundred years ago. The same authority says that Mary Smith (XVI 9) went to Kentucky, and we know that she went to Virginia, where she spent the rest of her life.

Abraham Smith's wife, Ann Wilson, was a cousin of the Ann Wilson who married Abraham's brother John, and was a daughter of Joseph Wilson, of West Fallowfield township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, born 1701, died

June 26, 1751, and his wife, born Janet McCrea, 1705, died April 8, 1759, daughter of William McCrea. Joseph Wilson was among the taxables of Fallowfield township in 1729, the township not having been divided into East and West Fallowfield till 1743. His will is dated June 19, 1751. He and his wife are buried at Upper Octorara Presbyterian church, which is near Parkesburg, Pennsylvania.

Robert Smith (XVI 4) was born at sea, at the time his parents were making their emigration, in 1720. As his three older brothers seem to have left home to settle on farms in other parts of Chester county, it fell to Robert to remain with or near his parents. The first public record which relates to him is that he was from 1747 to 1758 one of the subscribers to the support of Rev. Andrew Boyd, pastor of Brandywine Manor church. His name is on the list of taxables for West Nantmeal township for 1753, West Nantmeal then adjoining Uwchlan on the northwestward. At the age of 38 he married, and seven years later, upon the death of his father, he succeeded him in the possession of the farm on which he had been brought up.

Before his marriage, in 1757, when the Indians became restless and aggressive along the whole Pennsylvania border, sergeant Robert Smith is recorded as "going to Reading to be qualified," but there is no record that the command to which he belonged was called into action. When he next appears in the records of the time, all of his large family of eleven children, except the youngest, had been born, and he was a man of fifty-five.

The Revolutionary war had broken out, and Pennsylvania was discussing means of protecting Philadelphia, the chief city of the state and of the country, against attack by British ships that were expected to sail up the Delaware river. The American navy was too weak to withstand such an attack, and the accepted plan of defence was based upon obstructions to be placed in the river about Billingsport, four miles below the city. In August, 1775, Robert Smith was thanked by the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania for a model of a machine to be used in handling Chevaux de Frise to be sunk in the Delaware, and he was soon after directed by the council to report on the merits of the rival plans for this work that had been submitted by Govett and Guion.

After the spring freshet of 1776 had subsided, so that the river was low enough to work in with advantage, the council took up this defensive work in earnest, and in June instructed him to take charge of and sink the proposed obstructions in the channel. He remained in charge of this undertaking for nearly a year, during which time he was also engaged in planning the earth works which were included in the same line of defence, the Committee of Safety ordering in January, 1777, that the Committee appointed to view Liberty Island "repair as soon as the season will permit with Robert Smith, John McNeal and David Rittenhous, and lay out such works as they shall think sufficient, and that these gentlemen employ such persons as may be necessary to complete the work."

During these years he was also called into counsel to assist in preparing his native state for self-government, and he sat in the convention which on the 28th of September, 1776, adopted the first state Constitution of Pennsylvania, an important and thoughtful paper, which is said to have had the distinction, among the other advanced positions taken, of having been the first to enact religious liberty into a law.

Robert Smith was at this time a man of comfortable means, of energy and experience, and of extensive influence; and when it was seen that the war upon which the country had entered was one which would call forth all its resources, he was chosen to the work of giving organization and preliminary discipline to the forces of his native county, then the second in population in the state. On the 12th of March, 1777, he was appointed by the Supreme Executive Council to be the Lieutenant of Chester county. Chester county, in 1770, before Delaware county had been separated from it, was officially reported to contain about one-seventh of the taxable persons in Pennsylvania, while Philadelphia contained two-sevenths. This office, whose name and duties were somewhat analogous to those of the King's lieutenants in the counties of the mother country, gave him, with the rank of Colonel, the charge of raising and of preparing in every way the troops to take the field. They remained under his control until called into active service.

He held this responsible position till March 21, 1786, and the "Pennsylvania Archives" relating to these years contain frequent references to the work he was called upon to do. Great sums of money passed through his hands, and that they were all properly accounted for is proved by the report of the Comptroller General of the State, who, near the close of Col. Smith's tenure of office, reported, April 1, 1785, that there was a balance due him from the state of £106 4s 10d. This report was approved by the Supreme Executive Council, and an order was drawn in his favor for the amount.

Besides his duties as County Lieutenant he was elected Sheriff of Chester county, March 29, 1777, and was again chosen to that office November 21, 1778. In October, 1783, he was one of two persons chosen at the popular election, as the custom then was, but the governor, in whom was vested the final decision, selected William Gibbon, the other candidate, and gave him the commission.

Robert Smith served for one term in the State Legislative Assembly in 1785, and was a trustee of the State Loan office, whose function it was to manage the indebtedness of the state. This position he filled till 1787, at which time he retired to private life, being then 67 years of age, and being no longer in robust health. He had grown to be very heavy, weighing about 250 pounds, and twelve years of public life had led him to covet the quiet of home.

His life was prolonged for sixteen years more, which years were spent on his farm in Uwchlan. He retained his activity till an advanced age, but he was disabled by a paralytic stroke some time before his death.

He was long remembered as a man of upright and decided character but of winning manners, and from having been so long in prominent official positions, he was so respected and confided in by his fellow citizens as to be constantly called on as an adviser in difficulties, and an arbitrator in disputes. In his later years he was genial, full of humor, remarkable for the sweetness and evenness of his temper, and was a great reader and lover of books; Young's Night Thoughts and Pope's translation of Homer's Illiad, then in the height of their popularity, are recalled as being among his favorites. He was in many respects considered the foremost man in the community in which he lived.

He was a staunch Presbyterian, a supporter throughout his life of the services of the Brandywine Manor Presbyterian church, of which he was from 1776 a ruling elder, and he brought up his family according to the doctrine and discipline of that church in those days.

He owned, in his later life, two fine farms in Uwchlan township, on the Conestoga road, where it crosses Black Horse creek, near its confluence with Marsh creek, a tributary of the East Branch of the Brandywine.

His will, which is dated May 5, 1800, and was probated January 16, 1804, leaves the plantation on which he lived, his household goods, etc., to his wife for her life. After her death the plantation was sold, and was purchased by Evan or James Lewis, who were relatives of his, being members of a family who for several generations were closely connected with the Smiths by marriage. It still belongs to the estate of Isaac Lewis, who was one of that family.

Robert Smith's wife, Margaret Vaughan, born November 1, 1735, died March 18, 1822, was a daughter of John Vaughan, of Red Lion, Uwchlan township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, and his wife, born Emma Parry. These were both of Welsh families and were of the Baptist faith. John Vaughan, who was born June 5, 1690, and died May 24, 1750, first appears on the records of Chester county in 1718. His wife, born 1700, died 1791, was a daughter of Rowland Parry, who was born about 1665, and died about 1737. He lived in Haverford, Delaware county.

After Robert Smith's death, his widow spent part of her time at the home of Gen. Matthew Stanley, whose wife was her husband's niece, but the latter part of her life was passed in the household of her son Joseph Smith, in Philadelphia. She was remembered by her grandchildren as a small woman, somewhat bent, and in her later years somewhat infirm of temper.

Her wedding ring is still in existence. It is a plain gold ring, bearing the inscription on the inside, "As God decreed, so we agreed."

Isaac Smith (XVI 5) is placed by our two chief authorities fifth on the list of John Smith's children. Some of the other authorities place him last, or next to last of the family, and from the date of his birth given on his tombstone, it seems that he was the youngest of the children, with the exception of Sarah.

It is not, however, certain that the date on Isaac Smith's tombstone is correct. If it is, he was graduated at Princeton college at 16 years of age, and as he was made a tutor immediately after his graduation, it would seem that an error may have been made in that date.

That Isaac alone of John Smith's sons should have been sent to college was partly due, perhaps to his being the youngest son, partly to the easier circumstances of the family, but mainly, no doubt, to his own tastes, as directed by William Dean, the scholarly and devoted pastor of the Brandywine Manor church from 1743 to 1748, who probably first turned Isaac Smith's thoughts towards getting a better education than could be had about his own home.

The records of Princeton college show that Isaac Smith was graduated there in 1755. After his graduation he remained in Princeton as a tutor for a year, and seems to have continued his studies, as he was given in addition to his A.B. degree in 1755, that of A.M. in 1758. He then took up the study of medicine, and was graduated from the Medical school of the University of Pennsylvania in 1762. He settled in Trenton, N. J., where he married in 1763, and that town remained his residence through the rest of his life.

In the controversy which brought about the alienation of the American colonies from the mother country, he took the popular side, and at the outbreak of the war he was Colonel of the First Regiment of Hunterdon Co., New Jersey. He and Samuel Tucker were a committee charged with the conduct of public affairs, and in that capacity he received at 9 A. M., April 24, 1775, and forwarded by express messenger to Philadelphia, then the seat of government, the news of the battle of Lexington, which had been fought five days before. Upon his election in February, 1777, by the legislature of New Jersey, an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of New Jersey, of which court the other members were Robert Morris, Chief Justice, and John Cleves Symmes, Associate Justice, he resigned his military position. He continued to sit in this court for twenty-eight years, a longer time than any one else has held that office. At the close of his fourth term in 1805, as party spirit ran high in the reaction from federalism, which had been predominant from 1789 to 1801, he failed of reelection.

He was also a judge of the United States District Court which had admiralty jurisdiction.

After his retirement from the bench, he became the first president of the Trenton Banking Company, which office he continued to hold till his death.

He was a member of Congress in 1796-7. In 1797 he was appointed by President Washington commissioner to treat with the Seneca Indians. President John Adams, April 12, 1798, advised the United States Senate that a treaty negotiated by Hon. Isaac Smith with the Mohawk Indians had by accident long lain neglected, and the President submitted it to the Senate for its consideration. It does not appear why, having been accredited to the Senecas, he should have concluded a treaty with the Mohawks; but so the record stands.

With all these public duties, it is said that Isaac Smith never lost his interest in the profession of medicine, though he necessarily withdrew to a great extent from the practice.

Judge Elmer in his "Recollections" says of him: "Isaac Smith was a physician, but he appears to have made of himself a pretty good lawyer." And L. F. Halsey, in his address before the New Jersey Society of the Cincinnati, July 4, 1890, says that during his career in Congress he was noted for his integrity and wisdom in public affairs.

It is recorded of him that he was a tall and a very heavy man, which may have had some influence with him in his determination not to pursue an active military career. On one occasion, while sitting as Judge in Admiralty, a sailor strolled into his court, who, after taking a survey of the situation, was heard to remark: "It would take damned weighty arguments to upset your decisions."

He married Mary Pennington. Their home was on King street, now Warren street, Trenton, where the American hotel now stands. Mrs. Smith took an active part in welcoming Gen. Washington when he passed through Trenton in April, 1789, on his way to New York for his first inauguration as President. This was an occasion of elaborate ceremony. A rural arch—part of the framework of which was preserved for many years in the State House at Philadelphia—was thrown over Assumpink creek, and as Washington passed under it a choir of young ladies sang a hymn, which ran thus:

Welcome mighty chief once more,
Welcome to this grateful shore,
Now no mercenary foe
Aims again the fatal blow,
Aims at thee the fatal blow.

Virgins fair and matrons grave
Those thy conquering arms did save
Build for thee triumphal bowers;
Strew ye fair his way with flowers,
Strew your hero's way with flowers.

He was very much gratified by the reception, and expressed his feelings in a note which he commissioned Rev. J. F. Armstrong to deliver to the ladies, who assembled at Mrs. Smith's house to hear it read. The note was long preserved in Mrs. Smith's family, and was left by her to her adopted daughter, Miss Lydia Imlay, who shortly before her death willed it to Chief Justice Ewing.

Mrs. Smith died in 1801. Her tombstone bears the inscription, "She was what a woman ought to be."

The record on Isaac Smith's tombstone is: "With integrity and honest intentions as a physician and Judge to the best of his ability, he distributed health and justice to his fellow men, and died in hopes of mercy through a Redeemer."

Jacob Smith (XVI 6). Nothing whatever is positively known of him. He probably died unmarried before 1761, though there are, or were recently, persons living in the West who supposed themselves to be descended from him. They were, however, unable to trace their descent, and were probably in error as to their ancestor.

Elizabeth Smith (XVI 7). Her husband was Michael Graham, of West Nantmeal township, Chester county, who was a son of James Graham, of Honeybrook township, Chester county, living where is now the village of Honeybrook. Michael's will is dated January 24, 1759, but was not probated till October 11, 1775, which appears to have been shortly after his death. In it he devised his farm, which was a large one, to his sons Michael and John, provides for his wife "Elizabeth Smith otherwise Graham," and for his sons James and Abraham when they come of age; mentions also his daughters Susanna, Margaret, Elizabeth and Eleanor, and makes Michael and John his executors. From the peculiar wording of the will it seems probable that Michael and John were children of his first wife, and that Elizabeth Smith was the second wife. She appears on the church records as a contributor to the Brandywine Manor Presbyterian church from 1746 to 1752.

Susanna Smith (XVI 8). Her husband, Thomas Armstrong, was born in 1705, in Caddy, County Armagh, Ireland, was a land owner in Oxford, Chester county, in 1774, and died February 2, 1782. He was treasurer of Fagg's Manor Presbyterian church in 1755 and about 1780. His first wife was Esther Moore, by whom he had several children. Susanna Smith was his second wife, and she, he and several of their children are buried in the Fagg's Manor churchyard. His will, dated August 3, 1781, probated June 12, 1782, mentions more children than are given in the table on page 28, but some of these are probably the children of his first marriage.

Mary Smith (XVI 9). Her husband, Alexander Lewis, was probably one of the numerous family of that name who lived near the Smiths in the northwestern part of Chester county, the family tradition stating that the families were related without stating in what way.

Henry Lewis is known to have been settled in that section of Chester county in 1722, about the time of the Smith emigration, and there are still representatives of his family in that neighborhood. One of his grandsons bought the Smith farms after the death of Robert Smith (XVI 4).

Alexander Lewis was probably a son of his. He appears in the public records as an owner of lands in West Caln township from 1765 to 1767. In his later life he emigrated with his wife and family to what is now West Virginia, and died there December 19, 1813. He was buried at Lost Creek churchyard, Harrison Co., West Va. His wife was buried at Weston, West Va.

Samuel Smith (XVI 10). Nothing but his name is known. He is supposed to have never married and to have died before 1761, as no mention of him is made in his father's will.

Sarah Smith (XVI 11). Her husband, Samuel Cunningham, was born in 1732. He was of Scotch-Irish descent, as were most of the people in that section of Chester county. He is named in 1774 among the taxables of Nantmeal township, which was then of much wider extent than at present. West Nantmeal included, till 1752, the territory now belonging to Wallace township. The western boundary of Wallace now comes at one point within one mile of Brandywine Manor church, and it was probably in this part of Nantmeal that Samuel Cunningham lived.

He was a farmer and a builder. Fagg's Manor church, in Londonderry township, was built by him in 1775, and he had, as master carpenter, charge of the work of rebuilding Brandywine Manor church in 1761-62, and again after its destruction by fire in 1786-87.

He served during the Revolutionary war, in 1777, as a lieutenant in Col. Nichols' regiment of General Stark's brigade, and was at one time a staff officer of the Second Pennsylvania regiment.

He and Robert Smith, his brother-in-law, were two of the nine incorporators to whom a charter for Brandywine Manor church was granted in September 1786. He was one of the trustees of the church at that time.

He was a member of the first Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania, which met July 15, 1776; a member of the Pennsylvania Assembly in 1776 and 1777; a collector of excise, appointed November 26, 1778, and a Justice of the Peace, appointed August 26, 1791, and holding that office for many years thereafter.

He died June 26, 1806, and is buried with his wife in the eastern graveyard at Brandywine Manor church.

Robert Fulton (XVI 12) was originally a tailor of Lancaster, Pennsylvania. The records show that he bought, August 23, 1759, apparently at the time of his marriage, the brick dwelling at the northeast corner of Central Square, Lancaster. He lived in that house till February 8, 1765, when he sold it to Edward Shippen, of Philadelphia, purchasing the same day a farm in Little Britain (now Fulton) township, to which he removed. The farm contained 364 acres and allowance, and cost £965. Fulton placed a mortgage upon it in favor of Joseph Swift, William West and Samuel Purviance, of Philadelphia. The venture proved too ambitious for him, and November 29, 1766, the farm passed into the possession of the mortgagees. It was sold under foreclosure February 5, 1772, and purchased by Joseph Swift for £805.

Fulton returned to Lancaster, where he passed the remainder of his life. He was buried in the cemetery attached to the First Presbyterian church of Lancaster, of which church he was one of the founders.

His wife, Mary Smith (XVI 15), was his first cousin, a daughter of Joseph Smith (XV 3).

Robert Smith (XVI 13) was of Lower Oxford township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania. He was for many years a Justice of the Peace, and of the Court of Common Pleas. He had pronounced views in regard to the use of liquor, and in his will he directed that none should be used at his funeral.

Mary Smith (XVI 15), as before stated, married her cousin, Robert Fulton (XVI 12). She outlived him, and died at the house of her son Robert Fulton (XVII 41), in New York. She is buried in Washington Co., Pennsylvania.

Elizabeth Smith (XVI 16). Her husband, James Creswell, born probably about 1732, was one of a numerous family, whose name is spelled indifferently Cresswell or Crisswell, who still live in the southwestern part of Chester county. He was probably a son of Robert Crisswell, of Oxford township, who is recorded as a land owner there in 1754, and on whose estate letters of administration were granted June 25, 1760, to his wife Jane Cresswell, and James Cresswell. This James Cresswell was also one of the heirs of his uncle, James Cresswell, of Oxford, Chester county, who was a tanner, unmarried, and who also died in 1760. Robert Crisswell and his brother James were probably sons of William Crisswell, who, with his brothers Samuel, James and David, and their mother, emigrated from the north of Ireland, probably about 1720, and settled in Londonderry township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania.

John Smith (XVII 1) owned and lived on his father's farm in Highland township, from 1782 to 1790, when he sold it to John Wallace. After he sold it, he was for some years superintendent or steward of the almshouse at Baltimore, Maryland. His will was dated April 12, 1782, his son John Smith (XVIII 3) being named therein as executor. He left a "plantation" to each of his sons, James and John.

Susanna Smith (XVII 2) was living in 1782. As she is so named in her father's will of that date, she probably did not marry.

John Smith (XVII 3) was a man of note in Chester county in his day. He owned and lived on a farm in West Fallowfield township, Chester county, two miles south of the village of Atglen, and on the Newport turnpike, which runs from "The Gap," in Lancaster county, to Newport, Delaware. This had been the home of his father, from whom he inherited it. He was the executor of his father's will.

He made, April 4, 1791, a contract with Joseph Gibbons, James Moore and Elijah McClenachan, commissioners, for the erection in West Chester of the first county court house that was built after the removal of the county seat from Chester to West Chester. It was a building thirty-six feet square. It stood in the present court house yard, fronting on High street. His sureties were Persifor Frazer, Caleb Davis and Thomas Ross.

February 26, 1799, he was appointed by governor Thomas Mifflin, a Justice of the Peace for West Fallowfield, Sadsbury and West Caln townships, and he was Register of Wills for Chester county from 1809 to 1812.

He was an elder of the Upper Octorara Presbyterian church, near Parkesburg, from 1812. In the graveyard attached to this church he, his two wives and his children are buried. His first wife is named by one authority Jane Wilson, and by another Jane McMechin. As her oldest child by John Smith was given the name of McMechin, it is probable that that was the mother's maiden name. She may have married first one of the Wilson family, and may have been a widow when John Smith married her. She was the mother of all his children. She was born January 13, 1757, and died September 15, 1801. Her death was caused by a fever then prevalent, which also caused the death of her youngest child.

John Smith's second wife, Sarah Boyd, born February, 1766, died January 15, 1831.

Gideon Smith (XVII 4). He died early. His wife, Susanna Armstrong, daughter of Susanna Smith (XVI 8) and Thomas Armstrong, is buried among the Armstrongs at Fagg's Manor church. Her tombstone speaks of her as "Relict of Gideon Smith." It is probable that they left no children.

Martha Smith (XVII 5). Her husband, Samuel Futhey, born September 1, 1753, died February 22, 1812, was a son of Samuel Futhey, born 1725, died January 27, 1790, and Ruth Steele, born 1719, died April 15, 1784, who was a daughter of Samuel Steele, of New London township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania. The elder Samuel Futhey settled first in Londonderry township, but after 1763 he lived in West Fallowfield township, now Highland township.

Samuel Futhey and Ruth Steele were married January, 1750. He was a superior judge of horses, and during the Revolutionary war he was employed by the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania to buy horses for the army.

His father, Robert Futhey, emigrated from Ireland to America between 1725 and 1730, Robert's father having emigrated in the latter part of the seventeenth century from Scotland to Belfast, Ireland.

Samuel Futhey, the younger, who married Martha Smith, served for five campaigns in the patriot army during the Revolutionary war. In 1794 he was adjutant of a regiment of cavalry, called out to quell the Whiskey Insurrection, and was later for seven years brigade inspector of Pennsylvania troops, holding the rank of major. He married as his first wife, in 1782, Margaret McPherson, who died in 1784. Martha Smith was his second wife.

James Smith (XVII 7) owned and lived on a farm quarter of a mile west of the Great Valley Presbyterian church in Tredyffrin township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania. The farm, after his death, passed into the hands of ——— Maxwell, and about 1840 it became the property of Edward Bartholomew. His wife, Elizabeth Hubbard, was a daughter of Thomas Hubbard, Junior, of Tredyffrin township, born about 1716, died 1761, and his wife Rachel.

John Smith (XVII 9) was well remembered by his cousins, Margaretta Smith (XVIII 46), and Elizabeth Wright Smith (XVIII 66), as a frequent visitor at the house of their respective fathers, Jonathan and Joseph Smith, in Philadelphia, in the early years of the nineteenth century. He was a very handsome, highly intelligent and distinguished looking man, and was a member of Congress from Virginia. There was but one man of that name in Congress from Virginia in those years. He was a member of the House of Representatives from 1801 to 1815. Nothing further is known to me about him.

Emma Smith (XVII 10). Her husband, Robert Porter, was of Chester Co., Pennsylvania. There was a Robert Porter of East Caln township, Chester county, whose will, dated November 5, 1760, probated December 5, 1785, speaks of his brother James Porter, who was probably the father of the Robert Porter who married Emma Smith. The elder Robert Porter seems to have been unmarried. His sisters, Elizabeth and Mary, and his brothers, Charles, William and James, were living in 1760, as was his father, William Porter.

The younger Robert Porter was an officer during the Revolutionary war. He was married, probably about 1785, at the home of the bride, though there was some opposition to the match, on the part of her parents, from some cause now unknown.

After their marriage they removed to western Pennsylvania, and settled at Finleyville, in Washington county, some fifteen miles south of Pittsburg, where all their children were born. Captain Porter, after his removal to western Pennsylvania, commanded a company of troops in defence of the frontier from Indian depredations.

In the Whiskey Insurrection of 1794 he was still in command of this company, and though he took no part in the insurrectionary movement, yet, as he lived in the Mingo creek district, which was the focus of the disturbance, he and his family being members of the Mingo Creek Presbyterian church, in whose edifice the Mingo Creek Society usually met, he and his company fell under suspicion. One of the principal incidents of the Whiskey Rebellion was an attack upon, and the destruction of, the house of Col. John Neville, who had been appointed United States Inspector for "the four counties west of the mountains." This attack took place on the 17th of July, 1794. Robert Porter denied having had anything to do with it, but understanding that one Pollock, a drunken fellow, was circulating stories about him, he went, November 13, 1794, to Colonel Campbell's camp, at the mouth of Mingo creek, and demanded an investigation of his conduct, having heard that there were charges against him.

Colonel Campbell found no evidence against him, and ordered Pollock out of camp as a drunken vagabond, but held Porter for further investigation, and he and nineteen other prisoners, among whom were two colonels and a clergyman, were taken to Philadelphia for trial. His brothers-in-law, Jonathan and Joseph Smith, interested themselves in his case, and two eminent counsel, William Lewis and Joseph Thomas, of Philadelphia, undertook his defence, William Rawle and William Bradford being the attorneys for the United States. The case against Porter was so weak that his counsel did not call a single witness, and Mr. Rawle, who was most anxious to convict some of the prisoners, announced to the court that "the counsel on both sides had agreed to leave it to the court to give charge to the jury."

Upon which Judge Patterson rose and said, in part: "You have heard the charge read against the prisoner, Robert Porter. You find it has not been supported by one single evidence. The court is of opinion that he is not guilty. If you so think, you will find him 'not guilty,'" which, without leaving the box, the jury did. Captain Porter had been in custody over six months.

It is thought that the lands on which Robert Porter lived were taken up on Revolutionary warrants held by his father-in-law, Colonel Robert Smith.

Susanna Smith (XVII 11). Her husband, Nathan Grier, was a son of John Grier and Agnes Caldwell. John Grier, who was a son of Joseph Grier, was born in Ireland in 1712, and died December 31, 1784. Agnes Caldwell was born in 1725 and died December 26, 1812.

Upon the arrival of John Grier with his brother Matthew in America in 1732, he settled in Bucks Co., Pennsylvania, in Bedminster township, or in Plumstead, which is the adjoining township; and John married there. He and his wife were members of the Deep Run Presbyterian church, Bedminster township, Bucks county. This church was organized as early as 1726, and was the pioneer church of the Scotch-Irish Presbyterians in that section.

Nathan Grier was born in Bucks county September 30, 1760, and died March 30, 1814, at Brandywine Manor, Chester county. He pursued his early studies with his brother, Rev. James Grier, A.M., Princeton, 1772, pastor of the Deep Run Presbyterian church; was graduated at the University of Pennsylvania in 1783, licensed to preach October, 1786, and ordained pastor of the Presbyterian church, at the forks of the Brandywine, commonly called the Brandywine Manor church, August 22, 1787, succeeding Rev. John Carmichael, who had been its pastor from April, 1761, till his death, November, 1785. He continued pastor of this church for twenty-seven years till his death. He prepared in this time in a private divinity school, which he opened in 1792, twenty young men for the ministry, of whom seventeen became ministers of the Presbyterian church, one became an Episcopal clergyman and two did not become pastors of any church. He was a learned divine, an eloquent and faithful preacher, and in every way a man of unusual power and great influence.

John Smith (XVII 12), when first married, lived at Dale furnace or forge, about ten miles north of Boyertown, Berks county. He afterward removed to Joanna furnace, in Berks county, where he passed the rest of his life. He was throughout the greater part of his career an ironmaster.

Joanna furnace was bought by John Smith, David Potts and Cyrus Jacobs. It had a large tract of woodland connected with it, located mostly on the Welsh mountain, which is at that point the boundary between Berks and Lancaster counties on its northern side, and Chester county on the southern side. It was a wild and desolate tract, and its inhabitants, whose occupation was principally that of burning charcoal for the furnace, were equally wild. They were mostly Irish, of the clans of Enniskillen, who were Protestants, and the "Fardowners," who were Catholics; between these there was a never-ending feud.

My mother, Marianne Smith (who, about 1811, visited her uncle John, driving with him in a gig out the Lancaster turnpike from Philadelphia to the Ship tavern, about 28 miles, where they lay one night, and pushing on the next day northward across the country to Joanna), said that the charcoal burners who supplied Joanna furnace with fuel lived in the company's shanties, and were ruled in quite a patriarchal manner by their employer.

One morning, after an unusually disturbed night, John Smith rode down to the settlement prepared to take stern repressive measures to prevent a recurrence of such rioting, but his wrath was disarmed by the first man he met, who replied to his opening remark, "You had a stormy time here last night," by saying: "Sorr, the battle of the Boyne was a flay bite to it."

There was a large woodland estate attached to Joanna furnace, which was chiefly used as furnishing a supply of wood, from which charcoal, which was the fuel used for smelting iron ore, was made. The estate contained about 6,000 acres. Joanna furnace was built about 1790, and the house for the proprietor's residence about 1793. The property is still in the possession of the heirs of John Smith, the original proprietor.

John Smith accumulated what in those times was a large fortune, and left $20,000 to each one of his ten children, except to his oldest daughter, whose marriage had been displeasing to him.

His wife, Elizabeth Bull, born December 19, 1771, at Warwick furnace, died March 23, 1835, in Reading, was the oldest daughter of Thomas Bull, born June 9, 1744, died July 13, 1837, and his wife, Ann Hunter. Thomas Bull was the son of William Bull and his wife, Margaret Parry, who was a daughter of Llewellyn Parry and his wife, Mary Thomas. Mary Thomas was a daughter of Richard Thomas, of Whitford Garden, Flintshire, Wales. Thomas Bull was, prior to the war of the Revolution, and also subsequent to it, the manager of the Warwick furnace, in Warwick township, Chester county. He entered the military service as Lieutenant-Colonel, but was taken prisoner at the battle of Long Island, and was not exchanged until he had spent twenty-one months on the Jersey prison ship.

He was a member of the State Constitutional Convention of 1790, and was a member of Assembly in 1783 and 1785, and also from 1793 to 1801.

He was one of the corporators of St. Peter's church, East Whiteland, March 4, 1786, but as this was far from his home, he promoted in 1805 the building of St. Mary's church in Warwick township, where he afterward worshipped.

He was a man of large means and of great influence. He owned nine-sixteenths of Joanna furnace till within a few years of his death, when he sold his interest to Judge William Darling (who married his granddaughter, Elizabeth Bull Smith, XVIII 36), and Levi Bull Smith, his grandson, XVIII 37.

His first wife, Ann Hunter, born 1745, died August 31, 1817, the mother of all his children, was a daughter of John and Ann Hunter, of Whiteland township.

His second wife, who survived him several years, was a widow from Cape May, New Jersey.

Margaret Smith (XVII 14). Her husband, Samuel Kennedy, was born March 17, 1768, and died August 9, 1807. He owned in early life a farm and a saw mill in Pickering Valley, Chester Co., Pennsylvania. Somewhat later he exchanged this property for the Black Bear hotel on Minor street, below Fifth street, Philadelphia, where he spent the rest of his life. His wife seems, after his death, to have returned to live in the country with one of her children. She is remembered as a large, powerful woman, and as a strict disciplinarian in her family.

Samuel Kennedy was a brother of Esther Kennedy, who married Robert Smith (XVII 16). They were children of William Kennedy, born 1742, died 1821, and his wife, Martha, born 1742, died 1825, who were of West Caln township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, and who are both buried at Upper Octorara Presbyterian church, near Parkesburg, Pennsylvania.

The Samuel Kennedy who was interested with Jonathan Vaughan and Dennis Whelan (both of Uwchlan township) in operating Sarum forge, in Thorubury township, Chester county, was probably a brother of William Kennedy.

Jonathan Smith (XVII 15) early left his birthplace in Uwchlan township and entered, probably about 1782, the office of Major John Beaton, who was the Register of Wills and Recorder of Deeds for Chester county. April 25, 1786, he was sworn in as clerk to Thomas Smith, of the State Loan office, of which his father, Col. Robert Smith, was one of the trustees. When Col. Persifor Frazer succeeded John Beaton as Register of Wills and Recorder of Deeds in 1786, Jonathan Smith again went into that office and became the Deputy Register and Recorder. He was afterward an accountant in one of the United States offices in Philadelphia. He removed to Philadelphia in 1792, and was appointed first teller in the First United States Bank, which was incorporated in 1791, and which from 1791 to 1797 transacted its business in Carpenter's Hall, Carpenter's court between Third and Fourth streets, Philadelphia. In 1798 he became cashier of the Bank of Pennsylvania, which also occupied Carpenter's Hall for some years. During the occupancy of Carpenter's Hall the Bank of Pennsylvania was robbed of $162,821.61 during the evening of September 1, 1798. One Patrick Lyon, who was a skilled locksmith, and who had been called in several times to make repairs on the doors and locks of the vaults, was suspected. Charles Biddle in his autobiography says that an attempt had been made to rob the bank about a month before. It failed, but after one of the two porters who were ordered to sleep in the bank in consequence of the attempt, had died of the then prevailing yellow fever, Mr. Annesly, the runner of the bank, found one night the cash vault had been opened and robbed. They also found the porter, Cunningham, asleep on the premises. He aroused Mr. Smith the cashier, who, with the president, Mr. Fox, made an examination which showed that false keys had been used, as the wards of the lock were not at all injured. Lyon, who was absent from the city, returned and made a statement which showed that on the night of the robbery he was at Lewes, Delaware, caring for a sick apprentice, who soon after died of yellow fever. He was, however, suspected of being an accomplice, and was detained in prison, not being able to raise the heavy bail demanded, which had been fixed at two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. No clue was found to the real culprits until an indiscreet show of wealth by Isaac Davis, a house carpenter, placed him under suspicion, and it was soon discovered that he and Cunningham, the porter, were the culprits. All the money except three thousand dollars was recovered. Davis was allowed to escape after delivering the money, and Cunningham died of yellow fever within a week, but the bank was compelled in 1807 to pay Lyon nine thousand dollars for false imprisonment.

Davis and Cunningham were both from Chester county, which moved Judge Peters to remark that "all the great and strange people we have in Pennsylvania come from Chester county;" which jest queerly coincides with the statement with which John Young, Governor of New York from 1847 to 1849, used to tease his brother-in-law, Dr. Francis M. Harris, who perhaps was given to boast of the virtue and intelligence of Chester county people, that all the confessions of murderers that he had ever read commenced, "I was born of poor but respectable parents in Chester county, Pennsylvania."

Arthur G. Coffin, who was from 1845 to 1878 president of the Insurance Company of North America, in his memoir of Jonathan Smith, written soon after his death, says he remained cashier of the Bank of Pennsylvania for about twenty years.

He was later cashier of the second bank of the United States, after whose discontinuance he was for a time cashier of the Mechanics' Bank on Third street above Chestnut street, but he soon became interested in the project for establishing the Pennsylvania Fire Insurance Company, for which he procured a charter in March, 1825. He was appointed its secretary upon its organization. It commenced to do business in April, 1825, and he continued to be its chief executive officer till his death in 1839, being its secretary from February 1, 1825, to September 7, 1835, and its president from September 8, 1835, to December 10, 1839, when he was succeeded in the office of secretary by his son Beaton, named after his early superior and old friend John Beaton. John Beaton in his will dated March 21, 1786, probated April 12, 1786, left Jonathan Smith his surveying instruments and his horse.

Jonathan Smith was a man of extended influence and of very cheerful nature, and was blessed with a plentiful fund of humor. Mr. Coffin, in the memoir before quoted, says of him that his tastes were simple, his habits domestic in his family and among his friends, and his manners were gentle and affectionate. In matters which concerned the feelings of others, his delicacy was careful and self-denying. His large-hearted hospitality made his house, at all times, the resort of friends from all parts of the country.

It is remembered in his family that he said near the close of his life that he doubted whether any one had ever signed his name as often as he had, for he had been at it all his life.

He was a handsome man, as was shown by the remaining portraits, his face showing strength and kindliness in a marked degree. He was not much over medium height, and was moderately full in figure. There was throughout his life a very close and affectionate relation between himself and his brother Joseph, and they had some business interests in common.

He was in very comfortable circumstances until the second United States bank, in which he had a considerable interest, began to go down, and he lost a good deal of money through business association with his sons-in-law, David Corey and Eliakim Littell. His fortune was estimated in 1818 at $150,000, and, though it shrank somewhat, he continued always to be in comfortable circumstances.

Jonathan Smith was not a church member, his early training by his mother, who was a Baptist, having apparently interfered with his complete identification with the Presbyterian church, to which his wife's family were devotedly attached, but Mr. Coffin, in his memoir already quoted, says that his life showed him to be eminently a religious man. His memory seems to have been fragrant wherever he was known, and he is remembered as a man wholly worthy of the love which was so freely given him.

He lived during his later years on the south side of Walnut street, in the house which is now No. 510, opposite the center of Independence square, where the office of the Pennsylvania Fire Insurance Company was at that time, and where it still remains.

His wife, Mary Ann Frazer, born February 4, 1774, died February 9, 1845, was a daughter of Persifor Frazer, of Thornbury township, Delaware Co., Pennsylvania, and his wife, born Mary Worrall Taylor.

Persifor Frazer was in his early life a merchant and an ironmaster. Soon after the outbreak of the Revolutionary war he was commissioned a Captain of the Fourth Regiment of Pennsylvania troops under the command of Col. Anthony Wayne. He remained in the service for several years, being present in the campaign which led to the surrender of Burgoyne, and at the battle of Brandywine, immediately after which he was taken prisoner by the British, from which imprisonment escaping after a six months' captivity in Philadelphia, he was present with his command at the battle of Monmouth.

He rose to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. He resigned from the army October 9, 1778, because he could not procure the righting of what he conceived the injustice done him by Congress in promoting his junior officers over his head during his captivity.

He was afterward appointed Clothier General of the army, but did not accept the appointment. In May, 1781, he was elected a Brigadier-General in the service of the state of Pennsylvania; was elected to the state legislature in 1781, 1782 and 1784, and afterward held, at different times, the positions of Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, County Treasurer, Register of Deeds and Register of Wills of Chester county, Pa.

He was a son of John Frazer, a merchant of Philadelphia, and his wife, Mary Smith, who emigrated from Glasslough, County Monaghan, Ireland, in 17—. The family was originally from Scotland.

Mary Worrall Taylor, wife of Persifor Frazer, born April 8, 1745, died November 30, 1830, was a daughter of John Taylor, of Thornbury, Delaware Co., Pennsylvania, and his wife born Sarah Worrall. John Taylor was a large landowner, and an ironmaster.

Mary Ann Frazer, wife of Jonathan Smith, inherited from her father a considerable body of lands in Western Pennsylvania on which he had located some of his Revolutionary land warrants.

Robert Smith (XVII 16) was a farmer living in the neighborhood of Brandywine Manor church, where he and his wife are buried. He lost a leg from an injury caused by the bite of a dog. The wound threatened to mortify, and the leg was amputated by Dr. Physick of Philadelphia.

His wife, Esther Kennedy, born 1770, died May 1, 1850, was a daughter of William Kennedy, and Martha his wife, who were of West Caln township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania.

Joseph Smith (XVII 17) left home in early life. His first employment was as a clerk in a store in Pughtown, in what is now South Coventry township, Chester county, on French creek, about eight miles northeast from his father's home in Upper Uwchlan. This was, perhaps, about the year 1788. There were iron mines, furnaces and forges on French creek above this point, and Pughtown was probably the place of trading for them.

Joseph's brother John, who was eight years his senior, and for whom he was a factor for a number of years, was probably interested in some of these works, as were also the Bulls, into which family John Smith married. The store was probably John Smith's property.

After a time Joseph Smith went, probably in 1789, to Columbia, in Lancaster county, on the Susquehanna river, where he kept a country store, in partnership with James Wright, in the old ferry house near the present line of Locust street. They were also agents for the sale of the iron made by his brother John, who had by that time established himself at Joanna furnace. The haul from Joanna to Columbia must have been about forty miles, but the main roads led in that direction, and Columbia was an important point of distribution, the Susquehanna river being navigable below that point.

He was also the first postmaster of Columbia, the duties of which position were not perhaps very onerous, as the total income of the office in 1790 was $10.44.

While in Columbia Joseph Smith made his home in the family of James Wright. Out of this connection grew an intimacy between the families which lasted for one hundred years, Joseph Smith naming his oldest and his youngest daughters for members of Mr. Wright's family.

During his residence in Columbia, General Washington passed through the town on his way to the seat of the Whiskey Insurrection in the fall of 1794. The young men of Columbia prepared a grand bateau, in which they proposed to carry him across the Susquehanna river, there a mile in width, and deputed Joseph Smith to convey their wishes to the General. He received him very graciously, and regretted that he must decline the offer, as no provision could be made on the bateau for his horses, and he could not send them over on a raft with no one to care for them but his negro driver. So great was the disappointment of the spokesman for the young men that he could scarcely command his voice or find fitting words with which to withdraw from the General's august presence.

Whether he tired of the monotony of life in Columbia, or whether it was found to be an undesirable market for John Smith's furnace products is not known, but in 1795 we find Joseph Smith engaged in an expedition to Erie, Pennsylvania.

In 1794, soon after the consummation of the purchase by the state from the General Government, March 3, 1792, of what is now the northwestern corner of Pennsylvania, William Irvine, Andrew Ellicott and Albert Gallatin were appointed commissioners to lay out the town of Erie, "in order to facilitate the progress of settlement within that section of the Commonwealth, to secure it against other claimants, and to afford additional security to the frontiers thereof." In the same year the first movement was made to carry out the purposes of the commission, but as the whole Indian country was then excited by the military operations of General Wayne in Ohio, and as he had not yet achieved his decisive victory of August 20, 1794, at "Fallen Timbers" or "Maumee Rapids," Ohio, the commissioners found the attitude of the Indians so threatening that they did not proceed beyond Fort Franklin in what is now Venango county at the junction of French creek with the Allegheny river, about fifty miles south of their destination at Erie. It was supposed that the Delaware chief Cornplanter might at any time attack the whites, and the commission thought best to assist in strengthening the defences of the fort, and not to attempt to go further for the time.

During the winter of 1794-95 the difficulties with the Indians were quieted, and April 18, 1795, the legislature directed that four towns which are now the towns of Erie, Franklin, Warren and Waterford, should be laid out.

This second expedition was composed of a corps of engineers, about sixty in all, with Surveyor-General Andrew Ellicott at the head, and it had an escort composed of a company of United States troops under Callender Irvine, who were ordered to erect a stockade fort; and a company of Pennsylvania militia commanded by Captain John Grubb. They arrived at Erie July, 1795, and remained in the field for several months, during which time they laid out the towns above named, and marked the boundaries of Butler and Erie counties.

Joseph Smith, who was probably a member of the corps of surveyors, represented the march as one calling constantly for great watchfulness. All hands were required to take turns at guard duty, and all complied except Enoch Lewis, an assistant surveyor, who was a Chester county quaker. One night when the whole command lay under arms, expecting an Indian attack, Lewis took his blankets, went out of camp, and lay under the stars, declining the protection of the armed force, in whose duties he would not share. He had to stand much ridicule, but he maintained his position during his whole term of service.

Joseph Smith said that the expedition was at times very nearly out of provisions, and that if the Indians upon whom they were partly dependent for supplies, and who looked on their work with very jealous eyes, had realized this they could easily have starved them out. The commission was partly protected by the superstitious dread with which their tools and their work inspired the savages. One of them having asked permission to look through the telescope attached to one of the surveying instruments, saw the sentry at whom it was pointed apparently standing on his head, the telescope having reversed his position. Feeling that the fate of the sentry might be his own, were the instrument turned on him, he got out of its range as rapidly as his gravity would permit him to move.

The expedition finished its labors about Christmas, and its members returned to their homes.

After his return from the Erie expedition, Joseph Smith established himself in business in Philadelphia, probably in 1796. He was at first an ironmonger, and was, as before, the agent for the sale of his brother John's iron from Joanna furnaces. Later he became a shipping merchant, trading with India and China for silks, etc., with Ireland for linen goods, and with Germany. His store was on the northeast corner of the Chestnut street wharf, on the Delaware river front, and in later years he frequently sent for his family, who lived on the north side of Walnut street, one door above the corner of Third street, in a house which he had built, to come down to his store to see an "Indiaman" come into port.

For a number of years he was a very successful merchant, and was concerned in several public enterprises. He was an intimate friend of his cousin, Robert Fulton, and took a great interest in his projects. He owned one-eighth interest in the "Delaware," which was one of Fulton's steamboats built in 1816 to run from Philadelphia to Newcastle, Delaware. It there made connection with a stage line to Elkton, Maryland, whence the steamboat "Chesapeake" continued the route to Baltimore. The line was at first financially successful, but afterward met with reverses. The buildings at Newcastle were burned, and though they were rebuilt, a large part of the income of the line was absorbed in building, as a connecting link between the steamboat lines on Delaware and Chesapeake bays, the Newcastle and Frenchtown Railroad, which commenced operations in 1830, and upon which the first American locomotive, built in that year by Col. Stephen H. Long, of Philadelphia, made its trial trip July 4, 1831. This and the steamboat line were afterward consolidated with the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad, the owners of the older lines taking stock in the latter road for their interests. The new corporation was not at first successful, and made very little return to its owners for a number of years.

Joseph Smith's career continued a prosperous one till after the second war with Great Britain (1812-15), and he was in 1818 worth about $80,000, a handsome fortune in those days. In the general business collapse which occurred soon after the close of the war, his firm, which was composed of Joseph Smith, Joseph Carson, father of the late eminent physician of that name, of Walnut street above Twelfth, and grandfather of the present Attorney-General (1905), Hampton L. Carson, and perhaps another person, was unable to meet its obligations.

They still handled iron among other productions, and were still factors for Joanna furnace. On one occasion Carson bought a large quantity of iron, for which he gave the notes of the firm. This action, taken in the absence of his partners, was in excess of his powers, no one partner being permitted to thus pledge the credit of the firm. A great fall in prices followed, and the firm became embarrassed. Carson bitterly regretted his error, but it was irretrievable, and it was found to be necessary to close up the business.

Joseph Smith was afterward associated with Benjamin Hutchinson and George Taylor as a firm of brokers, but for some reason, now unknown, the partnership did not continue long, and in March, 1824, he retired from business and removed to his farm in Chester county. The social relation between the families of Smith and Hutchinson continued to be one of cordial intimacy till the death of Joseph Smith's eldest daughter in 1886.

The Chester county home, which was in East Whiteland township, about twenty-five miles from Philadelphia, on the Philadelphia and Lancaster turnpike, at the Steamboat tavern, and near the present Glenloch station on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was a fine farm of about 172 acres, lying on the south side of Chester Valley, and on the South Valley hill. It was bought by Joseph Smith from ——— Kennedy about 1803, and was used by him for some years as a summer home. At that time the dwelling was on the north side of the turnpike, but after he removed to the country he built a home on the south side of the turnpike, and turned the older house into the "Steamboat Inn," by which name it is still known. The name was doubtless suggested to him by his business relations with his cousin Robert Fulton.

After her husband's death he invited his mother-in-law, Mrs. Col. Frazer, to make her home with him, and she spent there the rest of her life.

His children for some years attended school at the Chester County Academy in the summer, and there my mother, his daughter Marianne, then a child of 7, first met in 1812 my father Stephen Harris, and an acquaintance began which led to their marriage twenty-one years later.

When Joseph Smith moved to Chester county he still had a comfortable estate. He managed, in addition to his large farm, a valuable marble quarry, three-eighths of a mile west of the "Steamboat Inn." This produced a handsome blue and white marble, which for some years was much used in Philadelphia. The front porches of the houses in Portico Row, on the south side of Spruce street, between Ninth and Tenth streets, contain good examples of this marble, which shows little, if any, deterioration in three-quarters of a century.

When the white marble of the New England states began to come to Philadelphia, it took the popular fancy, and being more easily wrought, and therefore cheaper, the Chester county quarry no longer yielded a profit.

Joseph Smith then opened another quarry near the first, which he thought would produce granite, but his geology was at fault, and the money which he spent to develop the second quarry was lost.

In 1839 he had a slight stroke of paralysis, which led him to feel that he could no longer manage his farm, and he sold it to Josiah Harmar, son of General Josiah Harmar (who was commander of the United States army from August 12, 1784, to 1791), and removed in March, 1840, to West Chester, where his son Persifor Frazer Smith had established himself as a lawyer. He bought a house on Market street, opposite to where the county jail now stands, and there he spent the greater remaining part of his life, though he died at the house of his son Persifor Frazer Smith.

He was a genial, cheery man, of medium height, rather stoutly built, but not corpulent. He had a large fund of anecdote, and he was an agreeable companion. He was fond of good horses, and it is said that his gray horse Surrey walked habitually at the rate of five miles an hour, a very unusually rapid gait.

He was not a church member, but was an habitual church attendant. His mother had been a Baptist, and he so far was governed by her views that he objected to infant baptism and would not consent that any of his children should be baptized till they came to years of discretion.

When the family first moved to Chester county in 1824, they worshipped for some years at the Great Valley Presbyterian church, which was about five miles east of their home. After 1829 they went for two or three years to St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church, about one-half mile west of their home on the Lancaster turnpike. It was built in 1828 avowedly as a union church for the use of all denominations, Jonathan and Joseph Smith, whose families were both Presbyterians, contributing to its erection more than half the money required to build it.

When the Presbyterian church in West Chester was opened in January, 1834, Joseph Smith's family attended the services there, the church being about five miles distant. He was a contributor to the erection of the church, now known as Frazer Presbyterian church, which was completed in 1839, but as he removed to West Chester the next year the family thereafter worshipped in that town.

His wife, Mary Frazer, born January 14, 1780, died May 23, 1862, was a daughter of Col. Persifer Frazer and his wife, born Mary Worrall Taylor, and a sister of Mary Ann Frazer, who married his brother Jonathan Smith.

An account of the Frazer family will be found in the notice of Jonathan Smith.

Isaac Smith (XVII 19) lived on a farm on the Lancaster turnpike near Sadsbury, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania, which belonged to his brother Jonathan Smith. After the death of his wife he lived for a time with his sister Susanna, at Brandywine Manor church, and later removed to Wrightsville, York Co., Pennsylvania.

Isaac Smith in his will directed about one hundred dollars to be placed by his executors in the hands of the trustees of Brandywine Manor church, to be used in keeping the eastward graveyard in good order. Pillars bearing his initials were placed by the trustees at the entrance, and a gate, which was also purchased out of this fund, was placed there.

His wife, Margaret Fleming, born June 4, 1774, died July 12, 1820, was the youngest child of James Fleming and his wife, born Jane Cowan, of Sadsbury township, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania, who were married November 10, 1756, by Rev. Nathan Grier, of Brandywine Manor church.

James Fleming was a farmer, owning 201 acres of land, about the center of Sadsbury township, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania, lying along the Lancaster and Philadelphia road. He inherited also from his uncle George Fleming, who died unmarried, a farm of 230 acres, with a grist mill, situated in West Caln township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania.

He is thought to have been killed in one of the battles of the Revolution that was fought in New Jersey in 1778.

James Fleming's father was John Fleming, of Coatesville, Pa., and his grandfather was William Fleming, born in Greenock, Scotland, about 1662, who came to this country in 1680, settling first in Maryland, on Chesapeake bay. Four years later he went to Concord township, Delaware Co., Pennsylvania, where he married Mary Moore, daughter of Richard Moore, a farmer of English birth. He removed to Chester Co., Pennsylvania, in 1714, and settled there on a farm of 207 acres, building his house on the site of what is now Houston & Penrose's rolling mill, on Brandywine creek within the limits of the borough of Coatesville, Pennsylvania.

Edward Smith (XVII 21) was, when a young man, engaged to marry Miss Lydia Imlay, who was probably a daughter of William Eugene Imlay, Captain Third Regiment of Hunterdon county, New Jersey, and afterward a Captain in the Continental army, who was characterized by Gov. Livingston as "a decided and active Whig who served as Captain in the army with reputation." He was also a member of the State Legislative Council, and of the General Assembly of New Jersey in 1786.

Miss Imlay was a lady of most estimable character, but the match became in some way repugnant to Edward Smith. He left home shortly before the time set for the marriage, went to the West Indies and was never heard of again.

Miss Imlay was adopted by Judge Isaac Smith, who had no children except Edward. She lived always thereafter at his house, and inherited his property. She had been one of the bevy of girls who sang the song of welcome to Washington at Trenton in 1789, which began—

"Welcome mighty chief, once more
Welcome to this grateful shore."

James Graham and his brother and sisters (XVII 22 to XVII 27). Nothing is known of this family. They may have removed to the West or Southwest; at all events they disappear from the history of Chester county, so far as I have been able to discover.

Susanna Armstrong (XVII 29). She died at an early age soon after her marriage to her cousin Gideon Smith (XVII 4), leaving no children.

Sarah Armstrong (XVII 30). Her husband, John Finney McClenachan, born about 1759, was a son of Elijah McClenachan, of New London township, Chester county, who was a son of John McClenachan, and his wife, born Ann Finney, of Thunder Hill, New London, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Elijah McClenachan was one of the Commissioners of Chester county in 1790. He was one of the elders of the New London Presbyterian church elected in 1797.

Robert Armstrong (XVII 31) was a farmer. It is remembered of him only that he was a tall man, and a great consumer of snuff. He is buried at Fagg's Manor Presbyterian church.

His wife, Jane Young Cochran, born West Fallowfield township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, 1746, died April 9, 1811—but at the time of her marriage a resident of Windsor, York Co., Pennsylvania—was a daughter of Stephen Cochran, born November 27, 1732, died November 1, 1790, who commanded a company of troops in the Revolutionary war, and was elected a member of the Pennsylvania Assembly in 1777 and 1778. Stephen's parents were James Cochran, emigrant from Ireland, and Ann Rowan, daughter of Cornelius Rowan. Jane Young Cochran's brother Samuel, who at the age of sixteen was a drummer boy in his father's company, was a Representative in the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1816 and 1817, a Senator from 1818 to 1820, and Surveyor-General of the State from 1800 to 1809, and again from 1821 to 1824. He was for forty years a ruling elder of the Fagg's Manor Presbyterian church.

The home of the Cochran family was Cochranville, West Fallowfield township, Chester county, which took its name from them.

Margaret Armstrong (XVII 32). Her husband, Robert Russel, was a clergyman of the Presbyterian church.

Jane Armstrong (XVII 33). Her husband, George Correy, born June 8, 1756, died June 6, 1827, was probably a son of David Correy, of New London township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, who by his will dated February 27, 1788, left his plantation, whereon he lived, to his sons David and George.

Jane Lewis (XVII 38). Her husband, Thomas Maxwell, was probably a son of Robert Maxwell and his wife Elizabeth of East Nottingham township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania. Thomas, in his will dated December 30, 1791, probated November 13, 1792, mentions his son Thomas.

Thomas Maxwell died about 1796. He had made preparations to settle in what is now West Virginia, and had made one or more journeys there. On his last journey he was known to have reached the Monongahela river, but there all trace of him was lost. He had a considerable amount of money with him, and it was thought that he was murdered for his money, though he may have drowned. After his death, his wife removed, about 1799, with her children to Browns creek, Harrison Co., West Virginia, settling on land belonging to Col. William Lowther. She lived afterward at Lost Creek, and her last home was at Jane Lew, a town named for her by her son Lewis Maxwell.

Her father and mother and some of her sisters emigrated with her from Pennsylvania.

Susanna Cunningham (XVII 45). Her husband, Andrew Stanley, born June 24, 1767, was a farmer of Honeybrook township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania. He had there a large farm and a tannery.

Sarah Cunningham (XVII 46). Her husband, Matthew Stanley, a brother of Andrew above named, born 1762, died June 15, 1844, was a farmer and a man of considerable estate. He was a General in the war of 1812-15, an elder from 1819 in the Brandywine Manor Presbyterian church, to which he and his brother Andrew were contributors throughout their lives, a member of the Pennsylvania Assembly in 1829 and 1830, a Justice of the Peace, appointed May 7, 1798, and serving in that capacity for many years thereafter, one of the nine corporators to whom the charter for the Brandywine Manor Presbyterian church was granted in September, 1786, and a man of most estimable and honorable life. He was a trusted friend and adviser of Mrs. Col. Robert Smith, his wife's aunt, who spent a part of her later life as an inmate of his family, and a man of extended influence.

He and his wife are buried in the Brandywine Manor graveyard, and their joint monument bears on one side the inscription—

"Sacred to the memory of Sarah C. Stanley, who departed this life May 11, 1836, in the 63rd year of her age, beloved and lamented. Her deeds of benevolence are her most enduring monument, her present inheritance the richest reward of a life of faith."

On the opposite side, where Gen. Stanley's death is recorded, is the characterization—

"A patriot and a Christian."

The Stanley home was on the Harrisburg turnpike, about one mile east of Brandywine Manor Presbyterian church.

General and Mrs. Stanley left no surviving children, and his large property passed by his will to his near relatives.

Margaret Cunningham (XVII 47). Her husband, William Lewis, born June 25, 1776, died June 21, 1825, was probably a relative of the Alexander Lewis who married Margaret Cunningham's aunt, Mary Smith (XVI 9).

There were and still are many people named Lewis, or related to the Lewis family, in the northwestern part of Chester county, Pennsylvania.

William Lewis' parents were probably Obed and Hester Lewis. Obed Lewis was in 1774 a landowner of West Caln township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania. His will was dated September 6, 1816, and admitted to probate December 27, 1816.

Robert Fulton (XVII 51). His life has been so fully written that a short notice of him must suffice here. He received a common school education in Lancaster, showing, while at school, evidence of great mechanical ingenuity.

He went to Philadelphia at the age of 17, and supported himself there, first as a silversmith and afterward as a mechanical draughtsman and miniature painter. He had in 1785 a studio at Second and Walnut streets. At the age of 21, his father being dead, he purchased for his mother a farm of about 85 acres in Washington Co., Pennsylvania, paying therefor £80. The deed is dated May 8, 1786. He went to London in 1786 and spent some years there. He was a pupil of Benjamin West, the Chester county painter.

He went to Paris in 1797, and while there lived in the house of Joel Barlow, the author of "The Columbiad," which poem Barlow dedicated to Fulton, who furnished the drawings to illustrate the book. He returned to New York in 1806.

His career as an inventor of steamboats, or rather as the successful adapter of steam to the propulsion of vessels, and also as the inventor of the torpedo for use in submarine warfare, is well known.

He was an intimate friend of Jonathan and Joseph Smith (XVIII 15 and 17), who were his second cousins, and who were pecuniarily interested in his inventions, and in some of his business ventures.

He died in New York of pneumonia, was buried from his home, No. 1 State street, and lies in the Trinity churchyard, in the family vault of Walter and Robert C. C. Livingston, sons of Robert Livingston, of Livingston Manor, New York.

He was a handsome man, of great personal dignity, agreeable manners and noble qualities of heart.

His wife, Harriet Livingston, daughter of Walter Livingston, did not long outlive her husband.

Rebecca Smith (XVIII 8) lived with her cousin, Robert Futhey (XVIII 10). In her later years her home was with Robert's son, John Smith Futhey (XIX 1), in West Chester, Pa. She was an intelligent woman, quiet in manner, but very agreeable and companionable. She outlived all her immediate family by 52 years. She was buried in the graveyard of Upper Octorara Presbyterian church.

Robert Futhey (XVIII 10) lived on a part of the old homestead farm in West Fallowfield township, Chester county. He served in the War of 1812-14, and was a member of the Legislature in 1841 and 1842. He was a valuable citizen, and an influential peacemaker in his neighborhood.

His wife, Margaret Parkinson, born April 9, 1791, died April 11, 1864, was of Carlisle, Pa. Her parents were Richard Parkinson and his wife, born Mary Denny, of Cumberland Co., Pa.

Jane Futhey (XVIII 11) kept house for her brother John S. Futhey (XVIII 14), till her death.

Samuel Futhey (XVIII 13) owned and occupied the old homestead in Highland township.

His wife, Ann Parkinson, born August, 1797, was a sister of his brother Robert's wife.

John Smith Futhey (XVIII 14) was a well-to-do merchant of Wrightsville, York Co., Pa., doing business on Front street in that town, but his later years were spent in West Chester, Pa.

His wife, Julianna Heintzleman, born May 25, 1802, died June 3, 1867, was a sister of Major General Samuel P. Heintzleman, U.S.A., a distinguished officer during the Civil war.

John Smith Futhey left no children. He was engaged in the business of transporting merchandise over the railroad between Columbia and Philadelphia, at that time owned by the State of Pennsylvania, which permitted private shippers to use their own cars in transportation, the State furnishing the motive power to haul them.

Elizabeth Smith (XVIII 15), says Dr. Stille in his life of Gen. Wayne, "was a young lady of excellent family and of good estate."

Her husband, Isaac Wayne, born Easttown township in 1768, died October 25, 1852, was the only son of Gen. Anthony Wayne of the Revolutionary war, who was born January 1, 1745, married May, 1766, a daughter of Bartholomew Penrose, a prominent merchant of Philadelphia, and died December 15, 1796, at Erie, Pa. Gen. Wayne's parents were Isaac Wayne (XVI), died 1774, a captain in the provincial service, stationed at Nazareth and Fort Allen (Allentown) in the winter of 1756, and his wife, born Elizabeth Iddings, died 1792, daughter of Richard Iddings of Chester county; and his grandfather was Anthony Wayne (XV) of Yorkshire, England. This man emigrated to County Wicklow, Ireland, and was an officer of Dragoons under William III at the battle of Boyne, where he greatly distinguished himself. He emigrated to America in 1722, and purchased an estate of 1600 acres in Easttown township, Chester county, which he called Waynesborough, which, or a portion of which, has ever since remained in his family. He died in 1739.

Isaac Wayne was educated at Dickinson College, Pennsylvania. After graduating he studied law with William Lewis of Philadelphia; was admitted to the Bar in 1794, and practiced his profession till his father, Gen. Anthony Wayne, desired him to take care of the family estate, he being himself absent with the army. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Assembly in 1801 and 1802; a member of the State Senate in 1806 and in 1810. He was the Federalist nominee for Governor in 1814; a member of Congress in 1822, but declined reëlection. He was a colonel in the war of 1812.

Isaac Wayne's family were intimate friends of my father and mother, and I remember that they went frequently to take tea with them, my father being their family physician, and both my parents being related to Mrs. Wayne, who was second-cousin to my father through the Hubbards, her mother's family, and second-cousin to my mother through the Smiths, her father's family.

Robert Smith Porter (XVIII 18) was born in Nottingham township, Washington Co., Pa. He removed when quite young to a point near the head waters of Bull creek in Allegheny Co., Pa. Here he remained working at his trade which was that of a blacksmith, until his marriage in 1819, when he removed to Muskingum, Ohio. He lived there but a short time, returning to Allegheny county, and settling at Tarentum, where he engaged in various business pursuits.

He bought and leased considerable tracts of land near what is now Valley Camp Station on the Buffalo and Allegheny Valley Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, sixteen miles from Pittsburgh. These lands were in Westmoreland county, across the Allegheny river from Tarentum. Part of the leased lands were farmed by him for a share of the produce, and part were leased for the purpose of sinking salt wells, he having already such wells on his own lands. Both ventures were profitable, the farming land being rich and productive, and the salt wells also proving successful.

He had a general country store in Tarentum, dealing in dry goods, groceries, drugs and patent medicines, some of the medicines and pills being of his own manufacture.

When the Pennsylvania canal was built, his store proved to be conveniently located to secure business from it. He arranged to feed and stable the canal horses. He purchased rafts of timber and lumber, which came down the river in great numbers on the spring freshets every year, broke them up and disposed of their contents at retail. Being thus alert and ever ready to engage in all the ventures for which the development of the business of a new country gives scope, he accumulated what was in those days a large estate, which at his death passed to his only child who survived him, John Milton Porter.

John Porter (XVIII 19) was in his early manhood a millwright, and later became a farmer. About the year 1868 he removed to Pittsburgh, where he spent the rest of his life.

His wife, Margaret Hazelett, was of Irish descent, her parents being natives of Armagh, Ireland.

Jonathan Porter (XVIII 20) was a farmer living near Tarentum, Pennsylvania.

His first wife, Elizabeth Miller, was a sister of Nancy Miller, who was the wife of his brother, Robert Smith Porter.

Nancy Porter (XVIII 22). Her husband, Robert Glass, was a native of Gray Abbey, County Down, Ireland, who emigrated to America early in the year 1816, going directly to Pittsburgh, where he opened a grocery store. He was appointed alderman of the fifth ward of Pittsburgh by Gov. George Wolf, and was afterward elected treasurer of Allegheny county. He died during his term of office, about 1844.

Agnes Smith Grier (XVIII 24). Her husband, Robert White, was a Presbyterian clergyman. He was born near Trappe in Montgomery Co., Pa., July 26, 1784, educated at Norristown Academy, and studied theology under

Rev. Nathan Grier, whose daughter he married. He was licensed to preach by New Castle Presbytery April 4, 1809, and became, December 14, 1809, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Fagg's Manor, two and one-half miles south of Cochranville, Chester county, in which relation he continued till his death September 20, 1835.

He was a man of fine talents, and an instructive and successful preacher. He and his wife are buried at Fagg's Manor.

Robert Smith Grier (XVIII 25) was educated first at Brandywine Academy, and was graduated at Dickinson College, Carlisle, September 27, 1809, studied theology under his father, Nathan Grier, and later was licensed to preach by New Castle Presbytery September, 1812. He was pastor of the Presbyterian church near Emmittsburg, Md., from April, 1814, till his death, a period of nearly 52 years. He was an able and fearless preacher, and though living in a slave State, he openly opposed slavery as a crime, and lived to see the system destroyed.

His first wife, Elizabeth Laverty, born September 7, 1793, died September 26, 1830, was a daughter of Samuel Laverty, and his wife born Mary Buchanan.

His second wife, Sarah Jane Annan, died March 14, 1848.

His third wife was born Margaret Witherow. She was a widow at the time of her marriage to R. S. Grier. Her first husband's name was Stuart or Stewart.

John Nathan Caldwell Grier (XVIII 26) pursued the same courses of study as his brother Robert, and was graduated by Dickinson College at the same time. He received the degree of D.D. from Washington College, Pennsylvania, in 1841. He succeeded his father Nathan Grier, as pastor of the Brandywine Manor Presbyterian church, November 24, 1814, and served in that capacity until April 14, 1869, when his age and infirmities caused him to resign. His father's pastorate and his own extended over nearly 82 years. During his ministry Brandywine Manor church received 1200 church members, started four colonies which became self-sustaining churches, and sent seventeen young men into the ministry.

His wife, Agnes Ralston, was born September 8, 1795, and died November 7, 1873. She was a daughter of Cap. James Ralston (born 1767, died November 7, 1832, who, with John F. Grier, nephew of Nathan Grier, conducted the Brandywine Academy), and his wife born Frances Grier in 1766, and died January 3, 1828. They are both buried at Brandywine Manor.

Martha Grier (XVIII 27). Her husband, Samuel Parke, born in Sadsbury township, Chester county, November 25, 1788, was graduated at Dickinson College in 1809, studied theology with Rev. Nathan Grier, and was pastor of the Slate Ridge Presbyterian church in York county for forty-three years, from August, 1814, till he resigned in 1857. He died December 20, 1869.

Samuel Parke's father was Joseph Parke (XVII), born December 21, 1737, and died July 2, 1823. He was twice married, and had three children by his first wife, and eight children by his second wife, of whom Samuel was the fifth.

Joseph Parke's father was John Parke (XVI) who lived in West Fallowfield township, Chester county. He died July 28, 1787, aged 81 years. John's wife Elizabeth, died May 21, 1794, aged 82 years.

John Parke's father was Arthur Parke (XV), a native of Ballylagby, County Donegal, Ireland, who, with his wife Mary, and four children, came to Pennsylvania in 1724, and took up a large tract of land along the Limestone turnpike in West Fallowfield township, Chester county. He died in 1740.

Sarah Grier (XVIII 28) was born and died at Fagg's Manor, Pennsylvania. Her husband, Robert Thompson, was a physician. He was born near Oxford, Pennsylvania, of Quaker ancestry, September 18, 1794. He practiced medicine at Fagg's Manor for eight years, and died of consumption February 21, 1836.

Ann Hunter Smith (XVIII 29). Her husband, James Richards, born May 27, 1782, died September 21, 1828, was remarkable for the fervor of his religious convictions, and the purity of his character and his life. He was descended from Owen Richards, emigrant from North Wales to Pennsylvania before 1718, who is recorded as having bought in that year, 300 acres of land in Amity township, Bucks Co., Pa.

Thomas Bull Smith (XVIII 30) took charge, at his father's death in 1815, of the iron operation at Joanna furnace, and spent there the rest of his life.

His wife, Annetta Old, born December 17, 1793, died May 21, 1846.

Sarah Bull Smith (XVIII 31). Her husband, Jacob Loeser, born January 3, 1787, died September 4, 1823, was a physician. Soon after his marriage he relinquished his profession to take charge of his father-in-law's interests at Dale forge, Berks county, which he continued to manage throughout his life.

He was one of the earliest advocates of total abstinence from intoxicating drinks.

Margaret Vaughan Smith (XVIII 33). She and her sister Elizabeth (XVIII 34) were married the same day by their cousin Rev. John Nathan Caldwell Grier.

Her husband, William Darling, was born November 10, 1796, and died September 20, 1871. He was a son of Eliakim Darling and his wife born Ruth Buck of Bucksport, Maine. He was admitted to practice law in Berks Co., Pennsylvania, November 13, 1818. He was appointed Associate Judge of Berks county in 1830, and remained on the bench till 1839, when he resigned and resumed the practice of law. He was an elder in the Presbyterian church, a vice-president of the American Sunday-school Union from its organization till his death, and a corporate member of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. He removed to Philadelphia in 1855, and died there.

Elizabeth Bull Smith (XVIII 34) died in London, England, where she had gone with her husband for the reëstablishment of his health. She was buried at Kensal Green cemetery, London.

Levi Bull Smith (XVIII 35) was born at Joanna furnace; was prepared for college by Rev. John F. Grier in Reading, was graduated at Princeton College with honors in 1824, read law in the then famous law school at Litchfield, Connecticut, and was admitted to practice at the bar of Berks Co., Pennsylvania, January 10, 1827. In 1833 he formed a partnership to carry on the iron business with his brother-in-law, Judge William Darling. Darling and Smith were well known manufacturers of stoves. Into this partnership his sons were afterward admitted. In 1862 he relinquished to his sons the active management of the iron business, and removed to Reading. He was instrumental in establishing the First National Bank of Reading, of which he became, upon its organization, and continued to the end of his life, the president. He was a prominent and much respected citizen of Reading, and a member of the Episcopal church. His wife, Emily H. Badger, born January 1, 1807, was a native of Bucksport, Maine, and a cousin of Judge William Darling of Reading. She died December 16, 1882.

John Vaughan Smith (XVIII 36) was born at Joanna furnace; was graduated at Princeton College in 1825, received his education in medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, and was commissioned as Assistant Surgeon, U. S. Navy, June 27, 1829. He had charge for several years of the United States Naval Hospital at Port Mahon, Minorca. During his nineteen years of service, which was mostly spent abroad, he rose rapidly, and at the time of his death, he was very highly esteemed as a medical officer. He was then the Senior Medical officer of the Navy Yard at Charlestown, Mass. He was a man of great worth and of varied accomplishments.

His first wife, Mary Smith Marshall, born in Kentucky October 17, 1816, died February 1, 1837, was a niece of Judge White.

His second wife, Virginia Parker, was a daughter of Com. Foxhall Parker, United States Navy, and his wife born Sara Jay Bogardus, a granddaughter of Dominie Bogardus and his wife Anneka, who emigrated from Holland with the Dominie's congregation.

Susan Grier Smith (XVIII 37). Her husband, George Burcker, was a clergyman of the Episcopal church. He died suddenly June 7, 1847, while he was rector of the church at Flushing, New York.

Jane Correy Smith (XVIII 38). Her husband, Goodloe Harper Bowman, was a banker of large means living in Brownsville, near Pittsburgh. He was born April 3, 1804, and died January 30, 1874.

Samuel Kennedy (XVIII 39) lived in early manhood at Mill Creek, Montgomery Co., Pennsylvania. In mature life he removed to New Orleans, Louisiana. His further history is not known.

William Doak Kennedy (XVIII 39) was a carpenter and builder, living for some years at Norristown, Pa., where he erected a number of the more important buildings of that time. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, serving in Captain Dupont's company of the Pennsylvania State Fencibles at Camp Dupont, on the Delaware river. In his later life he had charge of one department in the trunk manufactory of his son, Samuel William Kennedy, in Philadelphia.

His wife, Ann Maria Sherborne, born January 12, 1795, in Bristol, England, died September 28, 1857. Her parents were William V. Sherborne, and his wife, born Mary E. Porter.

There has been some question as to the proper spelling of W. D. Kennedy's middle name, but it is written "Doak" in his own or in his son's handwriting in the family Bible, and I have used that spelling. The Doak family was of northwestern Chester county, and there are a number of them buried in the Brandywine Manor churchyard.

Robert Smith Kennedy (XVIII 40) was a carpenter. He became a minister of the Methodist Church.

Joseph Smith Kennedy (XVIII 41) was supercargo of the "Renown" (Cap. Tibbetts commanding), one of his uncle Joseph Smith's vessels. The vessel reached Cape Henry, Hayti, March 8, 1820, with a cargo of provisions, medicines, etc. Kennedy died soon after of brain fever, after a sickness of four days.

His wife, Elizabeth McKnight, born February 7, 1802, was a remarkably beautiful woman. After Joseph Smith Kennedy's death she married Persico, an Italian miniature painter. She died in Richmond, Virginia. Her father, John McKnight, was a grandson of one McKnight who emigrated from Ulster, Ireland, with the family of John Smith, there having been some relationship between the families. They settled in the upper part of Chester valley, in Wallace township, Chester county, near the Lamb tavern. John McKnight was sent to Philadelphia to learn banking from Jonathan Smith (XVII 15). He afterward went to Reading to form a bank, which should be a branch of the Bank of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. He became president of the Reading bank, and so continued till 1857. In 1812 he was largely instrumental in founding the First Presbyterian church of Reading, with Rev. John F. Grier as its pastor, and he was one of the ruling elders of that church till the time of his death.

Margaret Smith Kennedy (XVIII 42) with her husband, James Coleman, went to Cincinnati, Ohio, and prospered greatly there. She was a large, vigorous woman. Her husband died January 29, 1883.

Susan Kennedy (XVIII 43). Her husband, John Parker, was a hardware merchant of North Second street, Philadelphia.

Margaretta Smith (XVIII 45). After the death of her husband, David Correy (XVIII 83), she lived with her brother, Beaton Smith, and after his death, with her sister, Harriet Aertsen, in Germantown. No children survived her.

Persifor Frazer Smith (XVIII 47) was graduated at Princeton College in 1815, and studied law under Charles Chauncey, of Philadelphia. After his admission to practice law he removed, about 1820, to New Orleans, Louisiana, engaged in the practice of his profession, and was at one time a judge in that city. He was made Colonel of Louisiana Volunteers February 2, 1836, and served during the Florida war under General Gaines in two campaigns in Florida. The military talent which he there displayed caused General Zachary Taylor to recommend him to the governor of Louisiana for a command in the Mexican war, and he received the appointment of Brigadier-General of Louisiana Volunteers May 15, 1846. He was appointed Colonel United States Mounted Rifles May 27, 1846, and after serving during that year with General Taylor in northern Mexico, he was brevetted Brigadier-General United States Army "for gallant and meritorious conduct at Monterey, Mexico." In the spring of 1847 he was ordered to join the army of General Scott, and in the autumn of that year, while in command of a brigade, he rendered, as officially reported by General Scott, efficient service at Contreras, "closely directing the whole attack in front with his habitual coolness and ability." At Chapultepec also he was prominently engaged, and General Scott reported that in the affair of the Belen gate of the City of Mexico he was "cool, unembarrassed and ready." He was brevetted Major-General United States Army "for gallant and meritorious service at Contreras and Churubusco, Mexico." He held for a time after the capture of the City of Mexico, October, 1847, the position of Military Governor of the city, and in May, 1848, was the Military and Civil Governor of Vera Cruz, Mexico. After the Mexican war he had command of the military department of California, to which he was appointed late in 1848, and later he had command of the military department of Texas.

In 1856 he was ordered to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where he died. At the time of his death he had just been appointed to command the expedition to Utah, which was organized for the purpose of overawing the Mormons.

It was the opinion of his nearest relatives that he had been approached by Jefferson Davis, Secretary of War, and by some of the other Southern men who were planning secession, and urged to take part with them, and that upon his positive refusal to do so, he was ordered to Kansas to get him out of the way, although his health having broke down under his continuous service since the Mexican war, he was entitled to the relief which he had asked for. He had chronic diarrhœa which could not be relieved but by removal to a cooler and more bracing climate. His life was thought to have been sacrificed to his loyalty to the government.

He was, until a few years before his death, a man of striking personal beauty, the handsomest man I have ever seen, of medium height and weight, with a strong though kindly expression of countenance. He was greatly beloved, both in his family and by others.

He was credited with keeping his brigade in better health and condition than any other command in Mexico, and he said that he was careful never to overfatigue them, but while on the march to require them to halt frequently and lie down to take as complete rest as possible.

Nicholas P. Trist, who was in 1847 the United States Commissioner who negotiated a treaty of peace with the government of Mexico after the close of the Mexican war, and who was, therefore, in a position to know whereof he spoke, wrote of General P. F. Smith substantially as follows:

"He possessed, as Napoleon said of Marshal Ney, the most rare union of eager and vehement daring in the act when the moment for striking the blow had come, with the extreme of imperturbable composure and self-collectedness in the execution."

Trist further said that General Scott's opinion of his character was that his abilities were of the highest order, and that he should be kept by the government in places suited to his high qualities and attainments, where these could be made to tell for the benefit of the service and the country.

His first wife, Frances Jeanette Bureau, born November 23, 1804, died January 14, 1852. Her father, Francois Bureau, was a French merchant; her mother, Abigail Packwood, was a New England woman.

His second wife, born 1808, Ann Monica Millard, was a daughter of Joshua Millard, of St. Mary's Co., Maryland. Her first husband was Major Armstrong, United States Army. Her second marriage, to General Persifor Frazer Smith, was at Corpus Christi, Texas. After his death she retired, in 1867, to the Convent of the Visitation in Baltimore, Maryland, where she died February 17, 1889. By her first marriage she had a son who became General Frank C. Armstrong, C. S. A.; by her second marriage she had no children.

Mary Frazer Smith (XVIII 48) was, in her youth, a handsome woman of medium height. She grew to be very stout in her later life. Her husband, Eliakim Littell, born January 2, 1797, died May 17, 1870, was the oldest son of Stephen Littell and his wife, born Susan Gardiner, of New Jersey. Susan Gardiner, born January 6, 1777, was a daughter of Thomas Gardiner, of Burlington, New Jersey, and his wife, born Susan Elton. Mr. Littell established in Philadelphia, about 1820, and published for some years a periodical which was called at first The Saturday Review, and later The Museum, but becoming convinced that Boston, Massachusetts, was a better field for his work he removed there in 1844, and founded a similar periodical, which was called Littell's Living Age. This was for a number of years a very successful magazine. After his death his children, Susan and Robert, continued the publication till, after the death of the latter in 1896, it passed into other hands.

Beaton Smith (XVIII 49) was graduated at the University of Pennsylvania, A.M., 1820; M.D., 1823, completing his medical education afterward in Paris, France. He practiced medicine at Norristown, Pennsylvania, and afterward in Columbia, Pennsylvania, from 1828 to 1831, in which latter year he removed to Manayunk, Pennsylvania, where his wife died. He remained there till 1840, when, upon the death of his father, Jonathan Smith, he succeeded him as secretary of the Pennsylvania Fire Insurance Company, which position he held until his death.

His first wife, Mary Ann Huddleson (Taylor XVIII 3) was his second cousin, being the youngest child of Martha Gray Thompson and her husband, Dr. Isaac Huddleson. She was the mother of all his children. She was born January 29, 1808, and died August 10, 1835.

His second wife, Theodosia Pettit, was a daughter of Robert Pettit of Philadelphia. She died January 22, 1886, aged 88.

Robert Frazer Smith (XVIII 50) was graduated in 1820, A.B. by the University of Pennsylvania. He studied law, but just after he was admitted to practice he accidentally shot himself, September 25, 1825. It was never fully explained how the accident occurred, though he lingered till February 6, 1826. He was a young man of great charm and promise.

Sarah Smith (XVIII 52). Her husband, Levi M. Graves, born May 3, 1810, was a Presbyterian clergyman of Kittanning, Pennsylvania. They lived on a farm near Kittanning, which was part of the property located by her grandfather, Colonel Persifor Frazer, on his revolutionary warrants. None of their children survived its infancy.

Ann Maria Smith (XVIII 53). Her husband, Samuel Robert Slaymaker, born 1805, died August 10, 1878, was an iron founder of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and was one of the proprietors of the Good Intent stage coach line which, before the opening of railroad communication, ran coaches from Philadelphia to Pittsburg. His father was Samuel Slaymaker. His mother, born Anne Cochran, was a sister of Samuel Cochran, who was Surveyor-General of Pennsylvania from 1800 to 1809, and from 1820 to 1824.

In their latest years Ann Maria Smith and her husband lived in Evanston, Illinois, with their sons.

Harriet Romeyn Smith (XVIII 54) was named for the wife of Rev. John Brodhead Romeyn, a celebrated clergyman of the Dutch Reformed church, stationed at one time in Philadelphia, between whose family and her father's family a warm friendship existed.

Her husband, James Musgrave Aertsen, born October 10, 1805, died April 11, 1902, was a son of Guiliaem Aertsen, born St. Eustatia, West Indies, December 13, 1759, died September 30, 1806, who was cashier of the State Bank of South Carolina, at Charleston, S. C. In 1810 his wife, born Esther Parry (Parry XVII) November 10, 1764, married July 17, 1790, died April 9, 1815, removed with her family to Philadelphia.

In his early business life, James Musgrave Aertsen became a member of the dry goods firm of Dulles & Aertsen, at Front and Market streets, Philadelphia. In 1839 he was a member of the firm of Aertsen, Maccoun & Ritchie, who were engaged in the same business. In 1850 he retired from the dry goods business, and became a member of the firm of Newbold, Son & Aertsen, bankers and brokers, Philadelphia, from which firm he retired about 1872, his health seeming at that time to be much impaired.

He spent his remaining thirty years actively engaged as a manager of the Philadelphia Trust Company, the Saving Fund Society of Germantown, and as the Rector's Warden of St. Luke's church, Germantown, living a most wholesome and useful life, and retaining to the end a keen interest in affairs and a warm sympathy with a large circle of friends.

He was, on his mother's side, a third cousin of his wife, the common ancestor of the two being Rowland Parry (XIV 3), born in Wales about 1665.

Jonathan Vaughan Smith (XVIII 58) was a farmer. His wife, Sarah Calbraith, was of Huntingdon Co., Pennsylvania.

Margaret Vaughan Smith (XVIII 59). Her husband, Samuel Bicking, removed from West Brandywine township, Chester Co., to Clermont Co., Ohio, in 1839, where the family remained for many years.

Martha Smith (XVIII 60). Her husband, William F. Saffer, born December 25, 1807, died June 17, 1888, was of Delaware Co., Pennsylvania. He owned at one time a farm near Brandywine Manor, and lived there the latter part of his life.

Elizabeth Bull Smith (XVIII 61). Her husband, Joseph Christy, born August 9, 1799, died December 23, 1872, was a farmer, born near Coatesville, Pennsylvania, removed to Clermont, Ohio. He returned to Chester Co., Pennsylvania, and ended his life there.

Elizabeth Wright Smith (XVIII 62) lived for some years in the family of her cousin, John Fries Frazer, and helped to educate his children. In her last years she and her sister Rhoda lived together. She was a handsome woman, with a good deal of charm and sprightliness, but her best claim to the gratitude of posterity is that she preserved by putting them on paper a number of the traditions and much of the history of the family that would otherwise have been lost. She died in Germantown, Pennsylvania, of paralysis.

Emma Vaughan Smith (XVIII 63) died of bilious fever. Her husband, Henry Augustus Riley, born November 21, 1801, died March 17, 1878. His father, Isaac Riley, was a prominent merchant of New York, engaged in foreign commerce, and his mother was born Hannah Alsop. They were both of old New England families. His early education was in a school on Manhattan Island, which with Georgetown College, District of Columbia, to which he went in 1815, were under Jesuit influence, and he became a Romanist, and intended to enter the priesthood. He changed his mind, was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1820, and afterward commenced the study of law under Horace Binney. He afterward decided to become a physician, and studied medicine with Dr. Nathaniel Chapman, of Philadelphia, graduating in the medical department of the University April 4, 1825. He practiced medicine for about four years, when he embraced the Presbyterian form of faith and decided to study for the ministry of that church. He entered Princeton Theological Seminary, from which he was graduated in 1832. After a few years spent in several pastorates he was installed, March 12, 1839, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Montrose, Pennsylvania, where he remained during the rest of his life, though he resigned his pastorate in December, 1863. After this time he took up again, in a limited measure, the practice of medicine. He was a man of very high character, and as an obituary notice of him says, being wholly unselfish he was a perfect Christian gentleman.

His second wife, Blandena Miller, born September 16, 1811, died August 12, 1903, was a daughter of John Miller, M.D., of Trenton, New Jersey.

Marianne Smith (XVIII 64) was, in her early life and until middle age, a delicate woman, who yet, by a strong sense of duty, accomplished as much as is given to most strong women to do. She survived her husband, Stephen Harris, thirty-nine years, educated and maintained her family, and in her later years, when relieved from care in the household of her eldest son, she gave to all her grandchildren, one after another, the rudiments of their education, coupled with religious instruction, which should have a lasting influence on their lives.

A woman of great industry, she occupied herself till she reached extreme age with some pursuit which was useful and helpful to others.

Her husband, Stephen Harris, was born September 4, 1798, and died November 18, 1851. He was the son of General William Harris, and his wife, born Mary Campbell, the former being a son of Thomas Harris, born 1722, emigrant to Pennsylvania about 1745, and his wife, born Elizabeth Bailey. The Harris family, from the time of the emigration till Stephen Harris removed to Philadelphia in 1850, were residents of Chester county.

Stephen Harris was educated at the Chester County Academy, and in 1819 was graduated M.D. by the University of Pennsylvania. He was an able and successful physician, and a man greatly revered and beloved in the community in which he spent nearly all his life. He was an elder of the Presbyterian church, as his father had been.

Persifor Frazer Smith (XVIII 65) was graduated at the University of Pennsylvania in 1823, accomplishing what would now be the impossible task of finishing his college course at 15. He studied law with William H. Dillingham, of West Chester, and was admitted to practice at the bar of Chester county November 3, 1829. He was, in 1832, appointed by Attorney-General Johnston, State Attorney for Delaware county. May 2, 1835, Governor George Wolf appointed him Clerk of the Orphans' Court for Chester county. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature from 1861 to 1864. In 1866 he was appointed Reporter of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, which position he held for two terms of five years each. He was a learned and able lawyer, and his thirty-two volumes of reports of Supreme Court cases are considered among the best that have been made in the State. He was a man of strong feeling and earnest nature; a determined and uncompromising patriot during the Civil war.

He fell dead in court from heart disease which seized him while arguing a case. He was a Presbyterian of decided convictions, and was for many years an elder of the Presbyterian church of West Chester.

His wife, Thomasine Susan Fairlamb, born June 24, 1812, died August 2, 1895, was a daughter of Dr. George A. Fairlamb, of Downingtown, Pennsylvania, and his wife, born Thomasine Whelen. Dr. Fairlamb's parents were John Fairlamb, and his wife, born Susanna Ashbridge; and Thomasine Whelen's parents Dennis Whelen, and his wife, born Mary Downing, all of Chester Co., Pennsylvania.

Martha Frazer Smith (XVIII 66) died of paralysis at the house of her friend, Mrs. Elizabeth P. Wilson, Philadelphia.

Vaughan Smith (XVIII 67) went to sea in his early life; was converted under Methodist preaching, and became a clergyman of that denomination in 1840. His clerical life was spent at various stations in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware. For twenty-two years he was the presiding elder of Snow Hill district. He retired from active service in 1883. He died at Wilmington, Delaware, and was buried at Middletown, Delaware. He was an earnest, able and industrious worker in his chosen vocation.

His wife, Mary Elizabeth Shepperd, born August 30, 1824, died July 22, 1896, was a daughter of Benjamin Lloyd Shepperd, and his wife, born Sarah Wooten, of Delaware. She also was buried at Middletown, Delaware.

Robert Washington Smith (XVIII 69) was born in Chester Co., Pennsylvania, spent his early years at Castle Fin, York Co., Pennsylvania, and removed in early manhood to Wrightsville, Pennsylvania, where he spent the rest of his life, though he died in Philadelphia at the house of his son, John Futhey Smith. When the borough of Wrightsville was incorporated in 1834 he was elected a member of the first town council, and became its president. He was commissioned justice of the peace about 1835 by Governor Joseph Ritner, and held this office till 1875, when he declined reelection on account of his age.

In 1854 he founded the York County Star, which he edited and published till 1861, when, all of his employes having enlisted in the army, its publication was necessarily suspended for a time. In 1865 he sold the paper to a stock company, but remained its editor for a few years, till it was sold to his son, James Herr Smith, and his son-in-law, Frank J. Magee. He remained a contributor to the paper till his death. His death was caused by pulmonary apoplexy.

He was in his earlier life associated with his cousin, John Smith Futhey (XVIII 14), being the manager of the transportation department of the business. He was an elder in the Presbyterian church at Wrightsville, Pennsylvania.

He treasured among his possessions a heavy sword that had been carried in the Revolutionary war by his grandfather, Colonel Robert Smith. This sword is now in the possession of his grandson, Robert Smith Magee (XX 465), of Wrightsville, Pennsylvania.

His first wife, Martha Herr, born 1808, died May 9, 1854, was a daughter of Rudolph and Martha Herr, of Hellam township, York Co., Pennsylvania.

James Fleming Smith (XVIII 70) was a prominent merchant of Wrightsville, Pennsylvania.

His first wife, Elizabeth Schall, was a daughter of James and Elizabeth Schall, of York, Pennsylvania. She died in Wrightsville, Pennsylvania, April 14, 1849. There were no children by either marriage.

Jonathan Vaughan Smith (XVIII 71) died in Florida, where he had gone on account of ill health. He was a farmer. His health had never been robust, and an autopsy showed that his heart had been seriously affected.

Samuel McKean Smith (XVIII 72), born in Pequea valley, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania, was a merchant and an elder of the Presbyterian church of Wrightsville, Pennsylvania. He was trained as a young man in the store of his cousin, John Smith Fathley (XVIII 14). He was a man of genial nature and of fine Christian character.

His wife, Elizabeth Kauffelt, was a daughter of John and Mary Kauffelt, of Wrightsville, Pennsylvania.

Susanna Armstrong (XVIII 75) was engaged for many years to marry Captain Singleton, who was commander of a vessel in the East Indian trade. When his long absence led to the supposition that he was lost, Stephen Henry Cochran, who was her first cousin, earnestly pressed upon her his own suit, which she long declined. Five or six years after Captain Singleton's death she consented to marry Cochran. Her husband, Stephen Henry Cochran, born July 24, 1795, died April 15, 1831, was descended from John Cochran (X), who, in 1570, emigrated from Paisley, Scotland, to the north of Ireland. He was a clansman of the house of Dundonald, and a relative of the head of the clan. His son James (XI) had a son John (XII), whose son John (XIII) was the father of Robert Cochran (XIV). Robert's sons, James, Stephen and David, all emigrated to Pennsylvania. James Cochran (XV), who died in the autumn of 1766, married Ann Rowan, daughter of Cornelius Rowan, and had seven children, of whom the fifth was Stephen (XVI), born November 27, 1732, died November 1, 1790, who was a captain in the Revolutionary war, and a member of the Pennsylvania Legislative Assembly in 1777 and 1778. His son, Samuel Cochran (XVII) was born in West Fallowfield township, January 16, 1763, and died May 3, 1829. He lived at Cochranville, to which village he gave its name. He was a drummer boy in his father's company when about 16 years of age, a member of the Pennsylvania Assembly in 1816 and 1817, and of the State Senate from 1818 to 1820. He was Surveyor-General of the State from 1800 to 1809, and from 1821 to 1824. He was an elder of Fagg's Manor Presbyterian church for forty years.

Samuel Cochran was the father of Stephen Henry Cochran, above named, whose mother was Hannah Slaymaker.

Eliza A. Armstrong (XVIII 77). Her husband, Robert Carson, was cashier of the Lancaster bank, at Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

David Correy (XVIII 83) and his brother Samuel Correy (XVIII 88), were merchants doing business at Port au Prince, Hayti, West Indies. David was United States Consul at that place. They both died there of yellow fever. They belonged to a firm of which the other partners were Englishmen. No settlement could ever be had with the English partners, and David Correy's father-in-law, Jonathan Smith, lost the money (a considerable amount) which he had advanced to David to buy a partnership in the firm. During the war of 1812-15 David Correy had been an officer of the Staff of General Cadwallader.

Susan Correy (XVIII 84) died of consumption in Philadelphia. Her one child died in infancy.

Her husband, William Finney, was a native of New London, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, born October 10, 1788. He was the son of Judge Walter Finney of New London, born New London, 1748, died September 20, 1820, and his wife, born Mary O'Hara, who died August 10, 1823. Walter Finney was a major in the Revolutionary army.

William Finney was graduated with distinction at Princeton College 1809, studied theology under Rev. Samuel Martin, D.D., of Chanceford, Pennsylvania, and was licensed to preach by New Castle Presbytery October 1, 1812. He was ordained as pastor of the Presbyterian church of Churchville, Hartford

Co., Maryland, November 17, 1813, and continued to hold that position till October 4, 1854, when he resigned. He died July 31, 1873. He is remembered as a man of ability and eloquence, and as one greatly beloved.

After the death of his first wife, Susan Correy, he married, October 10, 1820, Margaret Miller, of Philadelphia, who died July 21, 1865. They had six children.

George Correy (XVIII 89) died at Port au Prince of consumption.

Mary Ann Correy (XVIII 90). Her husband, James Cochran Magraw, was a merchant of Baltimore, Maryland. He was born September 12, 1804, and died July 3, 1868. He was the oldest son of James Magraw, a Presbyterian clergyman of Chester Co., Pennsylvania, who was a native of Bart township, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania, born January 1, 1775, died October 20, 1835. Rev. James Magraw was installed pastor of West Nottingham Presbyterian church April 4, 1804. He held that position as long as he lived.

His wife's name was Rebecca.

Jane Correy (XVIII 91), who outlived all her family, lived, for many years, with her sister, Mary Ann (Magraw), in Baltimore.

Abner Maxwell (XVIII 92) was a captain in the war with Great Britain, 1812-15, leading a company from Harrison Co., West Virginia.

Levi Maxwell (XVIII 93) spent his life in or near Weston, West Virginia. He was originally a carpenter, and afterward a farmer. He lived to a great age, and retained his physical activity till nearly the end of his life.

His wife, Sarah Haymond, born December 15, 1796, died February 22, 1853, was a daughter of Colonel John Haymond, a pioneer of West Virginia, and his wife, born Mary Wilson. They were married by Rev. Henry Camden at Bulltown salt works. Sarah (Haymond) Maxwell died of erysipelas, and Levi Maxwell of paralysis.

Lewis Maxwell (XVIII 94) was a lawyer living in Lewis Co., West Virginia. He was a member of Congress from 1827 to 1833; a man of considerable estate and of professional eminence. He left no children.

Robert Maxwell (XVIII 95) was born in Chester Co., Pennsylvania, and was first married there. He lived on Lost Creek, Harrison Co., West Virginia, till 1832, when he sold his farm there and moved to Ohio, where he became a large land owner. After the death of his first wife, Rebecca Estlack, who, born November 6, 1792, died May 9, 1843, he married again, and returned to West Virginia. In 1858 his second wife died, and he married for the third time a few years later.

He directed his attention in his early life largely to stock raising, and was a great lover of rural pursuits.

He was a man of firm will, unswerving integrity and remarkable self-control.

Amy Maxwell (XVIII 96). Her husband, John Peck, was born Watertown, Connecticut, February 20, 1798. He was married in Virginia. The family trace their descent directly back to Joseph Peck, who was baptized at Hingham, Norfolk, England, April 30, 1508. Joseph Peck was a descendant of John Peck of Belton, Yorkshire, England.

Benjamin Franklin Thompson (XVIII 102) was twice married, and had two children. He was a cooper. He lived with General Matthew Stanley.

Sarah Stanley (XVIII 106). Her husband, James Wilson Brown, was born 1782, and died March 8, 1857.

His mother, whose name was Jane, was born 1755, and died January 4, 1828.

Matthew Stanley (XVIII 111) lived during his youth with his uncle, General Matthew Stanley.

Martha Stanley (XVIII 112), an only child, died at school at Lititz, Pennsylvania.

Sarah Lewis (XVIII 114). Her husband, Nathan Dorlan, was born March 21, 1789, and died May 2, 1858.

Rachel Lewis (XVIII 115). Her husband, James McCachran, was a cabinet maker. He was buried in Newville, Cumberland Co., Pennsylvania.

Hester Lewis (XVIII 116). Her husband, Daniel Kirkpatrick, was a saddler. He lived at Valley Store, East Whiteland, Chester Co., Pennsylvania. He died in early manhood.

Mary Ann Lewis (XVIII 117) was housekeeper for her uncle, General Matthew Stanley, after his wife's death and until his own. She is buried at Brandywine Manor church.

Elizabeth Lewis (XVIII 118). Her husband, James Gallagher, was a coal merchant of Philadelphia, and was at a later date in the service of the street railway company in Washington, District Columbia.

William Cunningham Lewis (XVIII 119). His wife, Letitia C. Michener, was born October 20, 1812, died July 13, 1848, and is buried at Brandywine Manor church.

Obed Lewis (XVIII 121) was born in Gallagherville, Chester Co., Pennsylvania. He removed to Springfield, Illinois, in 1838, and engaged in carriage building, in which business he acquired a considerable fortune, retiring from business in 1868.

He was an alderman of Springfield from 1862 to 1870, mayor for one term, elected in 1874, a director of the Marine Bank of Springfield for a number of years, and vice-president of this bank at the time of his death. He held many other positions of responsibility, and was a highly respected and influential citizen. His wife, Cordelia Margaret Iles, born May 25, 1827, died December 24, 1889, was throughout her life a resident of Springfield.

Margaret Lewis (XVIII 123). Her husband, James McClure Neely, born 1814, died December 20, 1870, was a compositor. He was a son of James Neely, and his wife Jane. Jane was born September 30, 1781, and died July 16, 1854.

-----	-----------------------	------------------	--	--	--	------------------

John Smith Futhey (XIX 1) was born in West Fallowfield (now Highland) township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, studied law partly in the law school of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pennsylvania, then under the charge of Judge John Reed, and afterward in the office of Hon. Townsend Haines, of West Chester, Pennsylvania. He was admitted to practice at the bar of Chester county, February 7, 1843, was Deputy Attorney-General for Chester county from April, 1849, to November, 1850, District Attorney from October, 1853, to November, 1856, and was appointed by Governor Henry M. Hoyt, President Judge of Chester county, February 27, 1879. In the fall of that year he was elected to the same office without opposition. He continued to hold this position to the end of his life. He was one of the authors of a valuable history of Chester county which was published in 1888.

His wife, Eliza Jane Miller, daughter of Amos Mitchell Miller, and his wife, born Lydia Best, of West Fallowfield township, was born December 5, 1826, and died 1902.

James Latta Futhey (XIX 2) was a farmer. He lived for a time on his father's farm in West Fallowfield township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, and afterward removed to Atglen, Pennsylvania.

Martha Ann Futhey (XIX 3). Her husband, Robert L. McClellan, born October 22, 1822, was a dentist, living in Cochranville, Pennsylvania. He was a member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives from 1861 to 1863, and of the State Senate from 1874 to 1876. He died February 5, 1889.

His wife now lives at Atglen, Pennsylvania. They had no children.

Dr. McClellan had previously married in 1852, Hannah Matilda Downey, of Leacock, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania, who died in 1877.

Elizabeth Jane Futhey (XIX 5). Her husband, Samuel Walker, born 1832, died January 5, 1901, was a farmer of Highland township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania.

Robert Futhey (XIX 6) is a merchant of Atglen, Pennsylvania. His first wife, Eliza Hersherberger, born April 24, 1840, died August 22, 1867. His second wife, Anne H. Houston, born 1838, is a daughter of Samuel Houston, and his wife, born Sarah Downing, of Penningtonville, Pennsylvania.

Robert Agnew Futhey (XIX 8) was educated at the New London Academy from 1840 to 1843. He afterward taught school in the district about his home in Highland township till 1854. He then, for a few months, was a teacher in the school of William F. Wyers, in West Chester, till he was elected county superintendent of schools in the fall of 1854. This position he held till 1857.

His father having died in 1855, he took charge of the home farm, and continued to live there till 1867, when he sold it. It had been owned by his family about one hundred years. He then removed to Parkesburg, Pennsylvania, and in 1869 entered the private banking house of Parke, Smith & Company, which was known as The Parkesburg Bank. He became its cashier in 1873, and continued to hold that position after it became The Parkesburg National Bank, in 1880. He retired from the bank in 1893, and has not since engaged in business.

His wife, Sarah P. Taylor, died August 26, 1890. They had no children.

Antony Wayne (XIX 12). The energetic nature and vigorous physical constitution of General Antony Wayne did not descend to his grandchildren. Only one of them reached maturity, and he was not strong. The others all died of dysentery at an early age, and the family directly descended from General Wayne became extinct.

Emma Meek (XIX 16). Her husband, Jacob Pentzer, was a Presbyterian clergyman of German descent, who was born in Bedford Co., Pennsylvania, May 28, 1808. He was a graduate of Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pennsylvania, and of the Western Theological Seminary of Allegheny, Pennsylvania. After their marriage they removed to Germantown, Ohio, where he preached for a number of years. He preached also at several other places in Ohio, and in 1859 removed to Wilton, Iowa, where he died May 15, 1884.

Robert Meek (XIX 17). After reaching maturity he started to go down the Ohio river to New Orleans, Louisiana, and was never heard of afterward. It was supposed that he was drowned, or that he died of cholera, which was then raging in New Orleans.

Eliza Meek (XIX 19). Her husband, Charles-Louis Goehring, was born in Germany, December 10, 1815, and came to America with his parents in 1818. He had reached manhood when he went to Pittsburg, where he was at first a confectioner. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1861 and 1862. He was at that time engaged in the oil business. He was later a member of the firm of Coleman Rohm & Co., iron manufacturers, a director in several of the Pittsburg banks and the first president of the Consolidated Gas Company of Pittsburg. He died in Allegheny City October 4, 1900.

John Miller Porter (XIX 22) was a man of unusual intelligence, of excellent business judgment, and of sterling integrity. His views on business questions had great weight in the community in which he lived. He had large interests in the oil fields in Venango Co., Pennsylvania, and they brought to him a considerable fortune, out of which he purposed in his will to found and endow a school at Tarentum, where he lived.

He had served for two terms in the Pennsylvania Legislature, having been elected on the Whig ticket. During his legislative career he assisted in the passage of a bill which declared inoperative bequests for charitable or religious purposes made within thirty days before the death of the testator. This bill made void his own will, and his large estate was ultimately divided among his relatives. He died of typhoid fever.

Robert Porter (XIX 26) was a farmer.

Mary Porter (XIX 27). Her husband, Henry McClure Davidson, was a son of Henry Davidson, and his wife, born Jane McClure. He was born in County Armagh, Ireland, November 26, 1829. His father was a farmer, and an administrator, taking an active part in the affairs of his county.

Henry McClure Davidson came to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in June, 1853. He was at first a trader in horses, and had later a sale stable. In 1866 he purchased a fine farm of ten hundred acres, erected good buildings thereon, and has lived there since his marriage.

George Porter (XIX 28) was a teamster.

George Washington Porter (XIX 33) was a prominent and highly respected citizen of West Deer township, Allegheny Co., Pennsylvania. He was a contractor, and was well and favorably known in Allegheny, Armstrong and Butler counties, Pennsylvania.

John Porter (XIX 35) was a farmer.

Joseph Porter (XIX 36) was a machinist.

Ezekiel Miller Porter (XIX 37) was a carpenter.

Samuel Carnahan Porter (XIX 40) enlisted during the Civil war in the Sixty-third Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and died of disease contracted in the service.

George Washington Glass (XIX 45) learned the machinists' trade at the Pennsylvania Railroad shops at Parkesburg, Pennsylvania. He was at one time an engineer in the service of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, living first at Pottsville, Pennsylvania, and later at Schuylkill Haven, Pennsylvania. In 1851 he removed from the latter place to Allegheny City, Pennsylvania, having received the appointment of master mechanic of the Ohio and Pennsylvania Railroad shops at that place. After a service of six years there he removed to Philadelphia, where he held the same position on the North Pennsylvania Railroad. In 1858 he was appointed master mechanic of the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad, and removed to Lynchburg, Virginia. Sectional feeling was then so strong in the South that his life was threatened, and he was once seriously assaulted. He resigned his position in 1859, and removed to New Brighton, Beaver Co., Pennsylvania, where he became superintendent of an iron car works. In 1868 he was appointed master mechanic of the Allegheny Valley Railroad, which position he held at the time of his death. He was skillful in his vocation. He made the first locomotive built west of the Allegheny mountains, to which engine he gave the name of "Keystone." He was awarded a prize for an improvement in car trucks by the Allegheny County Agricultural Society.

He was a man greatly respected for his ability and integrity.

His wife, Eliza Walker, whom he met while living in Parkesburg, was a daughter of James Walker, and his wife, who was born Mary Ramsay. James Walker was a farmer of Chester Co., Pennsylvania, and he was at one time Recorder of Deeds for that county.

His family for several generations were buried at Fagg's Manor Presbyterian church, Londonderry township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania.

John Porter Glass (XIX 46) was for some years superintendent for the telegraph company which then operated the lines in and about Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. He left this service to become one of the proprietors of the City Hotel, and later became the lessee of the Perry Hotel, both of which were in Pittsburg. He abandoned this business, finding it distasteful, and at the outbreak of the Civil war he organized Company A, of the Fifth Regiment of Infantry of the Excelsior Brigade. He was promoted April 11, 1862, to the Lieutenant-Colo-neley of this regiment, which was afterward known as the Seventy-fourth Regiment, New York Volunteers. He took part in the earlier battles of McClellan's peninsular campaign, but lost his health on the peninsula, and was compelled to resign his command December 19, 1863.

In 1864 he was elected to the Pennsylvania Legislature on the Republican ticket, and served in the Legislature for three years. In 1867 he was chosen speaker of the House of Representatives by an almost unanimous vote. He returned home from Harrisburg in a state of great physical prostration, from which he never rallied, and died soon after.

His first wife, Mary Bailey, was a daughter of William Bailey, a steel manufacturer of Wheeling, Virginia. She died of cholera October 6, 1851.

His second wife, Mary Amanda Brown, was of Steubenville, Ohio. She was a daughter of Hugh Brown, and his wife, born Jane McCutcheon.

Robert Porter Glass (XIX 48) was for some years manager of the telegraph office in Allegheny City, Pennsylvania, and he later held various positions of trust and responsibility in the post office, and the railroad offices in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, filling all these positions very acceptably. He was one of the California "forty-niners," crossing the plains with a party who went out to California in 1849 to seek for gold. He died in Allegheny City, Pennsylvania.

His wife, Annie Walker, was a daughter of Montgomery Walker, and his wife, born Jane Hedges, of Brooke Co., Virginia.

Nancy Smith Glass (XIX 49). Her husband, David Johnston, was in his early life a resident of Kittanning, Armstrong Co., Pennsylvania, where he read law, and for a time served as Clerk of the Orphans' Court.

On the day of their marriage he, with his parents, brothers and sisters, and his wife, started for California, going by way of New York, and thence by steamer, crossing the Isthmus of Panama on mule back, and arriving at San Francisco on the 23d of November, being forty days on the journey. They removed thence in the spring of 1853 to Sacramento, California, and thence to Bear Run, Nevada Co., California, fourteen miles below Grass Valley. As their children needed better educational facilities than could be found there, they returned, in 1868, to Sacramento, where David Johnson transacted the business of a mining and United States land claim attorney, and served as a member of the City Board of Education.

During his residence there he bought a tract of seven hundred acres of land at Cool, El Dorado Co., California, which he developed into a plantation of olive and other fruit trees. When his health failed several years ago, he and his wife removed to their ranch, which has since been the home of the family. After his death, May 10, 1903, his widow returned to Sacramento, where she now lives with her children.

David Johnston bore throughout his life the highest character. He was a man of stern and uncompromising integrity, though in his private life he was generous and broadminded.

Nathan Grier White (XIX 51) was a clergyman of the Presbyterian church, a graduate of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pennsylvania, 1828, and of Princeton Theological Seminary, 1833. He was licensed to preach October 2, 1833. He was ordained by the Presbytery of Carlisle in 1834, and was installed as pastor of the churches at McConnellsburg, Green Hill and Wells Valley, Fulton Co., Pennsylvania, where he remained until 1864. He was pastor of the church at Williamsburg, near Hollidaysburg, Pennsylvania, from 1867 to 1883. He removed to New Haven, Fayette Co., Pennsylvania, where he died in 1895. After his pastorate at Williamsburg ceased, he still preached at several churches till two years before his death.

His second wife, Catharine MacDowell, died October 21, 1893.

Robert McCrea White (XIX 52) was a clergyman of the Presbyterian church. He was a graduate of Amherst College, 1834. It is related of him that when he applied for admission there he found that his preparatory studies should have covered five books of Euclid's geometry, none of which he had studied. Requesting that he might delay his examination in mathematics a few days, he took the text-book, and while wandering through the neighboring fields mastered the required books in three days, and passed his examination. Twenty years later a young Amherst graduate told his widow that this feat was still one of the often narrated traditions of the college.

He was a classmate, roommate, and till his death a friend and correspondent of Henry Ward Beecher.

After leaving college he taught for a time in the Academy of Bel Air, Maryland, where he met his future wife. He was graduated from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1837, but his hard study there seriously overtasked his eyes, and he accepted a call to Fairview church, a small church of forty members, in Brooke Co., West Virginia. During his pastorate there of eleven years, from 1837 to 1848, his congregation increased to about six hundred members, and they built a substantial brick church, to take the place of the dilapidated building he found there.

The intensity of his work there impaired his health, and so far affected his throat that he decided to retire from active pastoral work; and in the summer of 1848 he accepted a call to the chair of rhetoric and oratory at Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pennsylvania. He undertook, in connection with this work, the charge of a small church at Chartiers, Pennsylvania, but he lived but a few months after assuming these duties.

He was a man of great intellectual power and fine scholarship, and an earnest advocate of the cause of temperance. He worked throughout his life with an intensity which was too great for his physical strength, and which closed his career in the maturity of his mental powers.

His wife, Ellen Morrison Davis, was a daughter of Stephen Davis, of Baltimore, Maryland.

Sarah Jane White (XIX 53). Her husband, William S. King, born December 28, 1810, died August 2, 1895, was a surgeon, United States Army, appointed July, 1838. He served in the Seminole war, the Mexican war, and the Civil war. He held at the time of his death the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. He died at Asbury Park, New Jersey, August 2, 1895.

Ann Eliza White (XIX 55) was educated at Norristown Seminary, Norristown, Pennsylvania. She was married at Fagg's Manor church, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, and was buried at Pottstown, Pennsylvania.

Her husband, John Moore, D.D., was a Presbyterian clergyman, a son of Robert and Nancy Moore, born at Fairview, West Virginia, October 16, 1822, died August 13, 1888. He was graduated by Washington and Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pennsylvania, A.B. 1843, and by Western Theological Seminary, Allegheny, Pennsylvania, B.D. 1846. After the death of his first wife he was stationed in the West. He married a second time at Chatfield, Minnesota, August 26, 1879, Abby Welles Johnson, a sister of Dr. Samuel Johnson, professor of chemistry in Sheffield Scientific School, Yale University.

Martha White (XIX 56) was educated at Oxford and Norristown, Pennsylvania. She taught for a time in the Young Ladies' Seminary at Norristown, of which her cousin, Rev. James Ralston, was principal.

Her husband, Robert Stewart Fullerton, was a Presbyterian clergyman, born in Bloomingburg, Ohio, November 23, 1821.

The Fullerton family came originally from Corbies in Picardy, France. They emigrated to Scotland, settling two miles from Ayr, about 1085, upon an estate from which they took their name, the family name before that time having been Fitz Lewis. They were hereditary fowlers to the kings of Scotland, and called their castle "Fowler town," from whence came the name Fullerton. The name Fullerton appears in Ireland as early as 1602. Those bearing that name in Ayrshire were Covenanters, and as they were subjected to heavy fines there in the time of James II, it is supposed that the progenitors of the American family crossed to Ireland about that time.

It is known that Humphrey Fullerton (Generation XV), great-great-grandfather of Robert Stewart Fullerton, fought under King William III at the battle of Boyne Water, and was by him given a sword, which was treasured in the family for several generations.

This Humphrey Fullerton emigrated to America in 1723 or 1725, sailing from Chester, England. He settled in Pequea, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania. His son Humphrey (Generation XVI), who was six years old at the time of the emigration, married a daughter of Daniel Clark, a London merchant of wealth. He died in 1777 or 1778.

His son Humphrey (Generation XVII) was born in Pequea, Pennsylvania, about 1748, and died near Green Castle, Pennsylvania, about 1795. He was a surveyor, and in that capacity was an assistant in the survey of the boundary line between Pennsylvania and New York. He was a man of means and of good position. He married Martha Mitchell.

His third son, Thomas Fullerton (Generation XVIII), was the father of Robert Stewart Fullerton. Thomas Fullerton was originally a merchant in Baltimore, Maryland, but being ill adapted to business, his tastes being scholarly, he removed to Ohio, where he lived on a farm belonging to his wife, Elizabeth Stuart, opening at the same time an academy at Bloomingburg, Ohio. His wife and several of his children dying soon after 1824, during an epidemic of fever, he removed further West, married a second time, and died soon afterward.

Robert Stewart Fullerton was taken into the family of his mother's brother, Archibald Stewart, by whom he was treated as a son.

Elizabeth Stuart, the wife of Thomas Fullerton, was a daughter of Hugh Stuart, of Hagerstown, Maryland. His home was called "Ringold Manor." He was a civil engineer.

The spelling of the family name, which was originally "Stuart," was changed by Hugh Stuart's oldest son George to "Stewart." Since that time some of the family have used one spelling, and some the other.

Robert Stewart Fullerton was graduated from Marietta College, Ohio, and afterward from the Theological Seminary at Allegheny, Pennsylvania.

He and his wife sailed for India as missionaries of the Presbyterian church in August, 1852, to join the Furrukhabad Mission. Their home while they were in India was generally at Agra, and in Fatehgarh, a suburb of Furrukhabad.

During the Indian mutiny in 1857, Mr. and Mrs. Fullerton were shut up for several months in the English fort at Agra, the three older children having been sent to a place of safety in the mountains. Agra held out successfully against the mutineers, but all the missionaries in Fatehgarh were killed. After the mutiny, Mr. Fullerton spent many months gathering together the scattered native christians and reorganizing the mission at Fatehgarh. During much of this time his whereabouts was unknown to his family, who did not even know that he was living. His health failed from the hardships of this life and from his long residence in India without furlough, and he was preparing to return to America when he died, October 4, 1865.

He was an excellent linguist, and had a cheerful, sunny disposition, which much endeared him not only to the people of India, but also to the English officials and the civilians with whom he came in contact.

His wife, with their children, returned to America after his death in a sailing ship bound for Boston, Massachusetts. After a long and tempestuous voyage, which lasted over four months they reached Boston to find that her sister Sarah Jane, Mrs. William S. King, on whose assistance she had greatly relied, had died during their voyage. She had another sister, Ann Eliza, Mrs. John Moore, living in Philadelphia, and this fact determined Mrs. Fullerton to make her home in that city, where she spent the rest of her life. Her undaunted courage and self-sacrifice enabled her, on limited means, to educate her children, and to prepare them for lives of usefulness.

Susan Grier (XIX 58). Her husband, John Hatton Marsden, born September 25, 1803, died August 27, 1882, was a clergyman of the Episcopal church. In his early life he was proprietor of a school at York Sulphur Springs, Pennsylvania. He was also a physician of the homœopathic school of medicine.

Smith F. Grier (XIX 61) was a clergyman of the Presbyterian church. He was born in Adams Co., Pennsylvania, was graduated from Jefferson College in 1839, and from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1842. He was for ten years pastor of Valley Presbyterian church, and was afterward pastor of New Cumberland Presbyterian church for forty years, till the time of his death.

His first wife, Jane Connelly, was a daughter of Thomas and Nancy Connelly, of Washington Co., Pennsylvania. She died at Canonsburg, January 30, 1852.

His second wife, Eveline Miller, was of Allegheny Co., Pennsylvania. She died November, 1876.

His third wife, Martha B. Snodgrass, was of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. She died October 20, 1901.

Laverty Grier (XIX 62) was a clergyman of the Presbyterian church. He was stationed in 1876 at Elm Grove, Forks of Wheeling, five miles from Wheeling, West Virginia. At a later time he lived near Cincinnati, Ohio.

His wife, Margaret Jeffrey, was born February 25, 1828.

Frances Ralston Grier (XIX 66). Her husband, Thomas Graham Happersett, born October 17, 1807, died February 17, 1853, was a son of Melchi Happersett, a flour merchant of Baltimore, Maryland, and his wife, Rebecca Graham, who were married April 28, 1803.

After the death of her husband in Baltimore, she lived with her father, John Nathan Caldwell Grier, at Brandywine Manor. After his death, in 1880, she removed to Philadelphia.

Eloisa Grier (XIX 67). Her husband, Richard Bowen Parke, born near Downingtown, Pennsylvania, August 29, 1810, died February 19, 1875, was a farmer, and of Quaker ancestry. He and his mother subsequently became members of the Brandywine Manor Presbyterian church.

Ann Grier Parke (XIX 70). Her husband, Christopher Geiger, was descended from Anthony Geiger, who came from Germany and settled at what is now Gibraltar, Berks Co., Pennsylvania. He purchased a tract of land from Thomas and Richard Penn proprietaries, prior to 1750, which land remained in the Geiger family for three generations.

After the death of Ann Grier Parke, Christopher Geiger married Ann C. Bates, daughter of Rev. William Bates, of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, by whom he had five children.

Christopher Geiger died October 28, 1889.

Nathan Grier Parke (XIX 72) was a clergyman of the Presbyterian church. He was graduated by Jefferson College, A.B. in 1840, and by Princeton Theological Seminary in 1844, and spent all his later years of service as pastor of the Presbyterian church in Pittston, Pennsylvania. He was a man of fine abilities and of wide influence.

His wife, Anne Elizabeth Gildersleeve, born September 25, 1822, died October 4, 1871, was a daughter of William Camp Gildersleeve and his wife, born Nancy Spencer Riggs, of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania.

Joseph Maxwell Parke (XIX 73). His wife, Lucinda Neel, was born August 8, 1830. They were married in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, by Rev. Samuel Parke, Joseph's father.

Mary Ann Thompson (XIX 78). Her husband, James Jackson Worrall, born May 2, 1822, died October 9, 1904.

Nathan Grier Thompson (XIX 80) was a physician; a graduate, February 28, 1852, of Jefferson College. He practiced medicine at Brandywine Manor for nearly forty years, when he removed to Coatesville, Pennsylvania, where he died suddenly of heart disease about four years after his removal.

John Caldwell Thompson (XIX 81) was a clergyman of the Presbyterian church. He was born in Chester Co., Pennsylvania, was graduated A.B. by Lafayette College, and B.D. by Princeton Theological Seminary. He was ordained a minister in 1859. He was a pastor in Natchez, Mississippi; in Smyrna, Delaware; in Pottstown, Pennsylvania, and in Hagerstown, Maryland. In 1879 he was called to Philadelphia as pastor of the German Presbyterian church, and later became pastor of the Scots' Presbyterian church, and in 1896, associate pastor of Bethany church. In October, 1902, he took charge of the work of John Chambers' Memorial church, in which service he died.

His wife, Julia Cogswell Berry, was of Blairsville, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Dr. John M. Berry, of Concord, New Hampshire, and his wife, born Ruth Upham, of Rochester, New Hampshire.

John Smith Richards (XIX 83) was born near Joanna Furnace, where he lived until 1828, when he became an inmate of the house of his uncle, Judge William Darling. He received his education chiefly in the academy of which Rev. James F. Grier was principal. He had a taste for writing, and commenced his contributions to the press when he was sixteen years of age. He was admitted to practice law in Berks county, April 4, 1837. In 1838 he became the editor of the Berks and Schuylkill Journal, which position he held till 1845. He was district attorney in 1849 and 1850, and in 1851 was appointed President Judge of Berks county. In 1854 he was elected mayor of Reading. He was one of the leading lawyers of his part of the State.

Early in the year 1857 a friend going into Mr. Richards' office in Reading found him very ill and delirious. His sister, Elizabeth, was summoned from her home in Columbia, Pennsylvania, to care for him, and a few days later, as his life was despaired of, his mother also came to Reading. For several weeks the two took care of him, but his mother sickened, and after a few days the sister became exhausted, and both mother and daughter died on the same day, April 25, 1857.

Weeks afterward, when consciousness returned to the brother, he first learned that his mother and sister had sacrificed their lives for him. Upon his recovery he erected a monument over their remains in St. Mary's churchyard, Warwick township, Chester county, which bears the inscription:

"Loving and loved, in life, in death but one,
Death was to them immortal life begun;
They died a son's, a brother's life to save,
All he can give—a stone to mark their grave."

His first wife, Nancy O'Brien, was a daughter of Joseph O'Brien by his first wife, Nancy Darling, a sister of Judge William Darling. Joseph O'Brien afterward married Elizabeth Bull Smith (XVIII 34). Nancy O'Brien was a woman of great personal charm. She died May 27, 1843, and is buried in Laurel Hill cemetery, Philadelphia.

John Smith Richards' second wife, Julia Van Ness Williams, was a daughter of Dr. Cornelius Williams, of Hudson, New York, and Catalina Van Ness, of Dutchess Co., New York. She was born July 25, 1827, and died May 23, 1872.

John Howard Smith (XIX 90) was born at Joanna Furnace. He was graduated A.B. at Kenyon College, Ohio, and studied medicine, and was graduated M.D. by the University of Pennsylvania. He entered the United States Navy, made several cruises, and having had opportunity to observe many cases of yellow fever, he wrote a paper on that disease and was on his way home with the intention of publishing it. His vessel touching for supplies at Vera Cruz, Mexico, intelligence was brought that yellow fever was raging at Salmadina, and that several of the physicians in attendance at the hospital having died, help was urgently needed. He and his friend, Dr. Hastings, volunteered for service there, and both took the disease, of which Dr. Smith died. His body was brought home by Dr. Hastings, and was buried at St. Mary's church, Warwick township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania.

Horace Smith (XIX 91) was born at Joanna Furnace, was graduated, A.B., at Kenyon College, Ohio, read law in Reading, and removed to Pottsville, Pennsylvania, where he practiced law till 1850, when his health having failed, he obtained an appointment as consul to Oporto, Portugal. He returned to Reading in the spring of 1852, and died there. He and his wife were both buried in Trinity churchyard, Pottsville, Pennsylvania.

His wife, Anna Maria Nichols, born Orwigsburg, Pennsylvania, July 8, 1822, died December 16, 1847, was a daughter of Francis Bonde Nichols, a retired officer of the United States Army, and a coal operator in Schuylkill Co., Pennsylvania, and his wife, Anna Maria; and a granddaughter of William Nichols, and his wife, born Margaret Hillegas, who was a daughter of Michel Hillegas.

Vincent Henry Smith (XIX 92) was educated for the law, but never practiced his profession. He was a part owner of Joanna Furnace.

John Smith Loeser (XIX 94) was badly injured in a railroad accident, but was so active in his efforts to relieve others who were hurt that his own condition was not noticed till he fell exhausted and dying.

Thomas Smith Loeser (XIX 95) was a Captain of the Second Pennsylvania Volunteers in the Mexican war. His wife, Mary Hillegas Rheem, born August 28, 1817, died March 8, 1887, was a daughter of Jacob Rheem, and his wife, born Maria Hillegas.

Elizabeth Stringer Loeser (XIX 96) was a woman of unusual personal beauty.

Henry Darling (XIX 99) was graduated from Amherst College in 1842, and from Auburn Theological Seminary, B.D. in 1845, and D.D., Union College, in 1860. He also received the degree of LL.D. from Lafayette and Hamilton Colleges in 1881. He was a pastor of several Presbyterian churches in New York and Pennsylvania between 1846 and 1881. He was called, September 24, 1881, to the Presidency of Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., where he finished his career. He held a high position in the Presbyterian church, whose reunion in 1869 he was influential in bringing about, was a director of Union Theological Seminary, its chief divinity school from 1874 to 1881, and was the permanent clerk from 1854 to 1861 of its General Assembly, and its presiding officer or moderator in 1881.

He was an able, earnest and successful pastor, was highly influential in the councils of the church, and in spite of delicate health, which often interfered with his activities, and which shortened his life, he accomplished many great works, and won honor and love from a wide circle.

During his enforced retirement from pastoral duties on account of ill health, from 1861 to 1864, he was largely engaged in literary work, and wrote several books of devotion and of religious thought, which met with great acceptance; and during the Civil war he showed his devotion to his country's cause by his writings, and by his service in connection with the United States Christian Commission.

His first wife, Julia Strong, was a daughter of Rev. William L. Strong. She died June 24, 1851. His second wife, Ophelia O. Wells, is a daughter of Richard I. Wells, of Hudson, N. Y., and his wife, born Ann Maria Olcott.

Thomas Smith Darling (XIX 100) was a lawyer.

Edward Payson Darling (XIX 103) was a leading and highly respected lawyer of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania. He was graduated, A.B., Amherst, 1851, admitted to practice law at Reading, 1853, removed to Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, 1855, and was an officer and trustee of several important corporations and educational institutions of Wilkes-Barre.

His wife, Emily Hollenback Rutter, a daughter of Nathaniel Rutter, and his wife, born Mary Ann Cist, of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, was born December 16, 1833, and died January 23, 1882.

Elizabeth Smith Darling (XIX 105). Her husband, William Appleton Drown, Jr., born January 16, 1836, died December 21, 1890, was a son of William Appleton Drown, and his wife, born Mary E. Pierce, both of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

The Drown family are descended from Leonard Drown, who, about 1670, emigrated from England to New England. William Appleton Drown came in his youth from Portsmouth, New Hampshire, to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He entered the service of Erasmus Pierce, who had established a manufactory of umbrellas and parasols at Third and Market streets, Philadelphia.

William A. Drown married the daughter of Erasmus Pierce, and succeeded to the business of his father-in-law, which he carried on till his own death. Subsequently the business was carried on by his son for a number of years, remaining in the family for a total of nearly one hundred years. It was for many years a commercial success, and the reputation of its manager for honorable and straightforward business methods was always high.

William A. Drown, Jr., lived at Oak Lane after his marriage till 1867, when he removed to Weldon, Montgomery Co., Pennsylvania, which is still the home of his family.

He was a graduate of the Central High School of Philadelphia, of the class of 1853.

He was an active member of the Presbyterian church, being an elder of the Arch Street church, and one of the founders of the Carmel Presbyterian church at Edge Hill, Pennsylvania.

John Vaughan Darling (XIX 109) was a lawyer of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, a partner of his brother Edward. He was admitted to practice law at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1865. His wife, Alice Mary McClintock, born January 31, 1848, died October 14, 1900, was a daughter of Andrew T. McClintock, a leading lawyer of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, and his wife, born Augusta Bradley Cist, a sister of the mother of Mrs. Edward Payson Darling. They had no children.

Her second husband, John Gilchrist Parr, born December 9, 1823, died August 31, 1881, was an officer during the Civil war, from which service he retired with the rank of Colonel. He lost an arm in the service, and its amputation left some permanent injury to his nervous system from which he suffered during the rest of his life, though he was not thereby incapacitated from business. For several years before his death he was Prothonotary of Armstrong Co., Pennsylvania. He died in 1881.

Beaton Smith (XIX 171) is a civil and mining engineer. He was engaged in mining engineering in the Schuylkill coal region of Pennsylvania from 1857 to April, 1861, when he entered the military service as First Lieutenant Eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and rose to the rank of Captain. He remained in the service till the close of the war, being attached during the later years of the war to the Quartermaster's Department. He was afterward engaged in mining engineering in the Schuylkill coal region, and in railroad engineering in southern Pennsylvania, and in Kansas and Mexico. He is now a resident of Vineland, New Jersey.

Henry Stephen Slaymaker (XIX 174). His wife, Fidelia Montgomery, born January 1, 1835, died January 21, 1887, was a daughter of John R. Montgomery, and his wife, born Maria Riegar.

He was stationed in Georgetown, Delaware, from 1871 to 1884. He removed to Philadelphia and continued to discharge parochial duties till his death. His parents were Jacob Morgan Douglas, and his wife, born Sarah Anne Johnson.

Elizabeth Wright Riley (XIX 214). Her husband, Daniel DeForest Lord, born April 19, 1839, died November 7, 1894, was a leading lawyer of New York City. His parents were Daniel Lord, and his wife, born Susan DeForest, a daughter of Lockwood DeForest, of New York.

Stephen Harris (XIX 215) was educated, first, in Chester Valley, Pennsylvania, and after the removal of his father to Philadelphia in April, 1850, he entered the Central High School in September, 1850, passing an examination which placed him at the head of a class of over 140 boys. His progress was so satisfactory that he was twice promoted into the next class above his own, and was graduated in June, 1853, with the degree of A.B., being one of a very few who ever finished the four years' course at the Central High School in three years. He was generally at or very near the head of his class during his whole course, though he was graduated without rank, as he was ill of typhoid fever at the time the class finished its work.

He entered at once the service of the United States Coast Survey, in which he remained seven years, rising to the rank of sub-assistant. His work was mostly on the coast of Maine in summer, and on the coast of Florida, Mississippi or Louisiana in the winter. He rendered valuable service and was highly thought of in the service, but he desired a more settled life, and in 1860 he established himself as a civil and mining engineer in Pottsville, Pennsylvania, where he spent his remaining years.

He and his brother Joseph formed, in 1860, a partnership which lasted till Stephen's death, though Joseph did not permanently join him in Pottsville till 1864. The engineering practice became at once a remunerative one, and his services were held in high estimation by a wide range of clients.

In 1864 he was appointed the agent and engineer of the City of Philadelphia, in which capacity he had charge of the very valuable coal estate left to the city by Stephen Girard in 1831. This property he developed and made very remunerative.

A long career of usefulness seemed to have opened before him, but it was destined to come to a tragic close. On the morning of the 10th of March, 1874, he went to inspect some mining work that was being done on the Broad Mountain lands, about nine miles from his home. The day was cold and there was a furious snow storm raging on the mountain, which seems to have prevented his seeing or hearing perfectly. In some unknown way he was struck by a coal train which was backing up the Broad Mountain and Mahoney Railroad, and was instantly killed.

He was a man of unusual gifts, an able mathematician, an untiring student, and a man of great reasoning power and of wide influence. He was an earnest, devoted and useful Christian man, and combined in a degree rarely seen the abilities of a successful man of business and the deep and true family affections with devoted and self-sacrificing piety.

His wife, Catharine McArthur, born January 7, 1837, was a daughter of John McArthur, and his wife, born Elizabeth Wilson, of Philadelphia. Mr. McArthur was an architect and builder of Scottish birth, and an elder in the Tenth Presbyterian church of Philadelphia.

Joseph Smith Harris (XIX 216) had a career which, during his school life, ran closely parallel to that of his brother Stephen, entering the Central High School with him, and being graduated with him, and holding, like him, the highest places in his class.

Upon leaving school in 1853 he entered the service of the North Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in which he rose to the rank of topographer. On leaving this work upon the completion of the surveys in which he was engaged, he entered, in the fall of 1854, the service of the United States Government, in which he remained nearly ten years. He served for about two years in the Coast Survey in Mississippi Sound, spent the season of 1850 in Kentucky, running a base line for the Kentucky Geological Survey, and in 1857 was appointed one of the astronomers of the Northwest Boundary Survey. He remained nearly five years on the extreme northwestern frontier of the United States, in what are now the States of Washington, Idaho and British Columbia. In the season of 1862 he was, at first, the first officer, and later was in command of the United States steamer "Sachem," on duty with Farragut's fleet in the Mississippi.

Leaving the service of the United States Government in 1864 he removed to Pottsville, Pennsylvania, joining there his brother Stephen in business. He was engaged there in civil and mining engineering for a number of years until he was called to New York, in 1880, as general manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. In 1882 he was elected president of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company and removed to Philadelphia. In 1893 he was appointed the managing receiver, and elected the president of The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company and The Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company. He held these presidencies till his retirement in 1901. Under his administration the Reading Company, which, under the reorganization of the two companies above named, became the owner of their capital stock, was able to resume, in 1900, the payment of dividends which had been intermitted since 1876.

In June, 1903, he was given the degree of "Doctor of Science" by Franklin and Marshall College.

His first wife, and the mother of all his children, Delia Silliman Brodhead, born January 20, 1842, died August 19, 1880, was the second daughter of George Hamilton Brodhead, of New York, for many years secretary of the New York Stock Exchange, and later its vice-president and president, and his wife, born Julia Ann Phelps.

His second wife, Emily Eliza Potts, born July 14, 1843, and died December 29, 1890, was a daughter of George Henry Potts, president of the National Park Bank, New York, and his wife, born Emily Dilworth Cumming.

His third wife, Anna Zelia Potts, was born June 11, 1850.

Martha Frazer Harris (XIX 217). Her husband, Henry Chester Parry, born June 17, 1839, died November 7, 1893, was a physician, a graduate of the medical school of the University of Pennsylvania. He was, during the Civil war, and for some years later, a surgeon in the United States Army. After his marriage he commenced the private practice of medicine in Brooklyn, New York, and in 1874 removed to Pottsville, Pennsylvania. After his death, which occurred November 7, 1893, his widow removed, in 1897, to Augusta, Georgia, where she now lives.

John Campbell Harris (XIX 218) was educated at the Central High School of Philadelphia, and studied law afterward with his mother's brother, P. Frazer Smith (XVIII 65) in West Chester, Pennsylvania, and with James M. Carlisle in Washington, District Columbia, where he was admitted to the practice of the law.

In 1860 he was appointed clerk to the commandant of the United States Marine Corps by his uncle, Colonel John Harris, and November 25, 1861, he was commissioned a second lieutenant in that corps. He served throughout the Civil war; was brevetted first lieutenant for "gallant and meritorious services at the attack on Forts Jackson and St. Philip, April 24, 1862," was commissioned first lieutenant February 16, 1864, and remained in the service until July 31, 1869, when he resigned and engaged in manufacturing business in Philadelphia. He retired from active business pursuits in 1879.

His wife, Mary Powers, born October 30, 1845, is the only daughter of Thomas H. Powers, senior partner of the firm of Powers & Weightman, manufacturing chemists of Philadelphia, and his wife, born Anna Cash.

Frazer Harris (XIX 219) was a lad of great promise and decided artistic ability. He died suddenly, before his education was completed, from a malignant pustule in his face, which ended his life a few days after its appearance.

Mary Campbell Harris (XIX 220) died of consumption in her early womanhood.

Rebecca Darlington Smith (XIX 224). Her husband, Robert Emmet Monaghan, born West Fallowfield township, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, July 24, 1822, died June 29, 1895, was a son of James Monaghan, a farmer, born, Ireland, 1780, emigrated 1799, died October, 1841, and his wife, born Catharine Streeper. He had been concerned in the political movement in Ireland which was led by Robert Emmet; upon its failure he emigrated to America.

Robert Emmet Monaghan studied law with Hamilton Aldricks of Harrisburg, and was admitted to practice law April 20, 1848. He was a lawyer of prominence in his profession, and of influence in political life, being one of the leaders of the conservative wing of the Democratic party of Pennsylvania. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1853. In early life he was in the service of the Pennsylvania Board of Canal Commissioners and had charge of the collector's office at Liverpool, Perry Co., Pennsylvania.

George Fairlamb Smith (XIX 228) was a graduate of Yale, A.B. 1858. He studied law in his father's office, and was admitted to practice October 31, 1864.

In 1861 he enlisted in the United States Army under the call for 75,000 volunteers for three months' service, being the first man to enlist in Chester county. In this body of men he was a Captain in Company B of the Forty-ninth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. After the expiration of his term of service, he reëntered the army as Major of the Sixty-first Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers. He was wounded and made prisoner at the battle of Fair Oaks, May 31, 1862, and was held a prisoner till September 10, 1862. He succeeded to the command of his regiment at the battle of Fair Oaks, both of his superior officers being killed, and he took command upon his release in September, 1862. At the battle of Spottsylvania, May 12, 1864, he was twice wounded, the last time severely under the knee, while fighting in that part of the front line which was called "the angle of death." He retired from the army May, 1865, with the rank of Colonel of the Sixty-first Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers.

After the war he was associated with his father in the practice of law in West Chester, Pennsylvania. He was District Attorney of Chester county from 1870 to 1872, and a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1875 and 1876.

His wife, Ann E. Hickman, is a daughter of Wellington Hickman, and his wife, born Jane Osborne, of Chester Co., Pennsylvania.

William Steel Boyd's parents were William Boyd, born on a farm near Cochranville, Chester Co., Pennsylvania, February 12, 1789, and his wife, born Eliza Steele, a daughter of General Steele, born Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania, January 18, 1790, married June 11, 1812, and died at her home in Havre de Grace, Maryland, March 28, 1846. William Boyd, who was superintendent of the Tidewater Canal Company, was killed near Havre de Grace, April 1, 1841, by being thrown from his horse while attending to his duties as superintendent.

James Herr Smith (XIX 251). His early business training was in mercantile business in Wrightsville, Pennsylvania, with his uncle, James Fleming Smith (XVIII 70), and afterward in Philadelphia. He was for a time during the Civil war in the clerical service of the War Department. He was clerk of the Town Council, and Assistant Provost Marshal when Wrightsville was captured by the Confederate Army under General John B. Gordon, June 28, 1863.

From 1871 he had charge for several years of the interests in Georgia and Florida of a New York firm engaged in the real estate and lumber business.

From 1877 to 1895 he was cashier of a national bank in Brunswick, Georgia. He returned to Wrightsville in 1899, and has since lived there.

He was ordained an elder of the Presbyterian church of Brunswick, Ga., in 1874.

His wife, Caroline Dickenson Ebernz, was a daughter of William and Mary Ebernz, of Tioga Co., Pennsylvania.

John Futhy Smith (XIX 252). His wife, Mary McFetrich, was a daughter of John H. and Jane McFetrich, of Philadelphia.

Robert Wirt Smith (XIX 253) was killed during the Civil war. He was wounded in the leg at the second battle of Bull Run, Virginia, and died at Washington, D. C. He was at the time of his death Lieutenant and Adjutant of the Fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Reserves.

Calvin Grier Smith (XIX 254). His wife, Sarah Anna Kauffelt, was a daughter of Henry G. Kauffelt, of York, Pennsylvania.

Martha Herr Smith (XIX 255). Her husband, Frank J. Magee, born December 8, 1837, and died April 8, 1899, entered the United States service during the Civil war as a Second Lieutenant of the Seventy-sixth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, August 21, 1861. He rose to the rank of Acting Ordnance Officer of the first division of Tenth Army Corps with the rank of Captain, and was mustered out of service November 28, 1864. He saw very active duty and was in many battles in Virginia and in the southern Atlantic States. He joined the National Guard of Pennsylvania after the Civil war, and rose in the service till, at the time of his death, April 8, 1899, he was a Brigadier General in command of the Third Brigade.

He volunteered for duty in the Spanish war in 1898, but his physical condition prevented his appointment.

He held many positions in the civil service of his native state, was a Justice of Peace, from 1872 to 1899, a member of the House of Representatives in 1871 and 1872, Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Soldiers' Orphans School at Scotland, Pennsylvania, and was an officer of the Pennsylvania Department of the Grand Army of the Republic, its inspector in 1887, and its commander in 1888.

He was president of the Wrightsville Hardware Company from 1880 to 1899, and was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity. He was graduated by Georgetown College, Washington, D. C., in 1858, and took the first honors in mathematics.

He was a son of James H. Magee, and Rosanna, his wife, of Wrightsville, Pennsylvania.

Charles Persifor Smith (XIX 257) was born in Wrightsville, Pennsylvania. He removed to Plymouth, Pennsylvania, and entered the service of the Delaware and Hudson Coal Company about 1868. In 1870 he removed to Parsons, Pennsylvania, and was there engaged in the service of J. R. Davis of Scranton, until 1876, when he removed to West Pittston, Pennsylvania, where he remained connected with the Lehigh Valley Coal Company till his death.

His wife, Hannah Gertrude Kern, born February 12, 1852, is a daughter of John Kern of Plymouth, Pennsylvania, and his wife, born Sophia Krieg. She was graduated by the Lewisburg Female Institute, of Lewisburg, Pennsylvania, in 1869.

John Kern, born January 10, 1821, died October 31, 1885, was of Dutch descent. His mother, Elsie Barnes, was of a New Jersey family, one of her ancestors named Phillips having given its name to Phillipsburg, New Jersey.

John Kern's wife, Sophia Krieg, was born January 20, 1820, in Germantown, Pennsylvania, and died in Plymouth, Pennsylvania, February 26, 1901.

Her father was a native of Wurtemberg, who came to America before his twenty-first birthday to avoid military conscription. His father held a position in the service of the Kingdom of Wurtemberg.

Howard Persifor Smith (XIX 258). His wife, Margie Baumgardner, was a daughter of Thomas Baumgardner, of Lancaster, Pennsylvania. After the death of Howard Persifor Smith she married William Heyward Jenkins.

Ambrose Cephas Smith (XIX 260) is a Presbyterian clergyman; a graduate of Princeton University. He was at one time president of Parsons College, Fairfield, Iowa, and is now pastor of a church at Negaunee, Michigan.

His wife, Hannah L. Slaymaker, is a daughter of Amos Henderson Slaymaker, of Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania.

Silas Melanethon Smith (XIX 261) volunteered when less than eighteen years old to enlist under the first call for troops during the Civil war, and was made a Sergeant. At the night attack on Fort Wagner, Morris Island, South Carolina, he fell wounded while charging at the head of his regiment, July 11, 1863. He was taken prisoner, and died at Columbia, South Carolina, from the effect of the amputation of his left leg. He was buried in the cemetery there, but his grave was not marked and could never be identified. He made, though so young, a fine record for all soldierly qualities of character.

John Isaac Smith (XIX 262). His wife, Mary Elizabeth McConkey, born September 10, 1847, is a daughter of William McConkey, and his wife, born Susan R. Silver, of Wrightsville, Pennsylvania.

They had no children.

Henry S. Cochran (XIX 263) entered the United States service in the Philadelphia Mint, April 14, 1850. In 1852 he detected his superior officer Negus in peculation. Negus was dismissed, and Cochran was made chief weigher, a position which he held for forty-one years.

Stephen A. Cochran (XIX 264) was an engraver in early life.

Jane Ann Cochran (XIX 265). Her husband, Gilbert Coombs, founded, and for thirty years conducted the Spring Garden Institute of Philadelphia, a superior school for girls. It was largely patronized and had at times 100 to 130 pupils. He died March 11, 1872.

Annie S. Carson (XIX 266) is a clerk in one of the United States offices in Washington, D. C.

Susan Wilson (XIX 268). Her husband, John Wilson, was her cousin.

Jane Eliza Magraw (XIX 269). Her husband, Thomas J. Huggins, was born February 14, 1829.

Rebecca Ann Magraw (XIX 270). Her husband, Galloway, is a physician.

Robert Magraw (XIX 273). His wife, Mary Milliron Nussear, born January 6, 1845, died December 4, 1881.

Levi Maxwell (XIX 278) was born near Clarksburg, West Virginia. Of the seven children born to him and his wife, who was born Lucena Page, three died in infancy. He left his parents' home at the age of sixteen, removed to Newark, Ohio, where he lived for ten years, whence he removed, in 1846, to Cardington, Ohio, where he spent the rest of his life. His last twenty years he lived with his daughter (Ella), Mrs. C. S. Hook.

Abner M. Maxwell (XIX 284) born in Harrison Co., West Virginia, removed to Doddridge county in 1845, where he taught school for two terms. He afterward settled on a farm, when he married, and has since lived there.

James Maxwell (XIX 285). His first wife, born Abigail Ann Osborne, died September 25, 1866. His second wife, born Priseilla Doak, died September 13, 1870. By her he had no children.

Edwin Maxwell (XIX 288) was originally a carpenter. He afterward studied law. He was elected to the Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia in 1863, and was the Republican nominee for Governor of that state in 1884. He was elected to the State Senate in 1866, and several times afterward. He was serving in that body at the time of his death in Charleston, West Virginia, of pneumonia.

John Maxwell (XIX 289) was a civil engineer and architect. He assisted in the surveys of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad between Grafton and Parkersburg, West Virginia, and he designed the Upshur county court house at Buckhannon, West Virginia. He died in Doddridge county of brain fever.

Rufus Maxwell (XIX 290) was a lawyer in his early life, but was not engaged in the practice of law subsequent to the Civil war. He was a Justice of the Peace in Lewis Co., West Virginia. He removed thence to Tucker Co., West Virginia, in 1856, where he was successively elected to the offices of District Attorney in 1856, Superintendent of Schools, to the Legislature, and to the office of County Surveyor.

He still lives on his farm in Tucker Co., West Virginia.

His wife, Sarah Jane Bonnifield, born Horseshoe Run, West Virginia, July 14, 1834, died February 16, 1897, at Denver, Colorado, was a daughter of Arnold Bonnifield, and his wife, born Elizabeth Mineor, of West Virginia.

Elizabeth Meek Murdoch (XX 90). Her husband, Samuel Potter Brown, was born in Greensburg, Westmoreland Co., Pennsylvania, July 8, 1848. His parents were William Brown, of Greensburg, and his wife, born Helen Norwell Bruce, a daughter of Robert Bruce, D.D., who was a native of Scotland, pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and president of the Western University of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

Clara Enna Glass (XX 95) was born near Cochranville, Chester Co., Pennsylvania. She was married in Parnassus, Westmoreland Co., Pennsylvania.

Her husband, John Calvin Stewart, born 1844, was a son of William Stewart, and his wife, born Mary Hunter. They were both of Scotch-Irish descent. William Stewart was a farmer, and also kept a general store.

John Calvin Stewart, at the age of eighteen years, enlisted, August 1, 1862, in Company F, One Hundred and Twenty-third Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. When his enlistment expired he reënlisted in Company I, Fifth Regiment of Pennsylvania Heavy Artillery, and remained in the service till July 10, 1865. He took part in the battles of Fredericksburg, Virginia; Antietam, Maryland, and Chancellorsville, Virginia, and in several minor engagements.

He married, after his return from the war, Jennie, daughter of John and Margaret McKean, of Westmoreland Co., Pennsylvania, and settled on a farm, but finding farm life distasteful, he sold his farm and removed to Parnassus, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in mercantile business. Two children were born to him, William Franklin Stewart and John Newton Stewart.

His wife died February 22, 1876.

In August, 1884, he removed to Tarentum, Pennsylvania, where he has since lived. He is a prominent merchant, an elder in the United Presbyterian church, and president of the congregation.

John Cresson Glass (XX 97) was born in Allegheny City, Pennsylvania. He was educated in the public schools of New Brighton, Beaver Co., Pennsylvania, and when fourteen years of age entered the shops of the Allegheny Valley Railroad Company. At the time of the death of his father, George Washington Glass (XIX 45), he was employed as a machinist in the shops at Verona, Pennsylvania, and in 1886 he succeeded his father as master mechanic, which position he still holds.

His wife, Margaret Sorby, is a daughter of William Sorby, a native of Wales, and his wife, born Mary Turner, a native of Sheffield, England.

Francis James Glass (XX 98) learned the trade of carpenter at the shops of the Allegheny Valley Railroad Company, and worked there for several years. He has for a number of years held the office of Justice of the Peace in Parnassus, Pennsylvania, and lives on a farm near that town.

His wife, Anne Elizabeth McElwain, is a daughter of John McElwain of Logan's Ferry, Allegheny Co., Pennsylvania.

George Grant Glass (XX 100) was educated in the public schools of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and at the Western University of Pennsylvania, where he made a special study of chemistry. In 1882 he was appointed chemist of the Leachburg Steel Works at Leachburg, Armstrong Co., Pennsylvania, where he remained four years, resigning that position to become chemist of the Labelle Steel Works in Allegheny City, Pennsylvania. He still holds that position, and since 1901 has also been superintendent of their open-hearth furnace department.

His wife, Mary McMath, is a daughter of Alexander McMath, of Westmoreland Co., Pennsylvania, and his wife, born Mary Jane Stewart.

Robert Marshall Glass (XX 101) learned the machinist's trade in the shops of the Allegheny Valley Railroad Company at Verona, Pennsylvania. He was for several years a locomotive engineer in the service of that company, and since 1901 he has been their foreman of engines.

His wife, Margaret Swank, is a daughter of John Swank, a farmer of Westmoreland Co., Pennsylvania.

William Bailey Glass (XX 102) was educated in the public schools of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and the Sewickley Academy. In 1862 he enlisted in the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served in the commissary department till the close of the Civil war. He is now a bookkeeper.

His wife, Eliza Walters, was a daughter of Leonard Walters, of Allegheny City, Pennsylvania.

Clara Ella Glass (XX 103). Her husband, Julien Morrow, served during the Civil war as a Sergeant of the Thirteenth Regiment of New York cavalry. He was in mercantile business at the time of his marriage.

Robert Anderson Glass (XX 104) was educated at the public schools of Pittsburg, and at Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pennsylvania. He was for a number of years a locomotive engineer on the Allegheny Valley Railroad.

John Porter Glass (XX 105) commenced his business career as bookkeeper for the Intelligencer Publishing Company of Wheeling, West Virginia, in July, 1884. In July, 1895, he was made secretary and assistant general manager of that company, and served in that capacity till September, 1902. He is now secretary for the Crystal Glass Company, Bridgeport, Ohio. He is also proprietor of the Daily Oil Review of Sistersville, West Virginia. He has been, since February, 1890, an officer of the First Regiment of Infantry of the West Virginia National Guards, of which, since June, 1901, he has been the major.

His wife, Mamie Eleanor Hamilton, is a daughter of Isaac Young Hamilton, of Washington, Pennsylvania, and his wife, born Eleanor Ruth.

Montgomery Walker Glass (XX 106) is a practicing physician of Beech Bottom, Brooke Co., West Virginia.

His wife, Nannie Winters, is of Greene Co., Pennsylvania.

Henry C. Glass (XX 107) is agent for a fruit nursery.
His wife, Emma F. Bell, is of West Alexander, Pennsylvania.

Robert Porter Glass (XX 108) is a blacksmith.
His wife, Mattie Gibson, is of West Alexander, Pennsylvania.

Alexander Walker Glass (XX 109) is a machinist. He has been employed in the mechanical department of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company since 1883.

His wife, Alice McCullough, is of Cumberland, Maryland.

Robert Glass Johnston (XX 110) was an express messenger in the service of Wells, Fargo & Company.

Alfred John Johnston (XX 111) was born in Nevada Co., California. He has lived in Sacramento, California, since 1868. He learned the trade of a printer in the California State printing office, over whose management he, in later life, presided for twelve years. In 1882 he became one of the partners of Lewis & Johnston, printers, of whose business he became the sole proprietor on the death of Mr. Lewis in 1886. He still holds that position. In 1890 he was appointed by Governor H. H. Markham, of California, superintendent of State printing, and continued to hold that position by repeated election for twelve years. His business is now carried on under the style of the A. J. Johnston Company, and includes bookselling and stationery as well as printing.

His wife, born Luella Buckminster, was of San Francisco, California.

George Walter Johnston (XX 112) was a student of more than ordinary ability, his tastes inclining him to scientific pursuits, but his health was not good enough to permit him to engage in active business pursuits.

Emma Belle Johnston (XX 113). Her husband, William Prouty, is superintendent of the wholesale and retail stationery house of the A. J. Johnston Company of Sacramento, California.

Robert Grier White, Jr., (XX 114) died at Camp Curtin, near Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, while in his country's service during the Civil war.

Thomas Henry White (XX 115) was born at McConnellsburg, Pennsylvania. He was graduated A.M., Princeton, 1867, and M.D., Jefferson Medical College, 1870. After practicing medicine for two years at Williamsburg, Blair Co., Pennsylvania, he removed to Connellsville, Pennsylvania, where he now lives. He is a member of the County, the State, and the American Medical Associations, member of the staff of surgeons of the Cottage State Hospital in Connellsville, and secretary of its Board of Trustees, surgeon for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, and the representative for Fayette county on the State Board of Health.

His wife, Clara Virginia Ake, was a daughter of William Harrison Ake, and his wife, born Susanna Amelia Neff—the former a grandson of William Ake, a prosperous German merchant, who founded the town of Williamsburg, Blair Co., Pennsylvania, and the latter of a French Huguenot family, which trace their descent back to the beginning of the thirteenth century. Susanna Amelia Neff is a first cousin of William Lewis Neff who married Anna Mary White (XX 116).

Anna Mary White (XX 116). Her husband, William Lewis Neff, was graduated A.M., Lafayette, 1854. He was a Captain during the Civil war.

Laura Hemans White (XX 118) was graduated by the Female Seminary, Steubenville, Ohio. Her life has been largely devoted to travel and to study.

Robert Hall White (XX 119) was for thirty years a surgeon in the U. S. Army, in which service he reached the rank of Major. He resigned his position in 1898, since which time he has been engaged with success in mining in California and in South Africa.

William McCrea White (XX 120) was graduated by Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pennsylvania. He was a clergyman, first of the Presbyterian church, and afterward of the Methodist Episcopal church, and was, in his later years, attached to the conference of New Jersey.
