PREFACE.

From the summit of Sinai thousands of years ago, in the midst of thunderings and lightnings, Jehovah gave to the human race a moral code to be observed by the people of every land, and of every clime throughout all ages, and a part of this code proclaimed to every man and woman and child, "Honor thy father and thy mother that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

The duty enjoined in this commandment includes in its requirement not only respect, and kindness and honor to parents while living, but a kind and honorable remembrance also of ancestors who have departed. Hence it is becoming and appropriate in the members of a family line to collect and preserve and transmit to posterity the history of their progenitors.

The work of the genealogist is to trace ancestral lines, and to connect one generation with another during a succession of years, to gather items of interest in connection with each family, and to preserve a correct and reliable history of the descendants of a remote ancestor.

It is a laudable undertaking thus to honor fathers and mothers, and a commendable "pride of ancestry," is no disparagement to any individual, and any person, who is not inclined to entertain a filial regard for his forefathers, is certainly not to be admired in this respect.

In the year 1876 the Author of this book compiled and published a genealogical work entitled "Records of the Descendants of David Johnson, of Leominster, Mass.," making the said David the starting point of the line he was tracing, though in fact he was of the Fourth generation of an English ancestor at that time unknown. And living in the West far away from the great Libraries of the country, which contain rich stores of historical and genealogical information, and not having access to the records of those towns and counties of Massachusetts where the early generations of the family resided, he was not able to trace the line back beyond the said David, although from some tradition, or other cause, he entertained the idea that the father of David bore the name Josiah and that he was the grandson of Capt. Edward Johnson, of Woburn, although no definite confirmation of the idea could be found in the records.

From David Johnson, the number one of that book, all the lines of descent both male and female were very thoroughly traced, producing a book quite acceptable to the numerous descendants. But the author of the book was never satisfied with leaving the line thus incompletely traced, and in the summer of 1890, while recovering from a long period of sickness, he resolved to make one more effort to fully trace the ancestral descent back to the emigrant ancestor who settled in America.

Soon after this, by correspondence, he made the acquaintance of Hon. Edward F. Johnson, of Woburn, Mass., a lineal descendant of Capt. Edward Johnson, bearing the name of his distinguished ancestor and possessing much of his persevering spirit, who with a kindness and generosity uncommon in this selfish world, offered his assistance in tracing this line, and as a result of his researches in the Registry of Essex and Middlesex counties, the line was established by documentary evidence beyond the possibility of a doubt.

This being accomplished the author at once determined to publish a new book. Fourteen years had past away since the publication of the first, and many changes had taken place by death and otherwise during the interim; a new generation had arisen upon the stage of life, and the family line had been fully verified and established. All these events imperiously demanded another publication. And that demand has brought the present volume into existence.

In recent years many works of this kind have been given to the public. Some person in almost every family line seems to be animated by a laudable spirit, and a commendable zeal to engage in the work of rescuing the family history from that obscurity which a long series of years has thrown over it. In these works the records appear in different forms, possessing different degrees of merit. The compiler of these records considers that form the best, which presents the facts in a manner the most readily perceived and the most easily understood, and he has found no form in the numerous works which he has examined that better accomplishes this purpose than the one which he has adopted.

The records are entered in the order of the generations, and families of the same generation appear in connection with each other in the book. The descendants commencing with a designated ancestor, are numbered in the regular order of descent from the first to the last. The descendant number of each descendant is placed on the right hand side of the page opposite his name, and when any descendant becomes the head of a family, the descendant number is placed before the name of that person in connection with the record of that family, on the left hand side of the page, and in its new relation may be considered the number of that family. And thus if the reader desires to know anything more of a person in a future direction he will turn forward until he finds his descendant number on the left, or if he desires to see the record of the family of that person's father, he will note the number before his name and turn back until he finds this number on the right. In this way the book in its general arrangement becomes an index to itself.

The line of descent is given with each family record, included in a paranthesis. The ancestors of the successive generations are designated by an index figure placed over the right of the name denoting to which generation each belongs, and of those who bear the patronymic name, only the christian name is given, and the index placed after it, but when there is a divergence from the patronymic name in tracing the female lines, the index figure is placed after the surname, and in names of the female descendants of a female line, the index is placed after the natal name.

In this work the female branches of descent are traced as fully and extensively as the male branches. The descendants of a female ancestor, who lose the patronymic name by her marriage, are considered worthy of the same attention, as the descendants of a male ancestor who retain the patronymic name. Genealogists however differ on this question. But in some of the ablest genealogical works that have been published both lines have been traced.

We have no space for the discussion of this question, but would refer those who are desirous to obtain information on this subject to the able and unanswerable arguments of Dr. D. P. Holton, in his Preface to Vol. 1, of the Winslow Memorial.

In preparing these records the birthplace of each descendant is given, whenever it could be obtained, not always, however, in connection with his own family record, but more frequently in the record of his father's family, especially where all the children were born in the same place. The abbreviations found in this work are comparatively few, and such as are generally used: b. born, m. married, d. died, unm. unmarried, dau. daughter, res. residence, P. O. Post-office; etc.

Many difficulties are encountered in the preparation of a genealogical work. Nearly all of the information desired in relation to three or four of the earlier generations must be sought for in the records of the towns and counties where the ancestors settled, and in some cases the records of those towns were but imperfectly kept, if kept at all, and in cases where the records were properly kept, in many instances they have been mutilated or destroyed, or have become faded and illegible by the action of time, and hence a family line is sometimes broken with no possibility of restoring the missing link.

In case of the later generations, the information must be obtained by correspondence, and the numerous families being scattered far and wide throughout the country, a difficulty arises, first, in finding their location, and when their location is known, such is the indifference in many families in regard to their ancestry, that the compiler is frequently obliged to write a second or third time before he gets a proper response, and in fact must write numerous letters which will never be answered. And when by patient and persevering efforts, for years perhaps, in face of all these difficulties the book is issued from the press, he will find, not only many noble men and women with appreciative hearts, and generous impulses, and open purses, waiting to hail with joy the advent of the book, but he also will find some non-appreciative ones, who will entertain the idea that a book the sales of which will never reach 300 copies, may be sold as cheap as a spelling-book which will be sought by a million purchasers.

The author of this book is now in his 79th year, and he desires to express his gratitude to the Great Preserver of men for the prolongation of his life to enable him to complete this work, and thus leave to the numerous posterity of John Johnson, a correct and valuable family history which he believes will be appreciated by his descendants of the present and of future generations, and will be preserved and handed down in many families as an heirloom. while the years of the future pass away. These thoughts afford him much satisfaction, which will be the only compensation that he will ever receive for his persevering labors, in the production of the work.

And now in concluding this preface, he would extend his unfeigned thanks to all who have assisted him in the collection of these records, and in this regard he would make favorable mention of Miss Kate Johnson, of North Andover, Rev. U. C. Carpenter, and Geo. A. Putnam, Esq., of Andover, and especially would he mention Mrs. Clara A. Carter, of Leominster who though not a descendant has manifested an abiding interest in this work, and more especially would he express his appreciation of the valuable services of Hon. Edward F. Johnson, of Woburn, so liberally bestowed and without which probably this volume would never have had an existence.

NORTH GREENFIELD, Wis., July 1 1892.

INTRODUCTION.

Many facts and incidents in relation to those who bear the Johnson name, and especially in relation to those in connection with the family line traced in this work, will more appropriately appear in an Introduction, than in the body of the book in connection with the family records.

Johnson as a family name, with a varied orthography is found among many of the European nations, numerous among the Scandinavians, as well as among the English, Irish, Scotch and Germans. But in regard to its origin, or the time and place of its adoption as a family name, or of its introduction into the British Islands, the author will leave for those to determine who are better acquainted with ancient and mediæval lore.

Families bearing the name were numerous in England at the time when the first settlements were made in New England, and many of the first settlers were Johnsons; so numerous indeed that Savage says in his Genealogical Dictionary (Vol. II, page 559), "Of this name the occurrence is so frequent in all parts of New England, that out of inquiries confined exclusively to it, a large volume would grow;" and probably no two towns in all New England can show by their records so many Johnson families as Woburn and Andover. Many distinguished men have borne the name both in this country and Britain, and have occupied high positions, in the field of literature, of science, of statesmanship and of theology. It is said by Savage that previous to 1834, ten of the name had been graduated at Harvard, three of whom were clergymen, and forty-eight at other New England Colleges, twenty-one of whom were clergymen.

A Johnson ancestor settled early in Connecticut, from whom descended Rev. Samuel Johnson, the first President of King's College, New York, born at Guilford, Oct. 14, 1796.

A family line has been traced in Massachusetts, who were descendants of Solomon Johnson, who (as his descendants claim) came from Hern-Hill, Kent Co., England. Solomon and John Johnson who were probably brothers were among the early settlers in Watertown, Mass. John became a proprietor in Lancaster, 1654, and when he sold his lot in 1667, he is said in the deed to be "of Cambridge." Solomon also owned a lot in Lancaster, adjoining the lot of John, which he sold to Stephen Day, and it was afterward assigned to John Roper. In the record he is designated as "Goodman Johnson the taylor," and is also called "Solomon Sr.," and was said to be "of Sudbury and Marlboro." (See Nourse's Hist. of Lancaster, pp. 281, 282, 300). His son Solomon, Jr., born in England, became Deacon of the church in Sudbury at its organization in 1638. Mr. Jonathan Johnson, of Greenfield, Mass., has given the trace of this line back from himself as follows: Jonathan⁶, Henry⁷, Jonathan⁸, John⁹, John⁴, Nathaniel⁵, Solomon², Solomon¹.

Of this line Solomon² lived in Sudbury, Nathaniel⁵ in Marlboro, John⁴ and John⁹ in Worcester, where Jonathan⁶ was born, who was a tailor and moved to Petersham, where he married Rachel Felton, and had a family of nine children, of whom seven had families. Henry⁷ the father of Jonathan⁶ of Greenfield, was one of these. The genealogy of this line will probably be written hereafter.

In this Introduction we shall confine our attention chiefly to those who settled in Essex Co., and in the towns adjacent. They are represented by historians as a "kindred race," who came from Hern Hill, a parish near Canterbury, Kent Co., England. Capt. Edward Johnson, who came in the fleet of Gov. Winthrop, 1630, and settled first in Charlestown and afterwards in Woburn, was from Hern Hill, and owned an estate there, which he probably as the eldest son inherited from his father William Johnson, who was evidently one of the "landed gentry," as more fully appears by the will of George Johnson the son of Capt. Edward, made in 1680, and recently found among the records of Somerset Co., Md.

In the history of Andover, by Miss S. L. Bailey, published in 1880, the following passage occurs: "The name of Johnson has been one of the most continuously influential in the history of the Andovers. The Johnsons who settled here and at Charlestown and Woburn, were emigrants from Hern Hill, in Kent Co., England." And she further says, after mentioning many prominent men among the Andover Johnsons, "A descendant of a kindred line of Johnsons of Charlestown, is Rev. Francis H. Johnson, Andover," from which we infer that the Johnson emigrants who came from Hern Hill were a "kindred race." (See Bailey's Hist. of Andov. pp. 115, 116.)

John Johnson, the emigrant ancestor of those whose records are contained in this book was in Ipswich in 1635, and was one of the proprietors of that town, as appears from a deed recorded in the Essex Registry at Salem, Book 32, page 42. The deed is dated Sept. 12, 1715, an extract from which is as follows:

"Know ye that I Thomas Johnson, son and heir to John Johnson deceased, which said John Johnson formerly lived in Ipswich in ye County of Essex . . . I ye said Thomas Johnson now living in Andover, carpenter, in said county, convey to Alexander Lovell of Ipswich, shoemaker, a comon right alias a comonage, which comonage was granted to my said flather ye said John Johnson, by ye Town or Comōners of said Ipswich, as it is recorded in said Ipswich in their Town or Comōners book of Records."

In this Deed Thomas Johnson covenants that "I have ye whole disposing of ye said Comonage, and am ye proper heir to it."

This deed proves conclusively that John Johnson had a Proprietary right in land held in common by the proprietors of the town, and that his right had not been disposed of at the time of his death, and it proves also that Thomas was the son of John, and some persons may infer from this deed that he was his only son, yet the inference may be erroneous. It only proves that Thomas was the only heir to John's property not otherwise disposed of at the time of his death.

The Johnsons who first settled in Andover, were John, Thomas, Stephen, Timothy and William. There exists documentary evidence, as shown above, to prove that Thomas was the son of John, but nothing has been found in the records to show the parentage of the other three, but there are facts from which reasonable inferences may be drawn, that Stephen and Timothy and William were younger brothers of Thomas in the order named, and that they had several sisters who were married in Andover, which renders it very probable that John and Susanna Johnson had a family of about the usual size for that day.

The birthplace of these is not known, and perhaps never will be, but there is a strong presumption that all, or nearly all of them were born in Massachusetts, presumably, at Ipswich and Andover, with the exception of Thomas who may have been born at Charlestown.

John Johnson was certainly in Ipswich in 1635, and may have been there two or three years earlier among the first settlers of Agawam. John Johnson and Rev. Francis Dane both lived in Ipswich for several years, and their families were doubtless well acquainted with each other, and may have been intimate. They removed to Andover about the same time, 1648, and there may be some significance in these facts in relation to the idea that Stephen was the son of John and born in Ipswich, as he married in 1661, Elizabeth the oldest daughter of Mr. Dane.

The descendants of Timothy Johnson as well as those of Thomas, claim that the emigrant ancestor came from Hern Hill, but the author has found nothing in the early records of Andover, to definitely substantiate the claim. But there is a strong presumption endorsed by historians that the ancestors of the Andover Johnsons, resided at Hern Hill before coming to America, and it may be further presumed that John with his family came in 1630, to Charlestown with Capt. Edward Johnson, who afterwards settled at Woburn, and concerning whom there is positive evidence that he came from Hern Hill, and John may have been and probably was his brother.

Lines of descent have been definitely traced from Timothy Johnson, and records of his descendants will appear in an appendix to this book.

MILITARY SERVICE.

In the early settlements of Essex County, a necessity existed for a military force. The Indians were numerous and aggressive, and treacherously inclined to murder defenseless inhabitants; and in order to protect property and life, the home and the family, and the dear ones, it was necessary to have soldiers armed and equipped and disciplined, and ready for an emergency. Hence, every town had its military company or companies, and in these organizations in Andover, the Johnson name frequently occurs, both among the soldiers and officers. But with all the protection that the militia afforded, many were murdered by the savage foe, and among these was Miss Penelope Johnson at the age of nineteen. Among the officers early in the military service, was Lieut. Thomas Johnson, commissioned during the early Indian wars, and first mentioned as a commissioned officer in 1697. In the

FRENCH AND INDIAN WAR.

Timothy Johnson, Jr. was a captain in the King's service, first mentioned as such in 1737. He died in the service at Louisburg, Dec. 16, 1746. Andrew and David Johnson, sons of Andrew and Hannah (Chandler) Johnson, and great grandsons of Thomas were in the King's service at the capture of Louisburg, June 17, 1745, and the former died there Oct. 1, 1745, and the latter Oct. 29, 1745, and their father was in Col. James Frye's Co., in the expedition against Crown Point, as appears by the petition of his widow to the Genral Court, as it is found recorded in the Massachusetts Archives, Vol. LXXVII, p. 300, as follows:

"The Petition of Hannah Johnson, humbly sheweth, that my leate Husband, Andrew Johnson, Leate of Andover, deceased, was in the Country service, in Col. James Frye's Company, in the expedition formed against Crown Point, in the year 1756, and in his return hom he was taken sick by the way and was obliged to sell his Gun and Blanket, for less than one-half their worth, for necessary to support him by the way, or he thought he must have perished for he had no money, and he was brought so weak and low that I was obliged to send a man and hors to fetch him home which cost me twelve shillings, and he was brought hom the 25th day of November, 1756, and so he remained in a Languishing Condition, and at great expense for nurses, watchers, and necessaries, for nine weeks and then he died."

"I pray your Excellency and Honors to make me such allowance for said Gun and for Nursing and Necessary for the said Deceased, as in your wisdom you shall think proper, and your petitioner as in duty bound shall ever pray."

HANNAH JOHNSON.

The petitioners request was granted.

IN THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

Samuel Johnson, (son of Capt. Timothy Johnson, who died at Lewisburg, 1746) who had done valiant service in the French and Indian wars, was colonel of the 4th Regt. Mass. Inf., and his son, Capt. Samuel Johnson was given the command of a Company in June, 1776, to march for the defense of Ticonderoga, and he was afterwards promoted to Major, and his brother Joshua was also a military Captain.

In the Roll of Capt. Poor's Minute Men, mustered April 19, 1775, are names of Johnsons as follows: Samuel Johnson, Jr., 2d Lieutenant, William, John, Joshua, Phineas and Peter. In Capt. Ames' Co., Ephraim, Josiah and James. Of the sixteen men with Major Poor, in the capture of the British schooner in the Mystic River, May 23, 1775, three were Johnsons, namely William, John, Jr. and Joshua.

In Capt. Ames' Co. at Bunker Hill, were James and Ephraim, and in Capt. Farnum's Co., William, John, Phineas and Peter: and John was in Capt. Samuel Johnson's Co. at Ticonderoga. Among the three years men enlisted in 1777, were James and Ebenezer. These officers and soldiers that have been mentioned belonged to Andover, and David Johnson of Leominster, grandson of Thomas, was at Bunker Hill, and his three sons, Lieut. Josiah, Capt. Luke, and David, were in the Revolutionary service, and Othniel, grandson of David was Captain of a company of Infantry in 1812 and in the late war at the battle of Missionary Ridge, Lieut. Alfred O. Johnson, of Andover, a descendant of Thomas, a "brave and gallant soldier," fell mortally wounded in his country's defense.

WITCHCRAFT.

Inasmuch as one eighth part of the persons accused of witchcraft in Andover, were Johnsons, it may be appropriate to notice the delusion in this work, by giving briefly an account of its origin in Salem, in the winter of 1691, and of its introduction into Andover, and of its final suppression.

Some young girls in Salem were in the habit of meeting together for entertainment, games, amusements. They tried sleight-of-hand, tricks of fortune-telling, palmistry, etc. "Filling their minds with thoughts of this sort they became fascinated and wonder-stricken in telling about the supernatural. Ghosts, hobgoblins, devils, were the theme of their story-telling, and the subjects of their imaginings by night and by day. Some of them began to see strange sights, hear voices, dream dreams, and suffer bodily torture and at length, either of their own accord, or by suggestion, intimated that their sufferings were caused by some persons in the community, through whose agency Satan worked to torture them."

In the spring of 1692, this delusion showed itself in Andover. A woman had long been ill, and her husband sent to Salem and brought two of the girls before mentioned, (one of whom was Ann Putnam) to ascertain the cause of her illness. A solemn meeting was held at the meeting house, prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Barnard, and the girls were adjured to tell the truth, and then they named certain persons as tormentors of the sick woman and these persons were arrested by the constable and lodged in Salem jail.

The form of Indictment rendered against an accused person, was: "Did wickedly, maliciously and feloniously covenant with the Devil, did sign the Devil's book with blood, did give himself soul and body to the Devil, by which wicked and diabolical covenant he is bound a Detestable Witch." And this indictment was found against children of eight years as well as gray-haired men and women.

The lowest class of the community were first accused, but in a short time accusations were brought against persons of the highest standing and of the best moral character, and this probably was the cause in a great measure of bringing the delusion to an end.

Rev. Francis Dane opposed the delusion from the beginning and soon accusations were brought to bear with direful malignity upon his children and grandchildren, four of whom bore the name of Johnson, namely: his daughter Elizabeth, the wife of Stephen Johnson, and three of her children, and to these was added another Johnson, Rebecca, the widow of Timothy.

The Johnsons of Andover as well as their descendants in other places, were conservative men and manifested a commendable reserve in standing aloof from delusive errors.

None of the descendants of Thomas or of Timothy Johnson, were found either among the accused or the accusers, and indeed Thomas was one of the first to summon up the courage that was necessary to resist this fearful tide of delusion and death.

While the jail in Salem was packed with innocent men, women and children, accused of the "impossible crime" of witchcraft, a petition was presented to the General Court the commencement of which is as follows: "We being deeply sensible of the heavy judgment that the righteous God hath brought upon this place, thought it our duty, (after our earnest prayers to the God of Heaven to help us from our trouble) to lay before this Honorable Assembly our present distressed state, and to crave a redress of our grievances. It is well known that many persons of this town have been accused of witchcraft by some distempered persons in these parts, and by complaint made have been apprehended and committed to prison.

After fully reciting the facts in the case, the petition closes as follows: "Our troubles which have hitherto been great we foresee are likely to continue and increase if other methods be not taken, than as yet have been: for there are more of our neighbors of good reputation and integrity who are still accused and we know not who can think himself safe, if the accusation of children and others who are under diabolical influence, shall be received against persons of good fame."

This petition was signed by Francis Dane, Sr., Thomas Barnard, John Osgood, Thomas Johnson, and 22 others.

The records show that forty persons belonging to Andover were accused and of these eight were found guilty by the Court, and three of these, Martha Carrier, Mary Parker and Samuel Wardwell, were hanged. The English law of attainder would apply in the case of the others, but the Act of Reversal of the General Court of Oct. 17, 1711, annulled the penalties of the attainder, and thus ended the great Witchcraft delusion in Essex County.

This delusion appears to us at the present day as unpardonable, and still there seem to be mitigating circumstances connected with it.

The Puritans were zealous and conscientious believers in the Bible, and they found in the law of Moses the following enactment, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." (Ex. 22-18), and this enactment of the Jewish law-giver had received the sanction of the highest Judicial authority of England* therefore it is not strange that those comparatively illiterate exiles in the wilderness of the new world should adopt and carry out the same idea; all of which may admonish us that a credulous zeal which is not "according to knowledge," and consistent with reason, robs humanity of its most sacred rights and privileges.

After the delusion had ceased some of the accusers acknowledged their guilt and repented long and bitterly of their sin, and of these was Ann Putnam, one of the principal accusers. And the penitence of Judge Sewell who by his decisions had caused the innocent to die, has been immortalized by Whittier in the following lines :

" Touching and sad a tale is told,
Like a penitent hymn of the Psalmist old,
Of the fast which the good man life-long kept
With a haunting sorrow that never slept,
As the circling year brought round the time
Of an error that left the sting of crime,
When he sat on the bench of the Witchcraft Courts,
With the laws of Moses and Hale's Reports,
And spake in the name of both, the word
That gave to the witch's neck the cord,
And piled the oaken planks that pressed
The feeble life from the warlock's breast!
All the day long, from dawn to dawn,
His door was bolted, his curtain drawn,
No foot on his silent threshold trod,
No eye looked on him save that of God,
As he baffled the ghosts of the dead with charms
Of penitent tears, and prayers and psalms,
And, with precious proof from the sacred word
Of the boundless pity and love of the Lord,
His faith confirmed and his trust renewed
That the sin of his ignorance, sorely rued,
Might be washed away in the mingled flood
Of his human sorrow and Christ's dear blood!"

JOHN JOHNSON.

JOHN JOHNSON, and his wife Susanna, came from Hern Hill in Kent Co., England.¹ The time of their arrival is not definitely known. He was probably among the settlers who went to Agawam (afterwards Ipswich) in 1632, and may have been among the emigrants who came in 1630. The first mention made of him at Ipswich, is in 1635, when his name appears on the list of "Earliest Settlers."²

That he was one of the proprietors of Ipswich is clearly shown by a deed given by his son, Thomas, of a Commonage Right, to Alexander Howewell, in 1715, recorded in book 32, page 42, of the Essex Co. Registry, at Salem.

He removed with his family to Andover after the settlement of that town, and became one of the proprietors. Lots were assigned to him and to his son Thomas in 1657.³ He was one of a coroner's jury called 21st d., 4th mo., 1664, to hold an inquest on the body of Peter Allyn, who was found dead in the Shawsin river.⁴ He took the oath of allegiance February 11th, 1678,⁵ and his name is on the list of tax-payers in the south end, found in the first Assessor's book, 1679.⁶

He was a shoe-maker.⁷ His wife Susanna died in Andover, September 12th, 1683, and he probably died not long after, although no date of his death has been found in the records.

CHILDREN, SECOND GENERATION.

I. Thomas, b. 1631; d. Feb. 15, 1719, aged 88 years. 2

So far as the records definitely show, Thomas was the only child of John and Susanna Johnson. But undoubtedly they had other children. The marriage records of Andover show that Mary Johnson married Ephraim Davis, 1660; Hannah m. Samuel Hutchins, 1662; Susanna m. Walter Wright, 1667; and Joanna m. Moses Haggrett, 1671; Stephen m. Elizabeth Dane, 1661; Timothy m. Rebecca Aslett, 1674; and William m. Sarah Lovejoy, 1678, and it is not an unreasonable assumption to entertain the idea that all these were children of John and Susanna Johnson.

2. THOMAS² JOHNSON, (John¹.) born in 1631, either in England, or in Massachusetts soon after his father's arrival, was married July 5, 1657, by Simon Bradstreet, who afterwards became Governor of the Colony, to Mary Holt, dau. of Nicholas and Elizabeth Holt, born Oct. 6, 1638, and d. Nov. 15, 1700; m. 2d. June 29, 1703, Damaris Marshall, of Billerica, who d. Apr. 5, 1728. He d. Feb. 15, 1719, in Andover, Mass., where all his children were born. He was the first Johnson married in Andover, and his dau. Mary was the first Johnson child born there. He was a prominent man among the proprietors of the town, was Constable in 1665, and for many years after. His name appears in the records, as a Selectman, a Surveyor, a Fenceviewer, a Lotlayer, and he was a Commissioned Officer in the Militia. He was a carpenter, and a valuable citizen during a long and busy life, and he left sons to occupy important positions after his death.

*Notes on the Taylor Family.—The line of the Taylor Ancestors, traced back from Martha is as follows: Martha¹, Othniel², Samuel³, John⁴, John⁵.

John Taylor came from England and settled in Windsor, Conn., in 1649.

In Shelton's "History of Deerfield, Mass., with Genealogies" published in The Gazette and Courier, Greenfield, Mass., 1888, is the following:

"John Taylor of Windsor, 1649; a Juror 1641-4."

Nov. 29, 1645, having "fully intended and prepared for a voyage for England," he made a Will, leaving to his "daughters-in-law," to be divided equally among them, "all my land that lyes on ye east side of ye great river in lieu of my engizement with them upon my marriage, and that my wife shall trayne them up until they come to ye age of eighteen years, and my said wife to have ye benefit of ye sd. land until yt time."

He gave his wife and sons his home and lands in Windsor. This will was presented for Probate by Son John 1694. There is a tradition in the family, that John soon after making his Will, sailed from New Haven and was lost at sea. This tradition is doubtless true. He embarked on the famous "Phantom Ship," which sailed from New Haven for England 1645-6. (See Mather's Magnalia.)

Children: John b. abt. 1641, and Thomas b. abt. 1643. John was the father of Samuel³, Othniel⁴ son of Samuel³, b. Apr. 16, 1719, cleared land in Charlamont 1743, and was one of the earliest settlers. In 1746 was in company with David Field and Josiah Barnard trading furs and deer leather from New England to Albany; was a manufacturer of snow shoes. In the last French War, his house with that of his brother Jonathan was enclosed with palisades, and he was Sergeant in command of a garrison furnished by the Colony. He was Captain of a Company in the Continental Army. Died Dec. 27, 1788.

Married June 27, 1743, his step-sister, Martha, dau. of Daniel Arms. She had then attained to the mature age of 14 yrs, 4 mos., and 26 days. She d. May 5, 1802, aged 73.

133. WALTER ROGERS⁶ JOHNSON. (Luke,⁵ David,⁴ Josiah,³ Thomas,² John,¹) born in Leominster, Mass., June 21, 1794; m. Sept. 2, 1823, Nancy Maria, dau. of Dr. L. Donaldson, of Medfield, Mass., born Dec. 28, 1794. They had only one child which died in infancy, without name. He d. April 26, 1852, after an illness of six days, and his wife d. April 22, 1890. Both died at Washington, D. C. and both were interred in Oak Hill Cemetery, on Georgetown Heights, and a granite monument marks the place of their rest.

He was one of the distinguished scientific men of our country who worked his way up to high position, by his own persevering efforts, and a brief sketch of the prominent events of his life are given below.

He entered Groton Academy, 1814, and prepared for college in one year. Entered Harvard University as a Freshman 1815, and graduated with honors 1819, having used the time of his vacations in teaching, to aid himself pecuniarily in his course. He was Preceptor of Framingham Academy, 1820. Teacher of a Classical School in Salem, 1821—Principal of an Academy in Germantown, Pa. from 1822 to 1826, when he removed to Philadelphia, and was appointed Professor of Mechanics and Natural Philosophy in the Franklin Institute, and was a member of the Academy of Natural Sciences. Appointed in 1839, Professor of Chemistry and Natural Philosophy, in the Medical Department of the Pennsylvania College at Philadelphia. Appointed in 1845 by the city of Boston, to examine and report on the sources from which a supply of pure water might be brought into the city. Was one of twenty who organized the American Association of Geologists in Philadelphia in 1846. Honorary Member of the Maryland Institute. Member of the National Institute at Washington from its first organization. He established his residence in Washington in 1848. Visited Europe in 1851. His Biographer says of him, "He maintained a strict temperance in all things, through life, believing it essential both to bodily health and mental vigor."

An account of his death is given in the N. E. Hist. and Gen. Register, vol. IV, p. 391, as follows: "His death was occasioned by inhaling noxious gas while performing some experiment in the Laboratory of the Smithsonian Institute." But his physicians decided that the immediate cause of his death was intussusception. He was the author of many valuable scientific treatises, and in his death the scientific world met with a great loss.

For a more particular account of him, see Biographical Sketch written by his widow for Barnard's American Journal of Education, Dec. 1858.

*ABIGAIL CLARK was the youngest daughter of Alvan and Mary (Bassett) Clark, and sister of Alvan Clark, the distinguished telescope-maker of Cambridgeport, Mass., and the family line of her Clark and Bassett ancestry is given below.

CLARK LINE:—Abigail,⁷ Alvan,⁶ Barnabas,⁵ Scotto,⁴ Scotto,³ Andrew,² Thomas,¹ Thomas Clarke settled in Plymouth, Mass., 1623, and died there, and his body was interred on "Burying Hill" and a small memorial stone marked the grave with the following inscription: "Here lies buried ye body of Mr. Thomas Clarke, aged 98 years. Departed this life Mar. 24, 1697."

The influences of time on this stone had nearly obliterated this inscription, and in 1891, his descendants placed a new memorial at his grave, a granite boulder weighing about three tons with a bronze tablet containing the following inscription: "Here lies buried ye body of Mr. Thomas Clarke, aged 98, departed this life March 24, 1697." Thomas Clarke came to Plymouth from England in the ship Anne 1623. He married Susan Ring of Plymouth, 1634. Their children were Andrew, James, William, Susanna, Nathaniel, John, from whom descended a numerous posterity. He married his second wife, Mrs. Alice Hallett Nichols, of Boston in 1664. He lived for some years in Boston, and also in Harwich of which town he was one of the original proprietors. He died in Plymouth having lived in the reigns of six British sovereigns, and the Commonwealth. This stone is erected to his memory by his descendants A. H. 1891.

Railroads in the West for 20 years, and a Contractor for 10 years, and has aided largely in a professional way, in developing Missouri, Kansas and Texas.

His able and faithful services have been duly appreciated by the Missouri, Kan. & Texas, and other R. R. Companies, and have been generously remembered and rewarded with valuable presents.

He commenced his career in the Railroad service, in his minority, as a moneyless axman, and his success presents us with a commendable example of what may be accomplished by a modest young man of correct principles, and good habits, coupled with a decisive purpose, and an unyielding energy and perseverance, guided by the advice and moral instruction of a worthy christian mother. APPENDIX.

Timothy Johnson.

Timothy Johnson was born, probably, about 1644, yet no records have been found to show when or where he was born. He married Dec. 15, 1674, Rebecca, dau. of John and Rebecca Aslett, b. May 6, 1652, in Andover, where their children were all born, and where he d. Mar. 15, 1688. His widow in 1692, was among the number accused of witchcraft. (See Bailey's Hist. of Andover, p. 200.) He was Constable in 1676.

CHILDREN, SECOND GENERATION.

I. John,	b. June 29, 1677; d. June 3, 1761.	2
II. Timothy,	b. Mar. 25, 1679; d. Dec. 16, 1746.	3
III. Mary,	b. Feb. 3, 1682; m. Abraham Foster.	4
IV. Samuel,	b. July 25, 1684; d. in Philadelphia.	5
V. Peter,	b. Jan. 31, 1686.	6
VI. Mercy,	b. Nov. 18, 1687.	7

The above are all the children of Timothy Johnson whose names and birthdates are found in the Birth-Records of Andover, and yet the idea prevails that Penelope Johnson, who was killed by Indians Feb. 22, 1698, was the daughter of Timothy. Her birthdate is not found in the records, but in Abbot's Hist. of Andover p. 43, of persons killed by Indians is mentioned, "Penelope Johnson, aged 19," dau. of Timothy Johnson, and Miss Bailey in her Hist. of And. p. 183, in accordance with Abbot, says, "They (the Indians) also attacked the house of Mr. Timothy Johnson, and killed his dau. Miss Penelope Johnson, a young lady of nineteen years." She also says, in a foot note on p. 116, "Genealogists differ as to whether she was the dau. of Thomas or Timothy Johnson." The positive statement of both of these authors that she was "aged 19," compared with the birth record of Timothy's children, makes it nearly impossible that she was the dau. of Timothy, as the record shows that his son, Timothy, Jr., was born Mar. 25, 1679, and if Penelope was aged "19," on Feb. 22, 1698, she must have been b. in 1679, which could hardly be possible unless she was the twin-sister of Timothy, Jr. The "Holt Genealogy" gives her name among the children of Thomas Johnson, and the same has been done in this work. The fact that Penelope was killed on the same day that Timothy Johnson's house was attacked, may have given currency to the idea that she was his daughter. Yet the historians may have made a mistake in her age at the time of her death, and thus make it possible that she was the dau. of Timothy.

MISCELLANEOUS POEMS
OF
JOHNSON DESCENDANTS.

THE AUTHOR TO HIS PATRONS.

By REV. W. W. JOHNSON.

Unto the patrons of this book I send
Kind greetings, as I near its final end.
The records of a worthy race do here,
Upon the pages of this book appear;
Descendants of a sire who from his home,
Came to these shores across the ocean's foam,
And settled in this land, then wild and drear,
As by authentic records doth appear.
From then, till now, long years did intervene.
And great the changes that have come between.
The ceaseless pulse of ocean beats the same,
As when our fathers from Old England came;
Upon the rock-bound shore the ocean rolls,
As in those early days that "tried men's souls;"
The winter storm drops down the drifting snow,
As in the years departed long ago;
The winding stream flows onward to the main,
Bearing away the melted snow and rain,
As then it flowed, within the ancient wood,
When the wild Indian on its margin stood;
And, overhead the twinkling orbs of light
Bedeck, as then, the starry vault of night.
The seasons in their wonted order, come,
As when the Pilgrim found his desert home;
The Springtime, in its verdant robes appears,
Just as it has through all the ancient years;
The Summer, with its fragrant odor, comes,
Just as it did around those ancient homes;
And Autumn, with its fruit and varied dress,

Comes now, as then, in all its loveliness;
And Winter, with its aspect cold and drear,
Comes now, as then, to close the dying year.
But great the change, comparing now with then,
Brought to the world in all the works of men.
A thousand lights, from factory windows gleam,
On the dark night beside the winding stream,
Which then through tangled thicket wound its way,
'Mid all the wildness of the early day;
And of the stars which then in glory shone.
New facts has science to the world made known,
As heaven's broad scope, so beautiful and grand,
Has, by new glasses, been minutely scanned,
And planets, moons and comets, then unknown,
Now have their place within the starry zone.
The vivid lightning filled the heavens with light,
Then, just as now, in the wild stormy night;
A messenger of wrath, regarded then.
But now, it bears kind messages to men.
To man subservient, on the darkened night,
It fills the city with its useful light;
And through old ocean's dark and dismal cells,
The news of Europe, to the new world tells.
And, drawn by lightning through the busy street,
Men now ride safely, in an easy seat.
Not then, as now, did costly church spires rise,
To greet the sunlight in the morning skies;
But settlers' homes, abodes of toil and care,
Were places too for praise and fervent prayer.
No colleges, with their endowments great,
Supported by the Church or by the State,
Opened their portals to those sterling men;
Yet some e'en then were mighty with the pen.
Then, on the margin of a quiet wood,
The school house, in its former rudeness, stood;
Where boys with sparkling eyes as rubies bright,
Came day by day, to learn to read and write;
At close of term received no parchment scroll,
But left fair names upon the teacher's roll.
But now the Normal School, with means so great,
Supported from the coffers of the State,
And colleges, with their professors wise,
Give to the youth a noble chance to rise
To stations high in intellectual worth,
And rank among the great and good of earth.
In all the changes of each changing year,
The men whose records in this book appear,
Have borne their part quite nobly as a race,
In all the generations that we trace;

Have firmly stood among the true and leal,
Serving their country with undaunted zeal,
And when their rights by England were denied,
They, in the van-guard, bravely fought and died.
In Law, in Politics, Science and Art,
They have been found to take an active part;
Among them men of thought and lore profound,
In all the generations have been found,
And for the elevation of our race,
In history they hold an honored place.
And farmers, tradesmen, men of daily work,
In life's great duties did not fail nor shirk;
Whether they lived amid New Hampshire's hills,
Or found in Massachusetts' busy mills,
Or plowed the fertile prairies of the West,
Strong, firm, and true, they were among the best.
Some, in the pulpit, showed their talent rare,
And some filled ably the Professor's chair;
Others, on battlefields in cause of right,
Have danger braved in all the deadly fight;
And many ladies, of the lines we trace,
Have filled with honor the Instructor's place.
The former generations rest in peace,
The latter still continue to increase.
They live to-day all scattered far and wide,
From Plymouth Rock to the Pacific tide;
In business houses, in our cities great,
On rural homesteads, in the "Empire State,"
On grazing lands among New England hills,
Charmed by the music of her mountain rills;
And in the West on those vast prairies grand
Are living, scions of this kindred band;
Others, beyond the wild Sierra's bound,
In golden lands a quiet home have found.
To each, to all, the distant and the near,
Are sent the Author's compliments sincere.

NORTH GREENFIELD, WIS., Oct. 6, 1892.

"YOUR FATHERS, WHERE ARE THEY?"

By REV. W. W. JOHNSON.

Muse in the ancient graveyard, at the close of a summer day,
List to the evening breezes, as they move the tender spray;
And a voice, with mournful accents, is borne on the breeze away—
A voice from the years departed—"Your fathers, where are they?"

The grass-grown mounds remind us that their frames in dust repose,

That their years of busy labor are brought to a final close;
But joined to the former ages, is each departed year,
And the silent mounds are watered with fond affection's tear.

The stone, in its native rudeness, where that mound of earth was made

To keep the spot in memory, by a careful hand was laid;
Or the sculptured shaft erected with its nice proportions high,
To show to children's children where the fathers' bodies lie.

Beneath the weeping willows, where floral wreaths are spread,
We stand with solemn reverence, among the slumbering dead
Of successive generations, whose bodies molder here,
As on the graven stones by inscriptions doth appear.

Go strew these graves with roses, on each departing year,
For here their dust reposes, but the fathers are not here;
Life's mission with them ended, but the fathers did not die,
Their voices now are blended, with angels' songs on high.

ON LEAVING NEW ENGLAND.

By PROF. WALTER R. JOHNSON.

And must I bid my native scenes adieu?

And must all ties be rent, all thought erased?
Shall no fond feeling, years long lost, renew,

Where joy's faint image still may be retraced,
And guiltless pleasure brought to fancy's view,
To be by ardent memory embraced?

Can time blot out, with his oblivious hand,

The dear remembrance of my native land?

Ah, no, New England, never shall thy hills,

Thy dales, thy verdant landscapes, and thy groves,
Thy towns, which busy prosperous commerce fills,

Thy hamlets, filled with happy youthful loves,
Thy mountain torrents, and thy meadow rills,

The blue expanse where mighty ocean moves,
Cease their enchantment o'er my wandering soul,
Which, magnet-like, still seeks thee as its pole.

Back to thy mountain summits must I look,

And see them in dim distance sink and fade;
Monadnock, that my artless childhood took
To be an outpost for creation made;

Wachusett, whose gray head the tempest shook,

Turbaned in clouds, in mighty robes arrayed,
Whose folds waved down his sides in princely state,
As if they clothed creation's potentate.

SUNSET.

By W. W. JOHNSON, JR., at the age of 14.

The glorious sun is fast sinking away
Mid the golden tipped clouds of the west ;
The farmer has finished his toil for the day,
And all nature will soon be at rest.

The robin's sweet song is now heard in the grove,
As he sits on the tallest green tree,
But, soon will be hushed, his sweet accents of love,
When the night shades creep over the lea.

The beautiful hills, in their vestments of green,
Are tipped with a tincture of red,
And the sun's ling'ring rays, on the mountains are seen,
While the twilight surrounds the homestead.

The calm, peaceful lake, in its slumbers so deep,
Is seen through the neighboring grove,
As the last rays of daylight behold its deep sleep,
And the white lights are seen from above.

The songs of the thrush and the robin have ceased,
And the knight-hawk is flying afar,
And the moon, gently rising, is seen in the East,
By the side of a pale, silvery star.

INVITATION TO DAKOTA.

By M. T. CROSS.

Just come to Dakota, our fair land to view,
Where the blizzard and cyclone will lull you to sleep ;
Where you'll soon get acquainted with th' kind modest Sioux,
Who with loving emotion, your fair scalp will keep.

Sitting Bull is now gone to the land of "Ponemah,"
No more will he dwell where the grasshopper sings ;
He has gone with good Indians and left life's arena.
To join the great war dance where "ghosts" will have wings.

We live in a land where the Bobolink whistles,
Where the squawk of the Prairie-hen wakes us at morn,
Where we raise "bully" crops of sharp Russian thistles,
Interspersed, now and then, with potatoes and corn.

Our political status is surely quite mixed,
There's Republican, Democrat, that is not all ;
For there comes a new party "between and betwixt,"
Who say they will certainly "get thar" next fall.

Our crops, they were all pretty fair here last season,
And prices were good when we threshed in the fall,
And if they continue there is no good reason,
Why men should lose courage and "go to the wall."

We have churches and schools that compare with the best,
And our bright girls and boys can all get up and hustle;
We have business men, too, who don't sit down and rest,
But make things move fast with a vim and a rustle.

While some will sit down and indulge in sad moping,
And imagine life's ills, with their faces forlorn,
The rustler will "get there," believing and hoping
That those who succeed best, must "toot their own horn."

Then come to Dakota, our fair land to view,
Where the blizzard and cyclone will lull you to sleep;
Where you'll soon feel at home with the kind modest Sioux,
Who is anxiously waiting your scalp-lock to keep.

FOR AN EASTER SERVICE.

By WESLEY JOHNSON.

With patient hand our wheat we sow
Upon the mellow fertile mold,
In autumn, ere the fall of snow,
And it must brave the winter's cold.

Our wheat fields now look brown and bare,
Yellow and faded leaves are seen
Where autumn saw a sight so fair,
Of fields all dressed in living green.

But now, we feel the breath of spring;
Its cheering sun and gentle rain,
New life, to all our fields will bring,
They will be bright and green again.

And when hot days of summer fall,
And all our fields with ripeness nod,
We answer to the harvest call,
And garner in this gift of God.

Within our church the seeds of truth,
By patient hands, have long been sown;
Christ's blessed words to age and youth,
With us have all our lives been known.

And yet sometimes we sadly fear,
That what the Mighty Master sees,
Is only leaves, withered and sere,
Shaken and tossed by every breeze.

To-day let each heart own the Lord,
And all his gracious promise plead,
Shout as of old the glorious word,
Our Savior Christ "is risen" indeed.

And when the harvest time shall come,
And here and there the ripe heads fall,
We'll answer to the Harvest Home,
Most gladly at the Master's call.

And as in earth, all dormant lies
The germ that makes the ripened corn,
From earth will our frail bodies rise,
In the great resurrection morn.

SONG.—THE SONS OF THE WEST.

Written for a Fourth of July Celebration.

By PROF. WALTER R. JOHNSON.

When the mandate of Heaven was heard from afar,
That summoned the sons of Columbia to war,
'Twas the voice patriotic that answered the call,
With our country we'll stand—with her freedom we'll fall;
And the vow was renewed on that day ever blest,
That declared independent the sons of the West.

Then let patriot ardor each bosom inspire,
And to freedom again wake the notes of the lyre,
Now be vocal each mountain, each valley and plain,
And re-echo the paean to heaven again;
While the song we renew on the day ever blest,
That has made independent the sons of the West.

Bring the nectar young Hebe, the wealth of the vine,
And pour in libation the liquor divine;
Let the board with thy riches, brown Ceres arise,
Let thy thunder, O Mars, tell our joys to the skies;
While the feast we renew on this day ever blest,
That has made independent the sons of the West.

May no anarchy e'er dare to disserve the band,
That unites every heart to our dear native land;
May the soil that was hallowed to freedom of old,
Spurn the foot of oppression, though sandaled in gold;
And our faith let's renew on this day ever blest,
That proclaimed independent the sons of the West.

May renown swell the names of the chieftains that led,
And may gratitude saint all the heroes who bled,
May their sons prove that virtue sleeps not in the tomb,
May their daughters be spotless as Eden's first bloom;
While our vows we renew on this day ever blest,
Still to keep independent the sons of the West.

"THOU SHALT NOT KILL."

(Written for a Peace Meeting.)

By CAPTAIN OTHNIEL JOHNSON.

Shall man presume, (a mortal worm,)
His Godlike image to deform,
By vilely shedding human blood;
And clad in terror lift his arm,
His kindred fellow-clay to harm,
Against the holy law of God?

Shall Nations, blest with righteous laws,
With impudence, espouse the cause
Of war, and spend their cash and breath,
The vilest mortals to employ,
Their fellow creatures to destroy,
And quench their lamps of life in death?

If savages delight to kill
Their fellow creatures, as they will,
And feast themselves with human gore,
Does this empower the men of light,
And give them liberty to fight,
And go to war because they've power?

O, man consider well my theme,
Thy power is from the source Supreme—
Activity, strength, reason, will,
Are lent to thee to be employed
In honor of your Maker, God,
Who gave command, "Thou shalt not kill."

'Tis feared there are those who profess
To give to God devotedness,
Yet do not heed the mandate just.
Regardless of the great command,
In wrath they lift the vengeful hand,
And strive to have their foes all crushed.

Of times, no doubt, the rule of right
Is trampled on till out of sight,
By those who are the first aggressors;
And if the aggrieved the wrong resent,
They will be charged with vile intent,
And rudely branded as transgressors.

Then will the first offenders vaunt—
We'll drive those rebels from their haunt,
Nor shall their punishment be light;
By spear, or sword, or leaden death,
We'll stop their cry, aye stop their breath,
And show the rascals what is right.

Thus wars arise, and fields of strife,
Are strewn with men deprived of life,
Regardless of the Lord's command;
And widows weep, and orphans sigh,
While cold in death the fathers lie,
And mourning reigns throughout the land.

[The Following Poems Were All Composed by REV. W. W. JOHNSON.]

YOUTHFUL RECOLLECTIONS.

The place of our birth! O, it brings to the mind
Those fond recollections no other can bring;
To that place, ever hallowed, are fondly inclined,
Our thoughts, which around it forever must cling.

The sounds which first greeted in childhood our ears,
The objects first painted on juvenile eyes,
With all their fond freshness, in life's riper years,
Distinctly, in visions of memory rise.

Of scenes most familiar in life's early years,
Which, in beauty, remembrance so kindly doth bring,
And time, by its rapid advances, endears,
Let the muse now in order most joyfully sing.

Of the tall shady trees, with their broad leafy boughs,
Where the birds of the summer all nestled and sung;
Where in springtime the robin, her mate did espouse,
And with birdlike affection protected her young.

The fields, where were growing potatoes and corn,
The orchard, the meadow, the garden and well,
The copse, and the thicket, with shadows forlorn,
Where the brooklet meandered through ferns in the dell.

The plat, where in gambols of childhood we passed
The bright summer mornings of juvenile days,
And e'en when the shadows of evening were cast,
Our sports oft went on by the moon's feeble rays.

The mountainous ramparts, surrounding the vale,
Whose rocks had the storms of the ages defied ;
The oaks and the pines, which had weathered the gale,
And had lifted their heads to the clouds, in their pride.

The brook, on whose banks we in bright summer days,
Had delightfully gazed on the fishes within,
Where they, in affright, darted numerous ways,
Till, beneath the loose pebbles, themselves they did screen.

The school house, where we the first rudiments learned,
Of the language we speak, of our own native tongue,
With its seats and its aisles, to our vision returned,
While its scenes of delight, to our memory clung.

Our schoolmates, who wandered with us in the grove,
To pluck the wild blossoms that grew in the shade,
All pleasantly sauntering, homeward did rove,
As evening approached, and the daylight did fade.

The church, where our ancestors reverently heard
Salvation's sweet message proclaimed unto men ;
And heralds of mercy expounded God's word,
And anthems were sung, in harmonious strain.

The beautiful glebe, where that fabric was reared,
And the scenes which around it in beauty were seen,
To our fanciful vision have often appeared,
Though mountains and valleys were lying between.

The churchyard, which kept the lone dust of the dead,
Where the loved ones, departed, in silence reposed ;
With the trees, which above them their foliage spread,
To our juvenile minds, a deep lesson disclosed.

These scenes once so lovely, in memory live,
And pleasing sensations awake in the mind ;
These thoughts of our childhood much pleasure still give,
A joy that is holy, and pure, and refined.

THE UNITED.

In life's busy labors, two hearts were united ;
The love of each other was fondly required ;
Long years, with their duties and toils, passed away,
While both were permitted together to stay.

I saw them—they lingered on time's troubled shore,
Where storms and rough tempests, around them did roar;
But the ties, which so strongly, their hearts did surround,
Could never be severed, but firmer were bound.

But hark! Sacred accents are heard from on high,
I see the bright herald descend from the sky,
To one he says go to the mansions of rest,
To glory immortal and dwell with the blest.

But is that sacred cord, which their hearts once entwined,
Now severed—now broken—O! no, for the mind
Of the lone one now soars to the regions afar,
Beyond the bright twinkling of night's distant star,

To the home of the blest and the sanctified, where,
To meet his dear friend he will try to prepare;
Where ties, all immortal, of friendship and love,
Their souls shall entwine, in the regions above.

THE SILVER WEDDING.

The snow of the Winter had vanished away,
And the ice in the rivers had melted and gone;
The wild-flowers had greeted the merry young May,
And green were the hillsides, and verdant the lawn.

The birds had returned from their southern retreat,
Where the days of the Winter were joyously spent,
The groves of the north with sweet music to greet,
By nature instinctive, directed and sent.

All nature was lovely and beautiful now;
The springtime had come, and the May-day was here;
The breath of the south fanned the delicate brow,
The world smiled in beauty, though lately so drear.

The birds of the woodland, partook of the cheer,
As they caroled sweet music both early and late,
But their joy to enhance, and the scene to endear,
Through the promptings of love each selected a mate.

Not alone did the birds to such promptings give heed;
Two hearts that were human were touch'd with love's fire;
And mating each other for life was indeed
Their solemn intention and ardent desire.

'Twas on the third day of the beautiful May,
The year eighteen hundred and fifty and five,
That Josiah and Emeline hastened away,
And joyful with friends to the Parson's did drive.

Good old Parson Flagg didn't let business lag,
But soon to position the couple he brought,
The groom and the bride standing each side by side,
While he made preparations for "tying the knot,"
With that solemn demeanor the case did demand,
With a serious look, and a dignified tone,
To Josiah he said, "Emma take by the hand;
Wilt thou cleave unto her all thy days—her alone—
For better, for worse, yea, in sickness and health,
And leaving all others, take her to thy heart,
'In poverty's vale or abounding in wealth,' Adhere to her always, till death doth you part?"
The same being said to the maid by his side,
With trust in the other, each answered, "I will,"
And the knot of their wedlock not yet being tied,
The parson proceeded his work to fulfill:
"As both have now promised each other for life,
In the presence of witnesses here and above,
I pronounce you united as husband and wife;
Let no man put asunder what God doth approve."

* * * * *

The scene is now changed as we meet here to-day;
The faces then youthful are youthful no more;
The locks that were auburn are tintured with gray,
And life's busy labors ere long will be o'er.
The years have departed—yea, rapidly fled,
The hours of existence have hurriedly flown;
Some, gay that May morning, now sleep with the dead;
The mounds where they rest are with grass overgrown.
The power of invention has brought to the world
Great changes in letters, and science, and art;
The banner of progress is boldly unfurled,
The new must advance, and the old must depart.
One-fourth of a century! gone to the past—
A new generation on life's busy stage!
How great time's mutations, life's changes how vast!
Yet short the transition from youth to old age.
The Spring-time has come, as on that bridal day;
Kind hearts beat responsive, kind faces are seen;
We are greeted as then with the bird-songs of May,
And all nature, as then, wears a garment of green.
May no cloud float above us with lowering portent,
Unless with a lining of silver arrayed!
Kind hearts and kind voices with honest intent,
Now greet us, with tokens of friendship displayed.

May the future reveal ample blessings in store
For the host and the hostess we honor to-day,
May their friends, true and faithful, be so evermore
While their days, long and useful, are passing away!

THE FLOWER FADETII.—Isa., xl, 8.

The Summer comes, roses appear,
Their beauteous petals greet the eye,
But autumn comes to close the year,
And then they droop and fade and die.

Once fragrant, beautiful and sweet,
Their odor filled the morning air;
Their varied hues our eyes did greet,
They bloomed in beauty bright and fair.

But soon, too soon, they passed away,
Beauty was faded—fragrance flown—
They cheered the heart their short-lived day,
But then, alas, they all were gone.

Thus perish fondest hopes of men;
Thus fade the glories of the earth;
Their brilliance charms awhile, and then
Death robs them of their transient worth.

THE DECORATION.

They come from the hamlet, the city, the farm,
The springtime has lent to all Nature a charm;
The forests stand proudly in vestments of green,
While the blossoming fruit trees enliven the scene,
And the beautiful birds, from their late Southern home,
To the groves of the North, with their music have come,
Their notes, most enchanting, are greeting the ear,
Inspiring the world with their musical cheer.
And now to the graveyards all hasten away,
To honor the dead on this thirtieth of May.
The sire and the matron, the youth and the maid,
The young and the aged, all join the parade,
For to each is committed a sanctified trust,
To lay the sweet flowers o'er the patriots' dust.
With emblems of mourning, by one grassy grave
A mother is standing, whose son went to save
His own native land, which he cherished so well,

But alas, on the field of Antietam he fell.
 And here comes a father, quite aged and gray,
 He comes with his offering to honor the day ;
 For, away from his home, in his youth and his pride,
 Went a son who most nobly at Gettysburg died.
 And now comes a little one, blooming and fair,
 With her curls lightly floating on Spring's balmy air ;
 And a lovely bouquet all so tastefully made,
 On the grave of her grand pa she tenderly laid ;
 For aged men fell in that terrible strife,
 Which fearfully threatened our national life,
 And at Fair Oaks, to God and to country he gave,
 His own life an offering his country's to save.
 In yonder lone spot, where the evergreens sigh
 To the breezes of night, does a cherished one lie,
 And a sister's kind hand, with affection has spread
 The sweetest of flowers o'er the patriot dead,
 For Atlanta's fierce fight a kind brother had given—
 His body to earth, and his spirit to heaven.
 O, sad are the memories that come on this day,
 Of the loved ones who went from our firesides away,
 Of the many who went, but who came not again,
 For numbered were they with the wounded and slain ;
 And widows, and orphans, look back with a sigh
 To the carnage at Shiloh, where thousands did die ;
 As sorrow broods o'er them a moment they pause,
 And reflect that they died in a glorious cause,
 Their names we will cherish, and honor their deeds,
 Immortal is he who for liberty bleeds ;
 Their dust has returned to the dust whence it came,
 But their memory shall live in the annals of fame.
 O, rest, ye brave heroes, your work is now done ;
 Some fell at Stone River, and some at Bull Run ;
 At Winchester, others by Sheridan led,
 Were numbered that day with the patriot dead ;
 At Corinth—at Vicksburg—no more need I tell,
 So numerous the fields where the brave soldiers fell,
 And their friends in the North, in the East, in the West,
 And e'en in the South, at affection's behest,
 To the graveyards repair on this National Day,
 Their offerings to bring of the flora of May,
 From the hills of New England, from workshop and field,
 To where the Sierras their treasures do yield ;
 From the Southern Savannas that slope to the tide,
 To the Prairies that bloom, in their beauty and pride ;
 From the old Alleghanies, with mineral wealth,
 To the lakes of the North, with their commerce and health ;
 As the ages roll on, and the years pass away,
 Columbia's patriots will honor this day.

MY BROTHERS AND SISTERS.

The children, who lived with me, at the foot of an aged hill,
Who roamed the pastures free, and the mountains climbed at will,

Who picked spring flowers so sweet, and autumn fruits did eat,
Are my own dear brothers and sisters still.

Their merry songs were free, their hearts were filled with glee,
For the world of anxious care, scarce had made its advent there.

In memory's palace proudly stand,

With sparkling eyes and voices bland,

This joyful, happy, and social band.

But O, the vision has fled : the old hill stands there yet ;

Upward it lifts its head, and with rains and dews is wet,

And the hill, and the children, too, the brother will never forget.

The hill, O it stands there still, and will as the ages roll ;

The same old rocky hill, till the heavens are wrapt as a scroll,

And the doleful funeral knell of the world begins to toll.

But the children have passed away, some to the land of rest,

Others as pilgrims stay, away in the mighty West,

Waiting the voice to obey, of Jehovah's great behest,

When he from its earthly clay, shall the living soul divest.

But when the summons comes, and earth's firm pillars bend,

And the nations hear the doom, that seals their final end,

And the slumbering dead arise, and from grassy graves ascend,

May the children good and wise, in heaven their voices blend.

NATURAL SCENERY.

Creation ! how varied its pages unfold !

How charming, how lovely, how bright,

Are the scenes which in Nature's great book we behold,

Creating emotions of joy and delight.

The wild rocky mountains ! Sublimely they stand ;

With their fir-covered summits majestic and high !

Each took its own place at Jehovah's command,

Like sentinels guarding the gates of the sky.

These pinnaced towers of old Nature's domain

Were the haunts, say the ancients, where Muses retired,

And thence, to the hillside, the valley, or plain,

Came down, and the mind of the Poet inspired.

The deep foaming cataracts, rolling between

These proud rocky barriers which Nature did build,

Present to our view a most soul-stirring scene,

And, with wonder and awe, at God's works we are filled.

These aspects of Nature, so lofty and strong,
On the mind in its musings, deep lessons impress;
They say, "to Jehovah all power doth belong,
Frail mortals before him your weakness confess."
In the mountain, so firm, so majestic and high,
Of true friendship an emblem we see;
Its summit points up to the bright azure sky,
Where true friends, pure and spotless, shall be.
May those holy abodes where the angels reside,
Be ours to enjoy when the mountains depart,
When sin, with its pride and its vileness, hath died,
No more to defile or to poison the heart.

THE PATTTERING RAIN.

We are in a world of change,
Many things, both new and strange,
Daily meet us as we go;
But the rain, the driving rain,
Patters on the window pane,
As it did long years ago.

Friends depart or move away,
Something new occurs each day,
Changes of this life to show;
But the rain, the rushing rain,
Beats upon the window pane,
As it did long years ago.

As the fleeting years depart,
Much that's new is learned in art,
And our race do wiser grow;
But the rain, refreshing rain,
Patters on the window pane,
As it did long years ago.

In new style the houses rise,
New style garments greet our eyes,
Not like those we once did know;
But the rain, the gentle rain,
Patters on the window pane,
As it did long years ago.

Modes of travel once unknown,
With new motive power are shown,
Almost every day I trow;
But the rain, the autumn rain,
Patters on the window pane,
As it did long years ago.

By machinery's potent aid,
Tools for farm and shop are made,
Not by process rude and slow;
But the rain, the winter rain,
Loudly beats upon the pane,
As it did long years ago.

In the waving meadows green,
Now we run the nice machine,
Not as once the grass we mow;
But the rain, the midnight rain,
Patters on the window pane,
As it did long years ago.

While the works of mortal man,
Move upon a changing plan,
Whether high, or whether low,
Nature's laws remain the same,
As at first from God they came,
In the ages long ago.

Still the driving storms arise,
Lowering clouds o'erspread the skies,
Dropping down the winter snow,
And the rain, the summer rain,
Patters on the window pane,
As in ages long ago.

A BIRTHDAY POEM.

The earth revolving in its orb,
Brings us the Spring once more;
And many things my thoughts absorb
Which were in days of yore.

The ice has melted—snow is gone—
The brooklets gurgle free,
The grass is green upon the lawn,
And humming is the bee.

The robin's song, the blue-bird's note,
Again is sweetly heard,
With music from the thrush's throat,
And from each singing bird.

And now a voice, from by-gone years,
In accents soft and sweet,
Falls gently on my listening ears,
My raptured soul to greet.

'Tis of a morn in early spring,
A day both clear and mild,
Which to the world, did kindly bring
My mother's youngest child.

Long years, with all their woe and joy,
Have come and gone far aye;
Brought age to him who was a boy,
Upon that natal day.

And she, the last born of that band
Of mother's children dear,
This day, most surely has attained
Her five-and-sixtieth year.

And he who still remembers well,
The day that gave her birth,
Wishes that she in peace may dwell,
Yet many years on earth.

TO MY YOUNGEST SISTER.

Spring with its verdure and its flowers,
Its bright warm days and sunny hours,
Its brooklets wandering to the sea,
Its woodland birdsong symphony,
Its breezes, from the prairie driven,
Its gentle rain sent down from heaven,
Its verdant garments on the trees,
Its balmy odor on the breeze,
Once more has come, to charm and bless,
Old age and infant loveliness.
And when the lovely spring appears,
It 'minds me of my childhood years;
And memory's mirror brings to view,
A picture well defined and true,
Of youthful scenes and youthful joy,
To me delightful when a boy.
The homestead, where our mother's voice,
Made our young hearts in life rejoice,
With words of kindness, looks of love,
Pure as proceed from hearts above,
Is, to us all, a place most dear,
At any season of the year,
But doubly so when spring doth come,
And smile around our childhood's home;
For in the springtime of the year,
God sent my youngest sister here.

New life, which nature then imparts,
Accords full well with youthful hearts,
And scenes of youth on memory's page,
All fresh appear in years of age.
While present scenes shall come and go,
Right onward as the rivers flow,
The scenes of my young life will be
Bright as the vernal flowers to me.
Though passing years have changed the maid,
Into the matron, prone to fade,
The boy with auburn tresses fair,
To tottering age with whitened hair,
Yet, faces fair and eyes so bright
Have not yet faded from my sight,
And hearts, so warm, so kind and good,
Have like a granite pillar stood.
But when earth's blossoms all decay,
And from its scenes we pass away,
May flowers immortal round us bloom,
"Beyond the confines of the tomb;"
And one eternal spring be ours,
In heaven's amaranthine bowers.

THE VOLUNTEER'S DEPARTURE.

I go to the tented field,
To the bivouac and the strife;
I go where the soldier dies,
And the patriot yields his life.

I go where the banners wave,
Where the stars and stripes are bright;
I go my country to save,
And its mortal foes to fight.

I go where the cannon's voice
Doth in thunder tones resound;
I go—'tis my own free choice—
Where the harvest of death is found.

I go where traitorous bands,
In their frenzied hate are seen;
I go where murderous hands
Wield weapons of slaughter keen.

I go where the victor goes;
Where the sons of freedom win;
I go where our mortal foes
Shall die in their rebel sin.

I go in a righteous cause;
I go for the rights of man;
I go to sustain our laws,
Or to fall in freedom's van.

I go where my country calls:
Where heroes engage in the strife;
Where the soldier nobly falls,
And the patriot yields his life.

I go - from loved ones I roam—
Strong are the ties I must sever—
My country! my kindred! my home!
Jehovah protect them forever!

THE VOLUNTEER'S RETURN.

I went, at my country's call,
To fight for our Flag you know;
On Freedom's altar laid my all,
When I volunteered to go.

I went where the southern skies,
Like a brazen furnace burn;
Where the miasmata rise,
And thousands to dust return.

I went where the serried ranks
Of the rebel hosts were seen
On the river's wooded banks,
With their deadly weapons keen.

On the rocky mountain's side—
In the winding vales below—
By the rolling ocean's tide—
Went where'er our foes did go.

I went where the battle loud,
With it thunders, rent the sky;
Where no winding sheet or shroud
Clad the hero called to die.

Where zip of the minnie ball,
And howl of the shrieking shell,
On the ear with death-like call,
And with doleful accents fell.

Where the dashing horseman's blade
The blade of his foeman met,
And the deadly charge was made,
With the glitt'ring bayonet;

Where the battle shout was given,
As the ranks of the foe gave way,
And its echoes reached to heaven,
As they fled in wild dismay.

Where the patriot with his blood,
His love for his country sealed,
And our heroes brave and good,
Lay cold on the crimson field.

Where our foemen dead lay strown,
Like leaves in the forest sere,
When the autumn winds have sung
The dirge of the dying year.

* * * * *

But now the battles are o'er,
And the rebel power has fled;
I come to my home once more,
From the scenes of carnage red.

I come to the loved ones, left
In tears on the parting day;
But the clouds of grief are cleft,
And the gloom has passed away.

I come where liberty reigns,
And the bondmen sigh no more;
For severed are slavery's chains,
And oppression's reign is o'er.

I come, but my comrades brave,
Who stood in the ranks with me—
O! some fill the soldier's grave,
And home they will never see.

I come where the widows weep,
Where the lonely orphans sigh.
Who their faithful vigils keep
O'er the brave who did nobly die.

I come, Te Deum to sing—
Saved by the patriot's blood—
Loud hallelujahs shall ring—
Praises and glory to God.

THE SOLDIER'S DREAM.

The winds of night were sighing,
When a soldier far away,
In his narrow tent, was lying,
At the close of a weary day.

From home his country call'd him,
To its defense of right,
For a rebel foe had risen,
Against our flag to fight.

By many tiresome marches,
On many a toilsome day,
He had reached the land of Dixie,
From the homestead far away.

Had heard death's weapons rattle,
Had seen the crimson flow,
Had trod the field of battle,
'Mid scenes of death and woe;

Had stood at his post of duty,
In the lightnings flashes bright,
When the furious storm was raging,
On the dark and dismal night.

But now in his tent was lying,
At the close of a weary day;
Of friends and home was dreaming,
As he in his slumber lay.

* * * * *

The scenes of his boyhood most cheering,
Before him in visions all bright,
And the friends of his youth, so endearing,
Appeared in the dreams of that night.

'Twas springtime—and nature in beauty,
Emerging from winter's embrace,
With charms all inviting and lovely,
The meadows and woodlands did grace.

The trees of the forest were covered
With vestments of beautiful green,
And birds of rare colors there hover'd,
To cheer and enliven the scene.

From scenes of the camp and the battle,
In visions he wandered that night;
Till his home far away in the Northland,
Most joyously greeted his sight.

The place where in boyhood he wandered,
In sportive, yet innocent glee.
Where murmuring brooklets meander'd,
By way side, through forest and lea;

The hillside, where lambkins were grazing,
The orchard just whitening with bloom,
The field, where the farmer was plowing,
The sound of the anvil and loom,

All woke a remembrance delightful,
Of scenes in his juvenile life,
When impressions all real and truthful,
With pleasant emotions were rife.

His home! O, the thrilling emotion!
With rapture he stands at the door,
The home of his early devotion,
He's reached it—he asks for no more.

Its inmates, the dearest of mortals,
Its fireside, the best ever seen,
He opens and enters its portals,
Let fancy now picture the scene.

The greetings are scarcely yet ended,
With dear ones he came home to see,
While voices together are blended,
He is roused by the camp reveille.

The vision has fled, and the soldier must stay
Where Dixie's broad rivers still flow,
At the post of his duty, by night and by day,
No Furlough nor homeward can go.

THE BEREAVEMENT.

I stand by an ancient river,
Where I stood long years ago;
Whose purling waters ever
Right on to the ocean flow;
And near it stands a farmhouse,
Where an aged father dwelt,
And round his fireside altar,
In daily prayer he knelt.
A son had grown to manhood
Within this ancient home,
And from its sacred portals,
Had ne'er desired to roam;
Affection's ties had bound him
To his aged parents here,
And the hallowed scenes around him,
Still made the homestead dear.
On a blooming Mayday morning,
When the grass was springing green,

Around that ancient farmhouse,
A merry group was seen;
And the grand sire sat among them,
His dim eyes beamed with joy;
For the happy ones before him,
Were sons of his own dear boy.
The flowers on that Mayday morning,
With beauty and fragrance rare,
The garden paths were adorning;
And scenting the balmy air,
And childhood's soul now basking,
In pleasure's sunlight bright,
Dreamed not of hidden sorrows,
Or woes concealed from sight.
Bright soul of youth confiding,
Gay heart of childhood free,
In hopes fond smile abiding,
Most lovely sight to see.
But lo! the war trump sounded,
And forth our legions went;
That grandsire's son enlisted,
And to the front was sent.
The lilac's bloomed in beauty,
The rose its fragrance gave,
While at his post of duty,
He stood among the brave,
But ere the roses faded,
In the gentle summer light,
A host our land invaded;
There came a deadly fight,*
And the father of those children
Was found among the slain;
His words of love and kindness
They never heard again.
And by that ancient river,
As its waters pass away,
A widow sits in sorrow,
And lonely orphans stray.

* The battle of Gettysburg.

THE SNOW,

Vapors floating in the heaven
By sea-breezes landward driven,
Will at length to earth descend;
And the snow—the winter snow—
Then will whiten all below;
And with mundane objects blend.

Gentle flakes, at first, will fall,
Scattering, few and very small,
But in number soon increase;
And the snow—the spotless snow—
Soon is seen in piles below,
Not unlike a mammoth fleece.

Then the flakes are faster driven
By the rushing winds of heaven,
And the snow—the driven snow—
Falling fast now whirls and lifts,
Filling roads and paths with drifts,
Stopping travelers as they go.

But at length the storm abates,
Cleared are side walks, opened gates,
And again the highway trod;
But the snow—the drifted snow—
Makes all movements very slow,
And the teams now only plod.

Days elapse, the roads are nice,
Prancing horses in a trice,
Over them now make their way;
And the snow—the harden'd snow—
Causes them to smoothly go,
Swiftly o'er it day by day.

But the south-west wind is felt,
And the harden'd snow doth melt,
Growing softer every day;
And the snow—the melted snow—
To the ocean now will flow,
Onward in its winding way.

As in nature, so in life,
Changing forms and scenes are rife;
Mortals come but briefly stay;
Like the snow—the changing snow—
Quickly through the world they go,
To the regions far away.

THINGS I LOVE.

I love to view the leafy grove
In summer's longest days,
As in its cool retreat I rove
Amid its winding ways.

I love to hear the sparrow's song,
The robin's sweet refrain,
The thrush his melody prolong,
In a delightful strain.

I love to listen to the note
Of nightingale so sweet,
As in the eve she tunes her throat,
Within her cool retreat.

I love, when evening shades appear,
And all around is still,
To pause and listen when I hear
The song of whippoorwill.

I love to hear the vesper chime
From church tower on the hill,
Filling the air with tones sublime,
Above the vale so still.

I love the starry dome to view,
And look on Venus bright,
And scan the deep ethereal blue
Beset with gems of light.

I love, when curtains of the night
On hill and vale are laid,
To view the moon, a lovely sight,
In silvery sheen arrayed.

I love to hear the thunder roar,
And see the lightning's blaze,
The tokens of Almighty power,
And God's mysterious ways.

PROVIDENTIAL CARE. (Matt. VI. 28.)

Behold the lilies fair,
No toil they ever know;
With fragrance rich and rare
Sweetly in beauty grow.

They need no spinster's art
Their garments to prepare,
The great Creator's hand
Doth clothe them all with care.

And will he not to all
His daily care extend?
To rich and poor, to great and small,
And be their firmest friend?

He surely cares for all,
And keeps us night and day;
And though our faith be small,
He will protect our way.

ON REVISITING MY BIRTHPLACE.

Long years had passed away, I came
Where first I saw the light;
I tuned my harp but not to fame
For scenes of childhood bright.

Before me in their beauty rose,
They caught my eager view;
And now permit me to disclose
Some of those scenes to you.

The mountains all sublimely stood,
And drew my earnest gaze;
Here was the rock, and there the wood,
As in my childhood's days.

The lofty pine, the mountain crowned,
The laurel 'neath did grow,
And as I viewed the scene around,
I saw the brook below.

It had a voice—a friendly voice—
Familiar to my ears;
Its rocky banks had been my choice,
Far back in childhood's years.

Its murmurs rose like music's sound;
They long had been at rest
To me, where different scenes abound,
Within the mighty West.

They woke an interesting tale
Of years all passed away,
Of scenes within my native vale,
In boyhood's sunny day.

By that meand'ring, purling stream,
In springtimes balmy days,
I often went, to muse and dream,
And sing my youthful lays.

In summer too 'neath ancient trees,
Which gave us shade at noon,
I wander'd forth, as Scotia's bard
Did on the banks of Doon.

And listened to the singing bird,
Admired the blooming flowers,
All nature's music joyful heard,
In those delightful hours.

There young companions too, I found,
Inspired with youthful glee.
Together did our joys abound—
Companions where are ye?

Parted, the echoing hills resound,
And scattered far away;
The locks which youthful heads then crowned
Time's hands hath tinged with gray.

Some linger round their native hills,
Where first they drew their breath;
Others have felt the icy chills,
And the cold hand of death.

Some borne by emigration's tide,
To western lands did roam;
The forest or the prairie wide,
Gave them a quiet home.

Others, in college halls, were found,
Conning the Classics o'er,
Or, sounding learning's depths profound
For scientific lore.

Thus, changing time marks man's career,
From infancy to age,
And memory kindly standing near
Unfolds the varied page.

Flow on, thou murm'ring brook, flow on,
Thy waters pass away,
And others come when they are gone,
To wake thy tuneful lay.

So, when my course on earth is run,
And mortal cares expire,
And I am gone, some other one
Shall wake my rustic lyre,

Meanwhile, may I, in nobler strains,
Attune my harp above;
And where immortal glory reigns,
Sing of immortal love.

GIFTS.

"Our Father" guides the rolling year;
He fills our world with lofty cheer,
When Spring in beauty comes;
The lovely, fragrant flowers are born,
And sweetly scent the air of morn,
Around our quiet homes,
He sends the birds to garden bowers,
With songs to cheer the morning hours,
And make our hearts rejoice.
He gives us friends to cheer life's way,
And calls us when we go astray,
With an inviting voice.
But friends with whom we mingle here,
From day to day, from year to year,
Will give the parting hand;
But when our mortal life is o'er,
We'll greet them on the shining shore
Of the Elysian Land.

SPRING.

Winter's dreary reign is over,
Spring's warm breath again is felt;
Snowy wreaths which late did cover
Every landscape like a belt,
When young spring o'er earth did hover,
In her balmy smile did melt.

Birds are singing in the forest;
Trees their leaflets now display;
Gentle wild flowers, gay but modest,
Greet us by the woodland way,
Or, o'er prairie fields the broadest,
Send their odors far away.

Now has come the busy seed-time,
Farmers sow the early grain;
In the groves we hear the bird-chime
After gentle showers of rain;
O, it is the glorious springtime,
But not long will it remain.

Spring, thy reign will soon be ended;
Soon the summer queen will come,
And thy charms with hers be blended
Round the cotter's quiet home;
While, by fairy bands attended,
Thou to other lands wilt roam.

A HYMN.

The spring in beauty comes
With blossoms bright and fair,
Which shed around our rural homes
A fragrance rich and rare.

The great creator's sun
Gives light and heat to all;
While on the evil and the good,
The raindrops freely fall.

To every helpless one
His aid is kindly given,
That he may say "Thy will be done."
And choose the way to heaven.

Let us poor mortals be Submissive to his will,
In all the acts of life may we
His righteous law fulfill.

Then, when life's labors cease,
And here no more we roam,
With holy joy and heavenly peace,
We shall be welcomed home.

BIRTHPLACE.

Whate'er man's surroundings, his birthplace is dear,
Though found in the tropics, or lands cold and drear;
On Switzerland's mountains, in Italy's vales,
Mid Scotia's wild heather, in England or Wales,
By Castilian fountains, on Russia's drear plains,
Where summer perennial, or cold winter reigns,
By the Rhine or the Danube, the Thames or the Dee,
In the land of the Serf, or the land of the Free,
On the hills of New England, or plains of the West,
By the swift flowing stream, or the mountain's high crest,
In palace or cottage, in hovel or hall,
Or in any lone spot on our swift rolling ball,
Where born, and where bred, where a mother's fond care
Had ever been shown, with a kindness most rare;
A love, strong, instinctive, adheres to the spot,
An attachment so dear, it can ne'er be forgot.
When in sadness the Jew did his exile prolong,
By the streams of Chaldea, no music or song
Could banish the thought of his dear native hills.

Or hush the sweet tones of his own mountain rills;
For no place or people, in all the wide earth,
Had such charm for his soul, as the place of his birth;
And his own cherished land, where first he drew breath,
Adhered to his thoughts till the day of his death.

FOR AN AUTOGRAPH ALBUM.

Upon these pages fair appear,
Names unto you in memory dear,
And, though an empty sound the name,
That friend is dear, who bears the same.
The love-lit eye, the gentle mind,
The feeling soul, good and refined,
The tongue, that slander never knows,
The heart that feels for others' woes,
The hand that brings a kind relief
To needy ones oppressed with grief,
A sympathy, for those who mourn,
And sit in sadness all forlorn.
A joy that gladdens every heart,
And makes the clouds of grief depart,
A charity, that will not fail,
But suffers long and doth prevail;
Will honor give to every name,
Of greater worth than wealth or fame;
Will grace thy friends, the friends of all,
Who do possess them, great or small.
May autographs of such appear,
All plainly, neatly, written here;
Your friendly heart and eye to cheer,
From day to day, from year to year.
