BOSTON:

PRESS OF H. W. DUTTON & SON,

In writing and compiling the ensuing work, I have to acknowledge the use of Family Charts and Mss., supplied by Mrs. Sally Lockwood of New London, Ct., p. 103; Rev. Dr. James Richards of Litchfield, Ct., p. 221; Rev. William C. Richards of Lynn, p. 147; S. H. Conger, Esq., of Newark, N. J.; Dr. Lemuel Richards of Kennebunk, Me., p. 88; Mr. Samuel Richards, Jr., of S. Paris, Me., p. 194; Josiah Richards, Esq., of W. Bridgewater, p. 77; Jason Richards, Esq., of Plainfield, p. 85; Mr. George K. Richards of Elbridge, N. Y., p. 66; and others; and especially Mr. Henry W. Richards of Dedham, p. 136, who has not only supplied matter, but rendered much labor, to save the work from inaccuracies and typographical errors. Yet complete, and absolutely perfect, no such work ever is or can be in the first edition; but the tracing of the families, the most important thing, is here deemed reliable.

Every error that can be detected, subscribers and others are earnestly requested to report to the author, for errata, to be published in one year, with supplemental matter, and forwarded, to be pasted into the book, at p. 226, before graduates.

EXPLANATION.

In displaying the following genealogies cross references are employed. For example, on page 20, are two columns of Arabic numbers before names; the right consisting of running and the left of referring numbers. "7. 3." stand before "H. John," here a child. The 7 refers to No. 7 below in the right hand column, before the name of the same John, now a father; and the 3 now in the left hand column refers back to No. 3 in the right column, before his name where a child. Nos. 23, 27, and 36, in the left column, on the same page, before the names of John's three sons, refer onward to the same Nos. in the right-hand column, where they occur as parents, and where the Nos. 8, 9, and 10 occur in the left column, referring back to these Nos. in the right do. on p. 20, above which occur the names of their father and grandfather Thomas.¹ In the same manner may be found the sons of John,² p. 22, in the column of running Nos., after Nos. 63 and 67. Or by commencing with Robert Edgar, p. 65, he may be traced back by Nos. 715, 708, 699, 697, 219, 218, 102, 100, 40, 36, 10, 7, 3, to Thomas of pp. 20 and 19.

No numbers refer out of the chapter or section of chapter where found.

Names having no referring Nos. before them, are either traced no further, or they have their descendants arranged immediately below their names.

Numerical letters before the names of children denote their No., which must not be confounded with the running numbers in Arabic figures. These numerical letters are dropped when the child becomes a parent.

Small figures after names mark their generations, their Puritan ancestor being accounted the first.

? after a figure, denotes the reference not certain.

? after a name, signifies that it is inferred from circumstantial evidence or doubtful records, or that it has not been traced.

Initial letters are put for the names of places immediately after they have been spelled.

The practice of double dating between Jan. 1st and March 25th,—thus 1675-6, until the introduction of N. S. in 1752, is retained to prevent confusion, and enable families to compare and correct their dates.

N. B. Prior to 1752, the civil year began in March, which was called the first month, April, 2d month, often expressed thus,—25 (2), i. e. 25th day, 2d month. To render O. S. into N. S., the first month must be counted the 3d, and ten days be added to all dates between 1582 and 1700, and eleven days to dates between 1700 and 1752. For the single year 1600, eleven days must be added.

RICHARDS.

The name of Richard has been variously and fancifully derived, the noble-minded believing it the contraction of rich heart, while the mammonists admire that of rich lard; but to the correctness of each there are objections. Both seem to imply the formation of the name after that of the English tongue, but it existed long prior, and no doubt came from the continent. It first occurs in England as the name of the archbishop of Canterbury, in the reign of Henry II., 1154–89, in honor of whom, as the highest ecclesiastic and second man in the kingdom, Henry is supposed to have named his son and successor Richard I. Now this archbishop could hardly have been an Englishman, but according to the policy of the Popes, must have been appointed from a foreign country, as Germany, France, or Italy, from whence he brought the name; and considering his dignity, others besides the king might have shown their devotion and sought merit by calling their sons after him. Yet if Prince Richard was the only one and the first of the name who had a family, none who have since borne it, or either of its derivatives, as a surname, will infer a royal origin, for his children were all christened before the adoption of lower or surnames. After his coronation and especially his military achievements, the name became illustrious throughout Europe, and was doubtless given to many sons and transmitted. At first it was only a Christian name. Afterwards, as surnames were assumed, this, like Thomas, James, Daniel, and a host of other Christian names, might have been adopted as a surname, and made hereditary among distinct races in different countries. And this was no doubt the case. Hence we early find it in Spain, France, Germany, Norway, Sweden, England and Wales, with its termination varied according to national usages. Richards is a Welsh patronymic, answering exactly to Richardson in English.* It evidently originated in the principality, and early spread in noble families, for books of heraldry give no less than seventeen distinct coats of arms by the name of Richards, enough of which point back to Wales, to justify the belief that here was an original hive from which issued dignified founders of illustrious families of the name in different counties of England. Its locality has not been ascertained. At Caernynwick, Marioneth Co., Wales, the late Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, often President of the House of Lords, Sir Richard Richards, inherited a manor of which his ancestors, about 1550, were spoken of as “the ancient possessors.” Now the lordship of Dinwiddiek, embracing no doubt the present Co. of Marioneth, the ancient stronghold of North Wales, must have been assigned by Edward I., after the conquest of 1277, to his son-in-law of high Norman extraction. His descendants continued to possess it and to marry princes, and are not found to have ever lost it. May not then the manor of Sir Richard R. be a part of it, and have descended from the original assignee, and he and his race have sprung from a princely stock?

Of any connection between the inheritors of this manor and either in the following list of emigrants, nothing has been discovered beyond the common use of the names of Edward and Richard, and their emigration from a part of England, where, probably, an offshoot of the Welsh stock had previously taken root. Of their descent from a knight there is no doubt. They claimed the privilege of bearing the identical arms of Richards of E. Bagborough in the county of Somerset, consisting of ar. four lozanges conjoined, in fesse gu. between two bars sa., for these are depicted on the tablet of the Hon. James Richards at Hartford, who died in 1680;* and may be seen in an ancient MS., in the N. E. H. G. library, halved with the arms of Gov. Winthrop, whose daughter Judge Richards of Boston married in 1692.

*In Wales, where nearly every name is a patronymic, the early use of Ap before the father's name was exchanged for s final. Hence, for Ap Adam, Ap Mathew, Ap Mark, Ap John, Ap Daniel, Ap William, Ap Edward, we now have Adams, Mathews, Marks, Johns and Jones, Daniels, Williams, Edwards, &c. Many New England names, since their arrival, have been changed into Welsh, through Welsh examples and the misapprehension of their orthography, when written in the possessive case. This explains why names terminating in s are so common in Great Britain, and occur at the rate of 15 per cent. in New England.

In Europe the name of Richards has long been illustrious; but perhaps more prolific in dignity than in moral or intellectual greatness. Still in a country where the actors in great events lose their family names in their titles, it is impossible to discern at this distance what monuments of glory and renown the name has reared. These must have been numerous and perhaps lofty.

Of its literary and ecclesiastical honors I find very little. Athenæ Oxoniensis reports only one graduate, Will Richards, who was of Trinity College, 1662, and afterwards, in 1689, Archdeacon of Berkshire. There are, however, at present, many clergymen of the name in England and Wales. But it is no part of my design to import and regild the faded honors of the name. They will not pay for transportation, and may prove a cumbersome heir-loom in the family. I offer a fresher and nobler lineage, one emblazoned with the brilliant ensigns of sacrifices and sufferings, of victories and triumphs, for truth and conscience.

* His tabular monument, one of the largest in the ancient cemetery at Hartford, and originally the most splendid, consists of a mineral that does not occur in New England. It may prove to be from a quarry of the old red sandstone which underlays nearly the entire county of Somerset. It is now colored dark by the oxyde of manganese which, prior to exposure, doubtless existed as a carbonate, and gave the monument a beautiful pink appearance. Throughout the slab are sparsely distributed segregations of another mineral, originally of a pink color but now black, and consisting of two parts of carbonate of lime, one of silica, and one of oxyde of manganese. These, having in a great degree resisted the atmosphere, now stand out in bold relief, preserving a diameter of not over one fourth of an inch, and show that the surface of the tablet to the depth of one fourth or third of an inch has, in 180 years, been removed by atmospheric agency, and that in about fifty years more, the arms and inscription will be obliterated. Will some noble hand interfere, re-chisel them and thus preserve a relic of the history and antiquity of the race. Sandstones of apparently the same formation compose tablets in old cemeteries in Boston, but in only one of them have been noticed these peculiar segregations. They may, therefore, have, in England, a very limited range, and if found of the diameter described, projecting from decayed walls and monuments at Bristol, Taunton, or Bagborough, they may guide Mr. Richards of America to the manor of his ancestor and the records of its history.

CHAPTER I.

THOMAS RICHARDS,¹ born about 1590, and the first of the name who arrived in New England, was undoubtedly a man of standing and consideration in the mother country. He came to Dorchester, says his cotemporary Capt. Clapp, in 1630, the year when the settlement began, and no doubt came over in the ship Mary and John, with his wife and several children. In the colonization of New England no company, except the Pilgrims at Plymouth, were called to such severe trials as the first planters of Dorchester. In these he must have participated. They were from Dorchester, in Dorsetshire, and named the place of their settlement after their natal town. Now as Tho. Richards "was a man of note" in this company, and from the first enjoyed in a peculiar degree their confidence, he was doubtless known to them before his embarkation, and must have been from the same place, or perhaps E. Bagborough, only a few miles distant, to which his arms unmistakably point.* He was by calling a merchant, and dignified by the title of Mr. From the company in which he appeared and the offices to which he was elected, it is inferred that he was a member of the church, but for some unknown reason did not take the freeman's oath before 13 (3) 1640. Oct. 8, 1633, Mr. Richards was chosen by the planters of Dorchester the third member of a board of twelve men "to appear every Monday before the court," or to constitute a court or board of selectmen to act in the absence of the other planters, who, when convened, were allowed "to vote with them." Feb. 1, 1634, the proprietors ordered that there be a cartway betwixt the rock and Mr. Richards's house, or else to go through his lot according to a former order. Oct. 6, 1634, the General Court appointed persons to hear and determine the several trespasses done by the swine of several persons in the corn of Thomas Richards. He continued in Dorchester until 1636; but soon after the arrival of Rev. Mr. Newman, with a company to strengthen the settlement which had been commenced at Weymouth by a company from Weymouth in Dorsetshire, he removed to W., as did his brother or nephew George and nephew William, from Scituate, some years later. This indicates that they had relatives in the latter company, and confirms the belief that they were from Dorsetshire or vicinity.

At Weymouth he and his partner, Mr. Waltham, owned a mill, and not having

* Since writing the above, the following genealogy, rendered true by publication and transcription into the Bible, has been received:—

"The Richards families were originally from the counties of Somerset and Devon, and records are found as follows:—

1. James Richards m. 1520 Agnes Gamboy; had
2. Edward do. who m. Joan Courtney, and had
3. Anthony do. who m. Mary Mainard, and had
4. William do. who m. Jane Praiseworthy, and had
5. John do. who m. Margaret Wild, and had
6. Hiram do. who m. Eleanor Grimmond, and had
7. Thomas do. who m. Welthean"— and became the ancestor of 8 generations more in this country, which are given. The account makes Thomas forget to name a child for either of his parents, and to be the father of his nephew William. It crowds together in 206 years fifteen generations, and makes fourteen boys in succession fathers on an average at the age of 14. No dates but the first marriage and last birth are given. More would have spoiled the marvel, and rendered the whole less credible than the inspired text. But it is as correct as many other things to be found between the Testaments, where writers, inspired by their imaginations, make strange interpolations, especially in favor of a higher although less noble than Puritan origin.

furnished it with scales and weights, they were, June 4, 1639, fined 5s. each, and Waltham £3, for "taking too much toll."

In 1640, Mr. R. seems to have been absent, leaving the care of his business with his wife. A difficulty arose between her and the partner of her husband, and the General Court so far noticed a complaint as to "order that all matters in difference between Welthean Richards, wife of Thomas R., and Henry Waltham, merchant, be referred to Mr. (Rev.) Newman, Mr. Parker and Edward Bates of Weymouth, who have power to appoint a miller to keep the mill for both parties." He became a proprietor of W., and, between 1640 and 44, had assigned him 5 acres of meadow and 18 acres of upland and four acres in the mill field. 10 (2) 1643 he was elected the first member of a board of six townsmen, and re-chosen in 1844 and '45. On the 23d of April, 1645, the inhabitants of W. were all ordered to "put their dry cattle to Mr. Richards, who is this year to keep them until after Indian harvest." Nov. 13, 1644, the G. C., in answer to some unexplained complaint or memorial, resolved very respectfully that "Tho. Richards's case is thought by this court to belong more properly to ye court of assistants, to which he is referred, unless he were denied justice in the same."

Dec. 17, 1650, he is said by the author of the history of the Artillery Company to have made his will; and James Savage, Esq., informs me that it was dated at Hull, and proved Jan. 28, 1650-1. I have been less fortunate than those gentlemen in my search for it. But this is the less regretted, inasmuch as its purport can be gathered from other documents in the Suffolk files. From these I glean that he was a merchant, engaged in trade at the time of his death, the names and general ages of his then surviving children, and that he appointed his eldest son John his executor. John was absent in England, and the court, 31 (11) 1650, appointed the widow Welthean executrix of "her late husband's will until the return of her son John in the fifth month next, or till the court shall give further order." Ephraim Hunt, her son-in-law, was bound for her in the sum of £2000. The estate, consisting of house, land, orchard and mill, at Weymouth, appraised at £200, with goods and dues, made an inventory of £1300 17 11, a large estate for the time. These she disposed of at £26 more than their appraised value, viz., goods to the amount of £142, at cost in England, to Mr. Tyng and Anthony Stodard, merchants of Boston; ditto of £173 at an advance of 3d. per shilling, charging herself £17 10s. for goods at this price, taken as a half yearly allowance secured her by will. To Wm. Brown of Salem, Edward Tyng and Geo. Corwin, merchants, Thomas Hinckley and Ephraim Hunt, sons-in-law, and Capt. Standish of Duxbury, she sold goods to the amount of £399. For the schooling and diet of Joseph and Benj. she charged $13, and for their clothes £8; for Samuel's clothes £1 18s., and for Hannah's do. £5. This account she presented 3 (10) 1651, in court, and resigned her trust to her son John, now returned, and was, with her bondsmen, discharged to the satisfaction of the court and her successor.

Madam Richards, having come into possession of a house and land at Weymouth, and an annuity of £35 for life secured to her by the will of her late husband, sold the same to her son John for £350, and before the close of 1651 she removed to Boston. Here she was evidently treated as one of the aristocracy, and died 1679.

COPY OF HER WILL.

I Wealthean Richards of Boston in New England, widow, being sickly and weak attended with many bodily infirmities, but thro' divine grace of good and perfect memory and understanding, knowing the uncertainty of this life and the certainty of my approaching change, and being desirous to settle that portion of my temporal estate which the good God of his bounty hath made me a steward of, now before my death; do make, ordain and declare this my last Will and Testament in manner and form following. First and above all things I commend and commit my soul to Almighty God my Creator, trusting and most assuredly believing that when this earthly tabernacle shall be dissolved, my soul shall be brought into that habitation eternal in the heavens, thro' the precious death and merits of Jesus Christ my Saviour and Redeemer. My body I commit to the earth, from whence it was taken, to be buried in such decent manner as my Executors hereafter named shall see meet and convenient, hoping for and dying in the expectation of that joyful Resurrection of the great day when soul and body shall again be united and be forever with the Lord. And now for settling my temporal estate and such goods, chattels and debts as it hath pleased God far above my desert to betrust me with, I do order, give and dispose the same in manner and form as is hereafter expressed. And first I do renounce, revoke, frustrate and make void all testament or testaments, will or wills by me formerly made by word or writing, and appoint this my last will and testament and no other. Item. I will that all those just debts which I owe to any person or persons whatsoever be well and truly contented and paid in convenient time after my decease by my Executor hereafter named. Item. I give and bequeath to my eldest son John Richards all that my dwelling house and land adjoining, situate in Boston aforesaid, with the privileges and appurtenances thereunto belonging, to be to him, his heirs and assigns forever. And whereas my said son John hath formerly received of me to value of three hundred pounds in money, the profits whereof hath been to my use and is to be until my decease, as by instruments between us appears, I do give and bequeath the same after my decease to him the said John and his heirs forever. Item. Whereas my son James Richards hath formerly received of me the sum of Two Hundred and Fifty pounds in money, the profits of which hath been to my use and is to be until my decease, as by instruments between us appears, I do give and bequeath the same, after my decease, to him the said James and his heirs forever. Item. I will and bequeath unto Thomas Bradford five pounds in money. To Alice Bradford Threscore Pounds. To Hannah Bradford forty pounds. To Mercy Bradford Tenn pounds. To William Bradford Junr. Twenty pounds. To John Bradford Tenn pounds. To Samuel Bradford five pounds. To Melatiah Bradford Five pounds. To Mary Bradford five pounds. To Sarah Bradford five pounds, these tenn above last named being children of William Bradford of Plimouth Colony and my daughter Alice deceased. Item. I will and bequeath to Samuel Hinckley twenty pounds. To Thomas Hinckley, Jun. Thirty pounds. To Susan Bacon ten pounds. To Hannah Glover five pounds. To Melatiah Crocker five pounds. To Bathsheba Hinckley five pounds. To Mehetable Hinckley five pounds. To Mary Wybornes five pounds. These eight last mentioned being children of Thomas Hinckley of Plymouth Colony and my daughter Mary deceased. Item. I give and bequeath unto Ephraim Hunt Jun. five pounds. To Thomas Hunt five pounds. To John Hunt five pounds, sons to Ephraim Hunt Sen. of Weymouth, and my late daughter Anne. Item. I will and bequeath unto the daughter of Mary Wiborne abovesaid five pounds, and to her son Tenn pounds. To the son of Hannah Glover five pounds. To John Bradford's two children five pounds each. To Samuel Hinckley's child five pounds. To Sarah Bacon's two children five pounds each. To my son James's six children Twenty shillings each to buy a ring apiece. To Thomas Hunt's two children five pounds each, more to Alice and Hannah Bradford five pounds each, to put them in mourning at my funeral. Item. I will and bequeath unto the poore of Boston tenn pounds, to be disposed of at the discretion of my Executor hereafter named, and to the first church in Boston five pounds. To Harvard College five pounds. Item. I give and bequeath unto Mrs. Sarah Leverett, relict of our late Honored Governor, five pounds, as an acknowledgment of her many kindnesses. To each of my overseers hereafter named five pounds; all which legacies and bequests above my will is shall be paid by my Executor within twelve months after my decease in money, That is, to them that are of age or married, and to the rest as they may come to be of age or marry, or as they have need at the discretion of my Executor. My household stuff I dispose as followeth. To my son John I give my biggest silver tankard. To Mercy Bradford the worst of my three feather beds, one bolster, one coverlet, one pair of blankets, one pair sheets, one pillow and pillow case, the rest to Alice and Hannah Bradford, to be equally divided by my Executor. My wearing apparell to be equally divided between Alice and Hannah Bradford and Bathsheba Hineckley. It is further my will that in case my estate should fall short of what is hereby bequeathed as to the money part it shall be abated proportionably out of the bequests above, except what is given to my Overseers to the Poore and to the College, to the church and to Mary Wiborne, which is not to be lessened. It is my will and testament likewise that if Alice Bradford abovesaid do marry without my consent while I am living or without the consent of my Executor, she shall in such case lose the benefit of all the bequests above, which shall be divided among the rest of the legatees, at the discretion of my Executor hereafter named, anything in said will notwithstanding. And I do hereby make, ordain and appoint my loving son John Richards my sole Executor of this my last will and Testament, nothing doubting that he will be careful punctually to perform the same, hereby giving and bequeathing unto my Executor all the residue and remainder of my estate, personal and real, my debts and legacies above being first paid. And I do hereby appoint and ordaine Mr. Humphrey Davis and Mr. Anthony Stoddard Overseers of this my last will and testament, requesting them to accept that trouble and to inspect and direct as need may be to the true performance hereof. In witness to the premises I have to this my last will and testament set my hand and seal this third day of July, in the year of our Lord 1679.

WELTHEAN > RICHARDS,

2. 9. John Richards, Wp. and Maj., one of the most eminent men of his time in the Colonies, is first mentioned as belonging to Dorchester, where, as a merchant, he probably remained for a few years after the removal of his father to Weymouth, for he was enrolled as a citizen of D., and in 1644 received a member of the Artillery Co. in Boston. He was the owner of lands in D. at a later period. We next hear of him on Kennebeck River, where he "of Neg-was-sey, planter," April 22, 1649, received of Robin Hood, an Indian, a deed of the island of Arrotheek, [now Georgetown, Me.], on which he then lived. Here he was no doubt engaged in ship-building with the father of Sir Wm. Phipps and his twenty sons, whose yard was either on this island or the width of a channel from it. The inhabitants of the Kennebeck country having been placed under the jurisdiction of New Plymouth, they were summoned to meet at Merry Meeting, June 23, 1654, when John Richards, with them, took the oath of fidelity to the new government. Seven weeks after, i. e., May 3, 1654, he was married at Boston to Elizabeth (Hawkins) Winthrop, widow of Adam W., and dau. of the distinguished navigator, Capt. Hawkins. She d. without issue, and he m. 2d, on the 1st of Sept. 1692, Ann Winthrop, dau. of Gov. John W. of Conn. Aug. 5, 1654, he sold to Tho. Lake, merch. of Boston, one half of the abovenamed island, with half the house, barn and orchard thereon. In the deed which he executed at Boston he then styled himself of Kennebeck River, planter, although he had no doubt taken up his permanent abode in Boston, and soon after appears as one of her most active citizens, merchants and ship-builders.

Jan. 4, 1656, he acted with Tho. Lake and others as an administrator of Major Gen. Edward Gibbins, formerly of Boston, who had died in England. May 28, 1659, Mr. John Richards, Tho. Lake and nine others received in answer to their petition to the General Court, a grant of "10^{ms}. square [now Pittsfield] for a plantation 40 or 50 m^s. from Springfield to the Westward—about two thirds of the way to fort Awrania [Albany], so as they begin in 18^{mos}.; and Oct. 18 ensuing, the G. C. ordered that a claim [be made] to our just rights upon Hudson R., and that a letter [be sent] from the Court to the Dutch Governor, desiring free liberty by their forts to or from such town as shall be erected there within our jurisdiction, and that Maj. Hawthorne and Mr. John Richards be messengers for this end from this Court and also from the Company."

Feb. 7, 1663–4, he was received a member of the 2d church, Rev. Increase Mather, Pastor, and his wife was received to the same church, 1670. He is presumed to have been previously a member of some church, and certainly a man of great excellence of character; for, as early as May 26, 1652, he then "of Boston," was, with Dudley, Stoughton, Hinkley, &c., appointed a commissioner for applying funds for the conversion of Indians. This office he held at least 34 years, for Randolph in 1686, in a letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury maligning the other commissioners, speaks of him as having "been a servant and incapable of doing any business."

April 29, 1668, he was appointed, with Mr. Anthony Stoddard, Capt. Daniel Gookin, and the Treasurer of Massachusetts, to rent "ye impost of wine and other goods." In 1667 he was Lieut. of the Artillery Co. May 31, 1671, he was appointed Ensign in another company, and May 12, 1675, Captain of a new company to be raised, and Oct. 10, 1683, Serj. Major of the Boston regiment, which, as the title was then used, meant commander-in-chief. Oct. 8, 1672, he was chosen treasurer of Harvard College, which office he held until 1685. For a series of years he was a member of the General Court, commonly representing Boston; but, as a residence in the town represented was not then a qualification, he was elected in 1672 and '73 to represent Newbury, and in '75 and '76 Hadley. Feb. 4, '79–80, he was chosen Speaker, and in May following, Assistant, and also in '81, '82, '83, '85 and '86.

In 1678, he was elected by the Gen. Court, with Anthony Checkley, a trustee to receive contributions to ransom captives taken at Hadley and carried to Canada; and soon after, when half Boston was in ashes, he was chosen the first of a "committee of safety for the prevention of fires."

The first charter being threatened, "Mr. Richards, a wealthy merchant and one of the Assistants," was elected by the Gen. Court, with Gov. Joseph Dudley, to the momentous office of Commissioner to the royal Court; and among the able and intensely interesting instructions given them, they were directed to inform his Majesty that "we took up stamping silver merely upon necessitie, to prevent cheats by false pieces of eight." The result only delayed the fatal revocation.

From 1668 to 1686 he was placed on about seventy committees of the General Court, associated with Bradstreet, Danforth, Stoughton and Leverett in the use of public measures that mightily affected the interests and destiny of the Colonies. He seems to have been in no respect their inferior in the public confidence or esteem. He was their equal in activity, integrity, and the multitude and value of his public services; and he needed but the one office more which they reached to have placed his portrait in the senate chamber, and secured him an equal offering of grateful remembrance.

But, as it was, he held one office too many,—one for which the common and greatest error of his age disqualified him. He accepted the appointment of one of the commissioners [judges] for the trial of persons accused of witchcraft, and remained in office, consenting to the horrible tragedy that ensued. I would that he had joined with Sewall in his confession, and gone with him a mourner to the grave. But there is no evidence that he saw his sin in season to do so, nor is there that he joined with Stoughton in his unchristian derision of their associate's repentance.

After the destruction of the first Charter of Massachusetts, Sir Edmund Andros was appointed governor, with unlimited power to make what laws he pleased. "Under his reign the burden of taxation became intolerable; marriage could be solemnized only by clergymen of the Church of England, and there was none in the Colony out of Boston. Public fasts and thanksgivings were prohibited; the people could not lawfully assemble in meetings, nor any leave the province without a passport from him. He declared existing land-titles invalid, requiring new grants from him to perfect them, and this at the charge of an exorbitant fee. He treated those around him with the greatest insolence; remarking before the Council, that if the colonists supposed the privileges of Englishmen followed them to the ends of the earth they would find themselves mistaken, and that the only difference between them and slaves was that they were not bought and sold."

In this grievous condition of the country all minds were turned upon Increase Mather, the friend and pastor of Major Richards, as the man of all others to appeal in behalf of the Colony, at the foot of the throne, for clemency and protection. To him proposals were made. But who would pay the expense of the mission? How could the consent of his loving, adoring flock be obtained? He referred it wholly to them. "If they said stay, he would not stir." "Major Richards," the principal man of his church, and — Way, at the meeting which was to decide the question, expressed their free consent. The rest were all silent, and so did unanimously consent..—[Mather's Journal. Here was disinterested patriotism; here a liberal hand, a courageous heart. His voice decided the momentous question of Mather's mission; which, in the view of historians, was to determine whether the colonists should be reassured of their rights and privileges, or be subdued by the bayonet, robbed of their holy things, and subjected to military, civil, and ecclesiastical despotism. And while Mather was being fitted out at private expense, and no doubt by the liberal aid of Richards, Andros and his minions resorted to the basest stratagems to hinder his embarkation. These were defeated; and he smuggled on board a ship bound to England, after she had cleared and left the harbor. This was no doubt accomplished through the knowledge and approval, if not by the suggestion and aid of Major Richards, the neighbor and principal parishioner of Mr. Mather. While he was on his mission, James II. was driven from the throne, and William and Mary proclaimed. Hearing the good news, the principal men of the Province, in the form of a petition, summoned Andros to abdicate, and surrender the fort; adding, that if not done it would be taken by storm. Among the subscribers was Sergeant Major Richards, commander-in-chief of the Boston Regiment. Andros saw with whom he had to deal and what to expect, and immediately complied. Richards was for the civil personal treatment of Andros, but without power to restrain the mob the next day from seizing, binding, and imprisoning him: and, as if some jealousy had arisen, the old magistrates, as soon as reinstated in authority, ordered a sergeant to bring Major Richards before them. But for whatever reason his presence was demanded, no censure was inflicted. He was spared to welcome the joyful return of Mather, and to see his country fenced with a new charter until she should ripen for independence. Under this charter he was appointed a councillor, and also a commissioner or member of the Supreme Court, and probably died in office in 1694, aged not less than 78 years.

COPY OF HIS WILL.

In the name of God amen.

Apl. 1, A. D. 1694.

I, John Richards of Boston in the County of Suffolke in his Maj^{ties} Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New Eng^d, merchant, thro divine grace in good and perfect health and memory, yet knowing the uncertainty of this life on earth, and being desirous to settle that portion of temporal estate which God of his bounty hath made him a steward of, Do make, ordain and declare this my last will and testament in manner and form following; First and above all things I commend and commit my soul to Almighty God my Creator, most assuredly believing that when this Earthly Tabernacle shall be dissolved my soul shall be brought to that habitation which is eternal in the Heavens, thro the precious death and merits of the Lord Jesus Christ, my blessed Saviour and Redeemer. My body I commit to the earth from whence it was taken to be buried in such decent manner as my Executors hereafter named shall be thought meet and convenient, hoping for and dying in expectation of that joyful resurrection of the Great Day when soul and body shall be reunited and be forever with the Lord. And as for settling my temporal Estate and such Goods and Chattels and Debts which it hath pleased God far above my desert to bestow upon me, I do order give and dispose the same in manner and forme as hereafter is expressed.

And first I do renounce, revoke, frustrate and make void all Testament or Testaments, Will or Wills by me formerly made by word or writing and appoint this my last Will and Testament and no other. Item I will that those just debts which I do or shall owe to any person or persons whosoever at the time of my decease be well and truly contented, satisfied and paid within convenient time after my decease by my Executors hereafter named. And Whereas I did on contract of marriage with M^{es} Ann Winthrop now my wife give as a dower my bond to her brother, Maj. Gen. Wait Winthrop of £2,000 conditioned, that in case of my decease before her, she should have and enjoy to her own proper use forever £1,000 in money of New Eng^d out of my estate besides what would accrue to her by law out of my Real Estate as per my said Bond, Dated June 1692 more fully appears, I do will and order the said £1,000 to be paid to her in the first place or to her orders in convenient time after my decease.

Item I give and bequeath unto my said wife all that her estate that I had might or should have had with her not to be inventoried or inquired into by my Executors hereafter named.

Item, I give unto my said wife £100 in money more than is above expressed.

Item I give and bequeath unto my said wife £100 worth of my plate to be weighed to her at 6^s 8^d per oz.

Item I give and bequeath unto my said wife all my Household stuff, apparel, arms, Books, except what is bequeathed to others hereafter in this my Will, and in lieu of her thirds of my real estate, I give unto my said wife the use of my Mansion house wherein I now live with the Land, Garden, Yards together with the Warehouse Wharffe, Ship-carpenters yard, and pasture thereunto adjoining, with outhouses, Fences, priviledges and appurtenances thereunto belonging during the time of her widowhood and no longer, she maintaining the Houses and fences in good repair. But if she see not cause to accept this proposition, she is to take her Thirds of my Real Estate according to Law and deliver the premises to whom it is bequeathed hereafter in this my Will.

Item I will and bequeath unto my wife's two Brothers and three Sisters £100 in money, that is to say To Maj Gen. John Winthrop £20. To Maj Gen. Wait Winthrop £20. To M^{es} Elizabeth Endicott £20. To M^{es} Margaret Corwin £20 and To M^{es} Martha Wharton £20 Item I will and bequeath unto my Wifes kinswoman M^{es} Elizabeth Corwin who now lives with us Three score pounds in money and £10 worth of my plate to be weighed at 6^s 8^d per oz. Item I will and bequeath to my sister M^{es} Sarah Alline, wife to the Rev^d Mr James Alline of Boston £100 in money. That is to say For herself £40 being part thereof and £60, the remaining part for her children or Grand children to be distributed by her in proportion as she shall see good.

Mr Cotton Mather £20 in money, To the Rev Mr Samuel Willard of the third Church in Boston £10, To the Rev Mr Joshua Moody £10 and to Mr. Bayley, a preacher in Boston £10 in money.

Item I will and bequeath to the Witnesses of this my Will that shall appear at the Probate 20^s a piece to bye each of them a Ring. The Remainder of my estate I give and bequeath to the persons and in the proportions following viz. To my beloved wife one eighth part thereof, To my Cousin [hus. of his niece] Capt Benj Davis's children one eighth part to be equally divided amongst them by their father to whom it is to be paid, One eighth part to my cousin, Lt Benj. Alford for his children to be equally divided amongst them. One eighth part to my cousin, Mr Gurdon Saltonstall for his children equally to be divided. One eighth part to my cousin Mr John Davie for his children equally divided. One eighth part to my cousin Lt Tho Hunt of Boston. One eighth part to Maj Ephaim Hunt of Weymouth and one eighth part to Mr John Hunt of Weymouth afore mentioned. And whereas money is mentioned in all the foregoing Bequests, it is because my estate lies principally in money or obligations for money; That my Executors hereafter named may if they shall see cause, pay all such Legacies or any part of them by assigning of the Bonds, or Obligations to the several Legataries respectively which shall answer as if paid in money, anything afore^d notwithstanding to be done within six months after my decease. And in case my estate by God's Providence fall short of what is disposed and bequeathed in this my Will, my Will is that every Legatary be abated proportionably. And I do hereby appoint and ordain my beloved Wife Ann, my Brother, John Foster Esq. and my cousin Lt Benj Alford joint Executors of this my last Will and Testament, and do hereby will and bequeath unto them £150, that is £50 apiece. In Witness whereof I have hereunto put my hand and seal the day and year first above written. Signed, sealed, pronounced and Delivered by John Richards, "as his last Will and Testament in presence of us."

The above "will was found in his own hand writing," lying "upon his writing Desk in his Closet, immediately upon his decease," neither signed nor witnessed; yet it was set up as his will, "approved and allowed so far as it concerned the distribution of his personal estate"; and the persons named as his executors were appointed to administer.

Dame Ann, his widow, appealed from the decree of the Judge of Probate to the Governor and Council, who, May 31, 1694, ratified and affirmed the previous decree; and the whole estate seems to have been distributed according to the above will.

Dame Ann Richards, his widow, daughter of Governor John Winthrop, of New London, June 20, 1704, made her will, giving her estate to her "brs." Gov. Fitz John Winthrop, of New London, Maj. Wait Winthrop, of Boston; sister Elizabeth Endicott, widow of Gov. Endicott, plate and £70; to Margaret Corwin, of Boston, £210; to Martha Wharton, widow, of Boston, £180; to Elizabeth Corwin, daughter of sister Corwin, £300 in money, and all the remainder of her estate, and made her sole executrix.

3. 10. Thomas Richards,² Esq., probably the second son of Thomas, senior, is presumed to have remained in Dorchester with his brother John, as successors to their father in trade, where, as a member of some church, he was in 1645 admitted to the freeman's oath. Before 1648 he had removed to Boston, where he was styled Esq., and that year admitted a member of the Artillery Co. He is supposed to have died s. p. before the date of his father's will, in which he is not mentioned.

7. 35. James,² is supposed to have been in England in 1650, whither he had probably been sent for education. In 1652, May 26, he was of Boston, where he then, aged 21 years, took the freeman's oath. This proves him born as early as 1631, and at least 49 years old at death, instead of "47." Between 1652 and '62 he is presumed to have been much or all the time in England. In 1662, or early in '63, he settled in Hartford, where, before taking the oath of fidelity, he was in 1663 chosen townsman for the south side of Little River, and otherwise immediately treated as a gentleman of rank in whose virtues and ability the public reposed entire confidence. Henceforward for 17 years his commercial transactions and public services fill a large space in the records and history of Connecticut. He settled on the south side of Little River, on a lot that had been Mr. Edward Hopkins's, and received from the town a grant of the land on the north side of the same, connecting it with the river. Oct. 1664 he was admitted to the freeman's oath, and, at the same General Court, chosen an assistant for the colony, took his oath and was desired to accompany Gov. Winthrop and several others to New York to congratulate his Majesty's Hon. Commissioners, Sir Robert Carr, Col. Geo. Cartwright, and Samuel Maverick, "who were to be there to adjust certain rights as to the Duke's Patent and Connecticut bounds."

In 1665 he was styled Lt., and was of the House of Magistrates. In 1672 he was chosen on the part of Connecticut, with Gov. John Winthrop, a commissioner of the United Colonies who met at Plymouth, and again in 1775, for the purpose of rendering the union of the New England Colonies permanent. In calling, he was a merchant and traded extensively in real estate. In a journal kept by Rev. Simon Bradstreet of New London the following notice is entered: "Mr. James Richards, one of ye magistrates of this Colony, died June 9, 1680, aged about 50, or something less. He was a man of good parts and a good justice, and will be much missed, especially at this time." On his monument in the old graveyard on Main street, Hartford, a different and erroneous age is given him, and he is said to have "died on the 19 of July, an assistant of Connecticut, in the firm hope of the glorious resurrection." "His grave is near those of Rev. Thomas Hooker and other worthies."

The following notice is from Royal R. Hinman, Esq., by whose indefatigable labors so much of the history of the first planters of Connecticut has been saved:—

Richards, Hon. James, died at his house in Hartford, on the 29th day of June, 1680. He married Sarah, the daughter of William Gibbons, Esq., of Hartford. He owned land in England at his decease, and was liberal to his wife in his will. She had received of her father Gibbons a handsome estate in lands before, some of which were located in England, and the rents of which her mother in some measure relied upon for support. Mr. Richards supposed it would prove inconvenient for his mother-in-law to obtain her distant rents; he therefore made an exchange with her, and took her lands in England and gave her £30, annually, for life, and £200 to dispose of as she pleased for her lands there. To his son, Thomas, he gave all his lands and buildings in England, and informed him he could call upon Ralph Ingram, a woolen draper in London, for his deeds; he also gave Thomas most of his lands in Hartford. To his daughter, Mary, he gave his farm at Habuck, east of the river in Wethersfield, to be received when married, or 18 years of age, with the buildings, and £300. To Jerusha, all his lands and buildings west of the river in Wethersfield, and £300. To Elizabeth, all his lands and buildings in and about New London, and £450. He gave to his child not then born, £700. To Thomas Bradford, (his nephew) he gave 10 acres of land and £60, if he should build upon the land.* To his brother, John Richards, of Boston, he gave his largest silver tankard and his watch. To the church south of Little River, in Hartford, where he had attended meeting, he gave £10 in silver plate for administering the sacrament. To the Latin school in Hartford, £50. To his pastor, Rev. John Whiting, £15. To the poor of Hartford, £20. To Mercy Bradford, his kinswoman, he gave £10; and provided, like a true Puritan, that whoever thereafter should hold his lands in Hartford, should pay the ecclesiastical taxes upon them to support the south church in Hartford. His wife Sarah and son Thomas, executors. To his brother John of Boston, and Capt. John Allen of Hartford, he gave £10 each, and made them overseers of his will. His houses and lands in Boston, he ordered to be equally divided between all his children who were then minors. Estate £7930 : 15. The child unborn, mentioned in Hon. James's will, proved to be a daughter and was named Anne—she died before 1691, and the £700 given her in the will was equally distributed to the other children in Oct. 1691. The £200 given to Ursula Gibbons by Hon. James towards her lands in England, were also divided between the children of Hon. James. Sarah, the relict of Hon. James, in 1691 signed the distribution of the personal estate of Hon. James, as Sarah Davie, with her husband John Davie, together with the children of James. In 1709 "Dame Sarah," relict of Hon. James, was the wife of Jonathan Tyng, Esq., Gent., of Dunstable, in Mass. She gave up to her son, Thomas, her right as executor of his father's will, and quit to him her dower estate in Hartford, signed by herself and Tyng her husband. Deed dated Boston, March 30, 1709.

The following record of the births and deaths of James's children is from his family bible, now in the Genealogical Library, Boston:—

39. 51. Thomas,³ Capt., after the decease of his uncle, Hon. John Richards of Boston, in 1694 succeeded to the inheritance of the estate bequeathed in his will, and removed to Boston.

He m. Joanna Dodd, sister to Mr. Edward D. of Hartford, by whom he had only daughters, in whom expired the name of Richards among the descendants of Mr. Thomas R. the Puritan, the natural penalty of wealth and luxury. See their effect on Paul Richards's race and most others who attain them.

Nov. 23, 1714, Thomas made his will, which was witnessed by Samuel Greenwood, Jr., Samuel Tyler Jr., and Samuel Clark, and proved Dec. 16, 1714. In this he gave his wife Joanna, £500 of bills of credit on the Province, one third of his personal estate forever, and during her life one third of the annual income of all his real estate, naming a ship-yard and the house he lived in. To his niece, the wife of Rev. Sampson Stoddard of Chelmsford, he gave £50; to Daniel Alford, son of his nephew Benjamin Alford, merchant of Boston, £50; to his brother-in-law, Edward Dodd of Hartford, £10; to Rev. Increase and Cotton Mather of Boston, £10 apiece; to Rev. Thomas Buckingham of Hartford, £5; to Harvard College, £30; to John Arcos, formerly his servant, £10; to the poor of Boston, £20; to his sister Mary Alford, £10, and to her daughter Sarah, £5. All the residue of his estate in Great Britain, Boston, Hartford, or other parts of New England, he bequeathed to his daughters Joanna and Mary Richards, making them heirs of each other, and directing that if they died s. p. it should be enjoyed by his wife during her life time, and ultimately go, one-third part of it to her heirs, and two-thirds to the children of his sisters Sarah and Mary, viz., one-third to Benjamin Alford, Jr., and the other one-third in equal parts to Wm. Davis, Sarah Bill and Elizabeth Stoddard, and they to pay £50 to Edward Dodd his brother-in-law, £20 to Joanna Alford his niece, and £50 to the children of his niece, Mary Vryling, and £20 to each of the three children of his sister Jerusha Saltonstall. He made his wife, Joanna, sole executrix, and Paul Dudley, Esq., and Samuel Greenwood, trustees to assist her, and gave each of them £5. She sold part of his estate at Hartford to Jonathan and Isaac Sheldon of Northampton, for £1108, and March, 1720, presented an inventory of his estate, amounting to £3950, charging herself £598 sterling, for rents received from England. Her account was approved July 3, 1721.

About 1715-18 she m. 2d, Dr. John Cutler of Boston, who, Oct. 9, 1718, with her was made guardian of her daughters. He d. about 1724, but no mention is made of her in his will, or in the settlement of his estate, nor anywhere else, of either her or her children, after 1721. They either d. without issue, or she, having married unhappily, separated from her second husband and removed to England.

Capt. Thomas Richards,³ by wife Joanna Dodd, had,

62. I. Joanna,⁴ b. July 21, 1702, at Hartford, m. Aug. 23, 1720, William Brooker of Boston; m. by Samuel Miles, Episcopal minister.

63. II. Mary,⁴ Oct. 14, 1703, at Hartford.

8. 64. Benjamin,² settled in Boston, and was probably engaged in trade and ship building with his brother John. He died intestate s. p. about 1666. He m. Oct. 10, 1661, Hannah Hudson, dau. of William H., who, March 26, 1667, had m. 2d, Richard Crisp of Boston, who was then appointed co-administrator with her on her former husband's estate. In an inventory of his household furniture, appraised at £80, were enumerated, carpets, curtains, 30 diaper napkins, 6 Turkey work chayers, 6 joint stools in the parlor, 6 wrought stools in the chamber, 3 looking glasses, &c.

CHAPT. II.

THOMAS RICHARDS.

Of this Puritan almost nothing can be gathered from records but his name. His mission seems to have been to snatch his family from oppression and set them down where the holiest influences would conspire to mould them, and their descendants, for usefulness in time and blessedness in eternity; and happy has it been for them and the world that he performed it. That he was of the same stock as other cotemporary immigrants of the name is not susceptible of proof from our records; but circumstances, often as conclusive as documentary evidence, indicate that he was, and the nephew of Thomas Richards, senior, and the cousin or brother of Nathaniel, of Hartford, of William and John, of Plymouth, and of Edward, of Dedham. Of the exact time of his birth, arrival, and death, there is uncertainty. From the ages of his children, and the "advanced age" of his widow, in 1671, he is supposed to have been born about 1600-5. His name does not occur on any record of Massachusetts or Plymouth. This, considering the state of the records, makes it certain that he did not first settle at Cambridge, but might have tarried some years at Weymouth, and have afterwards joined Mr. Hooker, some of whose flock first settled at Weymouth, and subsequently at Cambridge.* In favor of this, there existed a tradition, which one of his descendants, born a century ago, deemed worthy of record: and if we could prove him one of the band who came out with Mr. Newman in 1635, it would be a high recommendation, and bring him from that part of the kingdom from whence came Thomas, senior. But the excellence of his character is endorsed by the sentiments he embraced, the society he loved, the sacrifices for truth and conscience he made, and the fraternization he received; while the enterprise, energy, and piety of his sons assure us of a father of stamina and worth.

He was not of the 100 original purchasers of Hartford, but one of the 62 original settlers to whom "were granted lots to have onely at the town's courtesie with liberty to fetch woode and keep swine or coves on the Common." The vote, conferring this privilege, passed February 10, 1639, probably 1639-40, when his wife was a widow. It was, no doubt, intended as a legal security to his heirs of what had been possessed by consent in his life time; nor was it then an uncommon use of a representative name. Thomas Richards might have gone to Hartford with Mr. Hooker in 1636, subsisting by the way on the milk of the herd they drove; but I find so many modern untruths within the lids of the bible, that a good deacon's record to this effect does not prove it. He was not at Hartford to build his own house, nor until another had had time to build one to sell; and his name is the very last of the 62 who received lots at the "towns courtesie." He did not, probably, arrive before 1637, and as he seems to have made no improvements, and as no use of his name on any record implies that he was alive even in 1638, he, no doubt, died soon after his arrival, and not improbably with those who fell in 1637, in the Pequod war. But if it were not so, he did not live to become a proprietor of Hartford. He died as early as 1638 or '39, before the assignment of house-lots to the planters. For in February, 1639, probably 1639-40, "to Widow Richards the late wife of Thomas Richards, were assigned 4 acres and 1

Rood abutting on a pathway leading from her house to Little River on the East, on diverse small lots on the West, on John Surles on the North, and on Robert Bartletts on the South." It was situated about a stone's cast southwest of the College grounds. This has been reckoned as the home lot of Thomas Richards, and it was, no doubt, such by agreement, as in similar cases, in the settlement of other towns before the lots could be definitely surveyed and legally assigned. 13 acres and 2 roods on the east side of North Hill, and 2 acres and 2 roods on the east side of the Great River were subsequently allotted to her; and to make her title perfect to a lot of "3 acres and 2 roods with a tenement thereon with other out houses yards or gardens which she had bought of Thomas Bull abutting on the highway leading to the South Meadow on the north"; it was formally assigned to her. This tenement is presumed to have been "her house" referred to in the assignment of her first lot, which was designed to enlarge the one she had purchased. Her agency in the purchase may indicate the early death of her husband. The first and last lots united made 7 acres 3 roods, and were, March 16, 1640, called Thos. Richards's lot of 8 acres, although he was not then alive. She died about 1671, at an advanced age, leaving effects inventoried at £24, which were then divided, by mutual agreement, between her four surviving children. Her estate seems to have been previously settled, and the homestead, upon John.² Thos. Richards left,

3. 7. John,² m. Lydia Stocking, who covenanted Feb. 23, 1695–6, and was living July 12, 1712. What relation he sustained to the church in H. cannot be ascertained, owing to the loss of records of previous date. He seems to have settled on the homestead in Hartford, where he served as collector of a tax of £10, "appointed" by the town, 1655, for Mr. [Rev.] Davis; March 12, 1695–6, he gave his sons Thomas and Samuel 1½ acres each, whereon their houses then stood, on the west side of the road to Farmington. In 1705 he gave them 30 acres in common, bounded west by Farmington line; and in 1712 he gave Samuel a lot adjoining this, on the West; and Thomas a lot, bounded west by Rocky Hill, and north by Thomas's own land; reserving, during his life and that of their mother, the improvement of these lots. He mentions no other child in the settlement of his estate; his other son having, probably, been adopted by his brother, Deacon Thomas, of Newark, and in no want of a patrimony in Hartford. He had,
23. 8. i. John,³ m. ab't 1686, inherited the estate of his uncle Thos. of Newark.
27. 9. ii. Thomas,³ Deacon, b. 1666, d. April 9, 1749, at Hartford; m. 1691, Mary Parsons.
36. 10. iii. Samuel³, d. at Hartford, 1732–3; m. 1697, Hannah Henbury.

4. 10. Thomas,² Deacon, appears to have been one of a company from Connecticut, who having, no doubt, previously obtained an English grant, purchased, July 11, 1667, of the Indians, a tract on Passaic River, in N. J., including the present site of Newark, and extending west to the foot of the mountain. March 13, 1668, Thomas Richards, with three others, chosen for the purpose by the planters, obtained another deed, extending their purchase to the top of the mountain. Feb. 1668, he, with 65 other persons, were organized into a Church, now the First Presbyterian Church, of Newark. In 1676-7 and 1692-3 he was elected a Deputy to the General Assembly of N. Y., which then included N. J. Dec. 30, 1701, he, as a protestant subject, signed a complaint and petition to King William, and in 1702, an address to Lord Cornbury, Governor of N. Y. Aug. 26, 1706, he was chosen by the town to present their message to Mr. Whittlese, and treat with him relative to his settlement with them as their minister: and he is presumed to have long served the church as a deacon. He was twice married, but had no children. About 1699 he received into his house John Richards and wife, the son of his brother Obadiah, probably with the intention of making him one of his heirs. But this John, after the birth of his son Thomas, returned to the care of his infirm and afflicted father, at Waterbury. In the mean time, if not years before, another nephew of the same name, the son of his brother John, of Hartford, he evidently adopted, and made his legatee. Deacon Thomas made his will Oct. 2, "17 of" [pr. 1708] which was witnessed by Rev. John Prudden, James Nutman and Robert Young, and proved April 20, 1715. In this he bequeathed to his "wife Hannah that now is" £5, to be paid her annually; £5 to Rachel, the widow of his brother Obadiah; £5 to John Richards, the son of Obadiah, and £5 to each of his three children, John, Thomas, ["born in mine house"] and Mary. To his loving cousin [nephew] John Richards, son of his brother John, he gave his homestead, and all his lands in Newark, and made him sole executor. Deacon Richards died probably at Newark, and is interred in the profaned cemetery of that religious city. His will was proved April 20, 1715.

5. 11. Samuel,² with his brother Thomas, May 28, 1655, gave testimony in a court in Hartford; was admitted to the freeman's oath 1658. He afterwards established himself in New Haven, as a cordwainer, where he died, about 1662, attended, probably, by his brother Thomas, who gave away portions of his clothing. A nuncupative will was afterwards proved; and his estate, inventoried March 28, 1662, went to a stranger of his own craft at New Haven, who had probably taken care of him in his sickness.

6. 12. Obadiah,² was presented, May 1669, to the court for a freeman, became one of the proprietors of Farmington, 1672, where, in 1673, he drew 365 acres in the first tier of lots, and afterwards settled. In 1674 he signed an agreement for the settlement of Mattatuck, and was one of the original proprietors of the town afterwards called Waterbury. Here he had a house lot on the old town plot, but through non-compliance with the articles of agreement, adopted by the proprietors, his allotment became forfeited 1682-3, but was afterwards restored, and in 1685 more land was assigned him. March 2, 1691, he sold John Smith 12 acres in Farm., near Wethersfield. "It is safe to say," says Henry Bronson, M. D., in his able history of Waterbury, to which I am much indebted, "he was an excellent man, one of the rank and file of the young town, and a member with his wife of Mr. Hooker's Church, in Farmington." He died Nov. 11, 1702, and his widow died May, 1725. The inventory of his estate was only £138; he having the year previous to his death disposed of his lands, viz.: 15 acres north-west of Wooster swamp, in Waterbury, in equal parts to John and Obadiah, and his interest in the buildings which they had begun thereon; and to his sons Thomas and Benjamin, his three-acre lot, north of the town; and to his son John, an allotment at Bucksmeadow, in acknowledgement of him as his eldest son. John was to be afterwards, in other distributions, equal with the rest of his children. He and Obadiah were not to come into full possession during the lifetime of their father, and if their step-mother survived him, they were to render her a portion of the produce of the land. John was appointed his administrator, March 2, 1702-3, and April 12, 1704, reported the division of his estate. His widow had the improvement of one third of both his real and personal estate, John a double share of the remainder, and his brothers and sisters had single shares. As he was a proprietor of the extensive towns of Farmington and Waterbury, his heirs must have drawn much land in his rights. He married, 1st, Hannah ———, and 2d, Esther ———, and had most or all of his children by the former.

9. 27. Thomas,³ Deacon, settled on the old homestead, in Hartford, was styled Mr., 1701, and in 1693-4 was, by a vote of the town, allowed to set a shop, which he was building, 3 feet in the highway. In 1701 he was chosen lister and ratemaker, and chimney viewer, for the south side of Little River, and in 1713, grand juryman. May 25, 1703, he bought 1½ acres of Jos. Carter, in South Meadow; united with Samuel in exchanging the land given to them in common by their father; and, in 1716-17, sold Samuel 13 acres near Farmington. He m. Oct. 1, 1691, Mary Parsons, daughter of Deacon Benj. Parsons, of Springfield, and Nov. 10, 1695-6, was with her received to full communion in the church, at Hartford. He d. at Hartford, and was interred near the renowned ancients, in the old cemetery, where his monument, of new red sandstone, says, "Here lies Interr'd ye Body of Deaⁿ Thomas Richards who departed this Life April ye 9th 1649 in ye 83rd year of his age." But his inventory, or last inventory, was not taken before Sept. 3, 1750. No will or administrator is named. His widow, Mary, "very aged and weak," made her will, July 2, 1756, which was proved Dec. 25, 1758, Jedediah being executor. In this, she names no other legatees except Jedediah, dau. Abigail Turner, and daughter-in-law Abigail Richards, probably the widow of her son Benjamin. They had,

10. 36. Samuel,³ subscribed the church covenant, at Hartford, Feb. 23, 1695–6, settled in the west part of the town, and was chosen grand-juryman, Dec. 17, 1724. He m. June 14, 1697, Hannah Henbury, dau. of Arthur Henbury, by wife Lydia Hill, of Hartford and Simbs. He d. in Hartford, and his sons James and Daniel, Feb. 6, 1732–3, were appointed his administrators, and their uncle, Dea. Thomas, was bound for them in the sum of £300. His estate, in which are enumerated trowels, turning tools, 8 cattle, 3 horses, house, barn, and 23 acres adjoining, "for his right in the Western land" in Hartford, was appraised at £483. He had bought of Thomas Hancock, of Farmington, Dec. 18, 1719, and March 1, 1719–20, 90 acres for £30, bounded east by the west line of Hartford, of which there is no mention in his inventory.

- All who knew the man will join
 Their friendly sighs and tears to mine;
 For all who knew his merits must confess
 In grief for him there can be no excess.
 His soul was formed to act each glorious part
 Of life unstained with vanity or art.
 No thought within his generous mind had birth
 But what he might have owned in heaven and earth.

D., at the age of one year, removed from Hartford, with his parents, to that part of Farmington which is now Southington, where he was brought up on a farm with only the most scanty opportunities for education. At the age of 18 years he joined the expedition to Cape Breton, where, as a servant to a physician in the hospital established for New England troops, he had free access to medical books and witnessed many operations and modes of treating disease. After his return he continued his medical studies and observations, made some prescriptions, and eventually devoted himself to practice and rose to eminence in the profession, especially in the treatment of certain classes of disease. In 1747-8, he was largely engaged in the transfer of real estate, selling many lots in the south division of Farmington, i. e. Southington, and purchasing two lots near Wethersfield. Dec. 1747 he m. Lydia Buck, whose parents were from Scotland, and who both died of the small pox at Newington a parish of Wethersfield. Here Dr. R. first settled and remained five years. In 1752 he removed to Canaan, where he continued three years; returned to Newington, lived about half a mile northwest of the church, until 1778. During this time he was repeatedly chosen grand jurymen by the citizens of Wethersfield. He next removed to New Hartford, where he remained about three years, when he returned and settled at Plainville, Farmington, about half of a mile south of the bridge over the Pequabuck, near the old schoolhouse, where he d. At Plainville is his monument with this inscription:—

IN MEMORY OF
SAMUEL RICHARDS
PHYSICIAN,
WHO DIED NOV. 10, A. D. 1793,
AGED 66 YEARS.

His wid. survived him 13 years and was interred near him. In her Dr. R. and his children were most happy. She had an active and heroic mind and vigorous constitution, was a superior woman for her age, and would have been such in our own, qualified by nature and grace to conform to her circumstances and fill her place. Fresh from Europe and from Scotland too, she imparted to her children what I have often noticed in similar cases, a physical superiority, evinced by their tenacity of life, if not by their ordinary health and power of endurance. While in their minority, Dr. R., whose practice extended over a wide field was nearly always absent, so that the entire care and training of 8 sons devolved upon her. And the system, energy, and religious fidelity with which she performed the task, were no doubt the secret of their respectability and success in after life, and, under God, of the eminent piety of several, if not of the honorable standing of her race to this day. Long may her memory be cherished. She was born in Scotland, April, 1725, brought up in Hartford (?) or Wethersfield, m. Dec., 1747, and died March 25, 1807, at Bristol. Dr. R. had by her,

75. 175. John,⁵ m. —, 2d, Elizabeth Dickenson, and 3d, Hannah Bear, Jan. 31, 1802, who d. Oct. 1821, in her 90th year. In early life "he resided in Wethersfield Ct." but about 1775 he removed to Piermont, N. H., where he buried his 2d wife, about 1800. Two years after, he, aged 72, but "as spry as a lad of 16," became a Cœlebs. He heard of Miss

Bear, at Hopk., as being not like every other old maid, one of the best creatures that ever was, but a good woman of his own century, taste and sentiments; and having knowledge of the height and width of his doors, the capacity of his rooms, the strength of his sleepers, chairs, &c., he spread his sails. She had in her youth been engaged to a widower, with a family of young children, who d. very suddenly, after receiving her promise to enter his family as though they had been married, and bring up his children. This trust she had faithfully performed, and seen them all married; after which, "she being a young flirting girl" as she said, "had nothing to do but to get married" herself. So, as quick as the smart old Deacon hove in sight, she struck her colors, and the prize proved a live Bear, 6 feet in stature, and of 70 years' growth. The Deacon took her into port alive, where she lived 20 years longer, to bless him and all around her. Dea. John was by trade a blacksmith, and the proprietor of a splendid farm, near Connecticut River. He had,

81. 181. Jedediah,⁵ settled, when a young man, at Canaan, Ct., then regarded as so remote "that the good people of Hartford held a meeting on the day previous to his departure to bid him farewell, little expecting ever to see him again. His father accompanied him 5 miles on his way. He lived to return, and by his unexpected appearance, induced his mother to faint away, and his father to demand of him whether he was his son. He continued, for a time, at C., and removed to Norfolk. He became a soldier in the French war. He m. March 12, 1756, Damaris Mills, b. at Simsbury, Oct. 8, 1731, who joined the church, at N., Aug. 20, 1769; 2d, Mrs. — Price, of Tyringham, who d. about 1803. He had,

133. 266. "Mark,⁵ Hon., r. on the west side of Cook street, where Noah Bronson resides, in Waterbury, Ct. His mother was Huldah Hopkins, dau. of Timothy H., and sister of Samuel, Daniel, and Mark H., who possessed the strength of mind that belonged to her family, and attended personally to the proper training of her son. He was not 13 years old at the death of his father. When the Revolution broke out, he was too young to enter the army; but he caught the spirit of the times. When he became 16, an age which entitled him to shoulder a musket, he determined to join the army. That his design might not be defeated by the interference of friends, he left his bed in the night, passed out of the window, and repaired to the camp of Gen. Wooster, and enlisted. In the morning the family was, of course, much alarmed. At last, information was received where the truant boy could be found, and his eldest brother, Street, was sent to bring him back, without fail. On application to Gen. W., and after a statement had been made of the circumstances of the case, permission was obtained for the young recruit to return. He declined doing so, however, most peremptorily; and declared, that as he had made an engagement with his country, he would fulfil it, and see the game played out. As he was of a determined and persevering disposition, importunity was seen to be useless, and the disappointed brother returned reluctantly to his sorrowful friends. The soldier boy remained with the army through the war. Was with the suffering troops at Valley Forge, in the winter 1777-8, was present in many battles, and died a pensioner.

After the war he went to Boston, and became the partner of his brother Giles, a man of enterprise and mechanical skill, who carried on the business of making wool and cotton cards by hand. Amos Whittemore, the inventor of the card-making machine, was also a partner. In 1796, on account of his wife's health, Mr. R. removed to Westminster, Vt., where he became a tradesman. He was soon chosen to represent the town in the legislature of Vermont, and was 8 years a member of that body, between 1801 and 1834 inclusive. In 1806-9, he was high sheriff of Windsor County; in 1812 and 1824, one of the electors of President and Vice President of U. S.; in 1813 and 1815, a member of the State Council. He served 4 years as representative in Congress, being elected in 1816 and re-elected in 1818. In 1830 he was chosen Lt. Governor of Vermont. Mr. R. was distinguished for good sense and great industry, method in business and punctuality in all his engagements. Till the close of his life in 1844, he retained the high respect and the entire confidence of his friends and fellow citizens. Soon after he went to Boston, he m. Ann (Ruggles) Dor, widow of Jos. D. of B. and dau. of Jos. Ruggles of Roxbury, a woman of good family, by whom he had several children. Two only daughters survived him, viz.:

169. 310. Samuel,⁶ Dea., merits an extended notice in this compilation, and it is deeply regretted that no one of his acquaintance has supplied it, or furnished materials for the construction of his character. All that can be done in the emergency is to give a few items, and echo the public voice relative to his memory. Of his youthful history nothing is remembered, but he is presumed by some means to have obtained uncommon advantages for education. In the war of 1776–82, he served in the army as an ensign, was in several battles, and at West Point at the capture and execution of Andre. Before the close of the war he retired on half pay, and afterwards received a pension and was a member of the Cincinnati. He settled in Farmington, as a merchant, where he held the office of P. M. 31 years, and did business as a merchant until near the time of his death, at the age of 88 years. He often served in town offices, and repeatedly represented Farmington in the legislature of the State; and was highly respected for his discernment, sound judgment, probity, and responsibility. "He was a man of good sense, extensive information, and extraordinary culture for one in active business and ordinary advantages." But it was especially as a consistent and devoted member of the church, which he joined in 1795, watching and laboring for her peace and prosperity, that he won the affections and confidence of good men, and secured posthumous reverence. He served her as Deacon, 1808–27. He would seem to have been in life and manners an age or two nearer the Puritan standard than other equally devoted men of his own generation. He is remembered for his public spirit and benevolence. Among his other acts of beneficence was the gift of the choice and spacious lot for the new cemetery in Farmington. He m. 174. 343. Selah,⁶ Dea., removed, with his father's family, from Newington to New Hartford in 1779, and from thence to Plainville, Farmington, in 1782; became hopefully pious at the age of 17; and in 1785 was received into the church in Farmington, with which he walked 72 years. The following sketch of his character is from the venerable Noah Porter, D.
 D., 54 years pastor of that ancient and often favored church.

In 1783, a woman at the Great Plains, in Farmington, became mentally deranged, and the horrors of despair filled her imagination and dwelt upon her lips. A godly man of Bristol, Dea. Monross, came stately to pray with her. Curiosity drew the thoughtless youth of the neighborhood to the house to listen to what was said, and this was succeeded by a solemn concern for themselves. So He who employed a pythoness to introduce Paul and Silas to the notice of the Phillipians for their conversion, made use of this unhappy woman to awaken a company of thoughtless young men to the concerns of their salvation. A memorable revival of religion ensued. In this was laid the foundation of that excellence of character and fruitfulness of life in Dea. Richards, for which so many have cause of abounding thankfulness. In his early days Selah Richards had almost no advantages for education, except those of the family, and these at a time when their means of support were limited, and they subjected to frequent removals, and the exactions and other evils of an impoverishing war. The consequence was, according to his account, that he grew up ignorant, awkward, and bashful; shy of intelligent society, and backward to avail himself of any profitable social intercourse. But he was a chosen vessel. God had given him mental powers of no inferior order, and in his own time and way provided for their development and culture. By his conversion to Christ they were roused to the consideration of subjects adapted, above all others, to elevate, expand, refine, and ennoble them; and from that time he set himself in earnest to the acquisition of knowledge, and the work of self culture. He borrowed books, not merely for reading, but for study; and of his brother Samuel, Guthrie's Geography and Martin's Philosophy. These, in his recesses from labor, and long winter evenings, he in a measure mastered. He was also improved continually by his study of the Scriptures, and attendance upon the institutions of the Gospel. For almost 70 years he was, from a distance of 4 miles, a constant and earnest hearer of the word, which he made a subject of solemn reflection; and searched the Scriptures as his rule of faith. He also cultivated a free social intercourse with intelligent Christians on the great things of religion.

His habit of writing, as well as thoughtful reading and hearing, was a principal means of his improvement. This he seems to have early commenced, not only in recording his thoughts, but in epistolary correspondence. This exercise, perhaps, more than any other, gave precision, clearness, and permanency to his thoughts, soundness to his judgment, and readiness and pertinency to his language. Some valuable pieces, designed for his own use, he left behind; also a multitude of his letters to persons of all ages, characters, and conditions, for instruction, comfort, encouragement, and admonition. Some of his productions found a place in the journals of the day. I never knew another person in common life who wrote so much and so well. His correctness, considering his early opportunities, was most wonderful; and his force and breadth of thought, and his fitness, clearness, and compactness of style, were scarcely less so; and all these, quite up to his 90th year, when he was still able to command the pen. His conversation, like his letters, was serious and suggestive—often startling, and sometimes, to those unacquainted with him, offensively abrupt. He did not always seek out acceptable words. But the design, and often the effect, was to rouse reflection and fasten thought.

In prayer, also, how serious, how thoughtful, how simple, how pertinent and weighty his utterances were before God, those who were used to hear him remember. He spoke as he felt, in language that a child could understand, and yet always reverent. He had strong confidence in the efficacy of prayer, not merely as a useful exercise, but a condition of promise. He was accustomed to engage Christian friends to unite with him in asking particular blessings, and from prayer meetings, when few attended, he was not willingly absent.

In 1822 he was chosen Deacon, and he discharged the duties of the office until 1845, when, at his request, he was excused. He was superintendent of the "noon branch of the Sunday school," was loved and useful in that important sphere of Christian labor, from which, at a very advanced age, he with difficulty obtained a release; and never, while he could come to the house of God, did he cease to be an earnest and desired teacher. The Christian instruction and training of the young he had deeply at heart; and the more so, it was presumed, in consequence of the early death of his first, and at the time, only son, in circumstances of most painful interest. The father, though quietly submissive when the lad was no more, was afterwards oppressed with the conviction that he had not done all that he might and ought to have done for his salvation. From that time there was manifested in him that earnest desire for the spiritual instruction and care of the young, which more perhaps, than anything else, characterized his latter years. Nor was it in vain; for he had the joy of seeing all his other children, and very many others under his instruction, gathered into the fold of the great Shepherd.

Dea. Richards was very early an advocate of the temperance reformation; having, before it began, been induced to discontinue the use of spirituous liquors, which he had, for a few years only of his life, used in measured quantities, particularly in seasons of hard labor and exposure, and then under the conviction of danger.

The character of Dea. Richards was of the Puritan stamp. He was philanthropic, but he was more decidedly religious. Born in the spirit and rocked in the cradle of the American Independence, he was an open and strenuous advocate of human rights. Still religion rather than philanthropy gave the cast to his character, pervading his feelings, his conversation, and his every day life.

The tone of his religious feelings was rather severe. This resulted partly perhaps from constitutional temperament; but probably much more from early impressions. He grew up in stern and rugged times; and the religious doctrines and spiritual exercises of his youthful days partook of the terrible and awful, rather than of the gentle and winning influences of the gospel. He used in his latter days to speak of this and to lament it.

His spiritual habits were also self-reflective, and such as led him often to question his interest in the promises of the gospel. These indeed were all his foundation, and he rested on them with great peace; and yet, such was his sense of the awful realities of eternity, and of the sinfulness of his heart and life, that he was apt to be jealous of himself, lest he should not be found a partaker of what he saw was the sinner's only hope. In his latter years his hopes grew brighter and stronger, and yet even to the last there was a tendency in his mind to distrust and fear.

In the former part of his life there was also in his religious sentiments a tendency to asceticism; so much so, that he used to feel as if it was sinful to enjoy the bounties of Providence for the sake of the pleasure to be derived from them. He had indeed no such theory, but such were his practical impressions. I have no doubt that his natural taste as well as intellect was superior; and that with proper culture he would have been a man of refined sensibilities; and, in fact, he became much more so than most men in his sphere. Hence, in latter years, he exceedingly lamented his early disregard of the beautiful; urged the cultivation of the taste as an important part of Christian education; and insisted much on the duty of holding communion with God in the beauties of creation, and the ever varying beauties of Providence.

Dea. Richards having, from his youth, been a man of severe and constant toil, the consequence was, his limbs became stiffened, and for the last three years of his life he was unable to meet with the church, or, without help, to rise from his bed or chair. Yet this period was not composed of months of vanity, in respect either to enjoyment or usefulness. His senses and mental faculties were scarcely impaired; his power of reading, writing, and conversing, was remarkably sustained; his faith and patience were undisturbed; his hope brightened, his conversation with friends full of instruction, and redolent with christian affection; and his letters went abroad from his little sanctuary into the wide world, as he had a word in season for child or friend, or wanderer from the ways of God.

Nor were these years of seclusion and trial lost to himself. They afforded him the closing discipline for maturing his preparation for heaven. He turned his thoughts from the business and cares of life more steadily, than he had before done, to the glorious objects of faith; and the result was a more perfect peace than he had been accustomed to enjoy, a clearer light shining on the road, leading him to the Lamb.

Nothing was more apparent than the truth of a remark, made by one who had grown up in his neighborhood, that Dea. Richards improved as long as he lived. His last week was a painful one; his mind became wandering, his language incoherent; but the thoughts which had so long been familiar to him, were still uppermost in the last lingering moments of the departing spirit.

He died Feb. 19, 1857, in his 90th year. At the age of 25 he married Esther Cowles, with whom he lived in the tenderest and happiest union 2 years, when she died. s. p. For her he entertained a high admiration as well as tender love; and seems to have been, in the ruggedness of his earlier years, much indebted to her gentle and subduing influence. He m. 2d, about 2 years after, Helen Lewis, who d. 1811, aged 40; and 3d, Candice Winchell, in 1812, who d. Oct. 3, 1857. Dea. Richards was accustomed, often and earnestly, to express his high regard of the sanctity, purity, and benign influence of the conjugal relation, especially in his latter years, when his age allowed him to speak of it with the more freedom. He sought to shield it from the low ribaldry and corrupting habits of conversation by which it is so often desecrated; and he was led to this, it is believed, by his own experience of its softening and sanctifying power.

He spent most of his days on a farm in the east part of Bristol, 4 miles from Farmington Centre, and there had,

For a few months she rolled in splendor, but at the end of the honeymoon her husband failed for a greater amount than he was worth; domestic misery ensued; and in 3 years after her act of perfidy, a consumption had sent her childless to the grave. The above 9 brothers were most or all musicians, could play on a variety of instruments, and formed a band, whose nocturnal performances among their mountains might have added inspiration to a Horace. Their strength was proverbial. One of them, having prepared the massive frame of a good sized house, invited his neighbors to the raising, and on their arrival, excused them from everything but supper, requesting them to occupy the seats of spectators, while he and his brothers put up the frame. In their day the idolatry of pugilism had not been introduced from the "Auld Counthry," but the rude sport of wrestling prevailed, especially among the mountains, attended with much rivalry: and so long as they inhabited their native town, the bordering mountaineers of Massachusetts dared neither give nor accept a second challenge from Connecticut. Of the brothers, Ezekiel could shoulder a barrel of cider as easy as a bar tender lifts a demijohn; and William S. is affirmed to have once raised a force hammer of 700 lbs. weight.

184. 394. Roswell,⁶ was a man of genius and wit. At the age of 14 years he was allowed to take his brother's place temporarily in the army. During the time, he wrote his brother to hasten back and relieve him, for the soldiers had nothing to eat but cornstalks ground in a sawmill, and sifted through a ladder. At the age of 16 years he enlisted in the Continental army, and was in several of the hardest fought battles of the revolution. He settled in Norfolk, Ct., where he held a commission in the militia; but in 1796 he removed to Tyringham, Mass. Here he composed an ode on the opening of the 19th century, which he was invited publicly to deliver; and, if he could not be called a poet, he was a skilful and prompt rhymester. An instance of his talent is given. One evening, entering the house of his brother, whose wife not having received her furniture, and being in want of a candlestand, had contrived a substitute in a block, suspended by a strap from the ceiling, he exclaimed,

"Wood and leather put together
 To make a candle-stand;
 A droll affair, I do declare,
 As ever woman planned."

461. i. William A.⁷, Rev., A. M., b. Dec. 29, 1805, d. unm. May 2, 1835. The following tribute to his memory is from the pen of his classmate and intimate friend, Rev. David R. Downer, formerly of Carmine Street Church, New York:—

“Seldom has the church been called to mourn a greater loss. He was preëminently her property. In infancy devoted to her glory in baptism, and educated by parental piety in her holy principles, he early became a child of interest and promise. Through his childhood he was remarkably tender on the subject of religion, exemplary in all his deportment, and evinced a peculiar attachment to that profession to which he in subsequent life devoted himself, and in which he so excelled.

“He graduated at Nassau Hall, Princeton, N. J., in the year 1824, at the age of 19. On account of his youth, natural diffidence, and a want of confidence in his own abilities, (a peculiar feature of his character), he delayed entering upon any profession till the year 1829, when he connected himself with the Theological Seminary at Auburn, N. Y. During this period of delay his time did not pass unimproved. He became deeply convicted of his guilt as a sinner, and wholly yielded his heart and life to the claims of his Redeemer. His principles of character became fixed, his judgment matured, and his mind deeply stored with useful knowledge. Besides reviewing his collegiate studies—reading very extensively the Greek and Latin classics, ancient and modern history, a large portion of the Hebrew Bible—he became very familiar with the geography and antiquities of the Bible, and wrote largely on all its great and fundamental doctrines. With such advantages, he entered upon his theological course at the Seminary, through the whole of which he was most distinguished, and secured the esteem and love of all his instructors and associates. The name of Richards will never be swept from the memory of those who knew him at Auburn Seminary. At the close of his theological course, he was licensed to preach the gospel by the Onondaga Presbytery, April 13, 1831. Having received a pressing invitation from the Presbyterian Church at Lansing, N. Y., to become their spiritual instructor, with the advice of his friends he consented, and remained with them one year and a half, when he was attacked with inflammation of the lungs which terminated in consumption and his death. The separation from his little flock was to him, as them, truly painful. He seldom reverted to it in thought or word but the tear would start from his eye. His last dying words, though partially bereft of his reason, were in reference to them. Said he—I have endeavored, my dear people, to be faithful to you. ‘Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father’s good pleasure to give you the kingdom.’

“After leaving his people, he spent the subsequent winter at the South, without receiving any essential benefit to his health. Since that period he has been rapidly declining. For a long time previous to his decease, though he had a great desire and hope to recover, not a doubt disturbed his mind. His faith was strong in his Redeemer. When he was first told, by a near friend, that his recovery was doubtful, and asked whether he was prepared to meet death, he replied, ‘I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed to Him against that day.’ Though he was free from doubts until the last moment, still he felt the conflict of sin. An hour previous to his death, he said to his weeping mother at his bedside, ‘My sins! Oh! my sins appear black as jet.’ She remarked, we have an Advocate. ‘O yes,’ he exclaimed, ‘that is it, an Advocate—Jesus the precious Advocate.’ As he looked around the room and saw his friends weeping, he said, ‘O why will you, by weeping, grieve me so in my last moments? Weep not for me—I shall certainly land safe—it will be well with me.’ After this, apparently deprived of his reason, he most solemnly addressed the people of his former charge, and then commenced speaking, as if his spirit were in intimate communion with his God, most rapidly and earnestly in the Latin, Greek and Hebrew languages. Thus he continued in an animated strain, until nature became exhausted, and sweetly he fell asleep in Jesus.

“Those that knew him cannot forget him. As a scholar, he was distinguished; and among those of his age, seldom was his superior to be found. In biblical literature he particularly excelled. As an associate, he was ever agreeable and instructive. As a friend, he was true.

“He loved but once, and loved forever. As a son, he was kind and dutiful. In him the parent found not only a son, but a spiritual counsellor and guide. As a Christian, he walked with God. His piety, like his natural disposition, was mild and unobtrusive. It was uniformly progressive, and most conspicuously developed in his unaffected humility and attachment to divine truth. He sought not the great things of this world. He courted no man’s applause. He retired from notoriety. When opportunities for distinguishing himself were presented him, he shrunk from them as uncongenial to his feelings, oftentimes to the disappointment and grief of his friends. Had we one fault to record, we would say, he was too suspicious of himself. He loved the Bible. It was his constant study. To its investigation, especially in the original languages, for the last few years of his life, he directed nearly all his reading and his efforts. Though he admired and studied much the critics of Germany, he avoided their neology. To the supremacy of divine truth he ever cheerfully brought his own reason and philosophy to bow. As a preacher, he was uniformly interesting, instructive and impressive. His style was chaste, classical, and oftentimes uncommonly beautiful, though never was it employed to conceal the sword of the Spirit. As a Pastor, he was successful, and universally esteemed and beloved. He died everywhere lamented. The providence is mysterious, but, as he remarked on his dying bed, ‘it will be revealed at the judgment.’ Then, without a murmur, it is our duty to leave the event, and prepare, as he entreated in his last moments, to follow him.”

311. 516. John,⁷ D. D. Pres. Lord, in a discourse at his funeral, says:—

"At the age of 17, being then a clerk in the neighboring city of Hartford, and intended for mercantile pursuits, came under the ministry of the venerable Dr. Strong. He was greatly instructed and moved by the preaching of that distinguished man. His mind became profoundly engaged upon the great doctrines of the gospel, and after many spiritual conflicts his heart was bowed to Christ.

Then he returned to Farmington, resolved upon a different pursuit of life, and said, with his characteristic abrupt and unstudied air: "Father, I want to study, and to preach the gospel." 'Twas said and done. He became in due time, a student at Yale. During his junior year, being then more quickened in his religious feelings, he made profession of his faith. He graduated with honor, in 1821; at the Theological Seminary, Andover, Mass., in 1824; was then, for one year, an agent of the A. B. of C. for F. M.; from 1827 to 1831, an honored pastor at Woodstock, Vt.; then, till 1837, an associate editor of the Vermont Chronicle; and in 1841 was installed as pastor of the church at Dartmouth College.

In all these relations Dr. Richards was true to his heavenly calling; always an active student, a comprehensive scholar, ranging widely in the fields of knowledge; thoroughly versed in the subjects of his profession, faithful to Christ, and heartily devoted to the best interests of mankind. No man ever questioned his learning, intelligence, integrity, or piety. He was never known to sacrifice a righteous principle, to balk an honorable purpose, to shrink from a necessary sacrifice, to betray a trust, to speak evil of his neighbor, to renounce a friend or hate an enemy, to his dying day. I know not that a greater pattern of simplicity, guilelessness, and sincerity could be found on earth, among men practically conversant as he had been, for so long a time, with the bewildering and tempting world.

Here, indeed, was the beautiful element of his character, the solvent of his other qualities, which were fused and compounded by it, and took their spirit and direction from it. I have thought that if Jesus could have met him, as he met Nathaniel, he would have said of him, and with equal pertinence: "Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile." He knew not how to be insincere. His brusque and untrained manner, which was his æsthetical defect, was yet an evidence of the unaffected simplicity of his heart. It was not that he undervalued the forms and courtesies of society, or was pharisaically contemptuous of the selfish etiquette of artificial life. He did not think of them. He had not the power of conceiving the states of a fashionable mind. He knew not how to act but according to the unconstrained working of an unsuspecting, uncalculating, generous spirit, that meant and imagined no evil; that asked not for compliments, nor supposed that others wanted them. The idea of saying or doing anything, in public or private, for effect, never occurred to him. According to his actual states of mind he wrote, talked, and preached, sometimes depressed and languid by reason of the painful vicissitudes of life; again, self-distrustful and anxious through fear that his labors might not find acceptance, though never without knowledge; never without a scholarly apprehension of his subjects; never without generous sentiments and affections; and often, forgetful of self and of the world, rising to a fervid and commanding eloquence, producing the natural effect of words fitly spoken—"apples of gold in pictures of silver." Nothing that was not real could ever find an avenue to his mind; or, if aught insinuated itself, by accident, it found no lodgment. I have marked this peculiarity for nearly twenty years, so as I never saw it in any other man, in his theology, ethics and practical life. It was a nature in him, an instinct rather than a judgment, by which he repelled, without any conscious effort, as by a necessary law, all pretence, artifice, sham, or what was merely incidental and collateral, and entered not essentially into the simplicities of things. Through this very quality of mind he would sometimes, indeed, be attracted by specious reasonings proceeding from those whom he had trusted as Christian teachers, for he thought no evil of good men; but when the concealed sophistry would not digest and assimilate, as it could not in his sincere spirit, it was insensibly thrown off, and a sanctified nature gently resumed its courses. Two or three such occasions I have known in respect to his theological opinions, which had been settled, from his youth, agreeably to the primitive standards of New England. When captivated, for a time, by some projected speculative improvements in the range of his profession, yet presently conscious that they could not be made to harmonize, as their advocates pretended, with his fixed ideas, he let them drop off from him, unconcernedly, as matters that could do no good, but evil, to himself or to the world. They did not fret him. Nothing fretted him. He was never provoked by them to merely partisan controversy or ill-natured personalities. He opposed them, not by contrary speculations, in which a more ingenious sophist might have foiled him, but stuck more closely and fondly to the unsophisticated gospel. He would say, "in another generation these new lights will have vanished, and more flashy meteors will appear. But the gospel ever lives." That was his touchstone for all the ambitious and pretending novelties of the times.

Christ was his only master. What was not of Christ, but of this or that asserted Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, he let alone; and the old truths which had grown experimentally into his conscious soul, and had become a part of his inmost life, just grew on and brought forth fruit a hundred fold. Yet these old truths he would nourish by whatever new studies were fitted to open them more clearly or impressively to his active and reaching mind. In all his professional researches, which were constant, various, and comprehensive, whatever was morally congenial was, as if spontaneously, taken up, and contributed to his enlargement, while whatever was really incongruous would just as naturally fall off, thenceforth discarded and forgotten. He would never trouble himself about it. He would shout as one philosopher drove another off the stage, or as God's Spirit occasionally rebuked them all, and then turn away with new eagerness, and a keener relish to the sincere milk of the word.

Hence it was that all Divine truths lay in his mind, not as dogmas for the intellect, and not as themes of curious speculation, passports to popular renown, or the favor of great men, but as simple realities for the guidance of his personal and official life. He thought of them as realities, he discoursed of them as realities, and seemed not to imagine that other men would not so regard them, or that any studied rhetoric were needful to enforce them. No one could doubt that he believed everything he said, and as he said it, or that he believed and said it, not because it so stood in reason, but because it was so written, and that to say otherwise would be to set forth himself and not Jesus Christ. We often wished that he would say it with a livelier air, and a quicker sense of different or peculiar states of mind in the social circle, or popular assembly, and of what pertained to incidents or occasions of private or public moment. But, even then, sometimes, the quivering lip and faltering tongue would indicate emotions that he had not used himself to utter like other men, and that fell short of their effect only from the want of a more studied medium, such as we make more and, possibly, too much account of. Sometimes the hidden fire would burn through the crust of an indifferent manner, and make us desire that it would burn forever,—as if a volcano could be in perpetual action. But, however, we were sure that he never spoke ought but the convictions of an honest mind, and that he would die sooner than renounce them. Some of his convictions he was almost afraid to utter, lest he should unduly stir a prejudice, or wound a sensitive conscience. But they were strong within him when most reserved. In what seemed his greatest mental restraint, or nervous languor, it has been well observed, that when his train of thought led him to speak of Christ, of his dying love, his renewing grace, his glorious reign, of the state of the risen saints and the joys of heaven, these themes would covertly agitate and heave him, as if nothing but our more responsive sympathy were wanting to draw out his sacred passion till we should all melt together in a common love. Certain it was that the great truths which he had so carefully studied, and was so well able to defend, were as sure to him, and as living as his own soul. They were a part of himself. He no more doubted them than that he had a conscious spirit to know and feel them. Or, if any were yet measurably obscure to him, he believed as surely that they would, at length, be cleared, as that they were now obscure. At his family devotions he would sometimes say, especially when reading Paul's Epistles: "I wonder what the apostle means in that passage. I should like to know just how that lay in Paul's mind. Well, well, I shall know when I get to heaven. We shall all know, if we are so happy as to meet there; and then how we will talk about these things together!" Some passages of Scripture were so dear to him that he committed them to memory, to have them always ready for recall. Such were the 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th chapters of John's Gospel, Christ's memorable discourse to his disciples, and his prayer for them, and yet more, the 15th chapter of the

First Epistle to the Corinthians, containing his favorite doctrine of the resurrection. And he would have his family commit them: "for we may be sick," he said, "and unable to read our Bibles, and then we should have such rich matter to think upon." There was reality in that. Under the surface which he took so little pains to cultivate, there was a well of water springing up unto everlasting life.

Our pastor was a faithful student of the Bible. He went to it with greater zeal and confidence than ever a devout pagan to his oracle. He took it in his hand as if God had sent it down to himself particularly from heaven. He gathered from it as the old church gathered its manna in the desert, and never questioned what was written. He did not study scripture after the fashion so common at the present time, but with the lexicon and concordance. He made the Bible its own interpreter. His principle was the analogy of faith. He applied it wisely, disdaining no collateral helps that were really such, but judging that God best knew his own mind, and in what language to express it. Good criticism he liked; but denied that fancy and speculation should ever be brought to elucidate the words of the Holy Ghost. He expounded according to the letter, when the word was literal. When it was figurative, he explained the figure according to the approved laws of rhetoric, not to mystify, annul or conceal, but to intensify the letter. When it was symbolic, he let the symbol speak as God himself has so largely interpreted this peculiar vehicle of truth. As one of his friends commended him, at his funeral, he had largely the confidence of his brethren as a sound theologian, and a liberal scholar. They honored his character, and respected his opinions. He comprehended, in his measure, as few are privileged to do, God's revealed plan of government by Jesus Christ, for he never asked what man imagines, but what God says about it, and that led him meekly and soberly into a wide compass of inquiry. When the mind of God, on any subject, was made plain to him, as it usually was, for he searched in the day-light, then he rested, laid up his gains, and went on to larger studies. His atmosphere was luminous. He would often say: "I never take up my Bible, but I find something new, something I had not thought of, or that now appears in a new and more engaging light." I had great intimacy with him when our theological studies happened to lie in the same direction. I well remember a particular period when he was reconsidering some of his old opinions concerning the kingdom of God and the last times, formed after the received popular ideas. He thought he saw their fallacy. Gradually a more excellent way appeared. He opened his mind to receive whatever light the Scripture should shed upon him. It was delightful then to observe the working of his sincere, unaffected, and untrammelled spirit. He was meek, quiet, patient, docile, and submissive as a little child. "Speak, Lord," he would say, "and let thy servant hear." When one dark thing after another opened itself to his eager view, he would come over immediately to my room, that we might rejoice together. In that way I learned more of his peculiar excellence than I had done before; and I am free to say that, on such occasions, I derived more benefit from his simple, child-like, candid, reverential, yet searching, careful, and learned methods, than from all the other helps I used outside of Scripture.

Dr. Richards was a loving, genial man in his household and in his social relations, unselfish, unworldly, and unappropriating, almost to a fault. He was never ill-humored, petulant, morose, vindictive. The buoyancy, playfulness, and versatility, which are said to have been remarkably characteristic of his youth, remained to three score years, though chastened by the fatigues and adversities of professional life. Yet he did not show these qualities like other men. He made no professions. He seemed to be indifferent. His affectionate, sympathizing, and generous spirit was learned only afterwards by some monument or story. A published tribute to some men, places, or institutions; an enlargement or adornment of the village cemetery; a headstone at the grave of an unfortunate lone woman, crazed and friendless, or of the colored widow of his flock—the nurse of all;—a frequent new comfort for the demented old man,—the well known houseless Nazarite of the place;—these and similar charities, which others might not have thought of, were proofs of the considerate and persistent kindness of his heart. He loved his place of residence, and was ever quiet and content. He loved his church and people. I bear record that he loved the college. One would hardly have thought it, except when, occasionally, in discourse or prayer, his tremulous voice gave sign of the desire he felt for its prosperity. He loved every student in it, every brick and timber in its walls. He loved it better than his own Alma Mater. It would have broken his heart to leave it, which, however, was not to be broken, but transferred whole to heaven. I know not but his zeal for it hastened his death; for though, as I have learned, his disease was hereditary, his mother and another member of the family having been similarly cut off, yet he had labored, day and night, for a long time, under many disadvantages, to hasten an important volume illustrative of its history,* and that fatigue probably quickened the predisposing causes of his fatal malady. I know not but he would have died for it, as he would for anything that he thought material to the public good. In his long ministry he was never known, in his pulpit, or elsewhere, to speak of it invidiously, or any member of it. He felt it keenly when any thoughtless young men were heedless of instruction, or behaved indecorously in the house of God, or turned irreverently from it. But he never spoke of it, or seemed to know it. And so in general: his desk was never made a place for the utterance of private feeling, or any service that would not become a minister of the meek and lowly Jesus. Whatever personal views he had of men or things, in college, church or state; whatever independent, fearless course he followed in ecclesiastical, political, or social life, we knew that we should never be wounded in the house of God by invidious personalities, sectarian jealousies, or partisan appeals. He cared for no man's opinions, but for every man's soul. He had his honest preferences for particular men and measures, and acted them out, with perfect unconcern, on fit occasions; but his Christian love was general, and flowed out here, where it should flow out, over all. He never lisped a shibboleth.

On the whole, a minister of Jesus Christ, whom all men feel it their privilege to criticise and carp at; whose infirmities and defects we are prone to make an apology for our own short comings; the theme of every week's, and almost every day's discussion; going in and out among men of all varieties of tastes, tempers, and pursuits; without the advantages of manner, wealth, address; reduced by inadequate support; sometimes plagued with poverty; compelled to a frequent change of house and home, and sometimes hardly having where to lay his head; yet, though weary, never fainting; though cast down, not destroyed; without complainings, murmurings, or disputings; kindly interpreting all adversities; never refusing to join his burdens; never seeming to feel that any serious burdens were laid upon him; holding fast to righteous principle; meekly testifying the Gospel of the grace of God; doing all this, for nearly twenty years, in a peculiarly delicate and difficult position, and then dying, as it were, with his last sermon in his pocket; must be a man of God. As such we lament and honor him; and we heartily rejoice, not that he is dead, but that, being dead, he has entered into his rest.”—Rev. Dr. Lord's Sermon.

* This work, which he had nearly or quite completed, is about to be published. The next kindred labor of love which his loving soul designed to render, was the preparation of this Genealogy, which he had partly commenced, and, as he wrote me a few days before his death, “blocked out a circular to the race” upon the subject.

325. 556. Pelatiah,⁷ Esq., must have been a legitimate grandson of Dr. Samuel Richards. By some misdirected confidence of his father, and uncle Samuel, he was in his youth committed to the guardianship and care of one from whom the best attention to his education might well have been expected; but it was totally neglected, until his removal with his father to New York, where there was no school within reach from his father's house. But, at the age of 21, he set about educating himself, and his self-denial, perseverance, and success may well encourage others who find themselves in a similar situation. He settled on a farm in Warrensburg, N. Y., on which he has prospered and still resides. At the invasion of Plattsburgh, in the war of 1812, he served as ensign in Col. Wm. Cook's regiment; for which he drew 160 acres, near Fort Dodge, Ia.; it being the northwest quarter of section 20, in T. No. 92, of R. 28. 713. 761. Daniel F.,⁸ left home at the age of 19 years, with a drover, for Philadelphia, and after an absence of nine years he writes, giving a very fair picture of western frontier life, and of California enterprise and experience.

"I left home August 22, 1850, led a drove to Pa., became second steward for two months on a steamboat on Monongahela river, then boated coal for two months to Cincinnati, at $25 per trip of five or six days; was robbed of all my savings, about $300. After varying my occupation several times in different sections, returned to Independence, Mo., spending some time in charge of pack trains from Independence to Santa Fé, New Mexico; returned to New Mexico, driving eight yoke of cattle, at $55 per month; was 118 days in Chihuahua, Old Mexico; returned to New Mexico, took a contract for making tar, at $100 per barrel, and whip-sawing lumber at 15 cents per foot, made $4,700 by it; went in company with nine others to trade with the Apachee Indians, was very successful for one month, when on account of a quarrel between one of our company and the Indians, four of our number were killed, and the rest of us were glad to get back to the Rio Grande with only our lives.

From Albuquerque [I embarked with others] in a trapping excursion of 18 months, fighting several severe battles with the Indians; returned to New Mexico in the spring of 1853, and went with Kit Carson's drove of sheep to California; stopped in Lake Byler Valley—hunted and fished on contract—kept out of my pay—went to Stockton, and for three weeks unloaded schooners, at $5 per day—went to mining, at first very successful, but at the end of six months my gains were all sunk—then cut saw logs and made $300—went to mining again at Volcano, and quit August, 1855, with $1,600—then mined at Waverville, failed, came out at the little end of the horn—worked in Shasta for $100 per month, driving team again—went to ranching, [farming] sold the first farm for $400, after being on it six months; am now on another of 320 acres, satisfied with less than I used to be."

the late Major W., formerly merchant, and the first mayor of Memphis, Tenn.; rs. at Hopefield, Ark., opposite M., as a surveyor and conductor of market gardening. He has had and lost three sons.

735. 763. George Kennedy,⁸ has laid the compiler, and race, under peculiar obligations, by collecting and reporting the history of his grandfather's descendants, with a fulness and particularity unequalled by the labors of any other correspondent. Of his history I know nothing, except from the ability of his letters. These prove that he must already have a history, and may take rank as a reformer. But if the interest which he manifests on a vitally important subject shall not rise high enough to make him regarded by the ignorant and stupid masses as insane, he will accomplish nothing, be no reformer. He says,

"Whatever of character I may possess I most cheerfully accredit to a salutary parental influence, which trained me to regard principle, and to hold honesty and verity dear as life.

As befalls thousands of our race, ill health, at an early age, in a great measure retarded my progress, and hindered an aspiring nature from making attainments almost within reach; but, by the aid of Hygienic agencies, I have been enabled measurably to counteract diseased tendencies, and thereby stimulate hope into efforts for the final accomplishment of good, by making use of whatever is within me for the elevation of others to a higher plane of thought and action.

Being naturally inclined to radicalism in politics, religion, and Hygienic reform, I have not only dwelt particularly upon their history, but have been compelled to notice that wise and beautiful arrangement of the divine economy, which secures the transmission of desirable qualities to offspring, so generally ignored, and so utterly disregarded by the masses, viz: that immutable law of nature, which entails, and visits upon the third and fourth generation, both the virtues and the vices of ancestry; holding in its unrevealed, yet still unfolding mysteries, the destinies of a race; and granting to Parentage the power of creating and endowing regal natures, and bequeathing them as new and noble accessions of advancing, redeeming influence to the world."

To parental stolidity, ignorance, and neglect, he attributes in the young the decay of natural affection and subordination, and the prevalence of vice and indifference to principles, on which are based their present and future welfare. Of himself he says, "my highest ambition is to be an humble instrument in arousing a sense of responsibility, and diffusing light upon this and kindred laws; concerning which nature is so prolific of facts, both in her physical and mental manifestations; speaking in admonitory tones in all individual biographies, and in all collective histories.

Rally then ! whoe'er can wield it,
Wield the sledge of Earnestness !
Forge from hence, on Wisdom's anvil,
Grappling-irons to Success !

Add thy mite of strong endeavor
To the labor of the hour;
To the long progressive lever
Add thy weight of mental power.

From above the light is streaming,
Streaming on expectant eyes ;
With the foremost, at its gleaming,
Let our ancient valor rise.

Virtue's beacon-light engaging,
Follow it to latest age :
And a holy warfare waging,
Trample Error in its rage !

Be our "Coat of Arms" true Freedom—
Long for which our Fathers bled—
Freedom from that galling thralldom
Which forbids our onward tread.

High, ambitious footsteps planting,
Garner each successive good,
Till you reach the topmost landing,
Crowned with Virtue's hardihood.

Doth the wrong oppress ? Withstand it,
For the holy and the true !
Great, unceasing wants demand it !
Aid the many ! noble few !

Or in high or lowly station,
Or in path that Fame awaits,
Leave to latest generation
Legacies of noble traits.

All who may this name inherit,
Worthily defend that cause,
Which to you reveals its merit,
Standing on undying laws—

Find reward in welcome plaudit
From the earnest of your aim ;
That posterity may audit
Honor to the RICHARDS name.

CHAPT. III.

NATHANIEL RICHARDS.

Nathaniel Richards, aged 28, embarked at London, in the ship Lion, and arrived at Boston, Sept. 16, 1632. He came, as is presumed, attended by a wife and brother, Edward, and several families, who settled immediately with him at Cambridge, then called Newtown. He brought a character well endorsed, for without an ordinary probation of one year, he was, on the 20th day after his arrival, admitted to the freeman's oath, and allowed a voice in all public measures, in the very conception of the laws and institutions of the Colony. He built his house near the present site of Harvard University; and was one to welcome, the next year, the arrival of Mr. Hooker, and others of his colony. He became a proprietor of the town, and as such was required, Jan. 7, 1632-3, to build four rods of pales, towards the enclosure of a common field; and, August 5, 1633, received half an acre for a cow yard. Feb. 8, 1634-5, he was mentioned as the owner of one house; and, on the 20th of August following, had one acre of meadow assigned him. Here he lived four years, in the very best society in the Colony; having for his neighbors, Rev. Tho. Hooker, John Haynes, Tho. Dudley, Symon Bradstreet, Nicholas Danforth, and others, whose memories are immortal.

In 1636, Mr. Hooker, joined by emigrants from other towns, to the number of 100, removed to Hartford. In this company was Nathaniel Richards. Here, March 16, 1640, probably 1639-40, he held a house lot of 26 acres, situated north of Little River, and bounded north by William Wadsworth's, east by Thomas Stanton's, south by the road to the mill, and west by Matthew Allyn's, and was situated near the present site of the Methodist Church. In 1641, he was constable, and in 1643, grand juror, and deputy to the General Court. In 1644 and '49 he was one of the orderers (selectmen) of Hartford. About 1650 he became one of the contractors, with Hon. Roger Ludlow, for planting the town of Norwalk; where, about 1652, in the first list of home lots one was assigned him. Upon this he is presumed soon after to have commenced improvements, and to have actually settled at Norwalk some years before he was dismissed from Hartford. For, in 1655, he was there rated the highest except four, as he was in 1671 except two. October 11, 1658, he was dismissed at Hartford, and acted the same month as the representative of Norwalk. May 6, 1664, he bought of Jonathan Marsh the mill at Norwalk. In 1670 he was chosen selectman. He had no child recorded at Cambridge, and no record has been preserved of any at Hartford or Norwalk. Nathaniel Richards, b. about 1604, d. about Jan. 1681-2, at Norwalk, m. ——— and 2d, on the 15th of March, 1663-4, Mrs. Rozimon Lindon, widow of Deacon Henry Lindon or Lindell, of New Haven, whose young daughters, by her former husband, he adopted, viz:

1. Hannah, b. Jan. 7, 1650, who, or her sister, m. John Fitch.
2. Rebecca, b. Oct. 20, 1653, do. do. m. John Hais or Hays.
3. Grace, b. March 31, 1656, do. do. m. Ralph Keeler.
4. Mersey, b. Dec. 18, 1658, do. do. m. Joseph Ketchem; for their step-father called these men his sons, and made them his legatees.

his mark and seal.*

March 14, 1681-2, the Legatees, John Fitch, Joseph Ketchem, Samuel Hayes, sign an agreement relative to the division of the lands of "their respected benefactor Nath^l. Richards." His estate, inventoried Feb. 9, 1681, at £505. 13s. 6d.; debts due from the estate, £4. 2s.

In the subsequent division of the common lands of Norwalk, lots continued to be assigned him, i. e. in his right, as late as Feb. 17, 1706-7, which went to his legatees, and constituted quite an addition to his specified bequests.

* He was able to subscribe his name handsomely until 1667.

CHAPT. IV.

WILLIAM RICHARDS.

William Richards is first mentioned March 25, 1633, when, by the Court of Plymouth, consisting of Gov. Bradford, Capt. Miles P. Standish, John Alden, and eight others, he was rated nine shillings in corn at six shillings per bushel, for public use, to be brought in by the last day of November, or the amount to be doubled. The same amount was assessed upon him the next year. But, Jan. 6, 1636-7, he had removed to Scituate, and forfeited his lot at Plymouth, and the Court ordered that "six acres where William Richards [had] dwelt be granted to Nathaniel Sowther, to belong to his house at Plymouth." This indicates that he had removed as early as 1635 or 6 to Scituate, where he next appears. In 1635 a fresh recruit of planters, with Rev. Mr. Newman, arrived at Weymouth.* These, like the company previously settled there, were also no doubt from Weymouth, eight miles from Dorchester in Dorsetshire. In this company, William of Scituate, and Thomas of Dorchester, are supposed to have had friends who attracted them, for they both joined them, Thomas within a few months, and William within a few years, who there spent the remainder of their days. William, like others of the name, was tenacious of his rights, enterprising, given to change and trade. In 1640 he had a dispute with John Turner of Scituate, and it became necessary for the General Court to appoint a committee to settle it. Yet nothing appears to invalidate evidence of piety and the strictest uprightness; and he is presumed to have been a member of the church, and a freeman, although the record has not been preserved. In 1645 he had removed to Weymouth, when a vote of her citizens exempted him from a certain town order. In 1650 he sold a farm at Scituate, to Gowen White, for £75; but probably retained a right in her common lands, which secured his grandson William a farm in Scituate. 1659 he served at Weymouth as constable; and as one of her proprietors received 19½ acres, bounded east by the sea, and 2 acres of salt marsh in the neck; and soon after, 4 do. of upland on the neck. July 6, 1658, he received of Nicholas Whitmarsh a deed of a house and several lots; [Suf. D. III, p. 174] and in 1663 he drew 20 acres, in two tracts. [Proprietor's Record.] He m. Grace —; and in his will, dated Jan. 18, 1680, and proved July 25, 1682, he gave her during her life, or widowhood, the income and improvement of "all his houseing and out houseing, Orchard, lands, chattels and moveables in Weymouth or elsewhere, with power in case of need to sell any part thereof for her comfortable subsistence."

To his son James, then unmarried, he gave, at her decease, all the above estate which she should leave, making his son Benjamin the successor of James in the event of James's death without issue, binding the legatee to see his mother comfortably supported through life, and to pay £3 to his brother John, £3 to William, £3 to Joseph, and £3 to Benjamin, in four years after the death of their mother. He made James his sole executor. William Chard and William Pitte witnesses.

William Richards,¹ was probably attended to this country by a brother John (Chapt. V.) and sister Sarah, who m. 1640, George Pidcocke of Duxbury. He had,

* With this company probably came George Richards, who was of Weymouth, 1638, and a leading citizen, who either died s. p. or removed.

113. 206. James,⁶ Esq., m. May 1, 1780, Lydia Shaw of Abington, who with himself, in early life, had there united with the Congregational church. They were both distinguished throughout their long lives for their active and consistent piety. She was born July 3, 1757, and died Aug. 20, 1828. He became a soldier in the revolutionary army; and in his latter years received a pension. He was a good singer, and long the leader of a choir, and a teacher of music, and for thirty winters of district schools. In 1789 he removed to Plainfield, settled upon a farm, and became a leading citizen of the community. He was repeatedly chosen town clerk, selectman, assessor, overseer of the poor, &c.; and in 1802 was appointed a justice of the peace, and served in this office 40 years. In 1793, '98, 1801, '03, '05, '11, '12, and '16, he was elected a representative to the General Court; and in 1820 a delegate to the Convention for amending the State Constitution. Nov. 15, 1792, he was chosen deacon of the Congregational Church in Plainfield, and served in this office until about ten years before his death, when he became blind; yet such was his love for the house of God, that he insisted on being regularly and punctually lead thither, until a few sabbaths before his death, which occurred in his 85th year. He had,

208. 319. James,⁷ Rev., A. M., M. D., grad. 1809, at Williams College, and 1812 at Theo. Sem., Andover. The following notice of this devoted man is from the History of Plainfield, published 1834:

“It is supposed by his friends that he became a decided Christian when about fourteen years old.

He was enabled ever after to support a christian character and deportment, always manifesting a due regard for religion;—was a strict observer of the Sabbath, and a constant attendant on the public worship of God. In August, 1805, he publicly professed his faith in Christ, and united with the Congregational Church in Plainfield. For many years it was his habitual practice to devote one day in every month to secret fasting and prayer.

While at college, he, with some others, of whom Samuel John Mills was one, concerted a plan for the conversion of the world, and prayed into existence the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. This plan was still further matured at Andover; and in September, 1811, not long after the formation of the American Board, he offered himself as a missionary to the heathen, and was taken under their patronage.

After completing his theological education, he devoted considerable time, under the direction of the Board, to the study of medicine and surgery; with a view to increased usefulness among the heathen. He attended a course of lectures at Hanover, N. H., and two courses at Philadelphia, where he was engaged for some time in the Pennsylvania Hospital.

In view of his multiplied engagements while here, for he sometimes had more on his hands than he could possibly perform, he remarked in a letter to his friends, “it is much more pleasant to be hurried in business than to be idle.”

June 12th, 1815, he was ordained, with five others, at Newburyport, and sailed October 23d, for Columbo, on the island of Ceylon, where he arrived after a prosperous voyage of five months.

When asked, afterwards, how he could refrain from weeping at the time of leaving his native land, and all that was dear to him there, he replied, “Why should I have wept? I had been anxiously waiting almost eight years for an opportunity to go and preach Christ among the heathen. I had often wept at the long delay. But the day on which I bade farewell to my native land was the happiest day of my life.” It was not long, however, before he was so debilitated by the influence of a tropical climate, and undue exposure, as to be incapable of much active service. This was to him a severe trial, for he ever retained a strong partiality for the missionary work. After several years of protracted suffering he expired at Tillipally, in Ceylon, August 3d, 1822. He died rejoicing in the hope of a glorious immortality. He was buried in the afternoon of the next day, (which was the Lord’s day,) and converted heathen carried him to his grave. His sound judgment, meekness, disinterestedness, faithfulness, love to his Saviour, to his fellow missionaries, to the heathen,—his piety towards God, and universal benevolence to men,—rendered him a truly valuable laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. He may justly be considered as one of the first martyrs from this country in the high and holy cause of missions to the heathen.

A monument, bearing the following inscription, in English and in Tamul, was placed over his grave by his bereaved widow :

In memory of
The Rev. James Richards, A. M.
American Missionary,
who died August 3, 1822,
Aged 38 years.
One of the first projectors of American Missions,
He gave himself first to Christ, and then to the heathen.
A physician both to soul and body.

He was
In health, laborious,
In sickness, patient,
In death, triumphant.
He is not, for God took him.

Tamul inscription translated :

In memory of
The Rev. James Richards, A. M.
American Missionary,
who died August 3, 1822,
Aged 38 years.

Reader,
He came to this country to tell you that, excepting through Christ Jesus, there is no way to escape Hell, and obtain Heaven.
Believing in this Saviour,
He died, rejoicing in hope of eternal happiness.
Let all, who read this, prepare for death also.

He m. May 31, 1815, Miss Sarah Bardwell of Goshen, Mass., who m. for a 2d husband, Mr. Knight, an English missionary, but did not long survive her first husband. They had,

320. 1. James B.,⁸ Prof., A.M., b. Oct. 16, 1817, at Batticotta, Ceylon, m. Oct. 15, 1849, Mary W. Symmes, dau. of Capt. L. and Mary W. S. He was bereft of his father when only six years old; was, at the age of eight years, sent to this country, an orphan, to be brought up; and notwithstanding the great sacrifices and public services of his father, he "was obliged to work very hard for his living, and had very little schooling indeed." But the Creator had endowed him with a rare genius, and provided for its culture and display. At the age of 14 he chose his own guardian, and managed his own affairs. At 17 he taught his first school in Chesterfield, Mass., and subsequently had charge of the Preparatory Department in Phillips Academy, Andover; and, for six years, of the Mathematical Department of the Chauncy Hall School, Boston; in the meantime making such attainments in various departments of learning, that Harvard University, in 1857, conferred on him the honorary degree of A. M.

In 1846-7 he became interested in the question of the education of idiots; and the next year visited Europe, and examined schools for them in London and Paris. In October, 1848, he commenced, in Boston, the first State experimental school in this country, which resulted in its establishment upon a permanent basis. In 1851 he gave, at Albany, an exhibition of some of his Boston pupils before the legislature of New York; and the effect was an appropriation for a second State school, similar to the first. In 1852 he opened a private school for imbeciles, in Philadelphia, and the result was a third large and flourishing State school. In 1856, at the urgent invitation of William Cullen Bryant, Hon. Charles King, President of Columbia College, &c., he removed to New York, and opened a private institute for imbeciles, which he has ever since conducted with wonderful and almost incredible success; and no one conversant with the effects of his labors will fail to recognize in him one of the great benefactors of the age. 320½. 11. Sarah Bardwell,⁶ posthumous, Dec. 1822, m. Benjamin Boynton of W. Andover, Mass; rs. W. A.; has two children.

209. 321. Joseph,⁷ M. D., in addition to a good common education, studied Latin and Greek, and taught a district school several terms. He studied medicine with Dr. Peter Bryant of Cummington; attended medical lectures at Hanover, N. H.; and commenced the practice of medicine in Worthington. He married Mehetable Allen of Plainfield, April 4th, 1809. About 1811 he removed to Abington, his native place, and there commenced a successful practice, and subsequently engaged in manufacturing cloths. But at the close of the war of 1812, a change occurred, detrimental to the manufacturing interest, and he removed to Harlemville, Columbia Co., N. Y., where he now resides, as a successful practitioner. In early life he united with an Orthodox Congregational church, as I believe each of his paternal ancestors, from William¹ the Puritan, did.

211. 322. William,⁷ Rev. and Hon., grad. at Will. Coll., in 1819. He studied divinity at the Theo. Sem., Andover, and was ordained at New Haven. Ct., Sept. 12, 1822, as a missionary of the A. B. He married Clarissa Lyman of Northampton, Mass., Oct. 30, 1822, and sailed with his wife from New Haven for the Sandwich Islands, Nov. 19, of the same year, where he arrived in April, 1823. His labors there were very successful. He came to N. England with his wife and six eldest children, in 1837, leaving his two youngest at the Islands. He and his wife returned after a few months, leaving his six children in this country. He afterwards became privy counsellor and prime minister to the king of the Islands, and visited the governments of England, France, and the United States, accompanied by one of the chiefs of the Islands, for the purpose of getting the independence of the Islands acknowledged by those governments, and succeeded. He died Nov. 7, 1847, at the Islands, aged 54 years. His widow, soon afterwards, returned to this country, with her two remaining children, and now resides in New Haven, Ct.

He too, before he left this country, was a teacher of common and high schools.

212. 323. Jason Richards,⁷ was brought up on a farm in Plainfield, Mass., received a common school education, and began to teach when 19 years of age, and taught 17 winter terms, with good success. About 1824 he was appointed adjutant of a regiment of militia, and afterwards chosen a major, and subsequently colonel, of the same regiment. In 1834 he was chosen clerk and treasurer of Plainfield, and by annual elections continued in these offices for 13 years. He was elected a representative of Plainfield to the general court, for the years 1841 and '42; appointed a justice of the peace by Gov. Davis, in 1842, and still holds his commission, it having been renewed by Govs. Briggs and Gardner.

He married, Jan. 5, 1830, Sophia Forsaith, daughter of Dr. James Forsaith of Deering, N. H.; resides on a small farm in Plainfield, transacting such public and private business as usually comes to the hands of an upright and experienced magistrate. He had,

327. IV. Laura Mack,⁸ b. July 18, 1838, who is also a successful teacher.

213. 328. Austin,⁷ Rev., D. D., graduated at Amherst College, 1824, and the Theological Seminary at Andover, 1827; was ordained pastor of the Congregational Church at Frankestown, N. H., Nov. 7, 1827. He subsequently took a dismission, to accept a call from a Congregational Church in Nashua, N. H., where he has continued to the present time. He m. Dec. 12, 1827, Maria C. March 31, 1777, he, "gent.," sold land to William Richards,⁵ Jr., not his son, but William,⁵ of Chapt. VI, Sect. 2d, No. 76, who continued to be styled junior in Killingly until 1781. William,³ Sr., was no doubt the father of
406. William,⁴ b. about 1712–15, d. 1745, in the first French war, and probably at the siege of Louisburgh, having no doubt been induced to accompany the energetic Benoni Twichell of Thompson, who, as captain or commissary from T., joined the expedition to Cape Breton that year. 409. 407. 1. Jonas,⁵ b. 1740, d. 1799, m. Hannah Wheeler.
 408. 2. Phebe,⁵ who is no further reported.
407. 409. Jonas⁵ married Hannah Wheeler, pr. dau. of Isaac and Hannah W. of Plainfield, and a descendant of Isaac W., the original proprietor of 4000 acres of Stonington. About 1767, he settled at Norwich, Vt., as one of the first planters of that town, encountering all the privations and hardships of a new and interior country. In his person he is said to have been a little above the medium stature, with black eyes and hair, and of a firm constitution. He was of stern puritan morality; a farmer, distinguished for enterprise and thrift. He early joined the church in Norwich; with which, as an active and consistent member, he walked until his death. His wife survived him beyond her 90th year. They had,
 I. William,⁶ who d. in childhood. II. Rebecca,⁶ who d. do.
415. 410. III. Joel,⁶ b. Nov. 26, 1767, d. Aug. 20, 1812, m. Miriam Smith.
 411. IV. Wheeler,⁶ who settled as a farmer in Derby, Vt., but now rs. in Ohio, inheriting the longevity of his mother, if not that of his great-grandfather.
456. 412. V. Levi,⁶ who m. Sarah Slade of Hanover, N. H.

413. VI. Bela,⁶ who lived and d. at Benton, N. Y., a respectable farmer.

414. VII. Alvin,⁶ who removed west in quest of his fortune, and was never heard from.

All these were large, athletic men, remarkable for great physical strength and power of endurance; and especially Levi, who was princely in his form and appearance, and the strongest man in Norwich.

410, 415. Joel,⁶ the second male born in Norwich, was brought up a farmer, with very limited means of education. He inherited the stature and complexion of his father; was highly respected for his sterling integrity; a member of the Congl. church, and a firm supporter of the gospel; and his death was lamented as a public loss. He married Miriam Smith, born March 16, 1774, died Dec. 19, 1856, dau. of Sylvanus S. Esq. of Hartford, Vt., by wife Dina Fisk, dau. of Nathan and Eleanor (Whitney) Fisk of Stonington? and the grand-daughter of Nathan and Rebecca (Stillman) Smith of Hadley. She was one of a family of 20 children, and brought up without attending school a single day, yet became a good reader, especially of her bible. She early made a profession of religion, whose doctrines, duties, and promises, she loved and cherished to the day of her death, and inculcated them upon her children from their earliest years. She was a woman of much practical wisdom and force of character. Left a widow at the age of 38 years, with nine children, in moderate circumstances, she kept her family together, paid off a heavy debt, reared them to frugal and industrious habits, and thereby laid the foundation of their respectability and honorable distinction.

About 1824, she m. 2d, Seth Savage, Esq., of Hartford, with whom she lived about six years, and d. in her 2d widowhood, at her son Chester's, in Hartford, aged 82 years; entitled to a most grateful remembrance. "Riches are deceitful and beauty is vain, but a woman that feareth the Lord she shall be praised." Joel and Miriam had,

419. IV. Joel A.,⁷ b. Dec. 13, 1800, m. 1835, Maria Burton, dau. of Dea. Jacob Burton of N.; rs. Hinkley, Ohio, a farmer, has 4 children.⁸

433. 420. V. Arba,⁷ M. D., b. Mar. 30, 1803, m. '35, Helen Kelsey of Wales, N.Y.

421. VI. Willard,⁷ b. Aug. 23, 1804, m. 1834, Alvira A. Wheaton of Hinkley, Ohio; rs. a successful farmer and useful man, at H.; and has six children.⁸

VII. Alvin,⁷ b. July 26, 1806, d. aged 2 years.

434. 422. VIII. Cyrus Smith,⁷ A. M., b. March 11, 1808, m. Helen D. Whiton.

450. 423. IX. Jonas De Forest,⁷ Rev., A. M., b. Dec. 28, 1809, m. Harriet B. Jarvis.

X. Gardner,⁷ b. April 2, 1812, drowned 1828, on the eve of admission to the Congl. church, with his mind resolved on preparing to preach the gospel. All the above children have for years been hopefully gathered into the fold of the great Shepherd.

416. 424. Chester,⁷ aged 17 at the death of his father, took charge of the homestead with his mother, and became a kind of father to the younger children, coöperating firmly and kindly with her in moulding them to habits of industry, obedience, and morality. He m. March 11, 1822, Fidelia Whitcomb, settled on the homestead in Hartford, and had, 425. I. Joel,⁸ who received a good education; rm. to New Orleans as a teacher, where he died 1847.

426. II. Orra,⁸ who m. Orvis Newton, has 4 children; rs. Norwich.
427. III. Mark,⁸ who is a farmer, m. Miss Wheaton of Hinckley, Ohio; rs. in Michigan.
428. IV. David,⁸ who is engaged in mining in California.
429. V. Rebecca,⁸ who yet rs. with her parents.
430. VI. Norman,⁸ who rs. in Michigan.
431. VII. Ellen,⁸ who m. Jefferson Bartholomew, has 2 children, and rs. in Hartford.
432. VIII. Edward,⁸ who is yet with his parents.

420. 433. Arba Richards,⁷ who was much of a scholar, especially in mathematics; studied medicine, and commenced practice in Wales, N. Y.; but afterwards removed to Michigan, where he now resides. He has gained some professional reputation, but on account of impaired health has retired from professional business. He m. 1835, Helen Kelsey of Wales, N. Y., and has only one surviving child, a daughter.

422. 434. Cyrus Smith,⁷ A. M., graduated at Dartmouth College in 1835, with a standing for moral excellence and scholarship among the very first of his class. As evidence of this, on the day of his graduation the trustees of Kimball Union Academy at Meriden, N. H., elected him principal of that institution; where, under the tuition of his distinguished predecessor, Rev. Israel Newell, he had completed his preparatory studies. He entered immediately upon the arduous duties of his appointment, and has continued to preside, with distinguished ability and success, over that richly endowed and justly popular institution, to the present time. It is perhaps enough to say, that during this period, of more than twenty-five years, he has fitted for college above five hundred young men, most of whom are now in active usefulness in the several learned professions, and nearly one half of them in the gospel ministry. Besides these, he has aided in the education of a still larger number of both sexes, who are now engaged as teachers of youth, or in the various other avocations of life. He is an accredited preacher of the Congregational order, and advantageously known as the author of Latin Lessons, Tables, &c. He has also contributed with his pen considerably to various religious and literary periodicals. He m. July, 1836, Helen D. Whiton, dau. of the late Rev. John M. Whiton, D. D., of Antrim, N. H.; who died March 10, 1860, aged 45 years. She was a woman of uncommon worth and energy of character. Her mind, endowed by nature with unusual strength and versatility of talent, was largely cultivated by a substantial education, and refined and chastened by the mild and elevating influences of the christian religion. She wrote extensively for religious periodicals, and was the author of several popular juvenile books, entitled, The Conquered Heart, Hemlock Ridge, Robert Walton, Martyrs for the Word, and others. She expressed in her death an humble, but unwavering, trust in Christ as her Redeemer. They had,

- I. Helen Morris,⁸ who graduated at Kimball Union Academy in 1857, in the classical and English departments; has since spent a year in the school of Madam Rostan, New York city, in the study of French and music; is now the teacher of music in Kimball Union Academy.

- II. Charles Herbert,⁸ who fitted for college at K. U. Academy, and graduated at Yale College in 1860.
- III. Abby Louise,⁸ graduated at Kimball Union Academy in 1859, in the classical and English departments; has likewise received a thorough education in music.
- IV. James Morris,⁸ died when but fifteen months old.
- V. Frederic Whiton,⁸ died when four years old.
- VI. William Evarts.⁸

423. 450. Jonas DeForest,⁷ Rev., A. M., prosecuted his studies, preparatory for college, at Kimball Union Academy, under the instruction of Rev. Israel Newell, the principal of that institution. In 1836 he graduated at Dartmouth College, where, as well as at the academy, he earned a high reputation for moral integrity and scholarship. He early gained a creditable eminence as a teacher. He was two years and more principal of the Academy at Thetford, Vt., previous to receiving his degree at college. He was for a time one of the board of instruction of Kimball Union Academy, and for a year or two filled the office of tutor in Marietta College, Ohio, where the faculty united in bearing honorable testimony to his fidelity and usefulness.

He subsequently studied Theology at Union Theological Seminary, in the city of New York, and completed his course at Andover, where he graduated in 1840. After leaving the seminary, having received an invitation to preach in Charlestown, N. H., he entered immediately upon the duties of his profession in that place, and receiving a unanimous call from the Evangelical Congregational Church and Society in that place, on the 28th day of May, 1841, he was ordained and installed pastor over that people; which relation was dissolved in Oct., 1851, after a ministry of a little more than eleven years.

In June, 1853, he was installed pastor of the First Congregational Church in Chester, Vt.; from which place, after a ministry of about five years, he removed to Weathersfield Bow, Vt., where he now resides, ministering to the Congrega'l Society at Weathersfield Centre.

His standing as a minister is fully endorsed, and his ability as a writer appears in a discourse delivered before the General Convention of Congregational Ministers and Churches in Vermont, and published in the National Preacher, about June, 1856.

He m. Aug. 9, 1843, Harriet Bartlett Jarvis, dau. of Hon. William Jarvis of Weathersfield, Vt., formerly a merchant in Boston, and subsequently U. S. Consul to Lisbon. Her mother was Ann Bartlett, dau. of Hon. Bailey Bartlett of Haverhill, Mass., who was for a term member of Congress from his district, and for 40 years high sheriff of Essex County. They had,

- V. Sarah Margaret,⁸ b. Oct. 21, 1857.

412. 456. Levi,⁶ possessed fine natural powers of mind, although very little improved by education, being by his circumstances doomed to a life of toil. He was respected for his integrity and consistent piety. He lived and died at Norwich, Vt., aged about 75 years. He m. Sarah Slade, and had,
- i. Harry,⁷ who entered college, but for want of health relinquished his studies, settled at Norwich as a mechanic, where he filled many civil offices, and died aged about 35 years, distinguished for fine natural abilities and extensive reading.
 - ii. Caroline,⁷ who is no further reported.
 - iii. Sarah Helen,⁷ who for 8 or 10 years was principal of the female department in Kimball Union Academy; m. Rev. Mr. Clark; rs. Honolulu, Sandwich Islands.
 - iv. Levi,⁷ who rs. a respectable farmer in Hanover, N. H.
 - v. Chandler,⁷ A. M., fitted for college at Kimball Union Academy, with a view to the ministry, was, by a defect of eyesight, induced to change his purpose; and after his graduation at Dart. College, he studied law, and is now in successful practice in Michigan.
 - vi. Nancy,⁷ who is no further reported.

CHAPT. V.

JOHN RICHARDS.

"John Richards¹ of Eele River," in Plymouth, is first mentioned July 12, 1637. The General Court then placed him under bonds, and probably indentured him for one year, for some slight breach of the peace; and "he acknowledged himself indebted to the king, XI^{II}," and Thomas Little became his surety that "he should keep the peace towards the king &c., and especially towards Mark Mendall and appear at the next Gen. Court." He was then a young man, and not until many years after a member of the church. At the next session of the General Court he seems to have given satisfaction and was made rectus in curia; and Nov 5, 1638, received from the Court "25 acres at Mannamet Pond due to him by indenture." He is supposed to have married, late in life, Lydia Beman, and continued for 20 years a peaceful and respected citizen in the community of Plymouth. In 1644 he had no doubt become a merchant, was dignified with the title of Mr., and sued Gowen White for a debt of £4. 10s. and recovered. In 1652 he was perhaps absent, as "Mrs. Richards," a rare title in that age, and indicative of consideration, if not of quality, is reported in Plymouth as claiming "a stray steere." He was doubtless the brother of William, and the nephew of Thomas, Richards, Sr. His cousins had become the wives of Thomas Hinckley, afterwards Governor, and of William Bradford, the son of Gov. Bradford, and afterwards Dep. Governor, which naturally improved his standing. No further notice of him, or of any of his family, is to be found on Plymouth or Mass. records, and he is believed to have removed about 1658, with Thomas Crocker and Thos. Leonard, to New London, where he died, 1687. "In 1660 he there purchased two house lots, on" what is now "State street, and built his house at the corner of Huntington street," which, says Miss Caulkins, in her invaluable history of New London, "remained the seat of the family for more than a century." In 1671, when he was probably received a member of the church in New London, he had seven children baptized. Some of these must then have been far advanced in their minority; for he had a dau. married in 1678, and only one child subsequently born. Nothing of their ages can be inferred from the order in which their names are recorded; but John is elsewhere called his oldest son. He had,

2. 10. John,² Lt., his father's eldest son, was by no means his oldest child; four, at least, of his sisters being his seniors. He was born 1666, and died Nov. 2, 1720. He m. Love Manwaring, dau. of Oliver M. of

New London. Lt. Richards was an important man for his day, and figures in the military history of New London. In 1690 he was employed in "searching guns," and the town, menaced with an attack from the French privateers on the coast, kept up a watch at the mouth of the harbor, in 1711, for 46 nights continuously, under his charge. When the Colony invested the Bartlett lands for the support of a public Latin school in New London, he was made a feoffee. These lands, situated on the river above the town, he afterwards purchased for £300, and left them to his descendants. He, like Thomas, Sr., and many of his cousins, was no doubt a merchant. "No spot in N. London was more noted," says Miss Caulkins, "than Lt. Richards's corner, now opposite the Court House." He was rich. In the inventory of his estate, one half of the "Bartlett Farm" was appraised at £315; and gold buttons, silver plate, gold and silver coin, &c., are enumerated. He had 10 or 12 children, viz:

P. S. The larger part of the names in the preceding Chapter have been drawn from a Genealogical Chart, prepared by the late William H. Richards, Esq., (No. 398,) and kindly furnished by Mrs. Sally (Richards) Lockwood, (No. 142,) who holds it as a precious memorial of his reverence for ancestry, affection for relatives, and benevolence for the race. In this Chart such portions as could be compared with public records are full and correct; indicating a thorough hand, and pledging as much accuracy in the whole as is ever attained in the first edition of any similar work. As a specimen of his taste and assiduity, the friends of Genealogy, and especially the Richards race, must regret that he had not been spared, not only to perfect this Chapter, but to compile the rest; for then the author would have been excused to labor in other neglected fields; while he, being a Richards, would have awakened more attention, secured prompter and greater aid, and a wider circulation of the work; and might at the same time have rendered it more accurate, complete and acceptable. But he has executed the part assigned by Providence, and it belongs to his race to cherish his memory gratefully for the service. It was no light task that he performed for them. His obituary and portrait, early solicited, have not been received.

CHAPT. VI.

EDWARD RICHARDS.

Edward Richards¹ is presumed to have been the nephew of Thomas, Sr., and the brother of Nathaniel¹ and Thomas, Jr., and the cousin or brother of William¹ and John¹ of Plymouth. He probably came with Nathaniel in the Lyon, in 1632, and resided with him at Cambridge until 1636. During 1635-6, the enterprises of planting Hartford and Dedham were undertaken, from the villages of Cambridge and Watertown, then about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles apart. Nathaniel embarked in the emigration to Hartford. But, if Edward was his brother, why did he not attend him? The cause is presumed to have been a social one. Elder John Hunting of Watertown had decided on removing to Dedham, and Edward had probably become betrothed to Susan Hunting, whom he married Sept. 10, 1638, about 15 months after the principal planters removed to Dedham. She was doubtless the sister of Elder Hunting, and chose to live by her brother in Dedham, rather than remove with strangers to Hartford; and her lover preferred her pleasure to the society of his brother.

He was received as one of the proprietors of Dedham, 1636-7, then embracing the territory of nine present townships, and became the 62d signer of her social compact. "On ye 17^d of ye 5^{mo} 1640 he was received into ye Church, giving good satisfaction;" and his wife Susan was received 19 (11) 1644. With this church they walked blameless through life. In 1641 he took the freeman's oath; and in 1646 was chosen selectman, and by annual elections served nine years.

Edward Richards began life with more means than most of the planters of Dedham, and left his descendants good estates. The proprietors having adopted the rule of dividing their lands generally according to estate, he drew an uncommon amount, in no less than 14 lots. In 1648 his county rate was above the average; and in 1651 his house was valued at £18, when only twelve in Dedham were valued higher. In 1657-8 a precious cedar swamp was apportioned to 79 proprietors, and the size of 43 of the lots is given. Of these, Edward Richards received the largest next to Rev. Mr. Allin, the minister. But of these grants he must have made no great account. For, according to tradition, he wore the sobriquet of "Gent. Richards," and obviously aspired to a manor, and was the only planter of Dedham who did so. Farms, as they were called, i. e. extensive tracts, were early granted by the General Court to the high men of the colony, and to no others. These were expected to be manors. One, prior to the incorporation of Dedham, had been granted within her subsequent limits, to Mr. Cook, probably of Watertown. This, Gent. R. evidently purchased, preparatory to settling in Dedham, and proceeded independently, receiving no house or home lot in the town, as did all others. Upon this estate he commenced his improvements. Here he read his Bible, communed with his Redeemer, interceded for his race, and ended his pilgrimage.

In May, 1684, being advanced in age, he walked to a neighbor's, and before witnesses dictated a will, left it to be copied, and died before he had an opportunity to sign it. In this he gave his wife room in his house, the selection of "household stuff" to the value of £40, and an annuity of £12, to be paid her by his sons Nathaniel and John. His homestead, the place now owned and occupied by Rev.

Dr. Burgess, two miles west of the Court House, he gave to his son Nathaniel, with lots in Fowl Meadow, and on Pond, Poweset, Birch, and Great Plains. "The remainder of Mr. Cook's Farm" he gave to Nathaniel and John. To his son [in law] Bullard he gave £5 in addition to what he had already given him; and to his daughter Mary Bullard £15, if left a widow, to be paid her in three annual instalments. To his son [in law] Hearsey he bequeathed £40, in addition to what he had previously granted him. To his grand-daughter Mary (Bullard) Gay he willed £30, in addition to what she had already received. To his son Nathaniel, "if he brought up a son to learning," he bequeathed "£60 more out of his estate towards it."

This will was proved September 25, 1684. [Suf. W., vol. 6, p. 472.] In review of it, curiosity inquires why did the father pass by the senior son, and bequeath to the junior his homestead, and a double portion of his other estate? No misdemeanor had happened; no superiority of one above the other can be inferred. Why then this reversal of a common practice? The solution is easy. The ambition of the testator looked ahead. The privations of a new country had affected his family. He wanted his name and place transmitted, and his race to maintain rank. Now John, the elder, had only one son, and he the first born, whose birth had been followed by that of four daughters. By this time the patriarch must have concluded, that if the last had been named Waitstill, which, in other families, had so often brought a boy, it would not insure him another grandson by John, and certainly not a house full to bear up his name, and furnish graduates, ministers, and judges. But, at the date of the will, Nathaniel, the junior brother, had nothing but sons, three already born, another near his arrival, and more in prospect. These were a pledge of the certain transmission of the name and homestead in the line of Nathaniel, and of the birth of many sons to be brought up "to learning," and stand foremost in Church and State. He therefore made him his chief legatee; and a comparison of the first and second sections of this Chapter, will show how correctly the old Puritan reasoned, and how wisely he acted. John had enough, and Nathaniel none too much; for the old homestead continued in his family longer than the crown of Great Britain has remained in one House, or entailments, on an average, in one name.

Edward Richards¹ was born about 1610–15, died 25 (6) 1684, and his widow, Susan Hunting, died 9 (7) 1684. Happy in their lives, in their deaths they were not divided. They had, at Dedham,

- VII. Samuel,³ Jan. 30, 1688, by 2d wife, d. May 6, 1706, aged 18 yrs.

2. 7. John,³ m. Judith Fairbank, had the homestead of his father in Dedham, and much land in Fowl Meadow was assigned him, 1692–3. He made his will Jan. 25, 1718–19, giving to his wife Judith the improvement of his place in Dedham, the service of two negro slaves, Jane and Dick, and power to sell 500 acres of his lands in Sutton, and appropriate the avails to the bringing up of his children, or to give it to Joseph, then in college. But, if she m. again, she was to have only £30, and this to be paid her by his sons Timothy and Samuel, to whom he bequeathed in equal shares his homestead, after the death or remarriage of their mother. To his son John he gave all his lands at Clapboardtrees, (now West Dedham.) His widow Judith lived until 1744. He had,

165. 294. Reuel,⁷ Esq., commenced life without capital, and became one of the most eminent practical manufacturers in Rhode Island. He devoted his principal attention to the manufacture of printed cloths; and accumulated about $30,000 by the business. In a paper printed at Central Falls, Smithfield, where he died, he is thus noticed: "He was distinguished for unusually active business habits. His generous and liberal disposition won for him the friendship of all who made his acquaintance or had dealings with him, and it is probable that of the many individuals who have been in his employ not one ever left him dissatisfied. He looked upon the laborer as an equal, and treated him as a friend. His public spirit endeared him to his fellow citizens, and his death has left a void not to be easily filled." "His eulogy is in the hearts of those who knew him best. Enshrined in their affections, the tear of sorrow will long be shed over his grave, and long after his remains have mouldered to dust will he be deplored by those to whom he was so dear."

CHAPT. VI. SECTION II.

✓ Nathaniel,² Mr., inherited the homestead where Rev. Ebenezer Burgess, D. D., of Dedham, now resides, and about a double share of his father's lands. He was a man of character and standing, and wore the title of Mr. He m. 28 (12) 1678, Mary Aldis of Dedham, dau. of Dea. John and Sarah (Elliott) Aldis, and born 29 (9) 1657, who survived him. He took the freeman's oath 1690, and made his will Jan. 26, 1721-2. This was exhibited in court March 11, 1726-7, by his son Edward, who declined to act as one of the executors. It was again presented Dec. 10, 1731, by Edward Richardson, and proved. In this he gave his wife Mary all his silver money, the use and improvement of all his housing and lands and movables during her life; mentions having previously given Nathaniel and James lands to a considerable amount, and to Jeremiah £60 in silver, and loaned him £30. He gave Nathaniel 20 acres at Strawberry Hill, and one third of his cedar swamp, near Easy Plain. To James, 40 acres at Strawberry Hill, one third of his cedar swamp, and one half of his cow commons; and to Jeremiah the £30 which he had loaned him, and one third of his cedar swamp. To his daughters, Mary Totman, to whom he had given £57, an additional sum of £43; and to Elizabeth, £100, i. e. £50 at her marriage, and £50 in four years after the death of his wife, or £100 if unmarried at the death of his wife.

To his son Edward he bequeathed his homestead, and all his lands on both sides of the road leading from the town into the woods, the Allen meadow, six acres of woodland near Ephraim Wilson, Sr.'s, all his land at Cole Hearth Plain, two acres of cedar swamp near Wigwam Plain, one half of his cow commons, and all his movables. After the death of his wife, Edward was required to run out the lots given to his brothers, and in four years to pay all legacies. He cut off any of the legatees who should attempt to break his will, and gave their portion to be equally divided to the rest; and appointed his wife Mary, and son Edward, executors. Witnesses, Noah and Eleazer Kingsbury, Henry Fuller, Samuel Woodcock, and Michael Metcalf. He died very suddenly while sitting in his chair, Feb. 15, 1726-7, in his 79th year. He had,

16. 59. Nathaniel,⁴ Esq., inherited the homestead of his enterprising father, at Jamaica Plain, now in West Roxbury; m. Aug. 12, 1736, Mary Colburn, d. Nov. 20, 1746; and 2d, Jan. 19, 1748-49, Mary Whiting from Dedham, now Dover. Before and during the revolutionary war he kept the Peacock tavern, at Jamaica Plain; became a magistrate, was highly respected for his intelligence, and esteemed for his virtues. He was an open and decided whig, and the weight of his influence on the multitude who called at his house, was not small, in arousing and encouraging them to resist oppression. His sentiments, however, did not, prior to the commencement of hostilities, hinder English officers from holding parties at his house, and some amusing anecdotes are still related of his intercourse with them. On records he is styled both innholder and sadler. Dec. 3, 1781, he "being far advanced in years," made his will, giving to his sons Nathaniel and Joel his farming

- utensils, and one half of the remainder of his personal property. To his wife Mary, the improvement of his real estate during the minority of Nathaniel, but if he died before attaining his majority, she was to enjoy them during the minority of Joel, provided she remained his widow. If she married again she was to be allowed the improvement of one third. To his daughters Hannah Davis, Molly Mayo, and Sarah, Rebecca, and Ann Richards, he bequeathed £60 each, in silver, to be estimated at 6s. 8d. per oz. To Nathaniel he gave two thirds, and to Joel one third of the remainder of his estate, and made them heirs of each other. Widow Mary was "sole executrix." His will was proved Apr. 18, '88, and his estate inventoried at £885. He had,

97. 285. Jonathan,⁵ Lieut. and Dea., inherited and occupied to the close of the 2d century, the homestead of his puritan ancestor; which, although hallowed by so many sacred and tender recollections, has been suffered to pass out of the name. In early life he enjoyed only common advantages of education, but he made more than a common man, and was distinguished for strength of mind and intelligence. During our struggle for independence, he served two campaigns in the army, was afterwards placed in command of the militia of Dedham, and chosen to almost every office in her gift, and particularly to those of selectman and representative. But it was as a man, as a member and officer in the church, that he claims a respectful and grateful remembrance. Rev. Dr. Burgess, in a discourse to a great assemblage at his funeral, in the busiest season of the year, speaks of him as having for many years faithfully performed the duties of a deacon in the church, and as "always prompt in charitable contributions to bestow his share, whether in relation to the church, or any other benevolent purpose; as having been often appealed to in the settlement of arbitrations, because always impartial; as noted for temperance, kindness, and philanthropy; and as patient under his sufferings, at times very acute, from an incurable disease."

He speaks of Dea. Richards' house, as the abode of order and hospitality, in which was heard the voice of daily prayer, and where as it is believed it has been heard for about 227 years.* Dr. Burgess speaks of his seat at public worship as never vacant, except from absolute sickness, and of him as joining his voice with that of the choir, of which for many years he had been the leader; as being devoted to the Bible, and to religious ordinances; as firm in his faith and belief in the promises of the Gospel; as being neither enthusiastic nor superstitious in his religion, and as evincing daily in his words and actions his religious principles and feelings. Dea. Jonathan R. m. May 5,

* Circumstances indicate that the settlement of Dedham began a few rods from the mansion of Rev. Dr. Burgess, sometime before the incorporation of the town, and the laying out of the village; and if no grant of his home lot, by the proprietors of Dedham can be ascertained, the evidence may be nearly or quite satisfactory. The non-exception of Mr. Cook's farm, p. 106, in the grant of the township, is of little weight to the contrary.

In the former he fired 24 rounds, knocked down a British officer with the butt of his musket, and retreated, running directly over the body of Gen. Warren. One night, being on guard, Washington, to test his fidelity, as he was wont to do in other cases, appeared before him, whom he challenged with "Who comes there?" "A friend," W. replied. "Friend, advance and give the countersign." Washington gave the wrong name. "Stand!" exclaimed Josiah, "the countersign is not right." "It is of no consequence," said Washington, "I am your commander-in-chief, and must pass, as I have urgent business." Josiah presented his bayonet, and told him if he advanced another step he would run him through. Washington turned, went to the officer of the guard, took his name, and the next day sent for him, clapped him on the shoulder, adding "My good fellow, you were faithful and true last night, and I will see you promoted." 107. 327. Solomon,⁵ Capt., m. March 3, 1775, Sarah Richards, (No. 61.) She was a woman of remarkable energy and great moral excellence, and retained her faculties, in a wonderful degree, to the last. Capt. Solomon, for many years commander of a company of cavalry, was an early and zealous whig. On the morning of the battle at Lexington, he was met, on his way to Boston, with the report that the British were on their march to Concord; and as he was turning his course for Dover, to rally men to the scene of conflict, up rode a man direct from Boston, contradicting the report. Capt. R. instantly marked him for a tory, took him prisoner, bound him upon his own horse, and escorted him to the Peacock tavern at Jamaica Plain, and detained him until the truth could be known. In the meantime a body of soldiers arrived, and demanded the tory, that they might hang him during their halt. But Capt. R. and his father-in-law resisted their demands, insisted on giving the man a trial, and through their well-known patriotism, prevailed, and saved the man from the gallows, but not from 39 lashes, ordered by a court. In 1804 he rm. from Dover to W. Roxbury, where he d. aged 83. He had, at Dover,

292. 731. Reuben,⁶ Esq., received an excellent academic education in his native town, and early acquired habits of reading and observation, which he retained during life; was much esteemed by his teachers, and particularly noted for his love of books. This led him to accumulate a valuable library, which his children afterwards received as a richer legacy than land or stock. Among his juvenile attainments was a superior chirography, the peculiar ease and neatness of which he never lost. He came to Boston when quite young, determined to accomplish himself for mercantile pursuits; and after the customary years of severe probation, which he perseveringly endured without change of place, he established himself near the scene of his early struggles. From the very first he was eminently industrious and successful, and soon accumulated a competency, in the accomplishment of which he was favored by the peculiarity of the times. The peace of 1815 found him well started in the importing business, which henceforward proved very lucrative; and his enterprise and assiduity earned a ready reward. In business transactions he was ever honorable and upright. The troublous times of the embargo, which wrecked so many, had made him careful and economical; and gave him lessons which, when surrounded by more prosperous circumstances, he never forgot. Mercantile business, at that early period, was carried on in a far different way from the present, and the small store in Dock Square which he, for so many years occupied, would hardly be thought at the present day a proper field for an extensive business; and even he lived to outgrow it, and became the first to avail himself of the superior accommodations offered by the enterprise of the elder Quincy, when, in 1825, he projected the new streets surrounding the Quincy market. His removal to South Market street gave a new impulse to his prosperity. He thenceforth largely increased his business, and in a few years was enabled to make extensive investments in real estate, which proved quite remunerative in the then rapidly increasing prosperity of the city. The various railway enterprises which he also favored, increased the value of such investments. Finally, after nearly forty years of prosperity, (including the panic years 1837-38), without any partnership, he, in 1846, relinquished his business to his sons, and retired, with an ample fortune, to an estate which he had purchased in Dedham some years before, and where, for many summers, the health of his family had been invigorated. His winters were, however, still spent at his mansion in Summer street, as he never could wholly relinquish the city, which had so long been the scene of his labors and domestic happiness. He died May 1, 1855, and was interred, with his wives, at Forest Hills cemetery, where a handsome monument, erected in his lifetime, marks the place of their repose. He m. Nov. 17, 1814, Eliza Bordman, a cultivated and accomplished lady, and eminently fitted to aid him in the upward strife of life. With her he lived 25 years, as a kind and tender husband, in the enjoyment of her ardent and devoted affection and gentle care. These years of enjoyment were never in his subsequent days lost sight of. She was born Nov. 17, 1794, d. May 16, 1839, dau. of Thomas Stoddard B., (b. March 23, 1752, d. at Boston, April, 1828,) by wife Thankful Higgins, (from Barnstable, m. 1780, d. 1833, aged 76,) and grd. dau. of Dea. Nov. 9, 1749, d. 1810,) and probably a descendant from Thomas Bordman from London, who was of Plymouth, 1634; of Sandwich, 1638; and of Yarmouth, 1643. Her parents and grd. parents' remains sleep in the family tomb in the Granary cemetery, near the angle overarched by the Boston Atheneum. Reuben⁶ m. 2d, Nov. 17, 1841, Charlotte Maria Odin, b. Dec. 12, '53,) and grd. dau. of Rev. William Walter, D. D., rector of Trinity church, Boston, by his wife Lydia Lynde, (dau. of Hon. Benjamin L., Jr., of Salem, by his wife Mary, dau. of Hon. John Bowles,) and gr. grd. dau. of Rev. Nathaniel Walter, A. M., pastor of 2d Congreg'l church, Roxbury, by his wife Rebecca Abbot, (dau. of William A. of Brookline, by his wife Rebecca, dau. of Dr. Thomas Boylston,) and gr. gr. grd. dau. of Rev. Nehemiah Walter, A. M., (the colleague of the Apostle Elliot in the 1st church in Roxbury, by his wife Sara, dau. of Rev. Increase Mather, by his wife Maria, dau. of Rev. John Cotton,) and gr. gr. gr. grd. dau. of Thomas Walter, attorney at law, who descended from a high family of Lancaster, England, came to Boston, 1680, and in Nov. of that year united by letter with the 2d church. He m. for 2d wife, Abigail East, widow of David E., previously the widow of Jonathan Woodbury, and dau. of Dea. Henry Phillips, a distinguished and honored citizen of Boston.

- I have been thus particular in giving the descent of Mrs. William B. Richards (Cornelia W. Walter) from a long line of men celebrated for genius, talent, and virtue, because I deem it important that their names should be kept in remembrance. On the paternal side it is worthy of particular notice that she is only the fifth in a direct line from Increase Mather, and is also the gr. grd. child of Benjamin Lynde, Jr., and gr. gr. grd. child of Hon. Benjamin Lynde, Sr., both chief justices of the then province of Massachusetts. It is not wonderful that some of the talents and vigor of such a race should have descended in the female line, and that Mrs. R. should have received as an inheritance so fair a share of their gifts. This lady will be remembered for that tact and versatility of acquisition which enabled her to carry on, for rather more than four years, the editorship of the "Boston Transcript;" or during the brief period which she wished to retain it as a brother's legacy. Eminently successful in this enterprise, her resignation of the conduct of that journal was received with universal regret; but she assumed other duties, by a marriage which couples her name in this connection with the Richards family, and the comforts of her home caused her to relinquish a career which, if urged by necessity, might have made her name distinguished amongst the female writers of her day. William B.,⁷ and Cornelia W. R. had,

CHAPT. VII.

RICHARD RICHARDS.

1. Richard,¹ a puritan, was of Lynn, probably in 1633, where his estate was inventoried 24 (4) 1678, consisting of a few old farming implements, and an incomplete set of old articles of house furniture, indicating an aged husbandman, who had ceased from labor and housekeeping, and disposed of his stock and real estate; retaining, as a dependent boarder, the occupancy of a single room and bed. He was no doubt the ancestor of the following race, among whom his name has been reverentially cherished down to the present time. He seems to have had only one son, who survived him, and had issue, viz:

2. Edward,² born 1621, died Jan. 26, 1689-90. He must have been quite in his minority at the incorporation of Lynn, and could not therefore have been admitted a proprietor; yet he was afterwards the owner of a town right, which he had probably received from his father; and the testimony which he gave in court relative to the earliest claims of certain inhabitants, indicates that he was upon the ground at the commencement of the settlement, in 1633. He is styled both joiner and husbandman. In 1688, he signed a protest against the grant of Nahant by Gov. Andros. For the non-observance of some rule of the planters, Girard Spencer, in 1646, entered against him a complaint, yet he seems to have been a regular and peaceful citizen, and a reliable man. He is not recorded as having taken the oath of fidelity; and I find no evidence, beyond identity of very common names, that he was in any way connected with the other families here traced. He died intestate, and his estate, not including his town right, was inventoried at £180. His widow Ann was appointed administrator, and William Richards her principal surety. They had,

1. Deborah,³ who d. Dec. 24, 1679.

3. II. William,³ of whom is found no further notice.

5. 4. III. John,³ who m. Nov. 18, 1674, Mary Brewer.

4. 5. John,³ was a soldier in Philip's war; and 1685, petitioned for a grant in the Nipmuck country as compensation. He settled in Lynn, took the freeman's oath 1691, and Jan. 12, 1705-6, made his will, giving to his wife Mary the use of one end of his house, and all his goods and movables to be at her disposal; and to his son Crispus, all his remaining real and personal estate, not otherwise bequeathed, requiring him to provide a comfortable maintenance for his mother, so long as she remained a widow. To daughter Abigail he gave £13; to Elizabeth £10; to Mary £8. To grd. sons Joseph, Benjamin, and David Darling, and Joseph Richards, son of Crispus, and John Richards, son of Edward, he gave each one sheep. To his son John, 40s.; to Edward, 20s.; to Joseph, 20s.; and to William, 20s., and "no more," because "he had already given John a good trade, as well as some of his other sons, whereby they are in good ways for a living in this world, and have not in time past done for me as my son Crispus hath, who hath borne the burden of my work and taken care of me in all my long and tedious weakness and lameness for many years past." CHAPT. VIII.

PAUL RICHARDS.

Paul Richards,¹ in no way connected, as I can discover, with any of the name who first planted in New England, but doubtless, like most of them, a trader or merchant, first appears in New York. Here, Dec. 3, 1667, he received, by patent from Richard Nicoll, "Gov. Gen. of all the terratoryes in America of his Royal Highness, James Duke of York and Albany," a lot on Garden street, in New York, 11 rods long on the south, 10 rods 7 feet on the north, and 1 rod on the east, and 30 feet on the west. This he sold March 17, 1680, to Jacob Abrams Stantford. No wife joined with him in the conveyance, and he probably died soon after. He is supposed to have had,

- I. John² (?) b. 1655, who became a schoolmaster, and d. unm. at Whippany, N. J., Dec. 10, 1718, aged 63. He gave, Sept. 2, 1718, $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres in that part of W. called Percipponong, on the northwest side of Whipponong river, in Hunterdon County, (now Morris Co.) "for a meeting-house, school-house, burying yard, training field, and such like uses and no other."
- II. A son² (?) whose widow Elizabeth, Dec. 5, 1722, sold a lot, 25 feet by 10 feet, on Prince's street, Montgomery Ward.
3. 2. III. Stephen,² who m. Mary —, who d. prior to 1729.
2. 3. Stephen,² settled in New York as a merchant, where he, with his wife Mary, April 28, 1718, leased for £70, to Mathias Naeick, a lot 50 feet by 107 feet, on the north of Crown street. March 1, 1722, he conveyed to his eldest son Paul, a merchant of New York, a lot 21 feet by 61 feet, situated in the east ward, fronting the dock, which he had "received by letters patent, under the great seal of the Province."
- Stephen Richards, "Gent." made his will at New York, April 7, 1729, giving £35 to his eldest son Paul; £25 to his grd. son Stephen Cook, a minor; and one-seventh of the remainder of his estate, (consisting chiefly in houses and lands,) to his son Paul R.; one-seventh to Catherine Cook, the wife of Robert C., merchant of New York; one-seventh of do. to Elizabeth, the wife of Nicholas Van Faerling, merchant; one-seventh of do. to John Richards; one-seventh of do. to Stephen Richards; one-seventh of do. to Henry Richards; one-seventh of do. to Elie Richards, his sons, the two last being then minors; and appointed his sons Paul and Stephen, his executors. His will was witnessed by Jacobus Goolet, John Chambers, and Abraham Lodge. [New York wills, L. 11, p. 14.] He had,
15. 4. I. Paul,³ the eldest son, b. ab. 1700, d. 1756, m. Elizabeth Bache.
5. II. Catherine,³ who m. Robert Cook, merchant of New York; had,
 1. Gertrude,⁴
 2. Elizabeth,⁴ unm. 1773.
7. III. Elizabeth,³ who m. 1st, Nicholas Van Fearling, merchant, New York; and 2d, Nicholas Ray; and had,
 1. Elizabeth Van Fearling,⁴ who, in '73, had m.—Sherbrook.

2. Mary Van Fearling,⁴ who m. Stephen Brown; and in 1773, had, 1. Elizabeth Garland⁵; and 2. Paul Richards.⁵

3. Stephen R. Ray,⁴ by her 2d husband.

16. 11. iv. John,³ who d. March 17, 1765, m. 1st, an English lady; 2d, Elizabeth Van Rensselaer.

21. 12. v. Stephen,³ who m. Esther —; and d. 1776, at Elizabethtown.

22. 13. vi. Henry,³ a minor in 1729, d. unm. 1736, at Madeira.

23. 14. vii. Elly,³ a minor in 1729, and living in 1756; r. at Bermuda; had,
1. Sarah.⁴ 2. Elizabeth.⁴

4. 15. Paul,³ was a distinguished merchant, and probably the head of a firm of five brothers, who inherited their father's business in New York, and extended it; planting houses probably in New Haven, Albany, and Bermuda. Aug. 6, 1751, he bought of Jehiel Tuttle of Wallingford, for £5,000, O. T., "one certain messuage in New Haven, containing a dwelling-house, barn, and garden, bounded north on the green or market-place, so called; thence southerly to stones marked A. M.; thence east to stones marked A. M.,; on the east by the land of John Hubbard, Esq.; and west on Town street; with all privileges, &c., thereunto belonging." This lot is probably now situated at the intersection of George and Meadow streets. Feb. 19, 1754, he purchased of David Worster of New Haven, for £700, a lot opposite Mr. Thomas Clapp's; and March 15, 1756, sold it for £700, to Nathan Beers of New Haven. April 9, 1756, he bought of Caleb Thompson of Waterbury, for £245, 14s., current money of New York, a lot in New Haven, 32 ft. by 37 ft., with "4-7" of a dwelling on the same, bounded south by the town street, east by Roger Alling and David Austin, north and west by widow Thompson. Of this, and the first lot described, he died in possession, for aught appears, soon after the last purchase. He also made other purchases in New Haven, at different times, indicating his frequent presence or temporary residence in the town. May 12, 1727, he and his wife Elizabeth leased a house and lot at New York, which he had received of his father Stephen in 1722. He, having no issue, seems by will to have left his estate to his widow and five brothers and sisters. He m. Elizabeth Bache, who with his brothers John and Stephen, and her brother Theophilate Bache, became executors, Dec. 3, 1756. She made her will March 3, 1773, directing that her body should be interred near her husband's, "in Trinity church." She gave to her brother-in-law Stephen Richards, then of Elizabethtown, his father's picture, and her silver tankard. To Elizabeth Cook, a pair of silver salt cellars, a silver porringer, and a silver waiter, formerly her grandfather's. To Elizabeth Sherbrook, her silver coffee pot. To Paul Richards Randall, a piece of plate, valued at £25. To Elizabeth Garland Brown, a piece of plate, valued at £25; and to Paul Richards Brown, a silver porringer and soup spoon.

To the rector and inhabitants of New York, in communion with the Episcopal church as established by law, £300, to be "put out and kept at interest forever."

To her cousin Mary Bache, widow of William B., late of Preston, Lancashire, Eng., £500, and most of her apparel. To Elizabeth Garland, dau. of Theophilate B., the remainder of her apparel, her gold watch and equipage, and £400 in money. To Paul Richards Bache, son of Theophilate B., one half of 1,000 acres of land in Albany Co. The remainder of her estate, except £25 to Ismay Burnett, widow of George B., and £25 to Adam Engler, she gave to her dearly beloved kinsman, Mr. Theophilate Bache, merchant of New York, and made him her sole executor.

11. 16. John,³ a merchant of New York, is presumed from records and circumstances to have been much of his time abroad, transacting the foreign business of the firm. He married first, an accomplished lady from England, and brought her to New Haven. About this very time he must have received news of the death of his brother Henry, at Madeira; which, not improbably, called him to leave her as he did, in good quarters, where their son John was born. He being detained, she at length committed her child to a fond nurse, and left, as if to join him, but did not live to return. The father made remittances for the support of his son, until he returned and married 2d, Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, dau. of Hendrick Van R., whose aristocratic blood could endure no rival, and little John was not taken home by the father; yet he was owned and supported at New Haven, by regular remittances from him, who, for good reasons, is believed to have resumed and continued his residence abroad. He had,

24. 17. I. John,⁴ b. 1737, d. 1801, aged 64 years, m. Lydia Thomas.

18. II. Paul,⁴ confirmed in St. George's church, New York, 1759, d. unm.

20. 19. III. Stephen,⁴ b. ab. 1744, died s. p. 1773, m. Margaret (?) pr. Livingston

Their father John,³ made his will March 1, 1765, giving to his wife Elizabeth his plate, goods, bonds outstanding, and rents of his houses, while she remained his widow; also "one-half of what division of his brother Paul's estate shall be made," which was bequeathed to him by Paul's last will. After her death or re-marriage, he gave to his son Stephen, all his houses, but excepted the house which had been left by Paul, as appears in a subsequent clause, in which he anticipates a full division of his estate into five equal parts, and orders that "John Richards shall have his [i. e. Paul's] house, and Stephen everything else he was to expect from the estate of Paul." His wife Elizabeth, his son Stephen, his brother Stephen, and his brother-in-law John Van Rensselaer, he made executors. Will proved March 21, 1765.

It was now 9 years since the death of Paul, and a partial division of his estate among the legatees had probably been made, securing to John the power of bequeathing to John, Jr., a certain house in New Haven, of which Paul had died seized. This must then have been a valuable property. It stood fronting the old market in the centre of business, where Paul or the firm had probably conducted a store, perhaps by the agency of John Hubbard, who owned the lot adjacent, and was found in possession of this house after the death of John Richards, Sr. It is safe to assert that Hubbard had never purchased it; for he was eminently attentive to the registration of his numerous deeds of other lots, insignificant compared to this. The last deed of this property on record prior to 1784, was from Tuttle to Paul Richards, Aug. 2, 1751. Did not John Hubbard, "Esq." then keep the orphan John R., Jr., out of his patrimony until he had acquired a right by possession? April 10, 1784, Leverett Hubbard, Col. and Dr., the son of John H., Esq., occupied the house, and received a quit-claim from the other heirs of their deceased mother, Sarah Hubbard, the widow of John, viz.: from John and Mary (Hubbard?) Lewis, and John and Sarah (Hubbard?) Trumbull of Hartford. After this, Col. H. built the brick house now standing upon the premises, which his son, Dr. Nathaniel H., sold to William Leffingwell, and he to William C. Leffingwell, whose widow and heirs now possess it.

After the death of John,³ his widow Elizabeth removed to Albany, where she buried her last son Stephen and died herself, s. p., 1779. She made her will Dec. 16, 1776, in which she bequeathed to her brother William Van Rensselaer and her nephew Stephen Van R., (since patroon of Albany,) a lot, with buildings, on Broadway, N. Y.; and to her brothers and sisters, viz., John, Henry, and William Van R., Lena Wendall, Catherine Ten Broeck, Maria Ten Broeck, and to the child of Annatie Daw (d.), each an undivided one-seventh of all her other real estate. To Lena Wendall she also gave £60 in money, and her apparel; and made her brothers John, Henry, and William Van R., her executors. Will proved at Albany, April 23, 1779. Of this estate, great as it undoubtedly was, John Richards of New Haven was righteously the only heir; yet this heartless woman, whom God had written childless, had no justice or generosity towards him, nor respect enough for her husband to remember his only surviving son, on whom alone it devolved to transmit his name, and that of four entire generations, honorable and aristocratic enough for inter-alliance with the Rensselaers. But she has gone to judgment; and in the yards "where lie the dead and where the living lie," no laudation of her character, or of that of John Hubbard, will find response in a Richards' heart, while each will reflect, that but for their wickedness, John⁴ might have shared in luxuries, and perished with the rest, and none of his race have seen life.

19. 20. Stephen,⁴ m. Margaret [pr. Livingston,] by whom he had no issue, and d. March 15-19, 1773.

He, "late of New York, merchant, and now of Albany," March 15, 1773, willed to his wife Margaret £1,000, and all the furniture, clothes and jewels received at their marriage. To his uncle John Van Rensselaer, his silver-hilted sword, his shoe and knee buckles, his gold stock buckle, his gold-headed cane and sleeve buttons. To his cousin Jeremiah Van Rensselaer, £25. To his mother Elizabeth Richards, to his cousins Stephen Randall and Stephen Brown, all the remainder of his estate in New York and elsewhere, that had been his uncle Paul's. To his mother Elizabeth he gave all the estate that had once been his father's, and left to him. To John H. Schuyler, son of Harmanis S., he gave two lots at Albany, reserving for his mother the use of a garden upon the same. He made Philip Livingston, John Van Rensselaer, and Abraham Ten Broeck, executors.

Will proved March 19, 1773.

12. 21. Stephen,³ a wealthy merchant of New York, retired to Elizabethtown, N. J., where he made his will, Sept. 10, 1776, bequeathing his estate to his widow Esther, and nephews and nieces, viz., Sarah and Elizabeth Richards, the daughters of his brother Elly, Stephen Richards Derby, Stephen Richards Deheart, Gertrude and Elizabeth Cook, Elizabeth Sherbrook, Mary Brown, and Stephen Richards Ray. He made bequests to the church in Elizabethtown, and to Rev. Mr. Caldwell, the pastor. He died soon after, s. p.

13. 22. Henry,³ a merchant of New York, unmarried, made his will May 11, 1736, giving his silver mug and baker to Miss Hester Depaw; £50 to Morris Deheart, and the remainder of his estate in equal shares to his brothers and sisters. Thomas Thatch and Stephen Debrass, executors.

14. 23. "Elly" or "Elie,"³ was no doubt a merchant, and stationed with his family at Bermuda, where he left two daughters, viz.:

I. Sarah.⁴ II. Elizabeth.⁴

17. 24. John,⁴ was aware of his father's design to leave him the estate in New Haven, which had been his uncle Paul's, and always regarded himself as fraudulently kept out of it; yet of the existence of the will and bequest he had no knowledge; and his perfidious step-mother and co-executor John Van Rensselaer never executed the clause relating to him, but allowed his portion to remain in the hands of John Hubbard, who, according to tradition, had already for years pocketed the rent designed by the father for the support and education of the son. Had they made conveyance to H. it is certain the records would show it. John⁴ m. Lydia Thomas of New Haven; r. in what became West Haven. Had,

CHAPT. X.

JOHN RICHARDS, 2D.

1. John Richards,¹ no doubt the brother of Humphrey of Boston, appears first at Newbury, where, March 22, 1694, he married Hannah Goodrich, who died 1695, s. p.; and 2d, July 16, 1696, Sarah Cheney. He did not remain many years at N., but after 1703 probably followed others from N. to Piscataqua river, and finally settled about nine miles west of Dover, in N. H., on the present road to Rochester. Here he or his sons erected a substantial garrison-house, which stood until nearly or quite the beginning of the present century. The trace of it may be ascertained about one mile east of the village of Rochester, and marks a spot rendered classical, not only by the tragedy there enacted, but from its being the geographical centre of a numerous race. Here he and his wife are supposed to have died, but no record or headstone informs us how or when. His first location in Newbury is said to have been near Plumb Island. He had,

2. I. Sarah,² b. Sept. 13, 1697, at Newbury.
 3. II. Mehitable,² June 25, 1699, m.(?) March 18, 1719, George Hensley at Boston.
 10. 4. III. Benjamin,² "born in the year one," as he used to say, and if born April 24, 1701, the difference between his birth and the birth before and the one after it would be 19 months and 2 weeks, i. e. 2 weeks greater than between the two first births in the family.
 5. IV. Sarah,² "Feb. 10, 1702," i. e. 1702-3, as we reckon when both O. and N. S. are not expressed. These were born at Newbury.
 20. 6. V. Joseph,² b. probably at Piscataqua, d. June 27, 1746, killed by Indians.
 24. 7. VI. James,² "b. about 1709," at P., d. 1789, at Camden, Me., m. Sarah Foss.
 29. 8. VII. John,² b. at P., taken prisoner by Indians, June 27, 1746, m. Abigail Miles or Myers.
 9. VIII. Another son,²(?) who left issue at Goffstown.
4. 10. Benjamin,² by trade a carpenter, "came from Rochester, N. H., to Haverhill, and in 1723 purchased a tract of land in the north part of the town now Atkinson." "In 1727 he there made the first settlement." When the Congregational church of A. was formed, he became one of the original members, and tradition has brought down a high character of him for humility and devotion. Like others of his family he was endowed with remarkable physical vigor and tenacity of life. At the age of 87 years he was seen to mount his horse without a stirrup, with a broad axe in his hand. He attained, however, no rare longevity for his race, for he died Dec. 15, 1796, aged 96, while he has remote relatives as old now living in health.* He m. March 2, 1723, Mary Staples, who d. Oct. 30, 1725; and 2d, Dec. 29, 1726, Abigail Bradley, who d. April 21, 1789. He had,

* Records show that longevity never results from inter-marriages between short-lived races, but has in all instances been inherited, and that it runs out in three generations, unless renewed by inter-alliance with a long-lived race.

11. I. Mary,³ b. Aug. 26, 1724, m. Moses Page, and r. in Goffstown, N. H.
 12. II. Abigail,³ (by 2d wife,) b. Aug. 29, 1727, m. — Sweet; r. Amesbury.
 13. III. Samuel,³ b. March 6, 1733; r. on "Mile strip," Me. 1798; went to Hallowell, Me.
 36. 14. IV. Benjamin,³ Jr., b. Aug. 15, 1737, m. — — —; r. Goffstown.
 38. 15. V. Daniel,³ b. Feb. 29, 1740, m. Hannah Sawyer; r. Atkinson.
 16. VI. Sarah,³ b. March 27, 1745, m. Josiah Emerson; r. Haverhill.
 17. VII. Joseph,³ b. July 21, 1747, m. Judith Pettengill of Newbury.
 49. 18. VIII. Bradley,³ April 27, 1750, d. June 12, 1821, m. Judith Kent of Hampstead, N. H.
 19. IX. Jesse,³(?) perhaps, who rm. from Goffstown, N. H., to Bristol, Me.
6. 20. Joseph,² m. Mary Roberts, s. at Rochester, and perished in middle life. Belknap, in his history of N. H., gives the following account. "June 27, 1746, five men were at work in a field, [in Rochester] having their arms at hand. The Indians concealed themselves. One of them fired to induce the men to discharge their pieces, which they did. The enemy then rushed upon them before they could load again. They retreated to a small deserted house and fastened the door. The Indians tore off the roof, and with their guns and tomahawks dispatched four men, one of whom was Joseph Richards. They wounded and took John Richards. He was kindly used, his wounds were healed, and, after 18 months, he was sent to Boston in a flag of truce."—Vol. 1, p. 291. A different and more reliable account of the capture of John, and his liberation, will be given under No. 29. He had,
 21. I. Rebecca,³ who is no further reported.
 22. II. Jane,³ who m. John Bickford; r. Rochester.
 59. 23. III. Jonathan,³ b. April 16, 1744, m. Betsey Corson; r. R.
7. 24. James,² married Sarah Foss, and lived in Dover, N. H., until about 1774, when he removed to Camden, Me., where his son James, as the first settler of the place, had located in 1769. He died there about 1789, aged about 80 years. He had, at Dover, N. H.,
 25. I. Sarah,³ who m. Joseph Hardy, and died at Camden, Me., aged ab. 80 years.
 67. 26. II. James,³ b. 1743, at D., d. Oct. 27, 1821, m. Betsey Hassam.
 27. III. Dodiphar,³ who figures in the History of Camden, d. in Lincolnville, Me., aged 80 years.
 28. IV. Joseph.³
8. 29. John,² figures in the history of the Indian wars; but every account published of him is not correct. The most reliable one seems to have been derived from his son Tristram, who used often to relate it in the hearing of his grandson, Samuel Richards, Jr., of S. Paris, Me., who has obligingly forwarded the following sketch, adding that the same, in substance, has been handed down among other descendants of this ancestor. "As he, and some of his neighbors, were at work in a field, at Rochester, N. H., they were suddenly surprised by a party of Indians, who ran towards them with terrific yells and whoops. Richards and his neighbors ran for his house, which was near by. Richards, however, concluded, as he neared the house, not to go in; and as his wife was at a garrison, at some distance, he directed his flight for her, but was soon brought down by a bullet. An Indian soon stood over him, with upraised tomahawk, and would soon have killed him, had he not called for quarter. The Indian, finding that he was not dangerously wounded, and that he could travel, spared his life, and took him, with another young man, as a prisoner to Canada. The men who ran into Richards' house were all killed; their bodies being found by some of their friends soon after; and a web, which Mrs. Richards left in the loom unfinished, was found stained with the blood of her neighbors. Richards, and the other young man, having arrived in Canada, and appearing to be contented, were permitted to go out hunting with the Indians; and as they did not try to escape, were, after about a year, allowed to go out alone. They then planned a way to escape. They found a large hollow log in the forest, and prepared it to hide in. As they passed that way they stowed a part of their provision there, and one evening crawled into the log out of sight. The Indians, finding that Richards and his mate did not come home at dark, as usual, were soon searching for them, making the woods ring with their calls and answers, and many times passed over the log. After 24 hours search the Indians gave them up, and retired to their wigwams. Richards and his mate, hearing no more of the Indians, then crept from their hiding place and started for Rochester. Their scanty allowance was soon gone, and they began to suffer from hunger and fatigue. Richards' mate now gave himself up to die, as he could go no farther. Richards, being loth to leave him, carried him some distance, but finding his own strength failing also, and the young man begging Richards not to die with him, but to save his own life if possible, he reluctantly consented to do so. They found here the entrails of a deer, which some hunter had left, and striking a fire, broiled it on the coals. This, said Richards, was the sweetest meat that I ever ate. He now left his companion, but had proceeded but a little way when he heard dogs barking behind him, and returning, discovered that some hunters had found his friend. They were from Rochester, and carried Richards and his friend home." Of his sufferings and emotions in these events, fancy can paint but an imperfect sketch. Previous to his captivity, he m. at R., Abigail "Myers" or "Miles;" built his house by a living spring on the bank of the river, at Norway Plains in R., where he lived the rest of his days. He had,

68. 165. James,⁴ 3d, by occupation a miller, m. Mehitable Thorndike, the first white child b. in Camden, April 8, 1770, d. July 13, 1851. Living in C. at the commencement of its being settled, he was necessarily exposed to many hardships and privations. But through industry and untiring effort, he was entirely successful in business, so that in his declining years he enjoyed all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life. As a husband and father, he was tenderly and devotedly beloved. His private life was almost without reproach, and he was highly respected and esteemed by the community in which he lived. His integrity and examples through life proved that he was influenced by a holy christian principle; and it can be truly said of him, that he went down to the grave like a shock of corn fully ripe, leaning confidently upon the arm of his Redeemer. In his last hours the loving hearts and gentle hands of his children administered to his wants, and long will his memory be cherished by the many friends who knew him. He d. at C., Dec. 29, 1858, aged 93, minus 1 m. and 22 d. Had,

CHAPT. XI.

SAMUEL RICHARDS.

Samuel Richards,¹ in sundry publications, is certified to have been from Wales. But this is an error. Among the papers which he left, it appears that the seat of his family was in Staffordshire; and according to the reminiscences of one of his great-grandsons, and other living witnesses where he and his sons resided, there was no instance of the Celtic type among them; but all in form, stature, and complexion, if not in moral traits, were eminently Saxon, as are many or most of his race to this day. The error might have arisen from his wearing a Welsh patronymic, or from a tradition that the original seat of his family was in Wales, where it undoubtedly was when the surname was assumed. But this does not imply that the founder was a Celt, or that alliances were formed between his descendants and the natives of the principality. For, when Edward I subdued that country, he, in imitation of William the Conqueror, surveyed and assigned parts of it to his followers. These, whether Norman or Saxon, were of the Gothic stock, and would from taste and rank have inter-married only with their own more comely and noble race, until the sire of Samuel emigrated to a Saxon county, in England. The same might have happened to the sires of the other emigrants, who, not improbably, had sprung from a common ancestor in Wales, and he of Norman extraction. For, since writing the introduction to this work, I have discovered that Richard existed as a name in Normandy before the conquest; and when we consider the monopoly of estates and honors in England, by the barons from that country and their descendants, and especially the simplicity of the Richards arms, indicating high antiquity, there is little room to doubt the Norman origin of an illustrious family in Wales, who founded the name of Richards. Such a family would naturally supply candidates for knighthood and manors in England, as their sons served their king, and he had estates to bestow. Thus may we account for the early dispersion of the name over England, the number and simplicity of its coats of arms, and the possession of the Saxon type and fair complexion.*

Samuel Richards¹ came to this country as a soldier by voluntary enlistment, in the time of Queen Ann's war, which closed March 31, 1713. He was then in his youth. He brought with him a high sense of independence and justice, which would not brook official perfidy and oppression; and rather than surrender his rights he courageously perilled his life, and no epithet of opprobrium can hinder our apology for his conduct, or admiration of his fortitude and success.

He having faithfully served the term of his enlistment, and gained the esteem of his officers, applied to his commander for a discharge. The officer declined, yet sent him, with his application, to the governor of New York, who peremptorily refused him. He replied to the governor that he had already got his discharge; and on being commanded to show it, he pointed to his feet. The gov. ordered him under guard, and sent him with an expedition about to start for the fron-

* The descendants of John, of Chapter V, have constituted an exception among the New England Richards's, exhibiting, not the Celtic, but more of the Norman type and complexion.

The Normans, while pirates, and while resident in France, took wives from other countries besides Scandinavia and Germany, until they had lost their blue eyes, red or auburn hair, and "milky necks," and acquired a dark complexion. This lingered among their descendants of the nobility in England until the present century.

tiers of Canada. But they had not proceeded far before Richards, with two companions, escaped, and lay their course for R. I. These both gave out and perished in the wilderness, but he lived to reach Newport. Here he shipped for the W. I., but afterwards returned, and hearing of the Richards's at New London, visited them, in the hope of finding relatives, but was disappointed. He next went to Norwalk; and, in his destitution, entered into the service of Matthew Keeler, a tailor, became his partner, and prospered. In 1734 he was chosen grand-juryman; in 1743, tythingman, and to other town offices. Records are incomplete, but he is presumed from traditions to have become a member of the church, and to have trained up a numerous and talented family in the way they should go. Feb. 5, 1718-19, he bought for £25, of Samuel St. John, two acres and three roods, with an old building thereon, situated on the west side of Norwalk river. This, with two other lots purchased about the same time and similarly located, he is supposed to have converted into his homestead, which was $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the sound, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile east of the east line of Darien, and the same distance from Five Mile River, in the Old Parish of Middlesex, formerly a part of Norwalk. In 1723 and '25, he bought of John and Ebenezer Butler, a £49 right in the real estate of their father, John B.; and in 1723, of Samuel Keeler, a £100 right in the undivided lands of N. These purchases must have secured him and his sons allotments of land from time to time as they had need, and furnished them with homesteads.

In 1725 he received a letter from his sister Sarah, lately married, acquainting him of the death of his mother about 1715, of his father about 1717, of his grandmother in 1718, and of his brother Moses, in Ireland, about 1719; and also of the marriage of his brother James, and of the apprenticeship of his youngest brother at Walsall.

This letter, now in the possession of Mrs. Diana Richards, No. 305, was dated Aug. 8, 1725, at Lichfield, in the county of Stafford, 110 miles N. N. W. of London, and adjacent to Walsall, 8 miles N. N. W. of Birmingham. It implies that her brother Samuel was familiar with the geography of Staffordshire, and that Lichfield had been his former home. From this letter it may also be inferred that Samuel was the eldest of the family, and that he would have been the heir, had an entailed estate, hitherto enjoyed by a collateral branch of the race, fallen to a descendant of his father. 44 years rolled away; many a family became extinct, and perhaps that of a grand-uncle, or other relative s. p., leaving an estate. But, however this was, it is certain that in 1760 Samuel R. had gained such intelligence of a claim in Europe as determined him, at the age of about 75, in company with a son, to return and prosecute it. They made every preparation to embark at New York, in April, 1761, but he died suddenly in February preceding. This event delayed the enterprise; one hindrance succeeded another, until the American war came on, producing despair, which was followed by forgetfulness. But if this claim was to an entailed property, and good a century ago, is it not still good in a land of laws, where the advocacy of repudiation does not elect legislators, and where the temples of justice are not profaned by Dred Scott decisions, nor the execution of laws committed to fit subjects for the hangman? In England inheritances have been recovered by rightful heirs after centuries of illegal possession, and perhaps this claim is still valid, and easy of investigation. Is it unworthy of notice?

He early engaged with his brother Samuel in trade and navigation; and having accumulated a handsome property he purchased, May, 1762, a tract of 400 acres in the north part of N., now New Canaan, on which he settled after 1781. Here he erected large buildings, and while superintending the improvement of his lands, he carried on extensively the weaving of cloths. "He possessed a very fine property, and knew how to keep it without being mean." After the incorporation of New C. he became one of the most conspicuous and efficient men of the town and parish. He had previously represented Norwalk several times in the legislature of Connecticut, and been a member of the church in Middlesex, and died a revered member of the church in N. Canaan. '86, who was b. June 11, '67, d. July 28, 1827. He was a man of rare strength of both body and mind, and remarkable for self government. In his younger years he was master of a vessel. When rudely treated and assaulted, his defence was never in blows, but in hugging, at which he was as formidable as a bear, and wont after one gripe to allow his victim a breath to cry for quarter, more thoroughly tamed than he could have been by a bloody mauling, and yet without ability to prove an assault. In 1782 he was chosen lister at Norwalk, and selectman 1796-1800. He finally settled 1½ miles north of New Canaan village, on the road to Ridgefield, became for a series of years the most distinguished citizen of the town, serving her as a magistrate and representative, besides filling other important offices, and taking good care of her municipal interests. His memory is still

23. 105. James,³ Capt., was brought up in a store, studied and taught navigation and the higher branches of mathematics; and by travel and intercourse with gentlemen of intelligence became well informed. In his person he was tall and symmetrical, in his manners dignified and gentlemanly. He espoused the cause of the revolution with great zeal; was present as a soldier at the burning of Norwalk and Danbury; and was one to pursue the enemy an entire night on their retreat to New York. He inherited the splendid homestead at New Canaan, and must have been in good circumstances until about the time his eldest son needed assistance in acquiring his education. He lost a vessel at sea, and experienced a further reduction of his means by continental money; so that, as if in search of opportunity to repair his fortune, he went to the western country, and with Judge Simms, Dr. Gano, Maj. Goforth, and Mr. — —, he wintered in the first and then only house in Cincinnati. After an absence of many months he returned to his family, where, for the rest of his life, he suffered much from rheumatism. He died Feb. 9, 1816, aged 72 years, leaving a farm and buildings indicative of no humble condition. He and his wife were members of the church in New Canaan. He

She was a lady of splendid and dignified appearance, and of great force of character; had by nature "a rugged temper, yet no one, even in the family, would ever have known it," she had it under such complete subjection. "She often smiled, but seldom laughed"; was distinguished for humility and active benevolence. A fine portrait of her is in the possession of her grandson, William H. Richards, (No. 282,) of New York. She d. at N. C., March 9, 1826, aged 82 years. Had, at N. C.,

James Richard

106. 268. James,⁴ D. D., was a precocious child, yet "feeble," perhaps, from the preponderance of his mental over his physical nature. At the age of 13 years he taught a district school, with such acceptance that he was employed to keep the same a second term. Reverses in the circumstances of his father, about this time, having deprived him of the means of a liberal education, he learned the trade of cabinet making, and labored successively at Newtown, Danbury, New York, and Stamford. He became hopefully a subject of renewing grace when he was in his nineteenth year, and united with the Congregational church in Stamford. He now resolved on the ministry, commenced his course of study, preparatory to entering college, under the Rev. J. Mitchell of New Canaan, and finished it under the Rev. Dr. Burnett of Norwalk. He entered Yale College in the autumn of 1789, aged 22 years, and from his inability to meet his expenses, was obliged to leave at the close of his freshman year. He returned to Norwalk, and resumed his studies for a while, under Dr. Burnett, and afterwards, in 1791, he went to Greenfield, where he enjoyed the instruction of Dr. Dwight through his whole subsequent course of two years until he entered the ministry; and considering the eminence of these instructors, and the greater freedom of intercourse which he must have enjoyed with them than collegians have with their teachers, he probably gained more than he lost by leaving college.

He was licensed to preach by the association in the western district of Fairfield, in 1793. He was engaged for a short time as a supply at Ballston, N. Y., and afterwards, simultaneously at Sag Harbor and Shelter Island. In June, 1794, he was called to the pastoral charge of the church at Morristown; he finally accepted the call, though his installation did not take place till May, 1797. In 1809 he accepted a call from the First Presbyterian church in Newark to become their pastor. In 1823 he accepted a professorship at Auburn, and was inaugurated October 29th of that year. As a minister Dr. R. had, for his day, almost unequalled success. During the first year of his labors at M. above 100 souls were added to the church, and this revival was followed by others in 1803, '04 and '08. At N. special effusions of the spirit accompanied his preaching in 1809, '13 and '17, and about 500 there united with the church during his pastorate of 14 years.

The following extracts are from his highly instructive biography of 96 pages 8vo, by Rev. Samuel H. Gridley of Waterloo, N. Y., prefixed to Dr. Richards's lectures on mental philosophy and theology, a vol. of 500 pages, published 1846; "a work highly creditable to him as a judicious, acute and able theologian"; and also from a brief essay on his character, by Rev. Dr. Sprague of Albany, prefixed to a precious vol. of his sermons subsequently published.

"In 1811 the congregation under his care at N. judged it expedient to become two bands, and a second Presb. church was formed by his approbation and aid. This church in 1813 extended to his predecessor, Dr. Griffin, after an absence of only six years, a call to resume his charge over them. Perhaps, in most cases, the return of a former pastor under such circumstances, and especially of the commanding talents and great worth of Dr. G., would be likely to render the position of his successor somewhat unpleasant. The experiment, however, was made, and for the space of six years these devoted men labored side by side, with, perhaps, equal honor and usefulness. Each pastor had points in which he excelled. One, perhaps, in the gift of tongues and in prophecy; and the other in the word of wisdom and discerning of spirits. One in the surpassing power of his occasional efforts, and the other in the uniform interest of his ordinary preaching; the one in success in gathering the lambs into the fold, and the other in keeping them when gathered. Both were stars of the first magnitude; one may have differed from the other in glory; yet, if from the close comparative estimate to which each was subjected, the name of Richards suffers not, where will you look for the glory that excelleth."

In 1815 he received D. D., both from Union and Yale colleges; which, at that day, was an index both of professional and general worth. Dr. Sprague remarks, that "Dr. Richards was uncommonly favored in respect to his birth. His parents were indeed in humble worldly circumstances, only a single degree removed above indigence,* but they were rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom; his mother particularly possessed sterling intellectual as well as moral qualities,—great natural common sense and discretion as well as energy and perseverance, while the crowning attribute of her character was an earnest and consistent piety. It were impossible but that a child of such parents should early be brought in contact with those influences which are best fitted to give a right direction to the youthful character; and such we find was actually the case in respect to young Richards: the best efforts which parental solicitude and discretion and piety could dictate, were put forth, during his earliest years, to form him to virtue and usefulness; and there is no doubt that the influence which was thereby exerted gave the permanent stamp to his character and life. It is in the christian nursery that the hopes of the ministry and ultimately the hopes of the church are peculiarly fixed. Instances indeed there are of extensive usefulness and even great eminence in the clerical profession, where there has not been the advantage of an early religious training,—where God has seemed to take the work of conversion so entirely into his own hands, that it has borne almost the aspect of a miracle; but in all ordinary cases, it will be found that faithful ministers of the gospel are the children of pious parents, and that their earliest impressions of the importance of religion are associated with the recollection of an excellent mother's counsels and prayers. In the distribution of blessings in the present life, it may well be doubted whether God deals more bountifully with any than with those whom he renders instrumental of forming their children to exalted piety and usefulness. Such a mother may be little known on earth, but there is a glorious record of her in Heaven. She may live in obscurity and poverty, and after she is gone there may be no monument to tell where her ashes repose; but if she has done nothing else than put one mind on the track to honorable usefulness and to a glorious immortality, she has done that which will confer upon herself enduring honor, and which will ultimately throw the brightest exploits of mere worldly heroism into the shade. It were well for the church that christian parents should have their privileges as well as duties constantly held up before them. Let the obscurest mother in Israel take courage and comfort in the thought that she knows not but that by God's blessing upon her parental efforts, she may set up some great light in the church, which shall connect her humble instrumentality with the progressive triumphs of God's grace through all coming generations.

The next thing worthy of notice in respect to Dr. Richards,—and it is to be referred immediately to the circumstances of his birth;—is that he was a self made man. As the straitened condition of his parents forbade their giving him the advantages of a liberal education, he saw, when the purpose of devoting himself to the ministry was formed, that his own faculties must be tasked to the utmost in order to accomplish it; and he went to work with all the zeal inspired by a strong conviction of duty on the one hand, and a naturally heroic and persevering spirit on the other. During his earliest years he suffered not a little from ill health; and even after he had commenced his preparation for college, he was obliged to suspend it for some months, on account of bodily indisposition, and especially a distressing weakness of the eyes; but none of all these things moved him, or led him even to falter in his determination, if his life were spared, to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ. Providence kindly brought to his aid good friends, whose timely benefactions were a great encouragement to him; though they did not, by any means, supersede the necessity of his own vigorous exertions. His college course was early interrupted for want of the requisite pecuniary means; and after he had left college and was still struggling to carry forward his education in private, amidst the inconveniences incident to poverty, severe sickness came again and brought him so near the grave that his recovery was regarded as an almost miraculous interposition. At a still later period we find him engaged in teaching a school, with a view to sustain himself in his subsequent studies; and in the last stage of his preparation for the ministry (for in his case the literary and the theological were necessarily blended into the same course) he enjoys the instruction of that great and good man, Dr. Dwight, who afterwards became president of Yale College, and was instrumental in procuring for him the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Thus it appears that his course from the beginning was made up of a succession of struggles with poverty and misfortune. But for his own indomitable resolve to preach the gospel to his fellow creatures, he never could have submitted to such a protracted course of self-denying effort. And yet it is worthy of remark, that during this whole period Providence kept him in contact with those influences which were best fitted to aid in the formation of an exalted character. His religious associations were of the purest and most elevated kind; and during a large part of the time he breathed an intellectual atmosphere than which the country scarcely afforded any that was more quickening and healthful.

It is no doubt to these manifold and varied conflicts with difficulty, that we are to look for some of the primary elements of Dr. Richards's commanding character and usefulness. Had he been born and reared in circumstances of opulence, and always felt himself independent of any personal effort for education or even subsistence, it is no wise improbable that he might never have been heard of in the walks of usefulness and honor,—never have learned the use or scarcely the existence of his noble faculties. But Providence placed him in the very circumstances which were best adapted to quicken both his intellectual and moral faculties into vigorous exercise; and though it seemed a severe discipline, no doubt it will be seen at last to have connected itself with his noblest achievements on earth and his holiest hallelujahs in Heaven.

The character of Dr. Richards's early religious experience also deserves to be considered in its bearing upon his subsequent life. The leading truths of the gospel he learned from his mother's lips; and though for some time the seed which she had sown in his infant mind did not seem to vegetate, or at least to bring forth fruit, yet in due time those precious doctrines, under the quickening influence of the Holy Spirit, asserted their power over him, waking his intellect, his conscience, his whole inner man, into vigorous and solemn exercise. It was no superficial view of the evil of sin, and the corruption of his own heart, that constituted the preparation for his acceptance of the terms of the gospel: on the contrary the arrows of the Almighty well nigh drank up his spirits. He was brought to realize not only his aggravated guilt, his utter ruin, but his absolute helplessness. In the spirit of self righteousness, he cast about him for some other refuge than the Saviour, unwilling to be indebted for his salvation to God's sovereign grace; but he saw that his efforts were all unavailing, and he found no peace to his troubled spirit, till he let go of every other hold for the Lord Jesus Christ. As his conviction of sin was uncommonly deep and pungent, and as his exercises at the commencement of the christian life were eminently evangelical, it cannot be doubted that these features of his incipient religious experience had much to do in giving the complexion to his religious character through life. Some there are indeed who seem to be brought into the kingdom by the same thorny way, evincing at first great depth of anguish and great depth of penitence, who subsequently disappoint the hopes inspired by their earliest experience; but in his case there was never the semblance of a retreat; what he was at the beginning was a sample of what he was ever afterwards, except that his path was always growing brighter. There is no evidence that there ever was a period when he could be said to have declined materially in the vigor of his religious feelings; and those who knew him best were most strongly impressed with the depth and power of his experience. It was a striking feature of his ministry that in his intercourse with those who were awakened to a sense of sin, and those who indulged the hope that they were reconciled to God, he was specially cautious to put them on their guard against a spurious religion: taking all pains to give the law its legitimate supremacy over their consciences, that they might feel themselves absolutely shut up to the faith, and might cast themselves without reserve on God's sovereign grace in Jesus Christ. Hence it came to pass that in his latter days, when revivals of religion for a time, and in certain parts of the country, had degenerated into scenes of extravagance, and conversions had become little more than a mere matter of mechanical impulse, he saw in this state of things every thing adverse to the progress of evangelical and vital piety: it was a new type of religion that had no counterpart in his own experience; and he felt himself called upon boldly and earnestly to protest against it, even at the expense of being denounced as an enemy to the cause for which he was willing to die.

The period at which Dr. Richards entered upon his professional career, must not be overlooked in an estimate of those influences by which his character as a minister of the gospel was formed. It was just about the dawn of a new and brighter epoch in the history of the church;—when she had begun to awake from a long and ignoble slumber,—to cast off her works of darkness and put on her armor of light. It was just at the time when she was receiving a fresh baptism of the spirit of revivals and the spirit of missions, and her heart began to throb in more vigorous pulsations as her faith grasped the promise of millennial glory;—it was just then that this excellent man entered upon his work as an ambassador of the Son of God. And he drank in largely the quickening spirit of the times. He took the most comprehensive views of the nature and objects of the work to which he had devoted himself. He mingled with men who were fervent in spirit and mighty with God, and he became himself as fervent and mighty as they. And the impulse which he received then had no doubt much to do in giving the complexion to his life. He was a zealous and successful promoter of revivals as long as he lived; while he lamented in his later days that the gold had become dim and the fine gold changed. Connected as he was with some of our earliest modern missionary operations, his eye and his heart were always fixed upon the ultimate regeneration of the world; he watched the progress of events continually, in its bearing on the interests of Christ's kingdom; and every propitious sign he noted with overflowing gratitude. Had he come upon the stage a quarter of a century earlier, when the storm of the revolution was gathering and bursting upon the country, and the church and even her ministry was absorbed in a great degree in matters of political import, who can tell by how much less of devotion to his master's work, and of usefulness in his master's cause, at home and abroad, his course might have been marked? Who can say that he would have ever been heard of by posterity as a faithful minister of Christ,—much less as such a noble witness to the power and honor of the cross?

In attempting an outline of Dr. Richards's character, it is not necessary, even if it were possible, to distinguish accurately between the provinces of nature and of grace; to show how much he was indebted for his greatness and excellence to God's creating power and goodness, and how much to the sanctifying influences of his Spirit, and how much to the benignant orderings of his providence, for the favorable development of his intellectual and moral faculties.

To begin with what was external and visible—Dr. Richards was eminently favored in respect to his person. He had a fine, commanding stature, towering above men of ordinary and even extraordinary dimensions. He was every way well proportioned, and though his movements were not otherwise than easy, yet they were perhaps characterized rather by dignity than gracefulness. In his face there was a delightful blending of the intellectual and the moral: there was expressed in it an honesty that invited confidence, a generosity that awakened admiration, a tenderness that could wake to the first notes of sorrow, a firmness of purpose that was like the everlasting hills, and a power of thought that inspired even the casual passer-by with respect and veneration. And his manners were in fine keeping with his person: they were bland and dignified, without the semblance of affectation or austerity on the one hand, or of any thing that approached to levity on the other. In short, he was a fine specimen of a christian gentleman. His majestic form, his bright and cheerful countenance, the tout ensemble of his manner, prepossessed the stranger in his favor before he opened his lips; and it is hardly necessary to say that when he did speak, all that was promised in his appearance was fulfilled in his conversation.

It is easy to speak of Dr. Richards's intellect, as indeed it is of his whole character, from the remarkable clearness of his mental operations, as well as from the just proportions in which his mind in its different faculties was constituted. He possessed an uncommon quickness of perception: the difficulties that beset any subject he would often discover at a glance, when a more sluggish but perhaps equally powerful intellect, would linger in a protracted course of investigation. But notwithstanding he saw quickly and clearly, he was as far as possible from being precipitate in his conclusions: he would hold an abstruse subject in earnest and patient inquiry, throwing his mind into a great variety of attitudes, and bringing it into every light that he could command, until he had become satisfied that he had reached, if not the ultimate limit of human investigation,—at least the remotest point to which his own faculties could carry him. His mind was constituted with far more than a common degree of strength; while he looked at subjects critically and carefully, he laid hold of them also with a comprehensive and vigorous grasp, and sometimes with an intensity of spirit that was nearly allied to enthusiasm. As he was conducted to the result of his inquiries by successive and distinctly marked steps, so he had usually no difficulty in making what was clear to himself equally clear to others. But for nothing was he more distinguished in the character of his mind than practical common sense, far-reaching sagacity, the ability to form a right estimate of men and things, and to discover at a glance the remoter bearings of human conduct. He was not deficient in taste; though it is not improbable that in this respect he suffered some disadvantage from his early embarrassments resulting in the premature termination of his college course. His writings give evidence of little imagination; and there is reason to believe that this faculty had less prominence in his intellectual constitution than any other.

Dr. Richards was not more favored in respect to his intellectual than his moral qualities. He had not only a nice perception but an exquisite sense of right and wrong, and out of this arose an integrity so strongly marked that malice itself scarcely dared to assail it. Notwithstanding his great sagacity, which it was difficult even for the most wary to surprise or circumvent, he was always found on the high ground of fair and honest dealing; and though he was almost sure to detect the arts of the cunning and unscrupulous, yet no one had the least reason to fear that he would, under any circumstances, take an unworthy advantage. He was condescending in smaller matters, and would cheerfully yield an opinion or a measure which he deemed unimportant, for the sake of preserving harmony; but in a matter which involved principle and conscience, no man perhaps was ever more inflexible. He was benevolent, generous, magnanimous, in his dispositions; he was alive to every project for meliorating the condition of his fellow men; he never manifested a spirit of triumph over a fallen foe; he wept over the infirmities and sins as well as the miseries of his fellow creatures; and he rejoiced exceedingly in every thing that foretold the reign of peace and truth and righteousness in the earth. If his christian character is to be distinctly considered, then it must be said that it embodied all the graces of the gospel in unusual purity and beauty and power; the depth of his humility, the fervor of his devotion, the strength of his charity, the heavenliness of his temper, and the consistency of his walk, all combined to impart to his character as a disciple of Christ an unwonted attractiveness and elevation.

It is evident from the preceding remarks,—and the fact is otherwise well attested,—that there must have been a remarkable symmetry pervading Dr. Richards's entire character: the physical, the intellectual, the moral, the spiritual, were so admirably commingled, that it seemed as if the balance between the different faculties of his nature was well nigh perfect. And it admits of no question that a character formed after such a model is best adapted to extensive usefulness. The world are indeed accustomed to bestow their admiration more upon what is striking and eccentric; they prefer the startling and brilliant course of the meteor, to the regular and powerful shining of the sun; but in this preference they give little evidence of wisdom. If the whole history of the church could be brought to testify in relation to this matter, it would be found that those who have lent the most efficient aid in promoting the cause of Christ, and whose memories are cherished with the highest respect and gratitude after they are gone, are not usually the men who have enjoyed the highest reputation during their lives for what is commonly called genius;—on the contrary, they are the men whose intellectual and moral constitution at once disposes and enables them to discharge all their duties with fidelity and alacrity; men of sound judgment and quick sagacity and tender conscience and devout, philanthropic and magnanimous feelings, whose course is as noiseless, yet as steady, as the march of the sun through the heavens. There are indeed instances in which eccentric, very eccentric men, are rendered eminently useful; and they are enabled to meet certain exigencies to which, with a different constitution, they would be utterly inadequate. But these cases form exceptions from the general. And it is not too much to say, that whenever a young man of great eccentricity enters the ministry, there is danger,—and, unless he possesses extraordinary piety, imminent danger,—that as much of evil as of good will hang upon his footsteps. He may indeed be much talked of, and talked of even with admiration; and yet the very things which provoke this admiration may not improbably constitute the most formidable clogs upon his christian and ministerial usefulness. Let it always be remembered that eccentricity supposes imperfection; it supposes either defect or excess in some part of our nature. In the character of the Supreme there is not the semblance of eccentricity; nor is there any thing that approaches it in the character of the Lord Jesus Christ as it was exhibited on the earth. They who come nearest to the standard of perfect excellence are those who reach the highest point of improvement in respect to all their faculties.

Dr. Richards's characteristics as a preacher were just what might have been expected, in view of the peculiar qualities of his mind and heart. His discourses were generally written, with the exception of the closing part, which he usually left to be supplied, so far at least as the language was concerned, by his feelings at the moment. They were characterized by great simplicity and perspicuity of style, and by strict logical accuracy in the arrangement of the different parts, so that a child might easily follow and comprehend him. The doctrinal, the practical, the experimental, were mingled in them in just proportions; so that it was impossible to listen to them attentively without gaining more enlarged views of divine truth, and finding fresh inducements to the discharge of duty. No subject seems to have occupied his thoughts more habitually, or to have contributed more to fix the tone of his ministrations, than the character and claims of God; and in his exhibition of these he is believed to have put forth his greatest power in the pulpit. His manner was sober, dignified, earnest. His voice was commanding and his utterance rapid,—sometimes so rapid as to become slightly indistinct; but what gave to his manner its greatest attraction was the fervor of his spirit breathing in every expression and glowing in every feature. It was not at the option of any hearer to believe or not believe that his utterances in the pulpit were from the very depths of his spirit: the impression that this was so, was so irresistible, that it may reasonably be doubted whether it was ever a matter of question with any one who listened to him. Even those who may have differed widely from him in his religious views, were still constrained to feel that he was giving expression to his own deep and earnest convictions. It must be acknowledged that he was not in the common acceptance of the word an eminently popular preacher,—that is, a preacher whom the multitude would run after in blind admiration; but they who coveted sound scriptural instruction, and they who were anxious to be directed into the path of life, and they who could sympathize with the exercise of a spirit glowing with love to God and man, never failed to place a high estimate upon his ministrations. And the results of his preaching were such as its character would lead us to anticipate. It was owned by the Spirit of God as an effective instrumentality in connection with some of the most extensive and powerful revivals which have been enjoyed in the American church.

Few men have been more eminently qualified than Dr. Richards for the successful discharge of pastoral duties. His fine social qualities gave him ready access to persons of all classes; his excellent judgment enabled him to adapt his conversation with a discreet reference to circumstances and characters; his devoted piety led him in all his intercourse to regard chiefly the spiritual interests of all; his unsuspected generosity and sincerity secured to him an almost unbounded confidence; and his own wakeful sensibilities and sympathies rendered him most welcome as well as most useful amidst scenes of calamity and sorrow. Much as he was respected for his efforts in the pulpit, perhaps it is not too much to say, that he was yet even more beloved for his labors out of it; and it is confidently believed that those who have enjoyed the privilege of his ministry embalm in their deepest gratitude the memory of his pastoral qualities.

Notwithstanding the eminence to which Dr. Richards attained in the discharge of the ordinary duties of the ministry, it was probably in the chair of a professor of theology that he rendered the most important service to the church, and gathered the most enduring honors to his own name. He was in all respects well qualified, and in some eminently so, for this important station. He was familiar with the ablest theological writers of by-gone days; but while there were those among them whom he regarded with great veneration, and to whose general views of christian doctrine he cordially subscribed, yet he called no mere man master; he recognized no authority as ultimate but the authority of God's word. He studied the Bible continually and earnestly in the languages in which it was written, as God's word; divesting himself, so far as possible, of the prejudice of education, and of every thing like superstitious reverence for uninspired authority; comparing scripture with scripture, and never intermitting his inquiries, till he had become satisfied in respect to the divine testimony. Here he rested as upon a rock; ready always to defend his own convictions with calmness, and yet with power. His taste and ability for philosophical investigation in connection with the quickness and clearness of his perceptions on every subject, and a naturally fervid spirit, that could easily kindle into a generous enthusiasm, gave him a great advantage in communicating instruction; and though he held his students in earnest and profound thought, yet they always felt that he was leading them in a broad and luminous path. As there was no tendency in his mind, so neither was there in his system, to extremes. He maintained with equal zeal the authority of God's law on the one hand, and the fulness and freeness of redemption on the other; the obligation of the sinner to obey God's commandments, his utter inexcusableness for not obeying them, and his entire dependence for salvation on the sovereign grace of God in Christ. He regarded philosophy as a handmaid and only a handmaid to christianity; and he took care in showing its bearings on christian doctrines, that it did not mar their consistency, or neutralize their power, or mould them into another gospel. His views of divine truth were chiefly of the old New England orthodox school; though he regarded the differences which existed in the Presbyterian church in the earlier part of his ministry as in no wise interfering with substantial unity of sentiment.

In his private intercourse with his students he was always condescending and amiable; ready to answer their inquiries, to counsel them in difficulty, and especially to do every thing in his power in aid of their spiritual progress. The consequence was that they regarded him with a truly filial feeling; and if there were any in respect to whom it was otherwise, the fact only needed to be known, to fix them in no very enviable place in public estimation.

Nor ought it to be omitted, in this connection, that Dr. Richards was an uncommonly skilful, even an eminent financier. No doubt this was to be referred partly to his great natural sagacity, and partly to the necessity of the most rigid economy induced by his early straitened circumstances. While he was as far as possible from any thing like meanness,—so far that he was generous and even noble in his dispositions,—he took care that nothing in his own pecuniary concerns was left at loose ends; and the same spirit of exact calculation he exhibited in reference to the concerns of others, and especially of the institution with which he was connected. He became connected with it while it was yet in its infancy; and he identified himself with it in all its earlier and later pecuniary struggles; and but for his great wisdom and energy and perseverance, it seems scarcely possible that even its existence should have been continued. He was often abroad among the churches soliciting the means of relieving the seminary from its embarrassments, and giving increased efficiency to its operations; and the high veneration with which his character was everywhere regarded, rendered his applications frequently successful, where those of perhaps any other man would have failed. And he managed the funds as well as collected them; he knew how to husband every thing to the best advantage, and the most watchful and jealous friends of the seminary had full confidence that every thing in respect to financial matters was moving forward securely, while it was under his direction. Those who would form a suitable estimate of the amount of service which he rendered to that institution, must look much beyond the faithful discharge of his duties as a theological professor: they must remember that for several years the institution well nigh had its being in his unremitted efforts, often made under the pressure of great bodily infirmity, to meet its necessary annual expenses.

Dr. Richards, though he enjoyed few advantages in early life for the cultivation of his manners, was nevertheless a fine example of a christian gentleman; was always attentive to the courtesies of life, and never neglected any of the thousand nameless things fitted to minister to the ease and comfort of those around him. It was worth a great deal to his pupils to live under such an influence. Other pupils beside his know the value of such an example from having it before them; and it were well that all who enjoy such an advantage should remember that the improvement or the neglect of it will probably have much to do in deciding the measure of their usefulness.

Dr. Richards's general influence in the church, as well while he had a pastoral charge as while he was a theological professor, was equally benign, efficient and extensive. His great wisdom and integrity were everywhere acknowledged, and everywhere confided in. He was a most active and useful member of ecclesiastical judicatories; and in cases of difficulty especially, great reliance was placed on his judgment and counsel. He was chosen moderator of the General Assembly at the age of thirty-seven; an honor rarely conferred upon an individual so young; but he discharged the duties of the office with great propriety, dignity and acceptance. He was one of the master spirits in the great benevolent movements of the day,—not only in sustaining, but originating them; and when he was taken away from this department of christian effort, it seemed as if an armor-bearer had failed. In short, such was his reputation as an eminently sagacious and honest man, and a devoted christian, that there was scarcely any important project having a bearing on the interests of the church, formed within the range of his influence, but that his wisdom in counsel or his energy in action, was put in requisition for the accomplishment of it.

During the latter years of Dr. Richards's life he was tried in common with many other good men, by the grievous disturbances that existed in the Presbyterian church. He was an attentive and deeply interested observer of the inroads of that fanatical spirit which about the year 1827 or '28, began its desolating operations in western New York. He was ready to admit that, as in days of old, there might be some commingling of good with the evil; but he entertained not a doubt that it was chiefly a ministration of fanaticism and error; and with this conviction, he set his face against it as a flint.* He resisted at the expense of being denounced as an enemy of revivals; at the expense even of being most offensively, not to say calumniously, prayed for by some of his own students; for with all the precaution that he could use, the storm swept through the seminary; and while some were swept away, others prudently bent to the blast, and others still stood up with their venerable professor in the attitude of stern and dignified resistance. Suffice it to say, that the views which he maintained were the same in which the christian community now generally repose; to which it may be added many have long since returned, who, for a season, yielded to the popular impulse, and both in theory and in practice set at naught the first principles of evangelical order.

But notwithstanding Dr. Richards's vigorous and hearty opposition to the system of new measures, and to the attempted innovations upon the faith of the Presbyterian church, he was not prepared for the ultimate remedy which the General Assembly adopted for curing these disorders—the excision of the three western synods. He believed that to have been both unconstitutional and unwise;

* This, though not the last, was in my view the crowning act of his life; and but for his loyalty to Heaven in that trying crisis, every Congregational and Presbyterian church in northern, central and western New York, had either been rent or annihilated, or far worse than lost to the cause of Christ, and even common morality. I was on the ground, had him for a father and counsellor, learned from his own lips the trials he endured; and never did I more admire human wisdom, ministerial fidelity and christian love in any other man. He was the father of Auburn Seminary, and the father then saved the child.—Compiler.

but it impaired not his confidence or his affection for the great and good men who differed with him, and he rejoiced in the belief that at no distant day, the two branches of the church would again be united in greater purity and love.

Dr. Richards was eminently favored in his life, and he was not less favored in his death. His latter years were years of great feebleness; but he was still, with slight interruptions, able to discharge his duties as a professor, and not unfrequently to preach in the town or the neighborhood. The waning of his life was as gradual and as glorious as the going down of the sun. He had some afflictions in his old age, but the darkest clouds that gathered over him were fringed with bright hues from the sun of righteousness. Whether in sorrow or in joy he sustained himself with the dignity of a patriarch. He was blessed in his family; blessed in the circle of his friends; blessed in all his relations; and when he was gathered into the community of the glorified, there was deep mourning on earth, corresponding no doubt to the joyful welcome that he met in Heaven."

He m. Nov. 9, 1794, Caroline Cowles of Farmington, Ct., b. April 11, 1771, a descendant of John C. (p. 55) and of Rev. Thomas Hooker, the founder of Hartford, through his son, the first minister of F. Apart from taste, and regard for his own happiness, Dr. R. in forming this connection must have exercised the same discernment and respect for the welfare of Zion which characterized his whole life; for no clergyman was ever more happy in a companion. Mrs. R. was delicate in her appearance, pleasing in her manners, intelligent, pious, sympathetic and devoted, calculated to exert a wide influence for good, without giving offence, and did so wherever she resided. Of her domestic virtues, the character of her children, and the success and happiness of her husband, are an endorsement; and well has she been pronounced by his biographer "emphatically an excellent woman." She survived her husband a little more than four years, and died at Auburn, Oct. 8, 1847. Rev. Dr. Lothrop, in a discourse at her funeral, after passing a high tribute to the memory of Dr. Richards, says: "And now she who was the sharer of his joys and his sorrows has gone, as we trust, to share in the same glorious and happy communion, and by her death we are called to mourn the loss of one who was distinguished for everything that was lovely and of good report, and whose practical virtues have largely secured for her the respect and esteem of all, in the different circles in which she has moved. Her hope in death was founded upon the rock of ages;—while of the deceitfulness of the heart and of the evil of sin she knew much, as we think every christian ought to know. For more than half a century she has been a professor of the religion of Christ, and an exemplary member of the Presbyterian church. The predominant desires and active prepossessions of her mind have for a long time seemed to be on the side of spiritual religion, while she rejoiced in all that tended to the temporal and eternal welfare of her fellow creatures. As we have reason to believe that she lived the life of the righteous, so we humbly trust that she died the death of the righteous, and that her spirit rejoices in the blessed communion of the spirits of the just made perfect, and that while absent from the body she is present with the Lord.

As an incentive to diligence in the service of God, and as a motive to give earnest heed to the instructions of his word, it is profitable to think of that state of glory and blessedness which awaits the righteous, and to follow them in their flight when summoned by that voice which Jesus sends to call them to his arms. And in view of the happy lot of those who die in the faith of the Gospel, those of you who are now called to mourn the final departure of an honored and tender mother and a beloved relative, will not sorrow as those who are without hope.

Perhaps when you now look back upon her long and useful life, you are able more fully to appreciate her value than you ever were before. To you it is a cause of thankfulness, not only that she has lived so long, but that she has lived so honorably, so usefully, and so happily. And if you appreciate, as you ought, that religion which lay at the foundation of her only hope of Heaven, you will rejoice that she experienced its benign influence; and making it your own choice will seek to participate in its consolations, to enjoy its cheering and triumphant hope. You have been the witness of her maternal tenderness, and her devotion to your interest and happiness. The hands which labored for your good, the voice which spoke to you in kindness, and that administered reproof and counsel, the eye that beamed upon you with affection—are still and motionless in death. That voice you will hear no more, and those hands will no more be moved for your comfort and welfare. The hour of final separation has passed, and the grave is opened to receive all that was mortal of her that was so deservedly dear to you all. But her undying spirit waits a joyful reunion with her beloved kindred in yon brighter, purer world, whither her example would allure you, and to which, as we trust, she has led the way."

Her remains were interred at Auburn, near those of Dr. Richards, to whose memory their friends, and the alumni of the Theo. Sem., have erected an expensive monument, of a very perishable mineral. It ought to be replaced. They had, at Morristown, 269. 306. Anna Smith,⁵ was a daughter altogether worthy of her parents, and a bright ornament to the christian graces. At the age of 30, when I knew her, she had the religious attainments of a mother in Israel, and must have been mourned as such when called to her reward at the age of 46. "The previous death of her husband had devolved on her the care of eight children, whom she was assiduously striving to train for Heaven. Devoted to the service of Christ she was ever active and useful in his church, and endeared to a large circle of friends. Her sudden removal filled the hearts of many with poignant grief. Many fall as sudden, few as safe."—Newark Daily Advertiser.

 "She had for 30 years," said her father, "given the most abundant proof that her piety was sincere. Very few were so conscientious, so consistent and uniform as she. Her meekness and gentleness, her humility and self-denial, told us of whose spirit she had drunk, and in whose steps she was treading. I have not a particle of doubt that she has gone to be with Christ."

Oct. 30, 1841, Emily Matilda Ferris, dau. of the late Benjamin F., Esq., of New York, and during the greater part of his public life he has resided in the city of New York, and for the last 25 years has occupied a commanding position among the honorable and successful merchants and real estate owners of the great metropolis. In size, figure and general bearing he greatly resembles his father. His kindness to those members of his family who have presented a claim upon his sympathies stands unrivalled; and his unwearied beneficence and prompt interference for their relief, and his liberal benefactions to other objects, entitle him to a distinguished place among those who have borne the name of Richards. No one of the race has exceeded him in the patronage of our enterprise.

273. 329. James,⁵ D. D. and LL. D., prepared for col. at the polytechnic school at Chittenango, N. Y., under the care of the venerable Andrew Yates, D. D., entered Union Col. 1830, where he remained two years and then transferred his standing to Ham. Col., where he grad. A. B. in 1834, aged 18 years, and took A. M. in 1837. On leaving col. he entered the Theo. Sem. at Auburn, was licensed to preach by Cayuga Presbytery, April, 1836, and ordained at Aurora, July 19, 1837. In June, 1841, he was installed pastor of the Presb. ch. at Penn Yan. In Oct., 1847, he accepted a call from the 1st Presb. ch. of Morristown, N. J., where he was installed, Dec. 28, by the Presb. of Elizabethtown, the Rev. Dr. Magie delivering the following charge:

"You come, dear brother, to take part with us in the ministry of reconciliation. This is always an interesting event. Yet allow me to say, it is peculiarly so in relation to yourself. Many tender reminiscences are awakened by this transaction. In addition to the fact that you are now assuming the charge of one of our oldest and most important congregations, in a pulpit honored by the labors of eminent men, and on ground where the Lord has often made the place of his feet glorious, you occupy the post once so ably filled by your own venerated father. Your duties lie among the people to whom he consecrated the opening vigor of his nobly spent life. We shall expect you, as well from the name you bear as from the flock you feed, to set your mark of ministerial influence and usefulness high. You have had before you from your childhood one of the finest models of ministerial character.

It is now twenty-seven years since I took my place in this presbytery, at the feet of as noble a set of ministers as can be found in any section of the church of God. Griffin was here, towering up with his majestic frame, eagle eye, and all-subduing eloquence, above his compeers. Armstrong was here, with his penetrating mind, and his large, warm heart. Hillyer was here, a name never to be pronounced but with affection, with his mild temper and his gentlemanly deportment. Cook too, and Riggs, and Crane, were here, all of them good men and true, and valiant for the Lord of Hosts. It was a bright constellation;—you may look far and will scarcely find their equals. But among all, I say it with the earnestness of thorough conviction, there is not one to whom my mind reverts with a deeper and more filial reverence than to James Richards. He was so wise, so judicious, so prudent. His counsel, in those days, was as if a man inquired at the oracle of God. Everywhere, in the pulpit, the lecture-room, the parlor, and the market-place, he was the same upright, dignified, consistent christian minister. Especially did his excellencies shine out as a member of our church judicatories. The amenity of his manners, the clearness of his reasoning, and the solidity of his judgment, gave him an influence which could not but be felt. I look back upon him with mingled feelings of love and veneration, and have only to wish that the son may be like the father;” &c.

Rev. James while at M., and only 34 years of age, received D. D. from Lafayette Col., Pa., and subsequently from a southern col. In April, 1851, he was presented with an unanimous call from the 2d Pres. ch. of New Orleans, which he declined. Having been released from his charge at M., after a pastorate of about four years, he accepted an invitation to the chair of Moral Philosophy and Belles-lettres in the Planters Col. of Miss., and entered upon the duties of his professorship June 6, 1853. Here he received the degree of LL. D. In the ensuing winter he was presented with two calls, one from the Presb. ch. in Baton Rouge, and the other from the 3d Presb. ch. in New Orleans. He accepted the latter, and was installed by the Presb. of La., April 16, 1854. The duties of this new field so impaired his health as to render a sea voyage necessary; and Feb. 7, 1855, he embarked for Europe, returned in the summer following, and took up his residence among the mountains of New England. He now resides in Litchfield, Ct., as the proprietor and superintendent of the Elm Park Collegiate Institute for Boys, and the acting pastor of the Independent Congl. ch. of Northfield, in L. In a late visit at N., I found evidence of his usefulness, and a high appreciation of him and his ministry. Like his father he is reserved in his contributions to the press. But of his learning and eminence as a preacher we find ample endorsement, not only in the high stations to which he has been called, but in the notices of him by literary men. For one, the celebrated writer and speaker, Lovell, author of so many series of school orators, &c., thus speaks of him in the Greenborough Times, of N. C., in August last:

“The individual who occupied the pulpit was a man of middle age, fine and intellectual looking, and though somewhat more easy in his style of dress than most of our northern clergymen—who are remarkably stiff in their appearance, and sometimes more remarkably dull in their not too short sermons—yet there was that about this gentleman which gave me to expect something original. I was not disappointed—his subject was the truth of the Gospel;—it is rarely I have listened to a finer discourse—he possessed wonderful oratorical powers, his logical abilities were equally astonishing—he not only made his points clear to his own mind but had the happy art of making his hearers fully comprehend them.

“He was a deep observer, and he looked Quite through the deeds of men.”

I listened to this brilliant mind with deep attention; he won me to him—his fascination was complete, his voice charmed my sense of hearing as he poured thought after thought out, meeting this and that point, clearing all obstacles that might arise, and sailing onward with an intellectual freedom that few scholars possess. His effort was a masterly one, and I shall always remember it, both as an intellectual and spiritual treat. I learned after church he was the Rev. Dr. R——, formerly pastor over a congregational church at New Orleans, which he left a few years ago on account of ill health.”

Other testimonials, equally flattering, might be added, but the above will suffice to show that talents are hereditary; and although all minds are in all respects created essentially alike, yet in size and susceptibility of culture they differ as much as the Appalachian mountains do from the boulders of the valley. This difference might be preserved, if young men and maidens would study and obey physical laws and consult genealogies.

CHAPT. XII.

CHARLES RICHARDS.

Charles Richards,¹ of Marblehead, and afterwards of Lunenburg, was born on the banks of the Tweed, in Scotland. When a young man he came to New England, and in Boston met and married a very beautiful young woman by the name of "Margaret," alias "Janet," alias "Jane" Mitchell, who was born on the opposite bank of the Tweed. He must have been a susceptible youth; and her beauty, to have attracted 3000 miles off, far superior to that of modern belles, stupefied in the ball-room, and sentimentalized by novel reading, and the morality of the theatre.

After their marriage they resided first at Marblehead, next at Wenham, and afterwards at Groton and Lunenburg. They had,

2. I. John,² b. Jan. 13, 1729-30, at Marblehead; was he a captain in the army of the revolution, and did he settle in Winslow, Me.?

Rev. Daniel Richards Translated

THIS well-known, dearly-loved, and greatly revered minister of the Gospel was waited into the eternal life, on Thursday morning last, at 5 o'clock. It was a translation indeed, almost as it he had been taken up in a celestial chariot, or borne on angels' wings. He had suffered somewhat for a few days from a bronchial cold, which induced seasons of coughing that were exhausting, but he was up and dressed about the house until the day before his departure. On Wednesday he dressed himself in the morning, but found he was so weak that he was at once helped back to bed, when he fell into a profound sleep. The physician who was called could not awaken him, and he slept on until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when he awoke with the words on his lips: "Life! life! abundant life; and that settles the controversy." His wife, holding his hand, conversed with him, and soon he repeated, with subdued feeling and emphasis, the entire first verse of "Jesus, Lover of my Soul." What could be more fitting or characteristic for this deeply religious man than these lines:

"Jesus, Lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly.

Safe into the haven guide,
O receive my soul at last!"

Turning over in bed, he fell asleep like a child, and slept on until 5 o'clock the next morning, when "he was not, for God had taken him." That was not death as we dread it, and think of it, and speak about it; that was translation into the "abundant life" of which he had spoken. The death of his only son, Daniel Richards, Jr., on May 1, was a very great shock and grief to him, and from its effects he had never recovered. How gracious, inspiring and comforting is the faith which assures us in this hour of the glad meeting between father and son!

As a resident in the same city for many years, and seeing Mr. Richards very frequently, we had come to know him as a personal friend. He was very deeply religious. Indeed, his religion pervaded and molded him, and made him the man he was. He was an indefatigable reader and student. His sermons were the result of much prayerful study and deliberation. We have never known a minister who delighted so greatly in preaching, and was so anxious for the opportunity to do it. Though without a charge for many years, he volunteered to supply churches as opportunity offered, and without financial recompense. He was greatly loved at First Church, Union Square, Somerville, with which he has been associated so many years. His life was useful, and his memory will be fragrant in the coming years.

Daniel Richards was born in Newton, Dec. 9, 1818, a farmer's boy. The first Methodist sermon he ever heard was delivered by Dr. Charles K. True, from Harvard College, a wonderful young preacher. He was converted in the Rice Academy, Newton, and baptized by Rev. N. B. Spaulding, Oct. 4, 1835. He was ordained by Bishops Janes and Waugh. He was pastor in East Boston when the first Methodist church was built and dedicated, Jan. 4, 1843. He preached forty years, morning and afternoon, and occasionally in the evening, without a vacation! He was a pastor six years in Lynn, five years in Saugus, four years in Holliston, three in Chicopee, three in Watertown, two years each in Dedham, Melrose, Webster, Gloucester, Newburyport, and one each in Dorchester, Winchendon, Worcester, Rockport, and East Boston. In one case he was eight years the only pastor in the place, and visited every house. He had a record of 300 baptisms, 325 marriages, and more than 700 funerals.

His wife, a woman of remarkable faith and usefulness, and three grandchildren and their mother, survive him. His funeral was attended at his residence, 18 Loring Street, Somerville, Saturday afternoon, Rev. Dr. George Skene, his pastor, officiating, assisted by Rev. Dr. G. S. Butters.

Mrs. Esther S. Richards.

Mrs. Esther S. Richards, widow of Rev. Daniel Richards, died at her home, 18 ~~Leah~~ street, late Saturday night, following a brief illness. On Christmas day she was seized with an attack of acute indigestion, from which on account of her advanced age (eighty-two) she was unable to rally.

She was a native of Turin, New York, and was a daughter of Rev. James Shepard, a Methodist preacher of the New England conference. With her husband she was actively identified with various churches of the New England conference where he ministered, and was prominent in the Woman's Foreign Missionary society. She had lived in Somerville for over twenty-five years, and was a member of the First Methodist church.

Her husband died in August, 1906. She is survived by one brother, James S. Shepard, United States consul at Hamilton, Ontario, and three grandchildren. She was a woman of rare qualities and ability, possessing an optimistic and youthful spirit until the last.

The funeral services were held Tuesday at 1.30 o'clock. Rev. W. R. Newhall officiated and was assisted by Rev. George S. Butters, a former pastor of the First Methodist church. A quartette comprising Albert C. Ashton, Carl Ashton, Mrs. C. A. Dodge, and Miss Alice Etheridge, rendered selections, and the burial was in the Cambridge cemetery.

RICHARDS.—Mrs. Sophia R. Holt Richards fell asleep at Denver, Colo., Mar. 26, 1908, in the eighty-fourth year of her life. She was born in Wilton, N. H., of a pioneer family (the Holts), where she was baptized and married to Edwin Richards, of Boston, when eighteen years of age. After living in Roxbury, Cambridgeport and Lexington, Mass., the family moved to Chicago in 1857, where she united with the Edina Place Baptist Church, her husband being the first candidate for baptism under the sainted Dr. Robert Boyd. Mr. Richards died in 1865, leaving her with the care of four children, who all live to testify to her loving and faithful motherhood. They are Edwin and Georgie S. Richards, Mrs. Robert S. Roe (Etta), and Mrs. Charles O. Walker (Addie). In 1879 she moved to Denver, Colo., where she has since made her home, uniting with the First Church, where she remained a member until 1896, when, with some of her children, she joined the Capitol Hill Baptist Church, of which she was a member at the time of her death. She and her family were actively identified with the Edina Place, afterwards Wabash Ave., afterwards Michigan Ave. Church (now Immanuel), filling a large place in the life of the church, Mr. Richards ushering and standing at the door to welcome strangers; her eldest daughter Etta (Mrs. Robert S. Roe) being organist in church, Sunday-school, Liberty and Twenty-second St. missions during most of their residence in Chicago, while Mrs. Richards was ever deep in woman's work in the church. In Denver Mrs. Richards continued active in all good works until laid aside by the infirmities of age. Hers was a long, useful and beautiful life, full of loving ministrations, blessing all who came under its sweet influences and making her home one of the loveliest on earth, while her friendship was greatly prized by all those whose privilege it was to know her. She had the pleasure of holding in her arms three great-grandchildren. The funeral services, conducted by her long-time friends and admirers, Revs. H. W. Pinkham and Edwin Seldon, assisted by Rev. Ingram E. Bill, acting pastor of the church, were deeply touching; the addresses, the prayers, the music (exquisitely rendered by the Temple Male Quartet) and the flowers (most profuse and beautiful), being all the affectionate contributions of friends, while her body was tenderly carried to its last resting place by her four grandsons, Charles E. and William S. Roe, and Herbert R. and Howard E. Walker. She was a reader of THE STANDARD for over fifty years. She enriched the world in her living and leaves a blessed heritage of a good name to her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

From the "Standard"

RICHARDS—In Chicago, on the morning of the 6th inst., after a very brief illness, Mr. Edwin Richards, in the 46th year of his age.

Mr. Richards was a much-esteemed member of the Wabash Avenue Baptist Church, in this city, and an active, enterprising and prosperous business man. On Friday evening he went home somewhat earlier than usual, feeling not entirely well. By two o'clock of the next morning he was dead. His complaint, we understand, was a congestive chill. His religious history may be said to have begun with the dedication of the house of worship occupied by the Wabash Avenue Church, some eight years ago. The sermon preached on that day by Dr. Boyd, then the pastor, was the means of his conversion. Since that time he has filled his place in the church, quietly, without ostentation, yet with eminent consistency of life, and so as to be now remembered by those associated with him there, with love and regret. He was a man of great amiability of character, and enjoyed the warmest affection of those who knew him best. Appropriate funeral services were held at the Wabash Avenue Church, on Sabbath afternoon, conducted in a very impressive manner, by Rev. E. G. Taylor, the present pastor, and Dr. Buttroughs of the University. The family, bereaved thus suddenly and sadly, have the earnest sympathy of many attached friends.

WEDDED IN A BOWER OF ROSES

Miss Ethel Gertrude Blake Becomes
Mrs. Herbert Richards
Walker.

Miss Ethel Gertrude Blake and Herbert Richards Walker were married yesterday at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Anna Stoddard Blake of Woodbury Place. The bride was born here and graduated from the East Denver High school in 1897. She has been teaching in the western part of the state and in Manitou. Mr. Walker is a business man of this city.

The home, No. 2516 Woodbury Place, where the wedding took place, was decorated with ferns and flowers. The bride's gown was of white chiffon trimmed with Mechling lace. She carried American Beauty roses and wore a long tulle veil. Miss Edna Blake, her sister, was maid of honor. She wore white chiffon and carried white roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Lilian Gelder and Miss Alice Bailey, both gowned in pink organdie and carrying white roses. The best man was Charles Roe and the ushers were three brothers of the bride, Milton, Albert and Allen Blake, and Howard Walker. The bridal party stood in a bower of roses and palms. Ropes of smilax and white satin ribbon were stretched to form an aisle.

Rev. C. K. Powell of Colorado Springs performed the ceremony. Only the immediate family was present. A reception followed and the following girls, all schoolmates of the bride, served refreshments: Miss Flora Richards, Miss Florence Sayre, Miss Minnie Thompson, Miss Lydia Sears and Misses Stewart.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker left last night for a wedding tour in the East. Upon their return they will be at home for a short time at No. 2516 Woodbury Place.

MISS EDNA M. BLAKE AND C. E. ROE MARRIED IN A BOWER OF ROSES

Miss Edna M. Blake and Charles E. Roe were married last evening at 7:30 o'clock at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Anna S. Blake of No. 2516 Woodbury Court. Rev. C. K. Powell of Colorado Springs, an old friend of Miss Blake, came to Denver especially to perform the ceremony which was witnessed by about 40 friends of the bride and groom. The interior of the house was decorated with smilax, which was draped over windows and doorways and twined around chandeliers. Pink and white roses were the flowers used. They filled bowls and jardinières placed in every available space and banked the mantel before which the bridal party stood. Palms screened the fireplace and were grouped in the hall.

The bride wore a gown of white wash chiffon trimmed with mechling lace and partially covered by the long tulle veil which, fastened to her hair with orange blossoms sent from California, fell to the hem of the train. She carried bride's roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Herbert Walker, as matron of honor, and by two bridesmaids, the Misses Anna Stuart and Katherine Sperry. Mrs. Walker wore white mousseline de soie and the maids frocks were of Paris lawn. The attendants carried pink roses. Little Julia Perkins, dressed in white organdie, carried the ring in a calla lily. The best man was Frank W. Frueauff.

At the conclusion of the ceremony a reception was held, at which about 200 people were present. Supper was served. Mrs. Edwin Perkins and Mrs. Edward Wist presiding at the table and the Misses Anna and Mima Stuart, Mary and Lucy Humphrey, Minnie Thompson and Katherine Sperry assisting. The bride has many friends in Denver, where she was born. She graduated from the East Denver High school in 1895 and for some time has been a favorite teacher in the public schools. Mr. Roe is the son of Robert S. Roe and is connected with his father in business. After a short wedding trip they will be at home to their friends Tuesdays in June at No. 1624 Grant avenue.

The guests at the wedding: Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Roe, William Roe, Mrs. S. E. Richards, Edwin Richards, Miss Georgia Richards, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Walker, Howard Walker, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wist, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Montrose, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Gregg, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tatlow, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. John Hughes; the Misses Mary and Lucy Humphrey, Anna and Mima Stuart, Mary Brinker, Grace Meinhardt, Truax, Alice Bailey, Edna Wheeler, Minnie Thompson, Edwina Fallis, Edith Perry, Cora Parmalee; Messrs.
