THE GENEALOGY OF THE FOX FAMILY

SOME ten or twelve years ago I became impressed with the fact that none of my immediate relatives seemed to have a very complete record of the branch of the Fox family with which I am connected, and therefore determined to make an effort to collect such data from the surviving members as they were able to give, and reduce it to writing before it became too late. This proved to be a more difficult task than was contemplated; and lack of time prevented the record from assuming as complete shape as was hoped. However, as the information, even in its present incomplete form, may be of interest to some of the members of the family, I have decided to issue this proof edition, hoping that some day I may be able to go more thoroughly into the subject and issue a revised edition. Or, possibly, better still, this start may have the stimulating effect of encouraging other members of the family to make further research.

The earliest ancestry of our branch of which I am able to find positive record, is John Fox, born August 22, 1754. This information is contained in John Fox's old family bible, which I now have in my possession. Where he was born is not stated, nor have I been able to ascertain more definite information on this point from other sources. Some of the oldest people with whom I have corresponded state that he was born some where in New Jersey. Others state that he was born in the old country. While some claim that we are of English descent, others claim that we are of Holland-Dutch descent. All statements seem to agree, however, that Catherine Hummer, whom John Fox married, was either born in England or was of English descent. From the various letters which I have received, I am inclined to regard as most likely the claim that is made that the ancestors of John Fox came from Holland, although it is quite possible that they were English, having previously moved from England to Holland. This would perhaps reconcile both statements, and some of the older members of the family state definitely that they understand that this was the case.

There is a story which seems to have been quite generally circulated to the effect that there is a large estate in England for the heirs of "Lord George Fox," and an effort was made some fifteen or twenty years ago by two or three members of our branch to show heirship. Apparently considerable data was collected, but the complete chain of relationship was never established. A "missing bible in New Jersey" was said to have been needed to furnish the required information on this point. Before the search was completed one of the parties died and no further work seems to have been done in connection with the matter. The data seems to have been considered as "rubbish" by the young children of the deceased and was burned up during house cleaning, so that in my investigations I have not been able to gain any advantage from this previous work. That there is such an estate in existence as is referred to I have been unable to verify. I, therefore, attach but little or no importance to this phase of the matter, particularly as I have also been unable to find that there ever was such a person as "Lord George Fox." If such a person could be shown to have existed I would be inclined to think that there might be some basis for the claim of relationship, merely from the fact that the impression seems to so generally prevail amongst the older members of the family now living.

In my efforts to ascertain whether there is any connection between George Fox, the founder of the Quakers, whom apparently some of my correspondents have in mind when they refer to "Lord George Fox" (but who in fact had no such title as "Lord"), and our family, I have consulted various books on the subject of his life, and have traced his descendants, as follows:

"George Fox, Quaker, was born in July 1624, at Drayton-in-the-Clay, England. Died, November 13th, 1690. Age 67 years. Married Margaret Fell in 1669. No children resulted from this marriage, although Margaret Fell had children by her former husband."

"John Fox was the younger, and perhaps only brother of George Fox. He was born in 1629."

"George Fox was the only surviving son of John Fox, his elder brother John having died without issue. He had but one son, Joseph."

"Joseph Fox was born 1685. He had five children, namely: Rebecca, Mary, George, Joseph and Elizabeth."

The following is an extract taken from "The Friends," in the Chicago Historical Library (Vol. of 1865, p. 146), referring to the settlement of the estate of George Fox (Quaker):

"The heirs in making out their title proved that John Fox, the eldest (?) brother of George Fox, deceased Jan. 16th, 1718, aged nearly ninety years, had two sons, John and George. The former died at sea, but George, who was born February 6th, 1662, had a son, Joseph, born March 3rd, 1685. Joseph had five children:

"Rebecca, probably born April 11th, 1709, who married William Dalby, a laborer of Leicester;

THE GENEALOGY OF THE FOX FAMILY

"Mary, born September 30th, 1713, who married Tyrningham Palmer, Jr;

"George, born November 23rd, 1716;

"Joseph, born November 7th, 1722, who died at sea;

"Elizabeth, born May 27th, 1726;

"John Fox, the son of George Fox, and Tyrningham Palmer, Jr., the son of Mary Palmer, having obtained full powers of the other heirs, entered suit against Benjamin Franklin, occupying the lot on Market Street."

The record shows that this suit was compromised for the sum of $2,500.

If there is any connection between George Fox, born 1624, and our branch it could only be through George Fox, born November 23, 1716, referred to above.

In one of the books of the Chicago Public Library, dealing with the early history of Hunterdon County, New Jersey, there appears the following extract:

"248 acres of this was sold to George Fox, who came from England in 1729. This was conveyed to Thomas Canby, Bucks County."

This may be the George Fox who was born in 1716, but inasmuch as he could have been but 13 years old at the time it seems improbable. As I am unable to discover any other channel through which the descendants of John Fox (brother of George Fox, the Quaker) could have come, and as I am unable to satisfactorily connect George Fox (born 1716) with John Fox (born 1754) I am of the opinion that no such connection existed.

A more probable clue to John Fox's father, I think, exists in the following:

In the Pennsylvania Archives, p. 103, Vol. 8, at the Newberry Library, Chicago, the following record of a marriage at Philadelphia, appears:

"John Fox married Catherine Roche Mar. 26th, 1744."

While our earliest ancestor of which we have positive record is John Fox (born 1754) who lived at Amwell, Hunterdon County, N. J., it is possible that his father, of the same name, had previously lived at Philadelphia, or thereabouts; or it may be that in those early days people had to go considerable distances to get married, and it does not seem improbable that even if he had lived at Amwell at the time that he should have gone as far as Philadelphia to have the wedding ceremony performed.

Miss Anna North, genealogist, of Trenton, N. J., who made a thorough search of the old state records at Trenton, and also at Flemington, N. J., reports finding amongst the wills of New Jersey, record of the following (Liber 36, folio 150):

"John Fox, Amwell, Hunterdon County, N. J., weak. Date January

THE GENEALOGY OF THE FOX FAMILY

1st, 1794. Probated May 29th, 1795. Wife: Catherine. All my real and personal estate forever, after my debts are paid. Children: John Fox and David Fox. Executors: My sons John and David."

Miss North adds: "I think this the father of thy John born 1754."

The fact that the John Fox, whose wedding is referred to above, married a wife named Catherine, which is the same name as is mentioned in the testator's will, and that "his sons John and David" were executors (John and David were the names of the first and second sons respectively of John Fox, born 1754) is fairly convincing evidence that Miss North's theory that John Fox, whose will was probated May 29, 1795, was the father of John Fox, born 1754, is correct. It also seems probable that this John Fox is the same person referred to in the record of marriages at Philadelphia.

In "The Early Germans in New Jersey," by T. F. Chambers, page 377, there appears (referring to the Fox family) the following:

"There was a family of this name very early in Hunterdon County, who were Quakers and of English descent."

There also appears in a book in the Chicago Public Library entitled "History of Hunterdon County," the following extract:

"Michael Schlatter speaks of preaching in the church at Fox Hill in 1747. This hill was then called "Foxenberg," from a man by the name of Fox, who was a very enterprising farmer and introduced a new and superior kind of wheat. People came from a great distance to buy this wheat for seed."

This may or may not have been the father of John Fox, born 1754. If he was, it hardly seems probable that the John Fox referred to by Miss North was the same person.

While it is probable that John Fox, born 1754, was related to some one or other of the families referred to above, it is impossible to state with absolute certainty just where the relationship existed. If this volume should happen to fall into the hands of any one who has positive evidence on the subject, I should feel under great obligations at receiving the information.

There is on file in the Newberry Library a book giving the marriage licenses issued in the early times in the state of New Jersey, in which is found the following:

"John Fox married Catherine Hummer, May 22nd, 1778, Hunterdon."

These are the progenitors of our branch of the family. How long John Fox lived at Amwell I do not know, but it is stated that he moved from there to Danville, Pa., or thereabouts, where he lived for a time and then emigrated to Springfield, Ohio, in the year 1820. His family consisting of his wife and eleven children all accompanied him, with the exception of his eldest son, John, his second son, David, and his eldest daughter, Mary, who probably by this time were all married and had settled down in homes of their own.

After living at Springfield for three years John Fox died. In the year 1827 three of his children, namely Joseph, Sarah and Aaron returned to Pennsylvania, settling near Meadville. The remaining children, Anna, Catherine, Samuel, Asher and David settled in Michigan. John Fox is said to have had at least one brother, whose name was Peter, and who lived and died at Dayton, Ohio. The existence of this brother, however, has not been definitely established. In some of the early county histories of Ohio which the writer has consulted, mention is made of a tavern keeper named Peter Fox. Whether or not this Peter Fox was a brother of John Fox it is impossible to say.

John Fox was a very powerful man physically. It is said that while standing with both feet in a half bushel measure he could lift from the ground and place upon his shoulder three sacks of wheat containing two bushels each.

Below is copy of the data as it appears in the old Fox bible already referred to, giving the names of all of the children of John and Catherine Fox, together with the dates of their birth, as follows:

"John Fox was born Anno Domini 1754, August 22nd. Departed this life the 15th day of December, 1823.

"Catherine Fox was born December 12th, in the year 1758. Departed this life April the 19th, 1843.

"An account of the births of the children of John Fox and Catherine Fox, his wife, of the Township of Amwell, County of Hunterdon, and State of New Jersey:

"John Fox, eldest son, born August 29th, 1779.

"Mary, eldest daughter, was born November 13th, 1780.

"Anna, next daughter, was born August 2nd, 1782.

"Catherine, third daughter, was born August 23rd, 1784.

"David, second son, was born August 30th, 1786.

"Joseph, third son, was born November 16th, 1788.

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN AND CATHERINE FOX

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN AND CATHERINE FOX

I. JOHN FOX, JR., first son of John Fox, was born August 29, 1779. In the old Fox family bible previously referred to, there appears the following:

The memory of the children's ages of John Fox and Mary, his wife:

First son William, born September 24th, 1799.

Sarah, the first daughter, born August 29th, 1801.

*Mary, second daughter, born November 13th, 1804.

John, second son, born January 9th, 1806.

Chaterine, third daughter, born August 25th, 1808.

Thomas, third son, born October 2nd, 1810.

Jacob, fourth son, born December 15th, 1813.

Beyond this the writer has been unable to obtain any information, except that John Fox, Jr., did not go West when his father's family moved from Pennsylvania to Ohio, and it is also said that he died rather early in life.

II. - MARY (Pegg), eldest daughter of John Fox, was born November 13, 1780. Place of birth not known, but she lived and died in the neighborhood of Danville, Pa. She had children as follows:
