PREFACE.

THE following Genealogies, originally prepared at different times, with various degrees of minuteness and extent of research, and brought down to different dates, were designed, and some of them proposed for insertion in the Genealogical Register. This was done under the impression that each article might appear continuously in one vol. of that Periodical, and be as attracting and available as if published in any other form or connection. But on further information I find that the longer articles, to gain admission, must be divided into several parts, inserted here and there, mixed with other historical and genealogical matter, and be delayed for a perilous time, and even beyond the probable expectancy of life in some who have expressed much interest in the publication. I have therefore decided to issue my collections in the following form, believing that this will prove more satisfactory than the one originally proposed.

This change enhances the cost of publication without giving the subscriber an equal number of pages or amount of matter; but this will be made up in the binding of the work, and, as it is hoped, in the greater satisfaction of finding, inserted continuously, in the same vol., not only the race, with which his name is arranged, but also, other cognate races through which in female lines he may derive his descent from other and different stocks.

To those then who pledged their patronage to the other form of issue, will copies of this be forwarded at prices barely sufficient to cover the outlay, which has been surprisingly great. This, if stated, all might not appreciate. Indeed, none but the experienced in this department of toil, perplexity and expense could be expected to do so. But I have not labored without pay; for the months and years of lonely seclusion devoted to the work have abounded with seasons of sweet communion with departed worth, and delightful views of former days. Nor do I send forth this humble and imperfect production without hopes of future reward; for weak and treacherous as human gratitude is, I may gain her thanks from breasts where refinement and humility dwell, for the introduction here given to forgotten ancestors, honored of God in their day with a part in that mighty agency which is changing the condition of mankind and the aspect of the world; to ancestors who coöperated to found the institutions in which we glory; and who bequeathed to us an open Bible and uncorrupted gospel, and followed us in their prayers which are now being answered in our happiest experience.

Nor is this all. There is pleasure in the hope that useful history has been snatched from oblivion, and landmarks pointed out for future and more successful explorations; that many will be moved to perfect and transmit their genealogy; and that generations to come will be supplied with a Directory for finding their kindred of another sex, that they may decline alliances interdicted by nature and her Author, and be saved from the sin of defeating wholly or in part a chief object of their earthly mission.

The Genealogies here presented are in all cases as complete to 1800 as the records consulted, and far more so. Thousands of names are here recorded for the first time; and thousands of others, on no public record, may yet be added in supplements, if those noticing the omissions will report them. And are none of their kindred or descendants interested to do so? Will it not be an act of kindness to preserve evidence of their legitimacy? and also of their descent from the remotest ancestor remembered? The first edition of any Genealogical work is never without errors. This, with all the care I have bestowed, must have them. These, it is hoped, will be carefully and immediately pointed out in writing, that they may be hereafter corrected; and as the Adams, Bullard, Holbrook, Rockwood, Phipps and Sanger races are designed to be continued, any of either of these races are especially requested to report whatever needs correction or addition.

ABNER MORSE.

Reg. 103.00 3.7-67 21v. 37.1451 A.C. 9471

EXPLANATION.

On the left of names and next to the left hand margin are two columns of Arabic figures; the right hand column consisting of running numbers, and the left hand of referring numbers. The latter, if before a father's name, (and then it is ever less than the No. to the right of it) refers back to the same figures in the column of running Nos. where his name occurs as a child. If the referring No. is before a child's name, (and then it is always larger than the No. to the right,) it refers onward to the same figures in the column of running Nos. where he occurs as a father. Names having no referring Nos. before them, are either traced no further, or they have their descendants arranged immediately below their names.

Dates following the names of wives without the word and intervening, refer to her.

Numerical letters before the names of children denote their No., which must not be confounded with the running numbers in Arabic figures. These numerical letters are dropped when the child becomes a parent.

Small figures after names mark their generations, their Puritan ancestor being accounted the first.

? after a figure, denotes the reference not certain.

? after a name, signifies that it is inferred from circumstantial evidence or doubtful records, or that it has not been traced.

Initial letters are put for the names of places immediately after they have been spelled.

The practice of double dating between Jan. 1st and March 25th,—thus 1675—6, until the introduction of N. S. in 1752, is retained to prevent confusion, and enable families to compare and correct their dates.

N. B. Prior to 1752, the civil year began in March, which was called the first month, April 2d month, often expressed thus,—25 (2) i. e. 25th day, 2d month. To render O. S. into N. S., the first month must be accounted the 3d, and ten days be added to all dates between 1582 and 1700, and eleven days to dates between 1700 and 1752. For the single year 1600, eleven days must be added.

BULLARD.

Among the early planters of New England appear seven men of the name of Bullard. The traditions concerning them are not reliable. That they were all brothers, is improbable, from indications of too great disparity of ages; from their omission to name children for each other, and a common father, if not from the continued use of a different orthography by the same clerk in recording their different names. They were—

1. Benjamin Bullard, who drew land in Watertown 1637 and '44. (See Chap. I.)
2. George Bullard, who was admitted to the Freeman's oath 1641, implying that he was a member of the church. He had land assigned him in Watertown, 1637, and died there, June, 1680, aged 81. (See Chap. II.)
3. John Bullard, who took the Freeman's oath May 13, 1640, signed the social compact of Dedham 1 day, (6 month) 1636, where his wife Magdalen was rec'd to the chh. 1639, and d. 29d. (1 mo.) 1661. He had land assigned him in Medfield, 1650 and '59, and d. there July 4, 1668. (See Chap. III.)
4. Isaac Bullard, who signed the social compact of Dedham 1636, and where he, or another of the same name, m. Sarah Jones, from Dorchester, 3, (11) 1654, and was admitted townsman 1655, and d. at D. 11, (3) 1676, leaving a widow, Ann. (See Chap. IV.)
5. Nathaniel Bullard, who was admitted townsman at Dedham 1655, and d. there 3, (11) 1681. (See Chap. V.)
6. Wm. Bullard, who took the Freeman's oath May 13, 1640, signed the social compact of Dedham 18, (6) 1636, where his wife was received to the church in 1639, and he was chosen Selectman in 1643. (See Chap. VI.)
7. Robert Bullard, who died at Watertown 24, (4) 1639, aged 40, leaving a widow, Anna.

CHAPTER I.

1. 8. Of the above list of Bullards, Benjamin is the only one whose entire race admit of being traced with certainty, and separated from all others bearing the name. The orthography of our early records, that is so variable, generally preserves one mode of spelling his name; yet, from the inspection of private papers, and the uniform substitution of e for a in the last syllable, and the omission of d final by one of the best informed clerks in the colony, arises the supposition that the name was originally identical with Bulwer; and if so, then Bulwer may be a corruption of Bullard. Our sires brought with them from England the following tradition of the origin of the name: "One called a Lard, in ancient times, when on a royal hunting excursion, outstripped his company in chase of a wild bull, and killed him—and ever after this feat was called the great Bull Lard. Hence his descendants were named Bullard."* The signature of Benjamin Bullard¹ has not been preserved, and

* This story may admit of neither proof nor refutation; and yet, is there nothing in its favor in the fact that the name, in Europe, is without a coat-of-arms, rare, and of narrow range? But, however this may be, the authenticity of the tradition need not be doubted; for Mrs. Temperance D. Bullard, of Morristown, N. J., still living, (and long may she live to pray for the race and the world!) says that Mr. Jona. Bullard, a man of distinguished piety, who died 1824, aged 90, used often to relate it in her hearing as a tradition from his father, who professed to have very little can be ascertained concerning him. He was undoubtedly from England, and probably among the first planters of Watertown, in 1630. His name first occurs upon the records of that town in the oldest history of her inhabitants, and in the first division of her public lands in 1637. In 1644 more land was assigned him, and he became the proprietor of about 100 acres, and of a dwelling-house, on the W. side of Fresh Pond. How much longer he lived, or where he died, has not been discovered. The name of his wife was not improbably Sarah, dg. of Geo. Thorp, of W., [see Bond,] and he had but two children, who lived to heir his estate, viz. :

10. 9. 1. Benjamin,² who inherited all his real estate at W. ; 11. A daugh. [pr. Sarah,] mentioned as sis. to Benj., 1672, um. in 1689 ; was one to adm. on her br.'s estate.

9. 10. Benjamin,² at the decease of his father, was probably a minor, and committed to the care of an uncle at Dedham, where he appears about the time he is presumed to have attained his majority, and where he seems to have formed such connections as are usually preceded by a long and youthful acquaintance. He was admitted a townsman at Dedham 1, (11) 1655, which then implied a previous probation, a good moral character, and the age of 21. His marriage is not on record ; but circumstances almost as conclusive show that he m. Martha Fairbank, the sister of George F., of Dedham, who was of a good family, and connected with George F., of Somerby, in the vicarage of Halifax, Yorkshire. Benj. Bullard and George Fairbank soon after embarked together in an undertaking that must have required courage, enterprise, and means above the possession of most young men of their community. To Capt. Robert Kayne, of Boston, had been granted, in 1649, 1074 acres, at Pawsett Hill, and which is now partly in Sherborn and partly in Medway. Cpt. Kayne d. Mar. 23, 1655-6. Of his executors, soon after, Bullard and Fairbank are presumed to have bought the south half or third of this tract ; and Hill and Breck, also brothers-in-law, from Dorchester, purchasing at the same time another part, bounding them upon the N. These constituted the second company who planted W. of Charles River ; and they all located their dwellings with reference to natural security, and that which they soon provided. They settled here prior to Feb. 2, 1658, when their first child was born. Benj. Bullard and his brother-in-law seem to have divided their part of the tract as was then common, so as to give each other scattered lots and secure sites for building near each other. Bullard took the N. and S. W. parts, and located his dwelling on the N. side of Bogistow Pond, near a copious and still valuable spring. The situation was admirably chosen for the capture of game, the rearing of stock, and for security against surprise from hostile Indians. The scenery was such as a man of taste would have chosen. It is still both beautiful and sublime. From his door he could survey the Broad Meadows, a wet prairie of five miles in extent, through which Charles River meanders, and which in vernal and autumnal seasons is converted into a lake. Hills beyond, covered with towering pines, then appeared mountains, while the soil beneath, lifted by roots two or three feet above its present level, concealed the hideous boulders which, in consequence of their decay, the absence of protecting humus and leaves, and the action of deeper and more frequent frosts, have since risen to the surface, and occasioned an inconsiderate impeachment of the judgment and taste of many an early planter. His land was then arable and rich. But his was a frontier location, cut off by river and marsh, and a distance of four miles from the nearest settlement at Medfield. His prospects and life were in danger. He found Wood, Leland and Holbrook, settled from one to two miles N., and was soon joined by Rockwood and Daniels within one mile S., making, with Hill and Breck, one-third of a mile N., and Fairbank hard by on the S. W., a settlement of nine families, to be defended by themselves. They knew the Indian character and mode of warfare—that he never made his assault in the night, nor was he wont to cross open fields in his approach, or fail, if hungry, to publish it by killing a strayed ox. They accordingly selected for the site of their garrison the N. bank of Bogistow Pond, having long, wet prairies on the E. and N.W. The intervening neck was by fire and steel soon denuded on the N. and S., and a large vacuity secured. The waters of the pond in summer, and of Bullard's spring in winter, attracted their cattle, to report the missing and sound the alarm. Here they prepared to live, as all of them virtually did, the rest of their lives, in a state of warfare. They built for a garrison-house a spacious and regular fortress. It was superior to any similar structure on the then frontier. It was 65 or 70 feet long, two stories high, all of faced stone, brought over ice from a quarry one mile distant at the N.W., and laid, in a workmanlike manner, in clay mortar. It had a double row of port holes on all sides, lined with white oak plank, and flaring inward, so as to require no one to expose himself before them, while the besieged, by taking cross aims, could direct their fire to every point of the compass. This fortress was lighted and entered at the S. end, overlooking the pond, where the bank was so low that assailants from that quarter, in levelling at the high windows, would only lodge bullets in a plank chamber floor, or among the furniture of the garret. The upper story was appropriated to the women and children, and had a room partitioned off for the sick. To this place of security our ancestors, for more than two generations, were accustomed to flee in times of alarm, and here no small number of their children were born. In this fort they were once besieged by a host of Philip's warriors, who, in despair of all other means, attempted to fire the building by running down the declivity above it a cart of burning flax. Arrested in its descent by a rock still to be seen, and an Indian who had run down to start it having been killed, a retreat was sounded, and the lives of our ancestors saved. Two months afterwards the enemy returned, when our fathers sallied forth and charged them with such execution that "they never dared to show their faces there afterwards." The walls of this edifice were carefully preserved by the descendants of Benj. Bullard, until about 1785, when the proprietor sold out to a Vandal, who demolished them. Will the present proprietor, Horatio Mason, Esq., palisade the rock that scotched the cart, and saved the lives of five of his own ancestors? Benj. Bullard early united in the enterprise of adding a new town to the colony, and of enlarging the borders of Zion. In 1662 he signed the first petition for the incorporation of Sherborn. In 1673, Oct. 3, he sold for £40 his patrimonial estate, in Watertown, to Justinian Holden. In 1674 he signed a second petition for the incorporation of Sherborn, when their prayer was granted, and he, by an Act of the General Court, with twelve other petitioners and twenty more of such as they might consent to receive as inhabitants, constituted a proprietor of lands, now composing Sherborn, Holliston, and large districts of Framingham and Ashland. After the incorporation of Sherborn, Benj. Bullard was active in advancing her interests. In the petitions to the General Court, in the social compact of the town that he subscribed, he declared his high regard for the progress of the Gospel and the well-being of man. He was one of the six brethren to constitute the church at its formation. He served as Tythingman 1680, as Selectman, 1688; and was chosen to the very delicate office of seating the meeting when their house of worship was finished.

received it from Bullards of the first generation, born in New England. He was born in 1706, was cotemporary with some of them, and his character is well endorsed on the records of three churches. But it is no part of my object to derive our descent from a bull-hunting lord—though, as investigation proceeds, this, perchance, may yet be done—but from a higher stock, from one of the noble Puritans—men endowed of God with moral excellence and true dignity, compared with which the piles of the millionaire, and the glories of peers, primates and princes, are mean and contemptible.

The Indian claim to lands granted in S. prior to the incorporation of the town, not having been extinguished by the original grantees, Benj. B. united with nine other owners of these grants, and for £20, paid to seven natives as principals, and empowered by "the natural descendants of the ancient inhabitants and proprietors of the lands in and about S.," procured, June 12, 1682, a quit-claim to 4000 acres. These included his farm of 150 do.; and in 1686 he was rated with the forty proprietors and inhabitants of S. to raise an equal amount to extinguish the Indian claim to the remainder of 10,000 acres included in the township. He was rated among the highest, and this rate having been early adopted as the rule whereby the common lands should be proportioned, he and his heirs drew large shares, and became the owners of much land. He died intestate, Sept. 27, 1689, and administration was granted to his son Samuel, and Sarah Bullard? pr. his mother or sister. His personal estate was appraised Nov. 28, 1689, by John Harding and Joseph Bullard, at £235 16s.; and from another inventory, [Mid. Prob.] he seems, for his day, to have left a good property in stock and lands. The ancient Bullard farm on Bogistow Brook, in Medway, the Bullard farms in the S. and W. of Sherborn, and in the N. and W. of Holliston, were inherited from him, and drawn in his right. These have been enjoyed by many generations of his race, and well may his memory claim their gratitude and reverence. How can they show them? He sleeps hard by the scene of his toils and perils. On the apex of one of Nature's pyramids, whose base is laved by Charles River, repose his ashes, in company with those of the founders of Sherborn. Over them are scattered the fragments of broken headstones, on their way to the river, whose gurgling waters seem to chant unheard the requiem of the dead, and whose bosom offers a more hospitable home to the tenants of their graves than their degenerate children are willing to provide, with law and justice to aid them. Editors and travellers have cried "Shame!" in vain. Will the Bullards now interfere, redeem six feet, and mark it with a monument worthy of their great Puritan ancestor? It can be readily and peaceably done. There is not a spirited female of the race who cannot, by her pen, accomplish it. Benj. Bullard² m. 1st Martha Fairbanks, who d. Jan. 4, 1676-7. 10. 15. Samuel,³ Capt. and Hon., inherited the homestead, and became the most prominent citizen in Sherborn, and left indubitable evidence of talents and integrity. For a series of years he commonly acted as Moderator of her town meetings; served five years as Assessor; nineteen years as Selectman; represented her, 1708, '9, '23, '24 and '25, in the Great and General Court, and was active in procuring for the town a grant of 4000 acres west of Mendon. He lived in an eventful period of her history, during which the administration of her affairs seemed to devolve mainly on him. He d. Dec. 11, 1727, a. 60. 11. 18. Benj. Bullard, 3d, inherited land that had been assigned to his father S. W., of Brush Hill, and built his house on the road from Holliston to the W., about half a mile N. E. of Whitney's Quarry. As inheritor of his father's right in common lands, he in 1716 drew lands adjoining the N. E. corner of Mendon, now Milford; and in 1715, 37 acres W. of Mendon, now Douglas. At the 2d division of lands at D., in 1730, there were 45 acres more drawn "in his right," showing that he had disposed of his right in the grants at that place. He was chosen tythingman in 1722 and '28, and repeatedly surveyor of highways, in the alteration and improvement of which he took uncommon interest. He occupied naturally the best land in the township, and seems to have quietly devoted his days to its cultivation, until they were nearly numbered, and he and his wife in need of affectionate care from their children. Two of the four had settled in Holl., and his home boy, born ab. 32 years before, was now of age, but unmarried; and the father, understanding that spinsters then, as well as now, were naturally averse to antiquities, and that his son either loved himself so that he could love nobody else, or that he had been kicked so often and hard that he would never more venture within the reach of a female blow, despaired of the arrival of any daughter-in-law, and removed in 1739-40 to his son Benjamin's, in Holliston. Here he spent the remainder of his days, and settled his estate. To Benj. he had given a deed of 60 acres as early as May 29, 1727, and subsequently some other real estate in H.; but on the 20th March, 1748, in consideration of his dutifulness in taking care of him and his wife, he conveyed to him all his right to common lands in S. and H., and to a tract in the cedar swamp in H. To Jona. he is presumed to have left his beautiful farm in S.; to Seth, other lands in H. and Douglas; and to the old bachelor, at least, the privilege of grumbling. He survived until about 1760, and d. intestate, aged ab. 90. He m. Tabitha —, and had at S.,

Miriam, during her 1st widowhood, and magnanimously for her 2d do. should it occur. His farm of 185 acres he divided to his three sons, giving Benjamin the home lot, or E. division, who exchanged it for the S. W. do., given to Peter. To Samuel he gave the N. W. do. To Deb. Twitchell and Keziah Leland, each, he gave half his lands in Doug. and £80; and to Martha Leland £86; and the rest of his estate to be equally divided among his 3 sons, the eldest to be sole ex'r. 23. 35. Samuel,⁵ Col., inherited one third of his father's farm, and built his house where the heirs of the late Elijah Hill reside. He was early invested with the honors of his fellow-citizens, and much confidence, through a long life, was placed in his judgment and integrity. He was received as Capt. B., a member of the Ancient Art. Co. 1755, chosen Selectman 1760, and served in that capacity nine years, and was Representative 1774. At the commencement, and during the Revolutionary War, he was an active and efficient Whig; served one campaign at Bennington, and was often on committees of correspondence and vigilance. He married

Martha Perry, from Medfield, Dec. 12, '51, who died Jan. 8, '53, without issue ; and 2d, July 10, 1754, Mary (Cooledge) Ware, wid. of Benj. W. John C., of Watertown, and gr. gr. grd. dg. of Hn. John C., of W. [Bond]. She was b. Jan. 7, 1731-2, and d. his wid. Mar. 11, 1813. In 1763 Col. Bullard bought of John Morse 30 acres, originally granted to Rev. Daniel Gookin, and once owned by James Cooledge, his father-in-law, situated on the W. side of the county road, at the bottom of the Meeting-house Hill ; also of Moses Perry 3 acres, on the E. of the road, and 80 acres of rough woodland, S. of the road from the plain to the farm, and E. of the plain. The deeds may be found on record, and the slander-monger who never turns out for a grave except to tramp rough-shod over it, can read them. In 1769 he bought land of Moses Perry for a malt-house. After the first purchase he moved to the plain, kept a house of entertainment, and erected malt-works, which have been successfully carried on by his descendants quite to the present time. He d. 55. 79. Dr. Artemas Bullard, of Sutton, was the second son of Asa Bullard, of Holliston, by Hannah Cook, his second wife. He was the executor of his father's will, who was the administrator of the estate of his father, Benjamin Bullard, and thus a variety of papers came to his hands, relating to his ancestors, from which it appears that they early removed from the town of Sherborn to Holliston. Of a family of five children by the first wife, and eleven by a second, Artemas was the only one professionally educated. About the time he became of age, he commenced the study of Medicine with Dr. John B. Kittredge, of Framingham, and completed his studies with Dr. Daniel Fiske, of Oxford. He was with Dr. Fiske about two years ; and the ancient people of Oxford recollect Dr. Bullard as a "smart young physician," whom they were desirous of having settled with them.

With an inventory of medicines costing twelve pounds, and under a debt of the like amount, he commenced practice in Northbridge, August 28, 1794, and continued there till his removal to Sutton, April 8, 1805. While a Student of Medicine at Oxford, he became acquainted with his first wife, Maria Waters, eldest daughter of Ebenezer Waters, Esq., of Sutton, a relative of Dr. Fiske, and they were married February 17, 1796. She was a very worthy lady, but died, without issue, in about two years after her marriage, and now sleeps in the tomb of her father, in a private cemetery near West Sutton village. Upon this tomb is a monumental tablet, with many inscriptions, commemorative of the family of her father.

On the 6th of December, 1798, Dr. Bullard married, as his second wife, Lucy White, the eldest daughter of Mr. Jesse White, of Northbridge, by whom he had three daughters and seven sons. She now survives him in the enjoyment of health, and the respect of all who know her. She was brought up and educated in the Anabaptist way ; but soon after the birth of their first child, she and her husband both became connected with the Congregational Church, under the pastoral care of the late Rev. Dr. John Crane, for whom they always cherished the greatest regard.

In Northbridge Dr. Bullard was much esteemed both as a citizen and physician, and his practice in that place and vicinity became extensive. But his father-in-law, Esquire Waters, being advanced in years, and having a large and beautiful farm in the westerly part of Sutton, induced him to purchase it ; and after that, his attention was divided between his profession and his farm. He, however, continued to practise as long as he lived. In 1805, when military honors were not so cheap as at present, he was appointed by Governor Strong surgeon of the regiment where he resided ; and in 1814 the Council of the Massachusetts Medical Society elected him as a Fellow. Nothing was wanting to give him an eminent position in his profession, but exclusive devotion to it.

Dr. Bullard belonged to the school of domestic economists, who regard industry and subordination as indispensable elements in a wise administration of family government; yet he was an indulgent father. In his desire for the preferment of his children, he always seemed to forget himself. They were all well educated;—three of his sons were graduates, and entered the ministry; one is a physician, in extensive practice, in Indianapolis; and his three daughters all married professional men.

In his person Dr. Bullard was somewhat above the ordinary stature; of light florid complexion; light blue eyes; nose slightly aquiline; and, in short, as his surviving contemporaries say, “a fine-looking man.” He possessed ardent feelings, and great energy of character, united with a sound judgment. His integrity was proverbial—always doing exact justice to others, and expecting the same from them. He thus secured the confidence and respect of all, while he failed to gain that personal popularity which often results from an indiscriminate indulgence of faults, under the name of charity.

The residence of Dr. Bullard at West Sutton was upon a beautiful rise of land, about half a mile south-east of the village. In his family it will long be recollected and designated as “Bullard Hill.” The dwelling-house is a substantial two-story structure, erected some three-fourths of a century ago, but still looks as if it might serve several generations more. Four or five rods west of it is one of those magnificent elms that characterize so many of the early New England homes. The farm is now owned and occupied by Joseph Bullard, the third son of the Dr. But one of the children has deceased, whilst the rest of them, with their families, are settled in several different States in the Union.

The death of Dr. Bullard was occasioned instantaneously, by a fall in his barn; but for which he might have survived, in comfortable health, for several years. It occurred on the sixth day of May, 1842. His funeral was attended by a large concourse of relatives and friends, and the funeral services were performed by the Rev. Hiram Tracy, of Sutton, and the Rev. David Holman, of Douglas. He was buried in the West Sutton Cemetery. The lot in which he lies is enclosed by an iron fence, which, if it receives from his descendants the care that filial piety and respect owe to the monuments of the dead, will resist the corrodings of the elements for many centuries. Within this enclosure is erected a plain marble head-stone, with the following inscription upon it: “Dr. ARTEMAS BULLARD; born at Holliston, December 8, 1768; died at Sutton, May 6, 1842, aged 73.”

By the side of his grave is the vacant but chosen resting-place of the much-cherished partner who still survives him. Long may it remain untenanted!

1. Maria Waters, Jan. 25, 1800, was m. Nov. 11, 1823, at Sutton, by Rev. Edmund Mills, to Hon. Ira Moore, Barton, b. at Oxford, Oct. 25, 1796, and named Ira; but in testimony of respect for the memory of his maternal grd. mother, and revered gr. grd. father Moore, the first magistrate in the ancient town of Oxford, he in 1838, by an act of the General Court, adopted the additional name of Moore. He grad. at Brown University, in 1819, and at the Law School of Har. Univ. in 1822; practised law in his native town 1822–34, and represented her in 1830–1–2 in the House and the Co. of Worcester, in 1833–4 in the Senate of our Legislature. In 1834, he removed to Worcester. In 1836, he was appointed Judge of Probate for Worces. Co., and in 1840, chosen Elector for President and Vice Pres. In 1844, he resigned his Judgeship, and in 1846, represented the city of Worcester. Since then, he has resided in W. in comparative retirement, holding only the honorable and useful office of a Justice. His numerous friends, however, as though not satisfied with his enviable position in society, and convinced that he is the strongest man in the ranks of their conservative party, have sought to inflict on him a mission to Washington, but it is hoped that he and the entire race with which he is here incorporated, will maintain integrity enough to keep them in these days, out of Congress as well as State Prison. He had

Of his early history I have no knowledge. He grad. at Amherst Col.; and studied divinity at Theo. Sem., Andover, where he completed his course 1827. Of his style and success as a preacher, of his vigilance and fidelity as a pastor, and of his labors and efficiency in the cause of general education and benevolence, I need not at present write. They are sure of preservation in the history of the Western country, and of the metropolis where he has latterly resided, and will constitute an instructive chapter in the future history of the Bullard race.

- iii. Asa, Rev. A. M., b. Mar. 26, 1804, and like most men of his usefulness, embraced the Gospel in his youth. It was in Feb., 1821, that he first indulged hopes in the pardoning mercy of God; and on the 12th of Aug. of the same year, was received into the Congregational chh. at Sut. He prepared for col. at Amherst Academy, and grad. there in 1828; engaged for the next year in teaching at Augusta, Me.; entered And. Theo. Sem. in the Autumn of '29, but in Apl., '31, accepted an appointment as agent for the Maine Sabbath School Union, in which office he continued for three years, during which he superintended the establishment of at least 300 Sabbath Schools. On the 13th of Jan., 1832, he was ordained at Portland as an Evangelist. On Mar. 1, '34, he was called to the Secretaryship of the Mass. Sabbath School Society, the duties of which office he has continued to discharge for 21 years, with a promptness and efficiency that command the gratitude of the public. Besides the other onerous duties of this office, he has edited 10 vols. of the S. S. Visitor, and 11 do. of the Well Spring, and contributed to form the minds and hearts of hundreds of thousands, for time and eternity. He m. Lucretia G. Here it was in 1831, during a re-vival of religion, that he first entertained Christian hopes, and had his heart turned to the ministry. The Western Country presented a field for all his ardor and enterprise; and as a measure preparatory to the greater usefulness in that field, he transferred his relation from Amherst Col. to Miami University at Oxford, O., where he grad. In 1834, he entered Lane Theo. Sem. at Walnut Hills, Oh.; returned in feeble health to Mass., '36; was licensed in Nov. that year by the Harm'y Asso.; ord. Pastor of the Calvinistic Congl.  - ii. Cyrus,⁶ March 6, 1780, d. um., Ap. 18, 1806. This was a remarkable young man, the pride and ornament of his native town, as we can well remember. It is not easy for the younger generation to estimate the evidence of his talents by modern comparisons. For a youth of such limited opportunities, 55 years ago, to conceive the design of breaking away from the seclusion and monotony of rural life, and of embarking in such adventurous enterprises, and to be able to satisfy cautious friends of his competency, was a very different thing from doing it now. He sailed from Providence, Dec. 1, 1800, for Chili, where he arrived July, 1801, and took up his residence at Concepcion. Here he devoted some months to the acquisition of Spanish. Subsequently he gained employment as a linguist. During a portion of his time at C., he worked in gold and diamonds, and kept a store of jewelry. Sept. 3, 1803, he sailed for the Island of Masafuro. Here he remained from Sept. 11, until March 7, 1804, purchasing furs for the China market, with which he arrived at Canton in Sept. following. Having transacted his business here and recovered from dangerous sickness, he sailed in Nov. for America, and arrived at Nantucket, Ap. 7, 1805. Nov. following, he sailed from Boston as master and supercargo in the brig Littiller, for Guadaloupe, and after a prosperous voyage, returned to B., Feb. 11, 1806. Fifteen days after he sailed again, in the employ of the same house, for the same island, which he left on the 13th of Ap. for St. Thomas. Here he was arrested by a fever, with which he died Ap., 1806, a. 26. The news of his death threw a pall over the entire community of Medway, and the watchful pastor, Rev. Luther Wright, added his voice to that of Providence, in a public discourse which by request was published.

IV. Henry Adams Bullard,⁶ A. M. and S. H. S., b. Sep. 9, 1788, d. Apl., 1851. The following obituary appeared in the New Orleans Crescent, soon after.

THE LATE JUDGE BULLARD.

"A sense of duty, heightened by personal friendship, leads us to attempt a brief sketch of HENRY ADAMS BULLARD, whose death we recorded yesterday. He was born in Pepperell, Massachusetts—of which town his father was the minister—on September 9th, 1788. On the mother's side, he was closely connected with the distinguished family, whose name he bears. He was educated at Harvard University, and graduated in the class of 1807, at the age of nineteen. At the time, French was the only modern language taught in that institution. But while he pursued his law studies, both in Boston and Philadelphia, he acquired the Spanish, Italian, and German, all of which he critically understood and appreciated. It is only a few months since we found him and his son reading Mifflin's Tasso, with the original, and heard from his 'unpremeditated talk,' an essay on the 'Jerusalem,' which would have furnished a professional lecturer with an evening's dissertation.

In Philadelphia, the acquaintances formed through his knowledge of the Spanish, brought him in contact with Gen. Toledo, who was organizing an expedition to revolutionize New Mexico. Judge Bullard, then just admitted to the Bar, joined him as an Aid and Military Secretary, and proceeded with him to Nashville, where he passed the winter of 1812. The following spring he accompanied Gen. Toledo, and the recruits, to Natchitoches, which was the starting point. They entered the Mexican territory and found the people already in arms, and the royal troops driven out of what now constitutes Texas, except the force in San Antonio ; but these retired at the approach of the Republicans. Here they remained several weeks, until the Spanish General, having concentrated an overwhelming force, defeated the Republicans in a pitched battle, and scattered their forces in every direction. Judge Bullard was mounted, and with one or two companions, managed to reach the American settlements, after suffering severe hardships. When he entered Natchitoches he was ragged, sick—broken down by fatigue and privation, and, worse than all, penniless. Here he opened an office, and commenced the practice of his profession. Natchitoches, in point of age, is second to New Orleans, and at that time, was second in importance. It was the trading post for the Indians and Mexicans within an extensive circuit. The great raft prevented all intercourse by river above, and it was virtually the head of navigation on Red River.

The removal of the raft, the purchase of the Indian lands, and the removal of the Indians—the introduction of steamboats, and the facility of communication with New Orleans, all have tended to the decline of the ancient town. All that period, a practising lawyer of the Western District was compelled to ride a circuit, embracing Opelouses, Avoyelles, Alexandria, Natchitoches, Ouachita and Concordia, a distance of three hundred miles. The practice was lucrative, and the bar numbered more talent and learning, than at any subsequent period. The names of Wilson, Johnston, Brent, Porter, Bowen, Bronson, Thomas, and Bullard, would have done honor to any bar. Of these, General Isaac Thomas alone remains at the bar—himself and Mr. Bronson alone survive. It was a life of great physical hardship, yet one of much enjoyment.

Some years since, we rode from Natchez to Alexandria with Judge Bullard and Gen. Thomas. It was a region over which, some thirty years before, they had travelled twice a year. Scarcely a spring or brook was passed, which did not call up some interesting reminiscence, and they lived over again the scenes of their active and adventurous youth; and the younger men, who accompanied them, almost regretted that they, too, had not lived in those days of freedom and manly exercise.

In 1822, Judge Bullard went upon the District Court Bench, and performed its duties for several years, when he resigned; but, after a year or two, returned. In 1831, he was elected to Congress, from the Western District, and re-elected the next term. In 1834, he was elevated to the Supreme Bench, taking the place of Judge Porter, who went into the Senate of the United States. In Congress, Judge Bullard was not among the debaters. He spoke occasionally, on great questions, and after careful preparation. His most elaborate speech was on the Tariff bill, in 1832.

He remained on the Supreme Bench from 1834 till 1846, with the exception of a few months in '39, when he filled the office of Secretary of State, and resumed the practice of his profession. Under the Constitution of '45, a new Judiciary was created, and not one of the members of the Supreme Court retained. He returned to his practice in this city, and was retained in much of the important litigation of the State. His decisions are models of judicial rhetoric; brief, perspicuous and pointed. As a writer, Judge Bullard had few equals; he wrote without effort, yet with a critical accuracy that defied correction. As a speaker, he had the advantage of a face of extreme beauty, which the ravages of excruciating disease for twenty-five years did not destroy, a speaking eye, and a musical voice. But his command of language was not copious, and though he always used the aptest words, he sometimes hesitated in selecting them. When, however, excited, he spoke with feeling, force and eloquence. His last public speech in New Orleans, was at the Bar meeting, called together by the death of Mr. Prentiss. He then spoke with much emotion, and pronounced one of the most beautiful eulogies in the language. On that mournful occasion, he thus spoke of himself:

'Who would have thought that I, whose career is ended—that I, whose sands are fast dropping away—that I, with my age and physical infirmities—I whose children no longer require a father's solicitude, should have survived to pay this feeble tribute to his memory; while he, the young, the noble-hearted, the gifted—in the fulness of his fame and usefulness—sinks into an early grave, and leaves behind him a youthful and pious wife and four orphan children, to weep for his loss? How inscrutable are the ways of Providence!'

Among the many noble traits of his character, on which his friends will love to dwell, was his interest in the younger members of the Bar. We remember well the embarrassment with which, as an unknown young lawyer, from the woods, we first appeared before that awful body, the Supreme Court, and we can never forget the kindness of his manner, the considerate attention which he bestowed on the obscure advocate, at once restoring confidence and winning gratitude. Such, too, was the remark of other young men, under the same trying circumstance; and even when suffering the torments of the gout, we never knew him to show any ill feeling to the younger and humbler members of the Bar. He kept up to the last his habit of general reading, and was familiar with all the best authors, of all languages. His conversation was that of a full man, without the slightest approach to pedantry. It may well be said of him, that 'He was a scholar, and a wise and good one;

Exceeding wise, fair spoken, and persuading.'

He delivered many lectures and addresses before the literary societies of this city, which might be well compared with similar productions of men who make literature a profession. In 1847, he was appointed Professor of the Civil Law, in the Law School of Louisiana, and delivered two courses of lectures. In 1850, he was elected to fill a vacancy in the State Legislature, and a few weeks after was elected to fill the vacancy in the Second Congressional District, occasioned by the entrance of Mr. C. M. Conrad into the Cabinet. Judge Bullard thus returned to Congress, after an absence of sixteen years. He found but few of his old friends in either House. He did not speak during the short session, though we know it had been his wish to do so on the California Bills. His thorough knowledge of the Spanish laws, and their system of land titles, would have enabled him to give Congress much valuable information, which is now lost. During the session, he argued several cases in the Supreme Court, and was treated with marked attention by that talented and learned Bench.

His health during the winter was remarkably good, and the cold, dry climate braced his constitution. But he imprudently returned home by the Southern route, and the fatigue and exposure of the journey completely prostrated him. He lingered for three weeks, and died at last from the gout in the stomach.—His funeral was attended by a large number of the Bar, the Judges of the Supreme Court, and many of the most prominent citizens."

He m. Oct. 25, 1820, Miss Esther Lewis Murry, b. at Camden, S. C., Nov. 5, 1800. After spending most of his years at the S., he in 1829, removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, and from thence to Lancaster, and next to Mount Carmel; employed most of the time as agent for the American Sund. School Union for Ohio. Urged by representations of the character and prospects of the Prairie Country, and by the desire to plant religious institutions there before opposition should become organized against them, he disposed of his place at Mt. C. in 1833, and removed to Hennipen, in N. Ill., and the next year, as was then the custom of settlers, took measures to secure a claim on government land, 25 miles above the mouth of Fox R., where he finally settled with his family, and spent the remainder of his days in superintending the opening of his farm, collecting the settlers around as they arrived, and showing them the only way to a better country. Thus closed the life of another descendant of Prudence Frarie, in the exalted pursuit of doing good.

CHAPTER III.

3. John Bullard was undoubtedly the brother of Benjamin¹ and Wm.¹ and is presumed to have first settled with them at Watertown, where he became a member of the chh., and from which he with others was dismissed and received to the chh. in Dedham, 30 (5) 1641, "Mr. Phillips, pastor, and Messrs. Carter and How, elders, testifying in their favour." He was one of the original proprietors of Dedh., had land assigned him adjoining to his brother William's, and probably removed to D. as early as 1637. He was rated at D. as one of her more able citizens in 1647, and private accounts were early entered against him abroad as one of "the two Bullards at D." In 1650 he became one of the select proprietors of the new town of Medfield, enjoying with them in such a degree the confidence of the General Court, that, in the act of incorporation, they were not bound, as in all similar cases, within a specified time to build a meeting-house, settle a minister, and establish a school; their character being a pledge that these things would be attended to in due season. He immediately removed to M., where he shared largely in the division of her public lands, and enjoyed the respect and confidence of her citizens. In all these removals he accompanied Samuel Morse and sons, with whom and the Bullards a near relationship is presumed to have existed. On removing to M. he pr. left his place in D. to his son John, and pr. son Isaac. . He m. Magdalene ———, who d. 29 (1) 1661, and 2d Ellen Dickerman, wid. of Tho. CHAPTER IV.

4. Isaac Bullard,¹ on page 22, is confounded with Isaac,² the son of Wm.,¹ of Chap. VI. Since the preceding Chaps. were printed, I have consulted an ancient Record of Dedh., recently discovered, from which it appears, that Isaac,¹ although he signed her social compact, doubtless at Watertown, never removed to D.; for, on the first division of her lands, 18 (6) 1636, no lot was assigned him, or afterwards; and, as he was not taxed at D., nor, again, certainly mentioned on her records; and as his name nowhere occurs on the records of Watertown, he probably either deceased Aug. 15, — 18, 1636, or altered his purpose, and returned to England. It is not ascertained that he had a family. It is possible, that the Isaac who m. Sarah Jones, from Dorch., in 1654, was his son; but more probably, the son of his brother John.¹ His name was commemorated by his brother Wm. and nephew Benj., and, very likely, by his brother John, with whom Benj.² is supposed to have resided, after the death of his father.

CHAPTER V.

5. Nathaniel Bullard, appears from the record above mentioned, and from family documents in the possession of Lewis Bullard, Esq., of Dedh., not to have been of the first generation of Bullards in N. Eng., but the son of Wm.¹ For his family, see Chap. VI., No. 12.

CHAPTER VI.

6. Wm. Bullard,¹ was probably the oldest Puritan of the name who settled in N. Eng., and evidently a man of character and consideration. Circumstances almost conclusive, indicate that he was the brother of Benjamin,¹ John,¹ and Isaac,¹ but not of Robert¹ or George¹. Of the time and place of his embarkation, no positive evidence has been discovered: still, we are not in total darkness about them. While on his voyage, it would seem that he became a witness of the nuncupative will of James Harvie, of Gamscolne, Essex county, (pr. now Colne Engaine, or Little Colne), Engd., who died on shipboard, leaving property in trust for a brother at Wethersfield, near G., and desiring Wm. Bullard "to take the whole business upon himself." This indicates that they had been neighbors. The will has no date. It was not probated until * * * * 1638, and then sworn to by Wm. Bullard; [see Suf. Prob., 1, 15;] but as it provided that the avails of the property should be loaned two years to poor Christians before it should be sent back to Engd., he not improbably delayed for more than two years, until he had collected the property loaned; then made oath to the will, and at the same time proved the fulfilment of his trust. This would make him arrive in 1635, the year when so many came over, among whom were two others of the name of Harvie, and Samuel Morse and family, and no doubt his brother Joseph Morse, probable connections of the Bullards, each of whom had dispatched a son the year previous, as if to prepare tenements at Watertown against their arrival. These sons embarked at Ipswich, a convenient port for emigrants from Essex county. Samuel Morse embarked in the "Increase," Apl. 15, 1635, at London, another convenient place of embarkation for families from Suffolk or Essex, from one of which, since the publication of my Memorial of the Morses, I have been induced to believe my great ancestor originated. If Wm. Bullard came in the Increase, which was not improbable, he must have embarked clandestinely, as distinguished Puritans were then obliged to do, for his name is not among her 112 enrolled passengers, nor on any similar list yet discovered.

He no doubt settled first at Watertown, and united with her church, from which he was dismissed in 1641. Here he engaged in the enterprise of planting Dedh. His name is enrolled as the 53d signer of her social compact, and is found among the first to whom her lands were assigned, and on whom taxes were imposed. In the spring of 1637 he, with his wife and children, was pr. of the company who in boats ascended Chs. R. from W. to Ded., and on landing on the E. bank of Dwight's brook, knelt in prayer for the blessing of Almighty God upon their settlement. He had land assigned adjacent to his brother John, and probably near West Common. Here he remained, and was annually taxed as an able inhabitant, and became one of the number to whom the management of the municipal interests of the town were confided. About 1653 he removed to Cambridge, where he m. 2d, Mary Grissel [Griswold], wid. of Francis G., who "had an estate, and two children by her former husband," and became with her a member of the chh. at Cambridge. He made his will in 1679, "being then about 85 years old." To this he added a codicil, May 2, 1684, and d. at his daughter Farrington's, in Ded., Dec. 23, 1686; and on the third day following, his estate was inventoried and his will subsequently probated; [Suf. Prob., 9. 180.] He left a considerable estate in lands on Mystic R., in Charlestown, and in Ded. Nathl. his son, was appointed one of his executors, to whom he bequeathed his real estate in Ded.

11. 14. Wm.³ Ens. settled upon the present homestead of the Bullards in D. and was through life styled cordwainer, but certainly not for sticking to his last. He seems rather to have been a trader, and "an insatiate lover of real estate." So many deeds did he take of lots in Ded., Walpole, Sutton, Upton, Sherborn Dividends (Douglas), Natick and Charlestown, as made him one of the great land owners of the colony; and so many ancient family papers did he preserve and transmit, tending to throw light upon the history of his own and other races, that we and posterity ought to thank his memory and that of each inheritor of the legacy, for their careful preservation. May veneration and foresight continue to guard them both from the conflagration of the depository, and any female hand that wars with every thing old. He m. Aug. 6, 1697, Elizabeth Avery, dg. of Jona. A., of Ded., by w. Elizabeth ———, and grd. dg. of Wm. A., physician, of Boston; and had
15. I. Wm.⁴ May 9, 1698, d. pr. in 1737; m. Hannah Lewes, of Ded., Feb. 15, 1721-2, rm. to Dorch. Precinct, had I. Hannah,⁵ bap. at Sto., Apl. 5, 1724; II. Elizabeth,⁵ b. at Ded. 1725, and probably others.
- II. Elizabeth,⁴ Nov. 8, 1699, m. Nathaniel Kingsbury; III. Jemima,⁴ Mar. 4, 1702, m. Solomon Bullard, of Chap. III, No. 32, who s. on land at Walpole, pr. inherited fr. her father.

17. 16. v. Isaac,⁴ Apl. 4, 1709, d. ab. 1776, m. 1731-2 Mary Deane.
16. 17. Isaac,⁴ Ens. and Coroner, reed. in 1731 of his father, Wm., a deed of the homestead in D., and was also styled cordwainer; w. Mary Deane, m. 1731-2, d. 1745: 2d w. Wid. Grace Deane, m. 1747, had i. Mary,⁵ Mar. 23, 1733, d. yg.: ii. Mary,⁵ Jan. 19, '35; iii. Catherine,⁵ Oct. 7, '38, d. yg.; iv. Catherine,⁵ June 4, '40, m. ——— Wadsworth, of Milton.
19. 18. iv. Isaac,⁵ Jly. 10, '44, d. June 18, 1808, m. Patience Baker.
18. 19. Isaac,⁵ Dea. and Hn., inherited the ancient homestead, and erected in 1782, the present Bullard house, ab. 20 rods S. W. of the site of the original one; and ab. 60 do. N. W. of the C. H. of D. He was a gent. of intelligence and sterling moral worth, much employed in the transaction of public business, being often placed on important Committees with his friend and neighbor, Fisher Ames. He long served the ancient Chh. in D. as a Deacon; was many years returned a representative to the G. C., and annually elected Treasurer of Norf. Co. from its first organization in 1793 until 1808, the year of his death. He m., 1766, Patience Baker, of Ded., and had

The name of Holbrooke is ancient and distinguished ; and in the English world it has long since attained a wide range. It does not however occur in Doom's Book or Rheimer's Fœdera, yet as early as the reign of Richard II, one of the name was advanced to the order of Knighthood, and "a chev. between three martlets assigned as his coat of arms. Others with equal claims to distinction, or averse to the monopoly, either attained to the same honor or assumed the badge of having done so : for in books of Heraldry I find the name of Holbrooke distinguished by nine other coats of arms, viz., Holbroake Gu. a chev. betw. ten crosses crosslet gu. — Holbrokes. Or. a fess. between six crosslets, gu. — Holbrook (Suffolk) Ar. a chev., betw. ten crosses crosslet, gu. — Holbrooke, the same arms. Crest — A lion pass. guard, tail extended ppr.—Holbrook. Or a chev. between ten crosses crosslet gu.—Holbrooke (Newington, Co. Kent). Az. a cross, or fretty of the first between four mullets of the second.—Holbrooke (Suffolk) Or. a chev. gu., surmounted with a cross formée fitchée at the foot of the second. Crest—A lion's head erased, charged with a chev. or, as in the arms.—Holbrooke (Suffolk) Or, crusily gu. a bend of the second.—Holbrooke (Suffolk) Ar. a chev. between three crosses crosslet gu." These badges of vanity, so little esteemed by the Puritans and their republican descendants, have their use in a historical point of view, as indicating the original and early seats of the race, and may guide some future explorer of the ancestry of our Holbrooks in the mother country where they must have been men of character and consideration. Of the origin of the name I find nothing. Camden does not mention it, though common in his day. This omission may be accounted for, if it was so obviously of local origin as to be included with names of this class : and imagination suggests that in a former age of belief in holy waters, there was some Holy Brooke from which the name was borrowed, the tradition of which might have lingered in his day. But I would not originate a tradition. Too long have the Holbrooks followed this jack-o'-lantern, believing, like other races, in their descent from three brothers, a story suggested, it has been thought, by nothing better, if so good, than the following analogy. Shem, Ham, and Japheth were religious men, so were our ancestors ; they came from an old world to a new one, and came by water, so did our fathers ; there was just three of them that came, from whom the human race have descended ; therefore there was the sacred orthodox number of three from Old to New Eng., from whom each race of a common name have sprung. But the stale tradition that formerly concealed ignorance now exposes it ; and the Holbrooks, better posted than some other races, may now correct legends of their ancestry ; and on truthful history found their claim to a more respectable origin than false tradition has attempted to give.

Many Holbrooks were early in New Eng. Hitherto all attempts to trace and reduce them to one family have resulted in despair, with the exception of those of the lamented Wm. T. Harris, A. M. He had thoroughly mastered the 5 first generations, of one branch, while I, without knowing it, was attempting the same ; and having, through the kindness of his bereaved father, the Librarian of Har. Univ., been favored with the perusal of his MSS., I have become confirmed in the correctness of my arrangement, and added names and references which his sharper eye and more thorough hand had detected and recorded. Thanks to his memory. He was of the third generation of the same family to whom I am indebted for kindred help.

The other families of the name of Holbrook, not descended from Tho., and collected from what were remote parts of New Eng., I have, at the end of eight years of frequent investigation, succeeded, in my own view more from circumstantial than documentary evidence, in reducing to the descendents of a common father, whose name was probably John, and he the brother and companion of Tho. No date of their embarkation or arrival is presumed to exist. The name first occurs at Weymouth, in 1640, and under circumstances showing that they could not then have been new comers. The settlement of Weymouth was attempted in 1622; and in 1624 a colony of substantial settlers arrived from Weymouth in Dorsetshire, and gave name to the place, and in 1635 another company with a minister, and no doubt from the same place. With one of the latter companies probably came Tho. and John Holbrook, and more likely with the former. If so, Tho. must then have had one or two children; and if with the latter, they might have had an embarrassing number. They were probably from Weymouth, 8 miles from Dorchester, from whence came the planters of our Dorchester; and not remote from these towns was a place, "a small farm," long afterward and perhaps still called "Holbrook." Who of the race will undertake investigations in that quarter, or pledge to a correspondent the means of his doing so?

Thomas Holbrooke, and no doubt John, settled in that part of Weymouth called Old Spain. It was chosen, for its harbor and peninsular form, for confining their cattle. As early as 1643 the stock of the planters had so increased as to render a removal necessary. Seekonk Prairie had been discovered, and it was resolved that as many as chose might remove, and that if a majority were in favor of removing, Mr. Newman their minister should attend them. Thomas and John Holbrook appeared in the affirmative, and in order "that the land of Rehoboth might be divided according to person and estate," each of them gave in their property at precisely £186. This indicates that they were partners. Were they Thomas and John, sen's, or jun's? The former might be presumed if there was not so much evidence that the Holbrooks of the second generation began life in good circumstances, showing that their fathers for their day must have been rich. Home lots at Rehoboth were assigned them 31, (4), 1644. But as John, jun.'s, wife died, leaving one or two children, Jan. 24, 1643-4, pr. after they had pledged themselves to remove and given in their property; and as Thomas, jun., was then young and unmarried, they had reasons, which Thomas and John, sen's, might not have had, for altering their purposes and forfeiting these lots, as they did 10 (11), 1644, by not taking possession. The records of Weym. chh. perished in 1644, with the removal of Mr. Newman; and while subsequent records refer to Thomas, sen., as one of the principal inhabitants, they make no mention of his brother John. Still circumstances, not easily resisted, point to a brother probably of that name, as an early inhabitant of W., and the father of a numerous family, who might have died before 1644. I have, therefore, in these sheets arranged the New Eng. Holbrooks as the descendents of two brothers,

3. 1. Thomas Holbrooke.¹ (See Part I.)

2. John? Holbrooke.¹ (See Part II.)

PART I.

1. 3. Tho. Holbrooke,¹ was advanced in years when the records of W. began and then had talented sons to render public service.

In 1641, immediately after the earliest preserved records begin, he was chosen the second member of a board of selectmen called townsmen, and served as such in 1645, '46, '51, '52, '54, having his brother or eldest son, John, after '47, associated with him for a portion of the time. As a citizen of standing and long acquainted with the country, the Gen. Court in 1649 appointed him the first member of a committee to lay out a county highway from Weym. to Dorchester. The following is a copy verbatim ad literatim of his will from Suffolk Prob.

In the name of God, Amen.

Anno Domino, Dec. 31, 1668, Thomas Holbrook, of Weymouth, in New England, being sick and weak in body, but of good and perfect memory, thanks be to the Lord, and minding the uncertain estate of this transitory life, and desiring to settle that estate that God hath blessed me with all, do make this my last will and testament in manner and form following, committing my soul to Almighty God through Christ my Saviour and Redeemer, and my body to decent burial, and for the settling of my temporal estate I do order, give and dispose the same in manner and form following. That is to say, first, I will that my debts and funeral expenses be truly paid out of my estate.

Item, I give and bequeathe unto Jane, my beloved wife, during her life, my whole estate, of what quality and quantity soever the same be, at her dispose for her necessary and comfortable maintenance, and do request my son John Holbrooke and my son Wm. Holbrooke, and my son Tho. Holbrooke to be helpful to my wife in assisting of her in what she may have occasion to dispose of for her subsistence and comfortable maintenance during her life, and give their mother the best advice, as she is ancient and weak of body, suitable to her necessity without being burthensome to any.

Item, I give and bequeathe unto my endeared children all my estate, of whatever quality and quantity soever the same shall be, that shall remain at my wife Jane's decease, there being six of them, three sons and three daughters, to be equally divided between them, always provided that my eldest son, John Holbrooke, shall have a double portion, and the rest of my estate to be equally divided, viz., unto my son, Tho. Holbrook, my son Wm. Holbrook, unto my daughter Anne Rennolds, unto my daughter Elizabeth Hatch, and unto my daughter Jane Drake, to be equally divided amongst them as near as may be; and in case any or either of my sons or daughters should decease before my wife Jane, then the share of the deceased to remain to their respective children and my grandchildren.

Item, I give unto my grandchild John Holbrooke the eldest, my sword.

Item, I give unto my grandchild Peter Holbrooke my gun and my gray mare colt. Item, I give unto my grandchild Wm. Holbrook my musket. Item, I give and bequeathe unto all my grandchildren that shall be living at my wife Jane's decease, two shillings apiece. Item, I do hereby make and ordain my loving wife, the above said Jane Holbrooke, executrix during her life, and at her decease, I do appoint, make and ordain executor of this my last will and testament, my loving son John Holbrooke, whom I do order and entreat to perform this my will, and pay the legacies out of my whole estate of what shall remain at my wife's decease.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal the day and year above written, as on the other side.

The mark of THOMAS [T. H.] HOLBROOKE.

Wm. Chase.

Whereas Peter Holbrooke my grandchild hath been as a servant, and hath been helpful to me Tho. Holbrooke and my wife Jane in our old age, for the space of about eight years before the date of these presents, and still remains with us as a dutiful child, I, Tho. Holbrooke, senr., this 31st of Dec., 1673, do will and bequeathe unto my beloved grandchild Peter Holbrooke, his heirs and assignees, my dwelling house and about three acres of orchard and arable land, situate and being in Weymouth, bounded with Edward Kingman's land, and the River Northerly and Easterly, and the highway Southerly, and the River Westerly, or the creek descending from the River, as the said Peter Holbrooke's proper estate of inheritance. To have and to hold after the decease of me, Tho. Holbrooke and Jane my wife, and not before. And I, Tho. Holbrooke, do hereby declare not to alter in any particular form my aforesaid will dated this day was five years since, but in this respect as aforewritten concerning my beloved son and grandchild, Peter Holbrooke, which accordingly I do desire my son John Holbrooke as Executor in all points to fulfil. Dated Dec. 31, 1673. Published, signed and sealed in the presence of Tho. White, Wm. Chase. T. H.

CHAPTER I.

4. 10. John,² Capt., was a man of much consideration in his day, and in him the public reposed great confidence. His independence, courage, enterprise and wealth are abundantly proved by records. He resided at Old Spain, in Weymouth, and seems to have inherited the homestead. Having previously been received to the church, he in 1640 took the freeman's oath. In 1648 he first served as selectman. In 1651 he represented W. in the Gen. Court, and was of the minority of 13, who May 7 of that year refused their assent to the book of ecclesiastical discipline, made out by a committee and the elders of the churches. He was also representative in 1664, '69, '71, '72, '73. In 1668, he with two associates bought a tract of land 9 miles long and $\frac{3}{4}$ m. wide, situated on the road between Weymouth and Middleboro'. In 1678, he purchased John Saffan's whole farm in Scituate, which he bought of John Hoar, then of Concord. He loaned money to John Williams, of Boston, (the same who had witnessed a deed for his reputed cousin John Holbrooke, of Roxb.), and large sums from time to time to other tradesmen and merchants in B., taking mortgages on houses, warehouses, &c. He was a great operator for those times, and so continued until the close of life. He sold a corn-mill in W., Jan. 20, 1698--9, the year he died. In the time of Philips' war he rendered signal service. He not only defended W., but with his company carried the war into the enemies country. On the 22d of June, 1676, he arrived at Concord, with 30 men from Norfolk, an extinct county, then embracing the settlements on Merrimack and Piscataqua Rivers, whom he had been sent to defend. As commander he drew pay for 24 men from the public treasury in June, Aug. and Sept. of that year; and £16 for his own services. He seems to have been much honored, and the early age for his time at which he was called to the public service, indicates the standing of his family.

WORSHIPFULL CAPT. HOLBROOKE'S WILL.

I, John Holbrook, of the Town of Weymouth, in New England, being weak of body, but of a competent understanding and memory, do make this my last Will and Testament, hereby revoking and annulling all former wills by me made. Firstly, committing my soul to God in hope of eternal salvation, through the merits of Christ, my Saviour, and my body to the earth to be decently buried at the discretion of my executors; and for my worldly estate I do will and dispose of as followeth, my just debts and funeral charges being paid.

Imprimis, I give and bequeathe to my beloved wife, Mary Holbrook, fifty pounds in money, to be at her disposing, provided she accept of it in full of all demands from my estate, otherwise my contract with her before marriage to be made good to her in every respect; and also, I give her ten pounds in money, provided she give five pounds thereof to her daughter, Loring.

I give and bequeathe unto my son, John Holbrook, all my housing and lands in the Township of Scituate, which I purchased of Mr. John Saffin, to be to the use and improvement of him, the said John Holbrook, for and during his natural life, and after his decease the moiety or one-half of the said houses and lands to be to the only proper use and improvement of his now wife Abigail, during the time she shall remain his widow, and no longer. The other half of the housing and land I give and bequeathe to the use and improvement of my grandson, John Holbrook, the son of my said son, John Holbrook; and, after the decease of my said son and the widowhood of his wife Abigail, I do give and bequeathe all the aforesaid housing and lands to my aforesaid grandson, John Holbrook, to have and to hold to him and his heirs forever; always provided, that when my said grandson shall come to possess and enjoy the whole of the said farm, that he shall well and truly pay forty pounds sterling in equal proportions to the six daughters of my said son, John Holbrook; and if any of them shall decease before they receive their part, then the said forty pounds to be paid equally to such as shall survive, viz., if any of them decease before marriage. I also give and bequeathe unto my son, John Holbrook, all my wearing apparel, and my best feather bed, my best rug and furnitures belonging to the said bed, and my silver tankard. Also, I give unto my granddaughter, Elizabeth, the wife of James Smith, five pounds sterling; also, I give unto my granddaughter, Abigail Porter, ten pounds sterling, to be paid by my executors within one year after my decease.

I give and bequeathe unto my daughter-in-law, Lydia Holbrook, widow of my son Samuel Holbrook, deceased, for the bringing up of the children of my said son, Samuel Holbrook, the use and improvement of the uplands adjoining to her dwelling house, in the neck called Kingman's Neck, and two acres of salt meadow that I purchased of John Kingman, and also my three acres of salt marsh near Burying Island, and also one-half of three acres of salt marsh in Braintree, lying on the E. side of the Creek, going to Spheer's Farm; also, 40 acres of land on the Westerly side of my land, near the Physical Spring in Weymouth; also, the one-half of my land in Brantry, adjoining to Weymouth line, called by the name of Execution Land; also, the one-half of my dwelling house in Boston. All which housing and lands as is before expressed, I give the use and improvement thereof, unto the said Lydia Holbrook, for her maintenance and the bringing up of the children of my said son, Samuel Holbrook, until my grandson, Joseph Holbrook, son of my said son, Samuel Holbrook, do, or might attain to the age of one-and-twenty years, and no longer. Also, I give unto my said daughter, Lydia Holbrook, £120, to be paid by my executors in one-fourth part of my household stuff and cattle, and the remainder in money, to make up the said £120: always provided, that the said Lydia Holbrook do pay to her three daughters, Elizabeth, Mary and Sarah Holbrook, daughters of said son, Samuel Holbrook, each of them £40 when they shall attain to the age of one-and-twenty years, or marriage, which shall first happen.

I give and bequeathe unto my grandsons, Samuel Holbrook, John Holbrook and Joseph Holbrook, sons of my said son, Samuel Holbrook, all the aforesaid lands and meadows in Weymouth and Brantrey, (left for the use and improvement of the said Lydia Holbrook aforesaid), to be divided into equal parts or shares to my said three grandsons, when my said grandson, Joseph Holbrook shall, or might attain to the age of one-and-twenty years. The said Samuel, John and Joseph, paying to their mother, Lydia Holbrook, each of them 30s. per annum, during her natural life.

I give and bequeathe to my grandson, Abiah Holbrook, son of my son, Samuel Holbrook, the one-half or moiety of my house and land in Boston, when he shall attain to the age of one-and-twenty years, he paying to his mother, Lydia Holbrook, 30s. per annum, during her natural life. I also give and bequeathe unto my said daughter, Lydia Holbrook, half an acre of salt meadow, lying in the neck called Kingman's Neck, that was formerly my father, Thomas Holbrooke's, to her and her heirs forever. And further it is my will, that if my said daughter Lydia shall dispose of herself in marriage, that there shall be no strip nor waste made upon any of the aforesaid lands any more than what may be needful for her own firing or reparation of her own housing, or fencing of the said lands.

I give unto my son-in-law, Simon Whitmarsh, £20 in money.

I give unto my grandson, Simon Whitmarsh, £20 in money.

I give unto my granddaughter, Ruth Darby, £15 in money. I give unto my granddaughter, Mary Jackson, £15 in money.

All the aforesaid sums to be paid by my executors within one year after my decease.

I give to my daughter, Hannah Pierce, £50 in money, to be at her disposal as she shall see cause. Also, I give unto my grandson, Azarikum Pierce, £15 in money. Also, I give to Ephraim Pierce, jun., £15 in money. I give to my granddaughter Rachel Peck, £5 in money. All which legacies are to be paid by my executors within one year after my decease, which shall be in part payment of a bond under the hands and seals of Ephraim Pierce and Azarikum Pierce, bearing date June 14, 1697.

I give unto my grandson, Joseph Nash, £50 in money. Also, I give unto my granddaughter, Elizabeth Nash, £25 in money, to be paid in one year after my decease.

I give unto my grandson, Benjamin Ludden, £10 in money. I give to my grandson, John Ludden, £10 in money. I give to my grandson, Joseph Ludden, £10 in money. All the aforesaid legacies given to the Luddens, to be paid by my executors, as they shall attain to the age of one-and-twenty years. I give unto my grandson, James Ludden, one acre of salt meadow, lying on the Eastern neck which was formerly his grandfather's, James Ludden's. I give unto my granddaughter, Eunice Ludden, £15, at her day of marriage, or when she shall attain the age of 18 years, which shall first happen.

I give unto my grandson, Joseph Edson, £15 in money. To my grandson, Josiah Edson, £15 in money. To my granddaughter, Experience Edson, £40 in money. All which legacies given to the Edsons, to be paid by my executors, as they shall attain to the age of one-and-twenty years, the sons, and the daughters, eighteen years.

I give and bequeathe unto my son, Ichabod, my dwelling house in Weymouth, that I now live in, with all the out-housing, orchard, and lands adjoining, by estimation between 40 and 50 acres, and also, all my salt marsh, lying in the neck, called Kingman's Neck, not before given; also, all the remainder of my lands near the Physical Spring, not before given, also, all the 4 acres of salt marsh lying on the East side of the back river, in Weymouth. All which houses and lands I give unto my son, Ichabod, during his natural life, and to his wife, Sarah, as long as she remains his widow; and after his decease and his wife's widow's estate, I give and bequeathe the said housing, orchard and lands adjoining, with the salt marsh, in the neck called Kingman's Neck, unto my grandson, Abiezer Holbrook, son of my son, Ichabod Holbrook, to him and his heirs forever.

I give unto my grandson, David Holbrook, son of my son, Ichabod Holbrook, the aforesaid salt meadow, lying Easterly of the back river, and the aforesaid land near the Physical Spring, after the decease of my son, Ichabod Holbrook and his wife's widow's estate, to be to him and his heirs forever. I give to my son, Ichabod, the one-half of my house and land in Boston, during his natural life, and to his wife as long as she shall remain his widow; and after his decease and his wife Sarah's widow's estate, I give the said half of the house and land at Boston, unto his son, Elisha Holbrook, and his heirs forever.

I give unto the reverend Mr. Samuel Torrey, Pastor of the Church of Weymouth, £5 in money. And further it is my will, that if any of the grandchildren shall decease before they receive their portions, that then the portion of the deceased shall be equally divided amongst the surviving brothers and sisters of the same parents.

And it is my will, that if my Indian servant, Anthony, doth behave himself well, that he have his freedom in 12 years after my decease. And further it is my will, that if my wife see cause not to live in my house, she shall have what provisions she shall have occasion for her own use, for three months after my decease. All the remainder of my estate, whether real or personal, wheresoever it may be found that is not before given by this my last Will, I give and bequeathe unto my son, Ichabod Holbrook, and his heirs forever. And do hereby ordain and constitute my son, John Holbrook, and my son, Ichabod Holbrook, with Ephraim Hunt, Esq., to be my executors to this my last Will and Testament. And I do hereby give unto the said Ephraim Hunt, £5. And I do desire my loving friends, John Rogers and Joseph Dyer, and my brother, Stephen French, to be overseers to see to the performance of this my last Will and Testament, and do give to each of them 20s., in remembrance of my love.

In witness that this is my last Will and Testament, I do hereby make void and null all former wills by me made whatsoever, and do sign, seal, declare and publish this to be my last Will and Testament, the 12th day of July, 1699.

The mark S of John Holbrook, and a seal.

191. 240. Joseph,⁸ Col., has been so distinguished for a love of military adventure, that, had he lived in the 11th cent., he might have figured in the history of knight-errantry. He was at Lisbon during the Peninsular war; and in the war of 1812, served on board of privateers. He first settled in W.fleet. In 1822 he was commissioned Capt., and in 1825 Col. of militia; chosen representative of W. in 1830, '31, '32. In 1834 he removed to Bos., was received a member of the A. and H. Artillery Co., and became one of the original members of the Co. of National Lancers. During the R. I. troubles Col. H.'s sympathies were unfortunately so enlisted on the side of Dorr and confederates as to hurry him into their service; and he was among the 136 prisoners taken at Chepatchet, and the man first selected by the State's attorney for examinations, during the pendency of which he succeeded in making his escape. He now resides in Concord, which town he has represented in the Legislature of Mass. He m. Mary Rich, grd. dau. of Dea. Josiah R., of Truro, and had i. Maria,⁹ Mar. 21, 1818, d. 1843, m. A. P. CHAPTER II.

5. Thomas Holbrooke,² resided at Scituate, Weymouth and Braintree : and was a man of enterprise and wealth. In 1653, 2d, 1mo., he bought of Abraham Harding, a farm at Braintree, of 53 acres, with house and barn ; and Nov. 11, 1662, a tract (supposed to be now in Q.) left by Wm. Tyng to his heirs, Tho. Brattle, Tho. Shepard, Robert Wharton and Samuel Bradstreet, husbands of Tyng's 4 daus. Mar. 1, 1663, he purchased more land in Braintree, and like his brothers became the owner of much real estate. He last resided where Minot Thayer now lives, in B. or Q. He m. Joanna —, who survived him. He made his will July 25, 1695, giving to his son Peter, "all that estate of lands and meadows in Mendon, which he formerly purchased of his brother Wm. He named also Tho. as his eldest, and no other son. It is possible that the Samuel, No. 6, of II. Part and Chapt. IV. was his son and had died previous to the father's making his will. A more careful examination of the settlement of his estate in 1696, may verify the conjecture and make certain what I have put down as doubtful. In his will he requests his cousin [nephew] Samuel Holbrooke, of Braintree, to see to the execution of it, but this nephew having in the meantime deceased, he, March 26, 1696, requested John Allen to act in his place with Nathaniel Wales, Capt. John witnessing it. Administration on his estate, Aug. 19, 1697, was granted his wid., Joanna, alias Jone, and his eldest son Tho. [Suff. Prob., xi. 325-7.] He had,

4. 10. Tho.,³ was received to the 2d Church in B., Mar. 26, 1721, and appears to have inherited the homestead at B., m. Deborah Damon, 1666, and 2d, Mary —, who with her husband at B., 1694-5, consented to the marriage of their dau. Sarah, with Trustam Davis, of Hingham. He made his will, Oct. 16, 1728, which was proved, Jan. 9, '28-9, and administration granted his wid. Mary, who d. 1737-8. [Suff. Prob., 27, 8.]

76. 270. Amos,⁶ M. D., had his residence in Milton, at first in the village, afterwards upon Milton Hill, and was one of the most eminent medical men in the county during the whole period in which he lived. He had not the advantage of a collegiate education; but this infelicity was more than compensated by the experience he acquired in the service of his country as army surgeon, and by his subsequent residence for several months in France, where his time was profitably occupied in witnessing the practice of the hospitals, and thus adding to his stores of practical knowledge. Endowed by nature with an elegant person, he added to it a courteousness of address and suavity of manners which won him favor in whatever circle he moved. He was beloved as a physician and citizen, and sustained his popularity undiminished to the close of a long life. For many years he engrossed the principal medical business of Dorch. as well as Milton. A very just sketch of his character, by his friend and pupil, Dr. Thaddeus W. Harris, was published in the Boston Courier soon after his death, and thence copied into the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal of Jly. 13, 1842, and subsequently by Dr. Williams into his Medical Biography. CHAPTER III.

4. William Holbrooke,² Capt. and Dea., purchased in 1660, land in Conihasset, but did not, as Rev. Mr. Deane supposes, settle early upon it. He remained at Weym. In 1662, he was one of 10 citizens of W., who were accepted to allotments of land in Mendon, by the original grantee of that township, and was with associates to be settled there by 7mo., 1663. He there had a house lot of 40 acres assigned him, which with his interest in the common lands he must have secured by taking possession. This lot he sold, Dec. 2, 1679, to his nephew Peter; and other lands which he, as a proprietor of Mendon, drew, he sold to his brothers, John and Tho. In 1670, he bought of Moses Paine 40 acres E. of Mendon village. His propriety was inherited by his heirs, who as late as 1729 drew in his right 165 acres W. of Great River [Uxbridge]. He was, no doubt, an inhabitant of M. at the beginning of Philip's war, and must have shared with others in the burning of the town, and the perils of Indian warfare. In 1676, he is supposed to have retreated with his family to W., and to have afterwards been a steady resident at Scituate. He lived near the road from Cohasset to Scituate, " $\frac{1}{2}$ m. W. of Capt. Pierce's." [Dean's His. of Scit.] I have met with no account of any settlement of his estate. He m. Elizabeth —, who d. his wid. at Scit., 1701. He had,

5. 12. Wm.,³ Ens., m. Margaret Fairbank, at Sherborn, whose father was near neighbor to his father's reputed cousin, Tho. Holbrook, and not on the route from Weymouth to Mendon. He settled at Mendon, on lands drawn in his father's right, and was one of the aristocracy of the village. He was rich. He "gent.," and pr. a merchant, made his will, Nov. 15, 1714, which was proved, Dec. 16, 1714; and administration granted his wid., Margaret, Rev. Grendall Rawson, Tho. Sanford, and his kinsman, Samuel Read, jun. In his will he mentions no child or grandchild. [Suff. Prob., 18, 204.] He had, I. Mary, Dec. 18, 1684, d. Jan. 22, 1684; II. Margaret, July 28, 1687, d. PART II.

John? Holbrook,¹ is presumed to have been early of Weymouth, and the brother of Tho.,¹ of W. [see p. 48], and the father of the following children, whom numerous circumstances indicate to have been brothers. If he was not one of the two, he had either deceased prior to the declining of a Tho. and John Holbrook to remove to Rehoboth, in 1644, or removed with his sons to Dorchester, now Milton, or perhaps to the N. part of Stoughton, where the necessity for a removal would have been answered in a wide range for their cattle, and in wet prairies for hay.

8. 2. I. Tho.,² b. pr. ab. 1627, at Wey., d. Ap. 11, 1705, r. Dorch., 1645-'52, and Sherborn, 1652—1705. [See Ch. I.]

II. Richard,² who with Wm. Daniel, of Dorch., took the freeman's oath, May 10, 1648, pr. removed to Huntington, Long Island, [Farmer.] He seems to have been induced to purchase a house lot at Sherborn, where he was rated 8½d. in 1686, but never r. there.

III. Margaret,² who m., as his 2d w., in 1656, Nicholas Rocket, of Medfield, neighbor to Tho. Holbrook,² then of Bogistow, afterwards Sherborn, was pr. the sis. of Tho.,² or his sis.-in-law, the wid. of his late brother Nathaniel.²

IV. John,² a tanner, was of Roxb., 1667, and of Dorchr., 1671, d. at Roxb., Dec. 25, 1678, m. Elizabeth —, who by her 2d hus., had her last child, Jan. 16, 1682-'3. He also became the owner of a house lot at Sherborn where he or his estate was also rated 8½d, 1686. He never r. at S. [See Ch. II.]

V. Daniel,² "Brother of John, of Roxb.," d. 1673, m. Miriam —, r. Ded., Roxb., Dorchr. [See Ch. III.]

VI.? Samuel,² senr., of W., m. Mary —, named a dau. Hopestill, as if in affectionate remembrance of a deceased dau. of his supposed brother Tho.,² of Sherborn, who was unm. in 1696. According to Judge Mitchell's His. of Bridgewater, Samuel, "late of Weym.," d. about 1696, leaving 7 children and three daugs. married. He left no son, grd. son or nephew bearing his name; but the first grandchild of Tho.,² of Sherborn, b. after his death, and whose name, according to almost invariable usage, should have been Tho., was called Samuel: and the amount of intercourse kept up by the Holbrooks of Sherborn, with those of Weym., would indicate that the seat of the family continued at Weym., and that their nearest and most confidential and helpful relatives resided there. Further than this, I have discovered no reason for arranging his name as I have done. The names given to his children were nearly identical with those of the other Weym. Holbrooks. If Judge Mitchell has made no mistake, he could not have been Samuel, No. 13, Ch. I., Part I., who d. 1695, at Weymouth, leaving also 7 children, and 3 of them daus. Tho., senr.'s will renders it improbable that this Samuel was his son. [See Ch. IV.]

VII. Nathaniel, pr., who pr. died without issue, for whom Tho.,² at Sherborn, named his oldest son.

CHAPTER I.

2. 8. Thomas Holbrook,² in company with Geo. Allen & Anthony Fisher, of Dorchester, was admitted to the freeman's oath, May, 1645, implying that he was already a member of the Chh. and of age. In 1648, he purchased of Elizabeth, wid. of Col. Israel Stoughton, 30 acres of land in Dorch. This was the first real estate in D. discovered to have been owned by one of the name. On 8, (3mo.) 1652, he with Nicholas Wood and Andrew Pitcher, of D. [now Milton] purchased of Richard Parker, of Bos., to whom it had been granted by the Gen. Court, in 1649, 535 acres in the woods, on the W. side of Charles R., now in the S. E. part of Sherborn, including the lower meadows on Sewall's Br. This they so divided as to give him building sites where Dexter Amsden resides, and at Death's Bridge. He built his first house at the latter place, where the trace is still to be seen, and where he raised an extensive orchard, with the produce of which he practised such hospitality as secured his buildings from the torch of the enemy while those of his nearest neighbor on the other side of the stream were laid in ashes. In 1657 he petitioned for the high rocky point E. of Parker's grant, now called the Neck, and the Gen. Court granted him 50 acres, he purchasing 43 acres more of the government, including the entire tract between their first purchase and the R. In 1662 and '74 he signed petitions for the incorporation of S., and became one of the proprietors of this extensive township. In 1666, he had erected a new dwelling house where Dexter Amsden resides, and that year deeded 80 acres of his first purchase of Parker, to his brother-in-law, Henry Leland, who had already occupied it 12 years. In 1682, he owned 300 acres of the early grants, and with the nine other owners extinguished the Indian claims. In 1682 and '84, he drew 112 acres of the common lands of S., and in 1686 he out of 40 freeholders, was rated the 4th in amount to satisfy the Indian claims to these lands. He served as selectman in 1690, and was one of the six brethren to constitute the Chh. in S., at its formation, in 1685. He d. Apl. 11, 1705.

Tho. Holbrook,² senr., of Sherborn, made his will May, 1704, giving his homestead to his son, Eleazer; and all his neck of land in S., except a piece of meadow, to his son, Tho. To his son, Nathaniel, he gave his little lot ($\frac{1}{2}$ acre) near [S. W. of] the Meeting-house, also a lot S. of Brown's meadow, and the piece of meadow above excepted. To his son, John, he gave 20 acres of his 1st dividend land, next to Abraham Cousins'. To his dau., Experience McIntosh, £10, and 18 acres, another part of his first division of common lands, near Cousins'. To his dau., Hannah Battle, £10, and 5 acres of his first dividend land, near C's. To Patience Leland, £10, and 15 acres (the Hope-field), near do., and 2 acres and 40 rods, near her husband's house; and to Susanna Morse, wife of Daniel M., he made similar bequests. To his grandchildren, Edmund, Margaret and Elizabeth Morse, children of his dau., Bethia Morse, £8, viz., "£5 to the boy, and 20s. apiece to the girls, when of age." Eleazer was exr.; and Ebenr., Jeremiah and Joseph Daniell, senr., witnesses. Will, probated Apl. 23, 1705. [Mid. Prob.] He m. 1st, Experience ? Leland, dau. of Hopestill L., by w. Experience, ? of Weymouth, and sis. of Henry L., of S.; and 2d, Hannah Shepard, 28 (3), 1656, at Medfd., and pr. fr. Weym., who d. Aug. 28, 1668; and 3d, Margaret Bouker, fr. Weym., dau. of a Swede, Jan. 26, 1668-9, who d. Apl. 9, 1690; and 4th, Mary Rogers, of Weym., Oct. 31, 1693. His partiality to the females of W., indicates that he had been reared among them. He had cordwainer, and settled on the lot bequeathed him, S. W. of the Meetinghouse common ;

45. 24. i. Nathaniel,⁴ Sep. 13, 1701, d. June 3, 1774, was left to be brought up by his grandfather, Jona. Morse, who gave him a deed of his farm, on the N.
 side of the Lake, on which is now kept a house of entertainment. He m.
 Sarah Sanger.
14. 25. Samuel,⁴ inherited the ancient homestead at Death's Bridge, drew 21 acres at Doug., 1730. He served as surveyor, 1725 ; assessor, '29 ; constable, '30 ; and selectman, 7 ys. He m. Kezia Morse, Sep. 4, 1718, dau.
 of Cpt. Joseph M., who d. Feb. 18, '54 ; and 2d, Elizabeth, pr. wid. of Joseph Daniels, of Med., and had i. Hannah,⁵ Sep. 11, 1720, m. Ephm.
 Perry, 1742, and d. 1744, without issue ; ii. Tho.,⁵ Apl. 21, '23, d. yg. ;
 26. iii. Asa,⁵ Jan. 17, '25-6, d. Jly. 28, '73, m. Mary Rider, Mar. 30, '56 ;
 iv. Kezia,⁵ Aug. 23, '29, m. Aaron Daniels, of Med., had only Kezia,⁵ who
 m. Jona. Hill, of Med., and inherited all her grd. father H.'s estate ;
 v. Lydia,⁵ Aug. 12, '34 ; and no further reported.
 Samuel⁴ seems to have survived all his children ; or the division of his estate was postponed until after the decease of his son, Asa ; for, I find that his farm of 195 acres, at Death's Bridge, Dec. 7, 1773, "was ordered and assigned to his grd. dau., Kezia, the wife of Jona. Hill ; provided, that if any other lawful heirs or heir shall appear, then she or her heirs shall refund to them their proportional part of the value of the same." Elizabeth, wid. of Samuel, at the same time relinquished to Hill, for £40, her right of dower ; and Kezia and her husband afterwards sold the place to Henry Death, and thus it passed out of the race of the Holbrooks, and is now owned and occupied by Mr. Charles A. How.
16. 27. Daniel,⁴ removed to Wrentham ab. 1722 ; drew 82 acres in Doug.,
 1715, and '30, m. Elizabeth Clark, fr. Medfd., and had

19. 35. John,⁴ is presumed to have settled first on the homestead, by Holbrook's Mills, and to have sold to his brothers, Jona. and Joshua, who held the place in common, until both had deceased, which was the occasion of much trouble to heirs, administrators and guardians. He m. Ruth Hill, Mar. 13, 1718-19, drew 37 acres in Doug., 1730, and about 1733, removed to Mendon. He had
36. i. Wm.,⁵ May 24, 1719; ii. Silence, Mar. 23, '23-4, m. — Goodale; iii. Ruth,⁵ Dec. 28, '26, m. — Eames; iv. Elizabeth,⁵ June 6, '30, um. in '56;
37. v. John,⁵ Aug. 28, '33; vi. Sarah,⁵ b. pr. at Mendon;
38. vii. Moses,⁵ b. pr. do., had Ephm. Sherman for his guardian. John,⁴ their father, was three times married. His will, proved Apl. 27, 1756, gave John⁵ half of all his lands in Grafton and Douglas, and Moses the other half. To Wm.'s portion he added 3 acres of intervalle, near Cpt. Leland's, now Leland station, in Grafton. [Worces. Prob.]
20. 39. Jona.,⁴ m. Abigail Breck, Nov. 5, 1730, who. d. Mar. 30, '75, a. 70. He inherited the homestead, (now occupied by Jona. Holbrook, his gr. grd. s.,) in common with his brother Joshua; was selectman of S., 1749-66, and d. intestate. Administration was granted to his wid., Abigail, and inventories of his estate (appraised at £3,113 16s.), presented, May 20, 1754, and she appointed guardian of the three youngest children, but did not succeed in the execution of the trust to the satisfaction of all parties concerned or of her neighbors. They had i. Abigail,⁵ May 8, 1732, m. Joshua Morse; ii. Mehetabel,⁵ Mar. 7, '33-4, d. Jan. 18, '54; iii. Joseph,⁵ Dec. 26, '37, d. Dec. 19, '40; iv. Silence,⁵ Nov. 7, '41, d. Aug. 15, '75, m. Micah Holbrook;
50. 40. v. Jona.,⁵ June 30, '43, d. Nov. 2, '76, from a wound at the Battle at White Plains; vi. Hannah,⁵ Dec. 15, '45.
21. 41. Ezra,⁴ settled upon the farm and built the house now owned and occupied by Dalton Goulding, Esq., of S., served 4 ys. as selectman, m. Grace Cooledge, Nov. 30, 1738, dau. of Isaac C., Esq., who d. Apl. 5, 1780. He d. Nov. 10, '86; and his homestead was settled upon his s., Joshua.

24. 45. Nathaniel,⁴ settled N. E. of the Lake; the W. part of whose farm has become an attractive watering place. He was a very shrewd man; served

- S. 4 ys., as selectman, m. Aug. 20, 1728, Sarah Sanger, dau. of Richard S., by w. Elizabeth Morse, and aunt to Rev. Dr. Sanger, formerly of Bridgewater. His will, dated Jan. 18, 1773, and probated, June 14, '74, gave his homestead to his son, Moses, requiring him to keep 2 cows and a horse for his wid. Sarah, and pay her one-fourth of the produce of the land; and to take care of a helpless dau., Azuba. To s., Micha, he gave £23, and half his lands in Doug., and to s. James, the other half. To dau., Mary Babcock, Hannah Whitney and Mercy Twitchell, he gave 50s. each. To his s., Nathaniel, whom he had already settled on the W. half of his farm, he gave 5s., charging him to see to the execution of his will. His wid. is said to have attained almost to her 100th year, and to have d. at Templeton. Nathaniel,⁴ had

 TO THE HOLBROOKS.

GENT. : Since the foregoing was in type I have received assurance of such aid in the examination of records in England as may enable me or the inheritor of my MSS. to render this work more certain, complete, and available. Being descended on both sides from ancestors in common with thousands of Holbrooks, a circumstance that led to this production, I shall be most happy to receive and impart more of their history; and if this humble offering should prove acceptable, a supplement may follow it, containing information expected from England, notes and obituaries of many only here named, and the history of branches not yet fully traced. To accumulate materials for such an addition and improvement will require delay and the aid of others. In the mean time let any of the race who have records and notes to communicate, direct the same to me at Boston, to the care of Mr. Charles C. Holbrook, No. 305 Washington st., pointing out any error in this work, however trivial, that can be detected; and bearing firmly in mind that it is only by concentrating the correspondence and patronage in the hands of one man, and he not merely desirous of the undertaking, but by situation and long experience rendered competent to it, that the desired improvement can be made and issued. Direct your letters, then, as here requested; and if I fail to arrange a supplement, I will pass them to some Holbrook, high-minded, honorable, and competent, tender of reputation, and alive to the honor of the name, who shall consent to receive our MSS., and act in my place. Antiquarians desire emulation, but they all deprecate and despise competition. The former assists, the latter defeats the labors of all.

divided between himself and the rest of the adventurers : For which great service he was knighted, by his then Majesty, King James the 2d ; and afterward, by the command of his present Majesty, and at the request of the principal inhabitants of New England, he accepted of the government of the Massachusetts, in which he continued to the time of his death ; and discharged his trust with that zeal for the interest of his country, and with so little regard to his own private advantage, that he justly gained the good esteem and affections of the greatest and best part of the inhabitants of that Colony. Here are also his arms depicted : i. e. sable, a trefoil slipt, within an orl of eight Mulletts Argent." This was erected by Lady Phipps, and it is worthy of remark, that the place of his birth and age at death, are omitted. The insertion of these might have affected her future prospects. [Gen'l Regr.]

6. John Phipps who settled at Wrentham, before 1700, was the nephew of Sir Wm. Phipps and his adopted son. A tradition, deemed in this instance perfectly reliable, declares that Gov. Phipps, Dec. 18, 1693, before embarking for Eng., made his will, giving his son, as he had previously promised, a large share of his vast estate, to which Lady Phipps made such violent opposition as to induce the ex-Gov. to destroy this will and make one to her mind ; he promising privately to make another like the first as soon as he should reach Eng. On his arrival, he was much harassed, and died without fulfilling his promise. Lady P. in administering on his estate, offered John a pittance of what had been promised. This he spurned—purchased a farm at Wrentham, [pr. N. part] where he seems to have had

He was chosen assessor 1735, tithingman 1734-5, '45-6, surveyor '36-7, selectman '36-7 and '39-40, and sealer of weights and measures 1738-9 until his death. In 1730 he drew 18½ acres in Douglas. 8. 13. Wm., Rev. A. M., as well as his brothers, must have been by nature a remarkable man. His genius for the acquisition of languages was such, that with the little aid of his time, he is said to have mastered no less than 12; a circumstance thought indicative of a descent from literary ancestors. New Sherborn as a District had been called, having been erected into a town by the name of Douglas; and "Dr. Wm. Douglas, a Scotchman, of Boston, and large proprietor of D., having settled £500, O. T., on a free school, and £50 per annum for seven years on the first minister of D., besides other bounties;" and a chh. having been gathered there, Mr. P. received a call, and was ordained, Dec. 16, 1747, 4 years after his reception to full communion in the chh. at S., 1 year and 5 months after his graduation at H. C., and "less than 7 years after he first began grammar learning." Rev. Samuel Porter, the godly pastor of S., preached on the occasion; and in commendation of the pastor elect, said: "We of the town and chh. from whence he came do bless God who raised up one of our children with so blameless a character at home and abroad, and who we have so much reason to hope will be a rich blessing to you and to the world in his day. And indeed, if I should boast to you somewhat of his parts and acquirements, considering the very short time he has had for improvement, I should be in no fear that he would make me ashamed, having had opportunity to see the uncommon progress he made while under instruction. You must not think it hard, brethren, if I am very free and earnest with you on his account, whom I call my son for the love I bear to him and the share I have had in his education." The death of his father had lately subjected a numerous family to orphanage. Wm., as the senior child, became to them a father, and they removed, most if not all of them to D., where some of them remained until about the time of his resignation. In his life and doctrine he seems never to have disappointed the fond hopes entertained at his ordination. But he was settled too near R. I., to find an orderly, ministerial people, and in too poor a town to realize an adequate salary. He was starved into toil and trade for support; and after a ministry of about 20 years less barren than the engagements of the people, he retired to Oxford, now Auburn, with talents so improved for business as to compensate for want of salary; was appointed a magistrate; espoused the cause of freedom; acted as moderator of county conventions; wrote thrilling addresses to the people, and contributed to arouse and guide that spirit of resistance which achieved our independence. He m. Abigail —, who d. Jly. 31, 1820, aged 92, at Oxfd., and had

i. Susanna, who m. — Craig, r. Auburn; ii. Moses, who probably d. at Oxford, Feb. 9, 1813, aged 46; Sylvester Phips, now of Oxford, Moses P., of Webster, and Calvin P., who d. 1822, aged, 32, at Oxford, are supposed to have been his descendants.

10. 30. Jedediah Phips had a rare sensibility to beauties in language, creation, and Providence. I visited him in 1811, then in his 94th year, when the faculties of his mind had a vigor that many lose at 60. He had never been sick in his life; could describe the constellations as easily as the fields of his farm, repeat quotations correctly from the classics, and give the names of his former acquaintance who had seen and conversed with Peregrine White. He dwelt much upon the divine goodness, past and present, and anticipated its enjoyment forever. Though professedly a laboring man, he had stored his mind by a habit of spending his minutes of relaxation in reading; and he had long been the oracle of his vicinity, and was well known in all the bordering towns.

He first settled in Douglas, from whence he removed to Sherborn, May 5, 1763, with his wife and four children, and settled on the W. side of Peter's Hill, and on the E. side of the N. road to Fram. In middle life he had a good landed estate.

He became a zealous whig of '76; was moderator of town meetings '78 and '79, selectman '73 and '80, and with Pres. Lock and Hon. Daniel Whitney, chosen on a standing committee of correspondence for 1774 and '75. He was a member of the Co. convention, held at Concord, 1779; and on committees to instruct the representative of S., in '77, and to hire soldiers; and one of a committee of safety, '80. The records of the General Court at the beginning of the struggle, when the army was almost without ammunition state that, "Whereas Mr. Jedediah Phips, of Sherborn, has produced to this Court several pounds of genuine saltpetre, of his own manufacturing, and given full evidence of his knowledge in discovering earth impregnated therewith, as well as of his abilities to manufacture said commodity; and has also consented to enter into the employment of the government for improving the art and business aforesaid, and engaged to communicate his useful discoveries therein: Therefore resolved, that the said Jedediah Phips be taken into the service of this Colony, as aforesaid, until the 15th of Dec. next; and he is hereby directed to repair to Newburyport as soon as may be, and use his utmost efforts with Doct. Whiting, Mr. Baker, and Capt. John Peck, a committee of this Court for the purpose aforesaid, or either of them, to make further improvements in the art of manufacturing said commodity, and for every day which he shall be absent from home and employed agreeable to the direction of this resolve, he shall be allowed and paid out of the public Treasury, the sum of 6s. per day for his service, and 20s. per week, to defray his expenses, as already provided for said Committee."

He m. Sarah Learned, b. 1731-2, d. Mar. 6, 1810, dg. of Capt. Edward L., of S., by w. Sarah Leland, (dg. of Ens. Henry Leland, by w. Mary Morse) and grd. dg. of Dea. Benoni L., by w. Sarah Fanning, and gr. grd. dg. of Isaac L., of Woburn, by w. Mary Stearns, and gr. gr. grd. dg. of Wm. L., of Ch'stown. Mr. P. and wife were received by letter from Doug. into the chh. in S., Oct., 1769. They had,

48. 31. i. John, b. at Douglas, m. Hannah Cooledge; ii. Jedediah, b. at D., d. 1847, a. 88, at Digby, Me., was a teacher of music and of a grammar school; iii. Jesse, who was drowned, m. 11. 32. Aaron, Dea., after the death of his father was apprenticed to Dea. James Russell, of Holl., as a blacksmith; and during his time, 1747-51, planted the magnificent elms in front of Col. Whiting's house, one third of a mile N. of Hol. common. He purchased, at different times, of the heirs of Aaron Morse, the farm now owned by Eli Phipps, one half m. S. W. of Hol. centre, on which he settled and spent his days. He was a superior man; distinguished for independence and strength of mind, soundness of judgment, enterprise, tact, and energy in worldly pursuits. He was rather acquisitive, yet ever just; and if he sometimes stood for his rights where others would have quailed, it was because they were rights; and he himself lawyer and advocate enough to maintain them, as he did triumphantly. "He was a natural debater, could speak with rhetorical propriety and logical force, whether in town meetings, civil or ecclesiastical courts, or before the Gov. and Council. He often acted as draftsman, and much of his neat, unambiguous chirography exists in ancient wills, &c. He had a taste for the beautiful in nature and art, as his adorned and spacious mansion continued to testify within my own recollection. He had a high sense of character, never sought popularity, and "knew," as he said, "no distinction between inferiors and equals so long as both retained their self-respect and integrity of character."

He was chosen Dea. of the chh. in H., May 2, 1766, and also treasurer; was greatly respected for his consistent deportment, and beloved for his tender piety; a most excellent neighbor, much relied upon for advice and aid in emergencies, and given to hospitality, the abuse of which cost him his life and the community a severe loss. On the contrary his growth, and the early development of his intellect, and a taste for books, induced the aspiring parents, like others of their time, to select him as the son destined for the college and ministry; as though God would call whom they chose; or they could read the divine purpose in the capacity and bias of an unconverted boy. But he was destined to another sphere; and the family, whom he moulded as no minister, pent-up or absent, could have done, may yet demonstrate that it was probably one of greater usefulness. The sudden death of his excellent mother, and the unfortunate 2d marriage of his father, interrupted his course, and he exchanged his books for a musket in the army that suppressed the rebellion of '87. He married very early in life the youthful and only daughter of Capt. Daniel Eames, of Hopk., the patriot soldier of 1775-83; and took charge of the farm at Phipps Hill. After the decease of his father and erratic step-mother, he sold his interest in the homestead, and removed with a handsome property to Lee, N. Y. Here fortune smiled as if she would give edge to ensuing frowns. His agricultural pursuits were successful, and brought him the means of purchasing the unoccupied site of Utica, and but for the perfidy of the man to whom he loaned his money, it had been his, just before he saw a city piled upon it. "Bitter disappointment, unproductive seasons, and unforeseen reverses left him in a few years with a numerous young family, dependent alone upon his energies and those of his persevering wife for their support and education." Still he did not despair, nor remit his exertions to mould their minds and hearts for usefulness and honor. For years he struggled with poverty and its temptations without ever compromising his honor or integrity. At length he removed to Orleans Co., N. Y., and during the last 9 years of his life resided at the Phipps Female Seminary, in Albion, which his daughters by their enterprise and energy had established. Here he d. Mr. P. seems to have inherited characteristics of his father's race. He loved knowledge and was a great general reader. He revered and adorned religion. As a husband and father he was faithful and kind; and as a man, uniformly conscientious. He was much respected by my brethren in the ministry, one of whom, Rev. Dr. Frost, pronounced him among the best theologians of the day. "He had a very retentive memory, rare argumentative powers, an easy flow of words and a calm self-control, which secured him advantages in discussion; and though ever reluctant to engage in religious debates as unprofitable, yet when forced to do so his antagonists were sure to feel his strength." The Marquis of Normanby, of the name of Phipps, [probably a descendant of Lt. Gov. Spencer Phips alias Bennet, not of the defrauded John P.,] now represents the family of Sir Wm. Phips. On the extinction of his and collateral lines, will the estate, &c., revert to a descendant of one of Sir Wm. P.'s brothers, if one can be found with proof of his descent?

The names Rockwood and Rocket were formerly identical, and the latter a corruption of the former. For in the mother country the Rockwoods are an ancient and somewhat numerous race, while the Rockets are almost unknown, there being lately only one in London, and he unacquainted with the existence of the name out of the circle of his relatives in the interior of the kingdom. The name of Rockwood was no doubt local, derived from Rocky Woods, the place of the exploits, or of the abode of the first who assumed it; and if "there is not an ancient town, village or hamlet in England or Normandy, that did not give name to some family in England;" if John de Hill and James of under the Hill; if Peter of the sandy Ford, and John of the lay [Plain] Land; if Nicholas of the woods, and Joseph of under the Woods derived their names from land marks, no marvel if, while the English were assuming lower or surnames, some Nicholas, Richard or John should have taken his from the Rocky Woods, once so common in the W. of England; and when the customs of another age and country are considered, none need fear for the rank or dignity of their ancestor in conceding that his name came out of the woods. In this country it was first recorded Rocket, and this orthography was generally preserved until 1728, when Dea. Nathaniel R., of Wrentham, and brothers, restored the original spelling of Rockwood. This they did 19 years before the death of their revered uncle Benjamin, who was born in 1651, and whose grandfather and perhaps father were both from England, and who must have known the true orthography of the name, and might have influenced his nephews to the contrary if they were attempting an innovation. Besides, I am inclined to believe that he, rather than his nephew, Benj., who was then jun., was the "Benj. Rockwood" who subscribed a petition to the General Court in 1737, on account of "services and sufferings in the late Indian wars;" and if so, then he joined with his nephews, or preceded them in restoring the true spelling. But this was not the first resort to the original orthography. The corruption of the name seems to have been resisted far earlier, and from the first, at the very place where they first settled: for I have recently found it spelt "Rockwood" upon a very ancient record at Braintree, from whence the entire race had removed in 1664, so that I am satisfied that in the further pursuit of their genealogy, the Rockwoods of New England must explore the history of their Puritan sire, not among the Rockets, but the Rockwoods of England, and in Dorset. and Suffolk Co's, rather than in other parts of the kingdom.†

* Tradition says that a page by the name of Rockwood, at the court of Henry VIII, in a game of chess with his king, won a manor belonging to one of the monasteries distributed in his reign; and that, in commemoration of the victory, he received from the king for his arms 6 chessrooks. Tradition, like other great liars, sometimes speaks the truth, and perhaps in this instance does so. The above estate is said to be still occupied by Rockwoods who are of the gentry.

† Further examination and reflection convince me that the name was never spelled Rocket by the family. It was so pronounced, as it still is, and so written by others, and answered to by the Rockwoods. But on no petition, deed, will, or certificate, ancient or modern, signed by either of them, have I ever found it subscribed otherwise than Rockwood; and both Nicholas² and John,² as if mindful of the importance of the true orthography, had their marriages in 1656 and 1662 recorded by the name of Rockwood. Such precaution in their day and circumstances was anomalous and significant. Other families yielded to innovations, adopted without resistance the misspelling of clerks, and seldom, if ever, recovered the original orthography of their names when thus publicly corrupted. But the Rockwoods (some, if not all, of the 4 first generations) withstood the corruption, [universal on Town Records until 1728.] and continued to subscribe their names Rockwood; and they seem finally to have effected the correction everywhere, though at different and wide intervals. None of the race are known to retain the more convenient spelling of Rocket, which further indicates that such was never the name. A rule, however, of antiquarians requires a literal transcript from records.

Of the number of Rockets who early arrived in New England, and of their previous history, nothing reliable can be gathered from tradition. The names of only two have been preserved, only one of whom left issue; and from whom all the Rockwoods of New England origin have sprung. Of their history prior to their arrival nothing is yet ascertained, and almost nothing but their names occurs on our records. Yet if we regard them as following the uniform custom of their times, of naming the first son after the paternal grandfather, and the second after the father, or the reverse, then one of them has told us that their father was Nicholas Rockwood. Other circumstances add more. The high and holy character of the community which attracted them, and in which they first appear; the strict morality exacted of all who entered or tarried in it, and the silence of all town, church and colonial records as to anything amiss, indicate that in conduct they were moral, and in heart, pious; while their early arrival excuses them from the sinister motives that drew later emigrants, and proves them to have been men of enterprise and moral courage. Their names were,

1. John Rocket,¹ who was enrolled as a planter in Dorchester, in 1636, indicating that he had passed a previous probation of at least one year. Nothing more is recorded of him. He either returned to England with some others from D. about this time, or more probably d. without issue.

2. Richard "Rocket,"¹ alias "Rockwood," probably the brother of John, was also a planter in Dorchester, in 1636. He and his wife the same year sold a house and 20 acres of land at Weymouth, formerly Zachary Bicknell's, ("after Bicknell's death,") which belonged to their child; [pr. Nicholas]; and the General Court, Mar. 9, 1636-7, bound the son when of age, either to ratify the sale or "allow all such costs as the Court shall think meete."

Richard¹ m. two, and perhaps three wives. His first is supposed to have been the daughter of Zachary Bicknell, to whom he must have been m. as early as 1627, three years prior to the settlement of Dorchester. This leads to the presumption that he had previously lived at Weymouth, where the marriage had taken place, or more probably at Weymouth in Dorsetshire, from whence the early planters of our Weymouth came; and that he and his brother John were among the number who removed from W. to D. after the arrival of their former neighbors, and perhaps kinsmen from Dorchester, 8 ms. from Weymouth in Dorsetshire. But however this might have been, his earliest connections and company point us to one of these towns or their vicinity, as his natal place; so that the Rockwoods of New England need not despair of further knowledge of their Puritan sire, and of their ancestors of remote antiquity.

Richard m. Agnes —, who d. at Braintree, 9 (5), 1643; and 2d, Ann —, who d. 1664. He d. 1660, intestate, and Dec. 15, 1660, his wid., Ann "Rockwood" and E. Kingsbury made oath to an "Inventory of the estate of Richard Rockwood." His wid., "Ann Rockwood" d. four years after, and administration on her estate was granted John Taylor, Apl. 28, 1664, [Suff. Prob.] He had,

5. 3. i. Nicholas,² b. as early as 1628, m. Jane —; 2d, Margaret Holbrook;

3. 5. Nicholas Rocket,² first located at Braintree. In 1650, the enterprise of settling the new town of Medfield, drew him and the sons of Henry Adams senr., from B.; and he became one of the first settlers and proprietors of that town. He drew lots from time to time, most of which, by a division of the township in 1713, fell into Medway. In 1663, a company of 15 of his former townsmen, with others from Weym., having undertaken the settlement of Mendon, he and the Adamses at Medfield proposed to join them; and he actually presented his request for acceptance as a proprietor; but the Adamses finally declined, and his proposal seems not to have been acted upon, he having most likely withdrawn it. He finally settled, it is presumed, about one quarter m. S. W. of Richardson's mills, in the N. E. part of Medway, and was with most of his family in the stone house, at Bogistow Pond, in 1676, when Philip and his warriors met with their "notorious repulse." He became a member of the chh. in Medfield, and took the freeman's oath, May 23, 1666. He m. 1st, Jane, pr. Adams? who d. Dec. 15, 1654; 2d, Margaret Holbrook, Jly. 16, 1656, who d. Apl. 23, 1670; and 3d, Silence —, who d. Nov. 9, 1677. He d. Jan. 26, 1680.

His estate was inventoried 26, (11), 1680, and appraised by Edward Adams and John Harding, the husband of Elizabeth Adams. Administration was granted Mar. 18, 1680, to his son, Josiah, and his estate harmoniously settled. He owned lots at Bear Hills, in Medfield, in and adjacent to Broad Meadows, on Long Plain, and 85 acres on the New Grant, now W. Med.; and he seems to have been a husbandman in common circumstances, and a worthy and respected citizen. He had, viii. Isaac,³ Jly. 22, 1677, d. Oct. 11, 1677, at Medfield. On the death of their father, John³ and Natl.³ chose Edwd. Adams their guardian. Nicholas,² the father, seems to have named no child after himself, and what is very remarkable in that age of filial respect, none of his sons named any after him. But this may be accounted for without any distrust of his character, or of the respect of his sons. Perhaps he had adopted the principle of selecting Scriptural names according to his admiration of Scriptural characters, which excluded his own and that of his father; or, he wore the name of some oppressor whom all wished to forget; or, to call a child after a tutelar saint, might to them have savored of Romanism; or, to give a name identical in use with that of the god of the North sea, might have seemed idolatry; or, perhaps, the heralded Nicholas Rockwood, of Kirby, in Suffolk Co., (who might have been his grandfather,) or some other Nicholas R. had denied him an expected bequest, or proudly disinherited his Puritan father, or supplanted him in his birthright, which he had not funds to recover, and which, if it existed, may perchance on the extinction of the inheriting line, or by an earlier revival of the claim, yet be the inheritance of some of his posterity in this country.* Still, this dropping out of a patriarchal name is an anomaly not explained, but suggestive.

4. 12. "John Rockwood," m. 15, (7), 1662, Johanna Ford, at Braintree. Fifteen of his townsmen and ten others from Weymouth, were that year accepted to be settled at Mendon, before the 7th mo. 1663, and he seems to have joined them on their setting out, or as soon as the condition of his family admitted. He no doubt expected his brother Nicholas at Medfield to accompany him, who had made application to the company, and whose greater age and acquaintance with the country and people, would have rendered him peculiarly helpful. But he encountered the disappointment, and remained with the settlement at Mendon, until the destruction of that town, at the beginning of Indian hostilities, in 1675. To him, Philip's war was disastrous. Twice must he and his have fled for their lives, as appears from a petition of his, on file at Boston, and dated at Milton, 1678, praying the General Court to abate a tax of 19s., on the ground that the Indians had burnt his house, barn, corn and bedding, at Mendon, and all that he had saved afterwards at Medfield, so that he had been forced to Milton to work to support a wife and 6 children. In 1678-9, he purchased of James Albee, at Mendon, a dwelling lot of 4 acres, with 20 acres more adjacent, and bounded E. by Muddy Brook, with a ten rod highway crossing it. This shows that his 2d dwelling place in Mendon, was on the flat, a short distance S. E. of the centre of the present village. He had,

* Claims in Europe 500 years old, have been legally established; but they perish in reference to those who will not recover and keep their genealogy. The claim of an American to an entailment pronounced sure 60 years ago, by legal authority upon the ground, was not prosecuted for want of funds to commence. The claimant returned, and d., leaving no records of the births of his children, or the location of his claim; and neither his grandchildren nor great-grandchildren are yet recorded. Thousands who would censure this, may be equally faulty in reference to claims that may arise or be discovered.

7. 19. Benj. Rocket,³ m. Judith —, and early settled in Wrentham, where he soon rendered a service that must have secured him during his long life the respect and gratitude of the community. "In the beginning of Philip's war, when searching in the wilderness for a stray horse, he discovered, about sunset, a trail of 42 Indians; and suspecting that they intended to attack the town the next morning after the men had dispersed to their work, he followed them until they halted for the night. He then returned to the settlement and reported the discovery; whereupon Capt. John Ware, with a company of 13 men, after securing their women and children in the garrison, went out and attacked them in the morning as soon as it was light, while they were preparing to decamp, killing from 20 to 24 of their number. The rest fled, some leaping down a precipitous rock from 10 to 20 feet high; and others attempting to conceal themselves in Mill Brook. One of the fugitives was brought down at the distance of 80 rods, by a bullet from Woodcock's famous gun, called the Buccaneer.* This occurred at a place now called Indian Rock, about 2 m. S. E. of Franklin Depot. Benj. had at W.

45. 140. Ebenezer Rockwood,⁵ A. M., M. D., possessed a "character of great worth and acknowledged excellence," which his posterity and the race would do well to emulate. The excellent spirit which dwelt first in his ancestors lived in him, and throughout his long life he adhered to sound Christian principles in all his intercourse in society, in all his relations to the Church, and in all his influence over his family. He grad. at H. Col. 1773, studied medicine, entered the army of U. S. as surgeon, and afterward settled as a physician at Wilton, became eminent in his profession, and ever had an extensive practice. 142. 146. Ebenezer Rockwood,⁶ Esq., A. M. grad. at H. U., 1802, read law, s. in Bos., where he d. May 8, 1815, at the age of 34 ys. While he lived his intimate associates were of the highest circle of talent and refinement. Numbers of them, ere merit had ceased to be a passport, rose to the highest stations of honor in the gift of their fellow-citizens; and had Mr. Rockwood been spared, such were his talents and address, and such his moral worth, that he could hardly have failed of a full share of such honors. One fact illustrates the nobility of his friends, and the esteem in which he was held. When his death was announced, the members of a class club of which he was a founder while at the University, met and resolved, as one of their testimonials, "that $500 of their funds be put out on interest for the aid of the first of his children who should wish a col. education," and thus it would have been cheerfully expended had there been need. The following obituary appeared in the Weekly Messenger of June 2, 1815:—
- The late Mr. Rockwood but a few days since, was seen in our judicial tribunals, giving proof of powers of mind destined, as was anticipated, to adorn the bar and public assemblies of our country. Without the aid of fortune, and with no friends but those attached to him by his own merit, he was advancing with undeviating step to the first rank in his profession. His example has illustrated the truth, that patronage is not necessary to talents ; but that associated with virtue, they lead, with an independent vigor, over every obstruction, to the honors and advantages of society. He came into Boston a stranger. But there was in his exterior such a recommendation of dignity and intelligence, that notice and respect were soon attracted to him. Acquaintance became esteem, and the great number of those who regarded him, are left to feel for his loss a regret much more lasting than was the period permitted to their friendship.

Mr. Rockwood's mind was naturally of a high cast. His understanding was sound and clear, and extremely rapid in its deductions. It possessed a springing energy which supplied at the same time quickness and force. He was not habituated to long trains of reasoning — while others were arranging their arguments, he threw out his bold and luminous opinions. They were received with surprise, often with incredulity — but all who reasoned justly, came at last to the same result, though by a far longer process.

Although he was young, his knowledge was abundant ; for this, however, he was not much indebted to books.

He never resorted to them, when he had opportunities for observation, — and even in that profession, in which great erudition is almost a sufficient qualification, and learning often succeeds where talent alone fails, he seldom had recourse to books except as authorities, — his arrangement, his argument and his decision, were original, and apparently intuitive.

But these powers, though rare and valuable, are not all that is worthy to be described in Mr. Rockwood. Clear and true as was the glance of his mind, this was not more admirable than his noble and generous heart. The selfish man would have shrunk in his presence and felt how elevated a principle of action is disinterestedness. He was ever more active, judicious, and even cautious, when others were concerned. The energy of his understanding, and the ardor of his feelings, found their true focus in the interest of others. He was full of affection and humanity — yet he had little of that tenderness which often weakens the best resolves. He neither shrunk from pain himself when it was salutary, nor hesitated in like circumstances to inflict it on others.

He was called from amidst the most active scenes in life to the bed of death. He did indeed desire to live ; for to him the prospect of life presented a scene of usefulness, of tender attachments, and of advancing reputation. Few had less to fear, and few had more to resign ; yet he looked up to Heaven with that humility which fears to trust even the approbation of conscience. He could not approach the throne of his Maker without trembling ; yet with that decision which uniformly accompanied him, he bent his few remaining hours to prepare for death. Religion, that principle so congenial with great and good minds, was here his first resource. By her aid, he was enabled to turn, with resignation and tranquillity, from the endearments of life, to sever the tenderest ties which bound him to this world, and to await his last moments, with a steady and confiding mind.

154. 174. Rev. Otis Rockwood, A. M., graduated at Midd. Col., Vt., 1813, and at the Theol. Sem., Andover, 1817; after which he spent six months in the 1st Cong. Socy. in Charlestown, where he had a call to settle as Colleague Pastor with the Rev. Dr. Morse, and at the same time a call from the 1st Cong. Chh. and Socy. in Lynn. After due deliberation he concluded to accept the latter, and was ordained July 1st, 1818. He found that ancient and venerable chh. in very depressed and disheartening circumstances, being reduced to 40 members, only 8 of whom were males, and the Socy. much embarrassed with debt; and their house of worship so much dilapidated as to be deemed unworthy of repair. During his ministry there of 14 years, the chh. was increased to 130 members—their pecuniary obligations discharged and their house of worship rebuilt. In Dr. "Cooke's Centuries" in Lynn, there is an interesting notice of Mr. Rockwood's ministry in that city, from which the following is an extract: "But the true importance of the work which he did here consisted in breaking the force of the tide which was bearing all to destruction, and beginning to set it an opposite direction. He found here a church having but two praying families, and left it with many. He found few minds evincing an attachment for the doctrines of the cross, and left a church prepared to unite in a successor who gave fearless utterance to those doctrines. He found the church declining in life and strength, and left it in a state of thrift and rapid increase. And he has been honored of God to break the succession of an erroneous and life-depressing ministry, and head a new series of the preachers of the truth, to whose labors God will attach his blessing; and whoever comes in after generations to write the history of this church, and trace events as time will then have developed them, will trace great results to causes which had their spring under his labors.

"The honor which the providence of God put upon his ministry was this, that it was the turning point of life to an apparently expiring church. He sacrificed his own interests, and perilled his prospects of a happy settlement in the ministry, to make here what was thought to be the doubtful experiment whether this church could live. Such instances of self-sacrifice on the part of ministers are little thought of. With most it is taken as a first principle that ministers have a selfish motive for every act. And when he declined a call to one of the best churches in the State, that he might unite his fortunes here with an apparently sinking cause, he had no credit for his self-denial: it was even turned to his disadvantage; and many inferred that he must be a small affair if he would consent to labor here with such a forlorn hope of a church. So little do the world, judging others by themselves, appreciate the moral sublime in self-denial. But it matters not. He has not lost his reward. Events in after years will show—they have already begun to show—more good accomplished, that is, more honor achieved, by that self-sacrificing ministry than is ordinarily secured by a ministry in our largest churches. God has honored him by setting him at the head of a many-branching stream of life-giving influence here, where children and children's children will see cause to call him blessed."

The effect of the sea air upon Mr. R.'s health urged him to seek an inland situation, and his pastoral relation was dissolved, July 1st, 1832. He subsequently preached in Hopkinton, in Berkley, and Wayland, and in Canaan, N. Y., where he had invitations to settle. He was at length installed over the 1st Cong. Chh. in S. Woodstock, Ct., where he labored with success till 1844, when his ministerial relation was again dissolved. For several years past he with his family have had their residence in Boston.

24. 188. Joseph Rocket,⁴ was sent in early manhood to keep garrison at Oxford, and became enamored with the country, and resolved on settling there. After the dispersion of the French Huguenots and the acquisition of a title to O. by a second company of settlers, he was upon the ground, and on the 5th of Feb., 1715, in the first division of lands, drew 60 acres where Oxford village now stands, and in 1730, a 12 acre lot on the N. side of Great Swamp. He was unfortunate in his location, however rich might have been his soil, for the substratum was too coarse for capillary attraction, and in seasons of unfrequent showers he must have lost his crops. This was probably learned by experience, for his sons settled in other parts of the town, and particularly in the S. E. part. He must have been an acquisition to the strength of the settlement, for his mother was a Twitchell, and "if a Twitchell, strong," said the ballad of his day; and several of his grd. nephews, to my knowledge, had the strength of two common laborers, coupled with rare activity and moderation of diet. 1. Richard Sanger, if not a German by birth had a German name, denoting minstrel, which did not occur in England much earlier than his day, and which has not in the English world yet become common. In Germany it may be more ancient than Sangerhausen. Richard Sanger, the progenitor of the New England Sangers, embarked Apl., 1638, at South Hampton, settled as a blacksmith at Sudbury, 1646, took the oath of fidelity 1647, [Barry's His. of Fram.] removed 8, (9mo.) 1649, to Watertown, where he died, Aug. 20, 1690, leaving an estate, the inventory of which, though humble in amount, shows that he had, for his day, the ordinary comforts and conveniences of life. To him and his two adult sons, with three others, was intrusted, during Philip's war, the charge of guarding the mill at Watertown. Richard,¹ w. Mary Rannals, 2d w., Sarah —, r. Watertown, had,
 - i. Mary,² Sep. 26, 1650, at Watertown, m. John Harris at W., 1670;

 - iv. Elizabeth,³ born June 2, 1703, at Watertown, and no further reported.
 4. 19. Richard,² came to Sherborn at the age of 21, with his brother Nath'l, to establish the business of blacksmithing. He probably built his house on the North side of the common. A few rods further north, cinders reveal the site of his shop. After passing the customary year of probation, he was approved as a good and wholesome inhabitant, and presented, by a vote of the proprietors, July 1, 1689, with "20 acres of land and town rights in future with themselves ; he to bear proportionable charges with them in the town, having no power to sell, let, or give said land for the space of 7 years." He subsequently, and at different times, drew other lots. July 5, 1690, Edward West gave him a deed of 31 acres, i. e. 12 of meadow received by his wife from her father, Daniel Morse, (jun.) and 19 of upland received from the town. This tract was bounded N. by West's land, which separated it from Rev. D. Gookin's ; "W. by the road (from the plain), to the Meeting - house in part: S. by Jona. and Nath'l Morse's, and by common lands on all other parts." This includes the sight of Elbridge Sanger's buildings.—By common lands must be included the burying-ground which formed a part of the West boundary; for Eleazar Morse in 1722, deeded to "Richard Sanger,² 3½ acres, bounded E. by Richard's own land," and "N. with the common land reserved or set apart for the burying place,"* (see Mid. Reg. of Deeds, Lib. 32), "W. by the highway leading from the Plain to the S. part of Sher., and S. by Wm. Barron's, the said land being near the Meeting house." Richard's² estate at his death was inventoried at £706, not including town rights and allotments at Douglas. He seems to have been a useful and respected citizen, and an exemplary member of society. To him was committed the sacred charge of taking care of the Meeting house, to which his was much the nearest dwelling. His children were, I. Elizabeth,³ Ap. 2 or 16, 1693, d. 1775, unm. at Sherborn; II. Mary, Apl. 11, '95, m. Andrew Morse, 1745, d. without issue; III. Hannah, Feb. 7, '97, m. Ephm. Sarah, Feb. 10, '05, m. Nath'l Holbrook, Aug. 20, '28, r. Sherborn; 22. 20. VII. Richard,³ Nov. 4, 1706, d. May 14, '86, reed. to chh. Jan. 23, '85; VIII. Abigail, July 3, 1709, reed. to full communion in chh. Aug. 8, '36, pr. d. unm.

63. 21. IX. David,³ Feb. 22, 1715, m. Bathsheba Pratt, r. Framingham.

20. 22. Richard,³ was a remarkable man. He inherited the combative, mirthful acquisitive, and persevering characteristics of his mother's race, and excelled them in enterprise. He was brought up to the business of his father, and continued to be styled blacksmith until thirty years of age. Soon after attaining his majority, he purchased of Rev. Daniel Baker, two acres on the west side of the road, opposite his father's land, bounded south and west by Baker, and north by James Coolidge; and the next year commenced building the north half of the Old Sanger House, now occupied by Mr. Joseph Sanger. At the age of 23 he m. Deborah, dg. of Hn. Wm. Rider, by w. Deborah Morse, (see "Mem. of Morses," p. 3,) and at the next town meeting received a certificate of his marriage in the customary form of an election to the office of hogreeve. About this time he seems to have come into possession of the five acre building lot of Rev. Daniel Gookin, now in the first lot on the east side of the way upon the plain north of the meeting house, and for some time to have lived in the Gookin house. This house stood upon an eminence near the north side of the lot, and about twenty rods east of the road. His shop stood between the house and highway. On the death of his father, two thirds of his real estate was assigned to him and

* Richard Sanger² having become the proprietor on three sides of this Reservation, probably inclosed it with his own land, as in it few interments had yet been made. The town being interested in two older graveyards, and having no record of the reservation, neglected to fence it, until it came to be regarded as private property. Capt. Samuel Sanger the 1st so regarded it, and repeatedly offered to give the land, if the town would inclose it. But they disregarded the offer, and he, for the sake of decency, inclosed the portion containing monuments, and used it as a private burying place; and it has since, in opposition to the wishes and efforts of his heirs, been sold and subjected to profane trespass. But the sale, though ordered by a Judge of Prob., will be set aside whenever the land is reclaimed, as it can be at any future time. Possession "for no period whatever" can give title to land set apart like this, whose bounds are ascertainable: and if the town has forfeited all moral right, then let them procure an act of the Leg., vacating the land as a cemetery, and give a quit claim to the present occupants. Regard for justice and the peace of posterity may require it.

his brother David, whom he, in 1735, bought out. He soon after took down the Gookin house, and erected and adjoined it to the south end of the tenement he commenced in 1729. This part of the house was built in 1679, and is 176 years old. Near it may still be seen, in the rear of Eldridge Sanger's house, the Old Gookin Barn, having by repeated demands for sound tenants to new sills, lost half of its lower story.

In 1733, he purchased, for £63, of Edmond Quincy and William Brattell, commissioners for the sale of lands formerly given by the town to Rev. D. Baker, seven acres south of his own land, east of the road from the meeting house to the south end, north of the farm road, and Nathaniel Holbrook's land, and west of N. Holbrook's.

In 1734-5, he bought of Rev. Wm. Cooper and Judith his wife, (the dg. of Chief Justice Sewall), 200 acres, or one half of the Hull Farm; Capt. Joseph Ware purchasing at the same time the other half.

In 1737, he opened a store, which he seems to have left in the hands of another in 1747, when he removed to Boston, and for a short time did a large and lucrative business. The climate disagreeing with the health of his lady, he returned the next year to S., and here traded extensively in merchandise and real estate. He was at that day concerned in land speculations in Maine. He accumulated a large fortune, which he divided among seven children, without reserving enough for protracted old age.

Between 1740 and '67, he served the town ten years as selectman, and often acted as moderator at town meetings. He was a good whig, served on committees to provide for the poor of Boston, in the time of the war, and to report on the services of soldiers employed by S. In 1776, he was the first man placed on the committee of safety with President Locke.

His wife, the daughter of the accomplished surveyor and clerk, Wm. Rider, and the niece of Rev. Joseph Morse, of Stoughton, was a lady of uncommon dignity and excellence. Her library consisted of such works as Willard's Divinity, Flavel's and Tillotson's works, &c.

From the markings in these volumes, I infer that she kept a theological school in the nursery, doubtless from the conviction that doctrine is the only foundation of correct practice. She d. 23. 29. Capt. Samuel Sanger,⁴ senr., was distinguished for his athletic frame, personal dignity, moral integrity, courage, independence, and energy. During a long period of active life, he bore a conspicuous part in the civil transactions of Sherborn, and was eminently serviceable during the great conflicts for our liberties and the maintenance of the constitution against the rebellion of '87. Then it was, that his appeals, from the moderator's chair, were wont to rouse his townsmen to enthusiasm in their country's cause; so that no town of its size in this patriotic commonwealth, went before S. in the number of volunteers for the public service, or in promptness in furnishing supplies. To him Pomologists owe the discovery and first cultivation of the incomparable Porter apple. He inherited the ancient Sanger house, kept a small store and tavern, and once entertained Gen. Washington. As a landlord he did much to discourage idleness and excess. No man dared roll at his ninepins between one holiday and another. Gross offenders against decency and good order would hide from his presence, and feel more terror at his rebuke, than at any fulminations from S. pulpit. On the sabbath his bar was locked, and a key of gold could not open it; yet his rooms were open and fires free during the interim of divine service, while a solemnity befitting the day, reigned throughout the house, and no discourse was entered upon which could interrupt him in his uniform practice of reading the Bible. His children, all by his 2d wife, Abigail Whiting, a lady of eminent piety, were:

31. 46. Hon. Calvin Sanger,⁵ of Sherborn, one of the most distinguished citizens who ever lived in this ancient town, was not born to an independency, nor favored with academical advantages above the youth of his day in the country. His constitution was naturally feeble, and his health too precarious to justify hopes of success in the toilsome pursuits of agriculture, then the only pursuit towards which the emulation of his associates was directed. Under circumstances thus adverse, he passed his minority without any regular initiation for either mechanical, mercantile, or professional employments. But not more wisely adapted to beneficent ends, are nature's irregularities in the physical world, than are the dispensations of Providence to develop talent when and where it is needed. Sherborn would soon want a leader. Her aged counsellor and guide, Daniel Whitney, Esq., was advanced in years. Her social and civil order, which had been preserved with scarcely a temporary interruption, from the arrival of Nicholas Wood and his colony in 1652, would be in danger. Her inhabitants, being an intelligent, strong-minded, and independent yeomanry, would furnish numerous aspirants, with equal claims to office; the political sophistries, and base appeals of Jefferson's pen, to the vilest passions and prejudices, were being circulated ; men were taking sides ; the political conflict was coming on ; and some man of master spirit would soon be needed for the good of all. Such a man could not be expected from abroad. There was nothing to allure him. One must be raised up among them,—a man of patriotism, honesty, and responsibility, of intelligence, modesty, and good address ; and above all, one who could give the strongest reasons.

Young Sanger was endowed with the natural gifts, and, in consequence of feeble health, subjected to the right discipline, to fit him for the service which his fellow citizens would require. Besides possessing the rare gift of an uncommon share of common sense, he had an active and discriminating mind, a tenacious memory, and a remarkably sound judgment. He was fond of books. He treasured up facts in history and political economy, and investigated the political questions of the day, which enabled to form and defend correct opinions. He acquired so much knowledge of law, as made him the Lawyer and draftsman of his community : and had he devoted himself to the legal profession, his judgment was so good, and his memory so capacious and ready, he could hardly have failed of eminence.

As his health was improved by travelling, he was much abroad in distant States, and often in cultivated society, to which he owed, among other acquisitions, easy and polished manners, and the happy use of language. By intercourse with senior and maturer minds, he escaped every symptom of that vanity which is so liable to sprout in situations admitting few comparisons. Thus was he formed ; and in 1806, as soon as Sherborn had need, they almost by acclamation placed him at the head of her public affairs.

When a company of cavalry was first raised in S. and vicinity, he was elected Capt., and subsequently Col. of cavalry.

In 1806, he was chosen to represent S. in the General Court, and for 30 years after, re-elected almost without opposition, as often as he would consent to be a candidate, until he was advanced to the Senate ; and the records of the Legislature attest the high and continued confidence of that body in his wisdom and fidelity.

He was appointed a magistrate about 1806, and acted in that capacity until his death.

For more than 40 years he served the town in various minor offices, freely devoting a large amount of time and labor. He was Town Clerk in 1800, and for 25 years he kept her books in a model style. The plainness of his chirography, considering its range, will enroll him as a favorite with antiquarians. In his care for the public he was vigilant, self-denying, and persevering, consulting the interest of the future as well as of the present. His earliest efforts at trade were directed to the purchase of soldiers' rights, choice tracts of land in Western N. Y., and the township of Sangerville, and a part of Garland in Maine. In 1805, he opened a store in Sherborn, and for a series of years, did an extensive business, and established a high reputation for honesty, fairness, and responsibility. During this period, above 20 farms in S., beside others in continuous towns, passed through his hands ; and never, during this time, nor, on inquiry, since, have I been able to hear of those who ever charged him with fraud, or any act inconsistent with fair and honorable traffic.

With him originated the first cotton manufactory in Framingham ; and other enterprises, in the benefits of which, individuals and the public have largely participated. In all business transactions his honesty and judgment were universally acknowledged. Such confidence was reposed in him, that he was wont to be the first chosen to arbitrate differences at home and abroad, and he was sometimes associated in such courts with the most eminent lawyers in Mass., where immense sums were in dispute.

Col. Sanger possessed a large and liberal spirit. He never forgot the imperfect rights of the unfortunate, nor waited for their cries to pain him to action. He anticipated their wants, sympathized with their feelings, and gave without ostentation, not in stinted measures, but heaped, and in proportion at least to his ample means. His history supplies no argument for agrarianism. All had reason to rejoice that he was rich, and all, honorably dismissed from his employ, were his fast friends. The old adage that familiarity breeds disgust is founded in the fact, that human nature is so corrupt, that it loses more than it gains by inspection. But in reference to Col. Sanger, it is evident that those who knew him best, esteemed him most; and none but an envious man can deny him great benevolence and extensive usefulness. In his domestic relations, he was true, affectionate, indulgent, and kind. He left a widow still living, and eight children, six of whom survive in honorable prosperity, testifying by their refinement and beneficence to the wisdom and care of a father in their nature and education. He had,

WOOD.

Nicholas Wood. In the early forest of Woods in New England, appeared

1. Nicholas, of Concord, where he had Abigail, 10 (2), 1642;

2. Nicholas, of Dorchester, in 1640, who, in company with And. Pitcher, took the freeman's oath, June 2, 1641, and for a series of years occupied as tenant, the extensive farm of Hon. John Glover, in what is now Milton.

Here a gross insult was offered to his wife by an Indian, from about Providence, which the Government noticed, by sending to Meantanomo, Sep. 8, 1642, a demand that the offender should be sent to them to be punished, "not with death, but some other punishment."

The Sachems, Sacanonoco, of Pawtuxet, and Pumhom of Shawomock (now Warwick, R. I.) having, on 22 (4mo.) 1643, formally placed themselves and country under the jurisdiction of Mass., Nicholas Wood, with Henry Adams, senr., of Braintree, Henry Adams, junr., and Tho. Samuel, John and Christopher Adams, and above twenty others, were induced to petition the General Court, who, Oct. 1, 1645, granted them 10,000 acres West of Narragansett Bay, to be "set out for their town," and resolved that the number of 7 actual settlers should have power to admit or keep out whom they should think good; that the General Court should write letters to Benedict Arnold to compound with Pumhom at the easiest rate he could, for his right in any improved ground; and that the petitioners should dispose of the houses built upon said ground [by the persecuted Gortonites], and pay to such as built them, what the Court shall hereafter appoint, adding for their encouragement, "if they shall see cause so to do." [Col. Rec. and Drake's Book of Indians.]

The iniquity of this enterprise, which no doubt originated with the intolerant and grasping Winthrop & Co., was probably discovered, and voluntarily relinquished; or the prior sale of Shawomock, by Miantonomo to the Earl of Warwick, and by the Earl to Rev. Samuel Gorton and associates, compelled the Government to revoke their grant, and yield to Gorton his prior rights; for neither Nicholas W. nor his associate grantees ever took permanent possession; nor does it appear that they ever received indemnification for the relinquishment of the grant.

On 8 (3mo.) 1652, Nicholas W., with Tho. Holbrook and Andrew Pitcher, all of D., received of Richard Parker, of Boston, a deed for 535 acres of meadow and upland, "lying in the woods on the W. side of Charles River, 3 ms. from Natick, lying between the land of Capt. Robert Kayne on the S. side, and Mr. Richard Browne, of Watertown, in some part on the S. side, also; by Charles R. on the E., [and a rocky point, now called the neck, running into the R.]; and by common woods on the W."

This tract now includes most of the farms of Mj. John Goulding, Jona. Holbrook, Martin Barbour, Walter Barbour, David Daniels, Joseph and Jedh. Leland, Dexter Amstden, and Charles How. It seems probable that Goodman Wood had taken possession, and made improvements prior to the date of this deed, for an act of the Gen. Court, passed three weeks after, directing the laying out of Natick, ordered the Eastern line to be extended up the river as far as his house; and he had a child, b. pr. at Milton, recorded at Medfield, the nearest incorporated town, as early as Jan. 3, 1651. He erected his house 13 rods S. of Holbrook's mills, where the road now runs, and founded it upon a rock; as if he would say to succeeding generations of the town he first planted, build upon the rock of ages. He seems to have been a very responsible and enterprising man. He signed the first petition for the incorporation of S.; was a member of the chh., and for his day, possessed of a large property. He left no male posterity, who perpetuated his name, but his blood has mingled extensively with families of other names; and from him have descended many ornaments of literature, science and religion. His grave, marked by a mound, more than that of any other founder of S., merits an imperishable monument.

WILL OF NICHOLAS WOOD.

In the year of our Lord, 1669, on the 16th day of January, I, Nicholas Wood, living at my farme in Natick Bounds, having been for some considerable time under the afflicting hand of God, and thereby very weak and low in body, but of perfect remembrance, thanks be to God, and considering that the end of man's life is very uncertain, and forasmuch as I am persuaded that it is my duty to provide for death, that I be not unprovided when I shall approach [my Judge] I have thought it good for the quiet of my mind, to ordain and make this my last will and testament, in manner and form as followeth:—First, I having most and chiefest care of my soule, do humbly commend the same into the hands of Almighty God, from whom I first received [it], trusting in and through the mercy of Jesus Christ, my Saviour, that my said soule, after it be departed out of this my body, shall immediately inherit life and glory; and as for my body, I commit it to the earth from whence it was taken to be Christianly buried at the discretion of my Executors. And as concerning my worldly goods, which God of his mercy have given me, I do dispose of them as followeth:—First, I will and bequeath unto Anna, my now loving wife, the thirds of all my houses and lands at my farm, which I formerly bought of Mr. Parker, with all her wearing clothes and linen, and £17 a year out of the produce of the farm and my other lands, until my son, Jona., come to one-and-twenty years of age, for the bringing up of my two younger children. Item, I will and bequeath unto my son, Jona. Wood, all those lands, both upland and meadow, which I formerly bought of Mr. Parker, being the farme which I now live upon, with all the buildings upon it; 4 acres of English pasture, lying on the N. side of the brooke, that runneth by my house, excepted; allsoe I give unto the above said Jona., ten acres of meadow land out of that parcell of meadow, which I formerly bought of Lt. Fisher, of Dedham, as it shall be set out to him by my executors, at the south line of the said meadow next unto Mr. Jno. Hull's farm: allsoe I give unto the said Jona., one pair of oxen, one cow, one young horse, two ewes, one-half of all my tackling belonging to my teame, one-half of all my wearing clothes, and one-fifth part of all my household stuff. Item, I will and bequeath unto my son, Eleazer Wood, all those lands, meadow and upland, which I formerly bought of Lt. Fisher, of Dedham, adjoining to my other farme above said, the ten acres of meadow land given to my son, Jona., above said, only excepted. Allsoe I give unto the said Eleazer, four acres of English pasture, which lyeth on the North side of the Brook above excepted: allsoe I give unto the said Eleazer, one pair of oxen, one cow, one young horse, three ewes, one-half of all my tackling belonging to my teame, one-half of all my wearing clothes, and one-fifth part of my household stuff. Item, I will and bequeath unto my daughter, Mehetabel Wood, all that my meadow land, lying in the town of Milton, in the salt marsh, provided that what it shall amount to more than £60, upon a just and due valuation by indifferent men, shall be returned into the hands of my executors. Moreover, I give unto the said Mehetabel, two cows, two ewes, and one-fifth part of all my household stuff.

Item, I will and bequeath unto my daughter, Abigail Wood, all those my lands lying and being in the town of Roxbury, both upland and meadow, and what it shall fall short of £60, upon a just and due valuation by indifferent men, it shall be made up by [my] executors out of my other estate. Moreover, I give unto the said Abigail two cows, two ewes, and one-fifth part of all my household stuff.

Item, I give unto my daughter, Bethya, all those houses and lands that I have in Watertowne, which I had with my last wife, after her decease, provided that what they shall amount to more than £60, upon a just and due valuation by indifferent men, shall be returned to my executors. Moreover, I give unto the said Bethya, two cows, three sheep, and one-fifth part of all my household stuff. And further, my will is, that if it should please the Lord to take away my son Jona. before he come to one-and-twenty years of age, being in a single condition, that then my son Eleazer shall be sole heir to his portion, paying out to all his sisters then living, ten pounds apiece, which said payments shall be made as followeth, viz., ten pounds to his sister Mary Thurston within one year after the decease of ye said Jona., and so annually until he have paid to each of them ten pounds; or if it should please God to take away my son Eleazer by death, before he shall come to the age of one-and-twenty years of age, that then my son Jona. shall be sole heir to his estate, paying out thereof six pounds apiece to all his sisters then living, which said payments shall be as followeth, viz., £6 to his sister, Mary Thurston, within one year after the decease of his brother, and so annually until such time as he have paid each of them £6; or if it should please God to take away any of my three daughters, now in their minority, before they be of age to dispose of what I have left, then being in a single condition, that then their portions shall be equally divided between their brothers and sisters then living.

Item, I will to my grandchild, Abraham Harding, the son of my dear daughter, Hannah Harding, now deceased, the sum of £5, to be paid him by my son Jona. when the said Abraham shall be one-and-twenty years of age.

And as for the residue of my estate, bills, bonds, debts, or moveables, with the produce of my farme, and my other lands, the £17 a year above mentioned, for the bringing up of my two younger children, except unbequeathed, and not given in this my last will and testament, my debts being paid, and funeral expenses, with all other necessary charges defraidd, my mind and will is, that it should be equally divided between my two sons and my six daughters, when my son, Jona. Wood come to one-and-twenty years of age. And considering that the future as well as the present good of my family consists as much in their peace and love, as in what I have done for them; and therefore as it have been so, at present is, as my duty, so my care, God assisting, so to leave things as might most conduce to the end, and therefore my will is, that if any of my children, one or other, son or daughter, shall be discontented with what I have here done, and shall thereby occasion any uncomfortable agitations or distractions, or suits at law, thereby to trouble my executors, notwithstanding their faithful endeavors to perform the trust committed to them, according to my true intent and purpose, their so doing shall stand as a just plea and bar against them, whosoever they be, for having any right to any part of my estate left, and the portion above willed them, shall be equally divided between the rest of my children.

Item, I constitute, appoint and ordain Anna, my now loving wife, and John Thurston, jun., and Tho. Bass, both my sons-in-law, all executors of this my last will and testament, to ye intent that they shall see the same effectually performed, according to my true intent and meaning in the same.

Item, I nominate and appoint my loving friend, George Barbour, of "Medfield," suprouisar of this my last will and testament, desiring him, that he would be aiding and assisting to my executors in the execution thereof; and I do hereby utterly revoke all other wills made by me at any time, with all gifts, legacies, whatever, by me at any time made; and in token that this is my last will and testament, I have hereunto put my hand and seal this 18 of ye 4, 1669, in the presence of

HAD the Grouts possessed an inspired record of the origin of their name, the Genealogist would have escaped an ordeal of his patience, and every convert to the conclusions arrived at, the need of whetting his logic for the defence of his faith. Still, if the following statements are attentively considered, the inferences may not be pronounced altogether conjectural or inconclusive. Grout is not a Welsh name, nor is it Irish or Scotch: and England is not to be regarded as its birth-place. After a long, if not careful search, I have arrived at the conclusion that Grout, alias Groot and Gros, the parents of various modern names, were originally identical, and of continental origin; for they have the same literal meaning, viz., great; and seem to have originated in the same country and about the same age; and to have needed no other variation from a common orthography than was required by the different dialects that sprung up in ancient Germany, where the original name must have previously spread. Fifty-three years B. C., Cæsar reports among the warlike and daring tribes of Belgic Gaul, the Grudii, which signifies the Great, a name easily derived from form and stature, or martial exploits. Such of their warriors as survived a terrible defeat by the Romans, must have retreated North, and no doubt joined the indomitable tribes of Germany, then including the Netherlands, carrying their name with them, and defying the further progress of Roman arms in that direction. Here they naturally became incorporated with the Gothic tribes, in whose subsequent dialects their name appears variously spelled. In Central Germany it became Grote, from whence, "out of an ancient family," came, about 1740, the ancestor of the distinguished Grotes of London, one of whom is presumed to be the author of "that masterpiece of historical literature, the History of Greece." In Northern Germany, in the Saxon and German dialects, it became Gros, from which have sprung Gross and Growse in England, and Graus in Prussia, of which latter name is the inventor of the Magnetic Telegraph, if a discovery of the age, to which thirty minds contributed, can be called the invention of one man.* In other countries the name received a prefix.

Such of the Grudii as were forced to take the Roman yoke were no doubt suffered to occupy their country now in Flanders, and still reported as "la terre de Groude." Here, as the Dutch and Belgic dialects were formed, De was placed before the name, to denote one of the Grudii, the usual sound of u expressed by oo in Dutch and ou in Belgic and French, the d changed into t, and the Latin termination rejected; and thus originated the name of De Groot, now common, with little variation, in Belgium, France and Holland; a name which "the ancestors of Hugo De Groot," [Grotius], who was born in 1583, "had borne for many ages."

But whence came the name of Grout in England? It was supposed to have been brought by the Flemish weavers, in the reign of Henry II., 1154-89. But nothing has been discovered to prove it. The silence of Doomsday Book, of Rheimer's Foedera, of the earliest Journals of Parliament, of Camden's Remains, of the histories of heraldry and of the peerage, and of many vast catalogues of ancient English officers and subjects, affords no clue to a Norman origin, nor to the occurrence of the name between Land's End and Jonne o'Grote's house,* prior to 1513, when "Will's Grote, sen." was a member of Parliament from Cornwall. In 1587, Richard Groutte of Walton, in the Co. of Derby, was knighted, and certified to be a descendant of an ancient family of that name in the West of England. Such a reference to his family in the 16th century implied an elevated standing. Will's Grote had a dignified rank, and, as Parliament was then constituted, sat in the House of Lords, of which the king was then considered an acting member. Now as none but knights were anciently allowed a seat there, it is certain that Will's Grote had a coat of arms. Yet none by this name are reported, with evidence of any such antiquity as 1513. His arms then must have borne, in the Herald Office, a name of a different orthography, and what name so probable as Gros, borne by arms of evidently higher antiquity. The name of Grote does not occur in the early history of the Western Counties. Camden's history of Somerset and of other Counties, written in the latter part of the same century, containing lists of their land owners, does not report it; but he gives the name of Gros as the proprietor of an estate in Cornwall, copying, no doubt, some ancient list of the grantees made prior to the time of Will's Grote, and supplying a hint that the name had become altered, or leaving the reader of his history and of the Rolls of Parliament to infer it.

Was not Cornwall then, in the West of England, the earliest seat, and Gros the original name, of the family of Sir Richard Groutte, and did not one of his immediate ancestors change the name? He might have known the identity of the meaning and perhaps origin of Gros and Groot, and regarded them as convertible names; or, he might have aspired to become the Rodolph of his family, and been ambitious of a Norman origin, as is inferred from the adoption by Sir Richard of the French mode of spelling the name.† If so, then he was not improbably descended from the brilliant Raymond Le Gros, (see Hist. of Ireland, A. D. 1172-75,) who seems to have been from the West of England; for here he evidently enlisted with Strongbow and others in the service of the ex-king of Leinster. While in Ireland, Le Gros, although a Saxon, made his way to preferment, and obtained from the proud Norman Governor, the son-in-law of the late king and now the proprietor of Leinster, the command of the English army, the constablenesship of Leinster, and the hand of his beautiful sister Basilia of the house of Clare, that afterwards influenced the succession to the English throne. On the death of his patron in 1175, and the arrival of a new Governor of Ireland, Raymond Le Gros was doubtless removed from his office, and returned with Lady Basilia to the West of England, probably her former home as well as his, for here her brother Strongbow, the Earl of Strigul, seems to have been found before his first embarkation for Ireland. Le Gros, for his valor and success in the field of battle and great service to the Crown, was undoubtedly knighted. Several coats of arms by the name of Gros, all very simple and therefore ancient, appear; but I have found no Peer or Baron of this name. It however repeatedly occurs in the history of ensuing reigns. Hamo le Gros, in 1257, was of those qui profecti sunt cum Richardo in Regem Romanorum electo in Alemanniam (Germany) et habuit protectionem Regis for three years; and in 1442, Sir Oliver le Grosse of Crostwich, Norfolk Co., is mentioned. After this, the name disappears in the history of heraldry, as it would do if changed; but it is sustained in another name; and by Will's Grote in 1513; by Richard

* He was probably a John De Groot from Holland, a fisherman, who built on the Northern extremity of Scotland.

† Gros, being in French pronounced Grô, he would naturally drop s in adding the French termination, and insert in its place u rather than e for euphony, and the preservation of one syllable.

Groutte in 1587; and next by Sir Joseph Grout of Hackney, Co. of Middlesex; and recently by George Grote, Esq., late M. P. for London.

Now if none of Sir Richard Groutte's ancestors, with a Saxon name, reached the Peerage, and he thought to improve his prospects by changing it completely, if not already done, into Norman French, as others certainly did their Saxon names, it is probable that his brothers, if he had any, imitated the example; and that from this family have sprung the Grouts of England and America. But all of the name might have descended from him. If knighted at the age of 25, he might have been the grandfather, and if at the age of 46, the great-grandfather of John and William Grout, the first two of the name mentioned in our records.* The non-occurrence of the name of Richard in the family register is no objection, because it was a non-scriptural name, and therefore, in the estimation of Puritans, deserved exclusion. For the same probable reason, John Grout named no son for his brother William, who evidently named one for John. That these brothers were the descendants of Sir Richard G. is inferred from circumstances.

1st. The arms confirmed to Richard Groutte, Esq. of Walton, in the Co. of Derby, the 28 of May, 1587, and in the 29 year of the reign of Elizabeth, viz. Azure on a bend Or; between two mullets argent; three Leopards' faces Gules, have been in the family, I am confident, from the first generation who arrived in New England, and have descended with "the gun that was brought over," from Capt. John Grout of Sudbury, to his son Jonathan, the inheritor of his homestead and executor of his will, who left them to his widow, who left them to her only surviving son John, Esq., of Lunenburg, who left the gun to his son Hilkiah, and the arms to another, from whom Col. Jonathan Grout of Petersham obtained them, after expressing fears that they were lost, and offering his nephew in New Hampshire a reward if he would find them. Col. Grout left them to his widow, whose grand-daughter, Rev. Mrs. Sophia W. Grosvenor, of Clarendon, Vt., now holds them, or, more probably, a copy of the original, as the final in the name has been dropped. That these arms existed thus early in the family is rendered still more probable by the circumstance that no book of heraldry can be found in Harvard University and other principal and antique libraries giving any description from which these arms could have been depicted; and it is improbable that any of the race anciently incurred an expense which so very few can now afford, of procuring a copy from the Herald Office in London; or left his rural home, went abroad, and accidentally found one.†

2d. Capt. John Grout was brought to this country in his youth, and he informs us that he was well acquainted with Gov. Winthrop from the time he came into the country, implying that on his arrival he was introduced, and that an acquaintance then commenced, a very probable occurrence, if his father was a man of quality and he the grandson of an English knight; but rather improbable, considering his youth and the manners of those times, if he had none of the claims of rank.

Of the arrival of the Grouts in New England no record is presumed to exist. John was of Watertown in 1640, and William of Charlestown in 1665. These dates have little to do in determining the time of their arrival. A tradition has descended in the line of John's descendants, with a copy of his will, through Jonathan his executor and an uninterrupted succession of five Jonathans, all men of intelligence and respectability, that a father by the name of Grout, with two sons, fled to this country from Wales, [or the borders of Wales, i. e. Cornwall],

* There was a Captain Growte(?) named in a letter from —, Eng., 20 (7) 1640, to Mr. Samuel Maveric, as being expected in New England the next spring to pay a certain bond.

† The silence of Burke and others renders it almost certain that these arms have never been published.

on the breaking out of the plague, and died soon afterwards, leaving his sons in their minority, with claims to an estate in England which were never prosecuted. From this it has been calculated that they came in 1634, when his son John was 17 or 18 years of age, and William perhaps older. The name of the father if not Richard was probably John. Where and with whom these orphans completed their minority is uncertain. The following deposition, attentively considered, renders it probable that John was either taken into the family of Gov. Winthrop or resided with his neighbor, where he attracted the attention and secured the confidence of the Governor and family. It also shows for what trusts of difficulty and danger he was early qualified:—

“ John Grout of Sudbury, aged about sixty-eight years, testifies upon oath that y^e Depon^t was well acquainted with Gov. J. Winthrop from the time he came into the Country till his death, & knows that about two & forty years since Tacomas an Indian Sagamore or Chief man of the Indians at Chapnacunco coming to Boston with his sons & receiving sundry gifts & favours from Gov. J. Winthrop, the s^d. Tacomas expressed great obligation & desire to give some testimony of his thankfulness invited s^d. Mr. J. Winthrop to goe or send up into his country & to accept some lands from him, & that the s^d. Mr. J. Winthrop upon s^d. invitation employed Stephen Day of Cambridge, Wm. Knap of Watertown & the depon^t. to goe with a written deed to Chapnacunco to the s^d. Tacomas & from him to receive possession of certain lands, & that the s^d. Tacomas in the deponents sight & presence very freely and with memorable ceremonys signed a deed of gift & delivered the same to the s^d. Stephen Day for the use of s^d. Mr. J. Winthrop wherein he conveyed to him & his heirs forever his land lying all along & from end to end upon the Westerly side of Chapncongoc pond towards Connecticut & in the same length or breadth to run up into the Country towards Connecticut till the extent or quantity should be as large as Watertown bounds & which according to the best of Depon^t. judgment was not less than seven or eight miles square, & at the same time possession was given of the s^d. land by earth & grass [&] delivered s^d. Stephen Day, the s^d. Tacomas at the same time speaking to the Deponent who understood something of the Indian language, to speak to Mr. J. Winthrop to charge his children to give his sons more fish hooks. The ceremony Tacomas used in signing s^d. Deed was viz. he caused his eldest son to lye or kneele down upon the ground & himself made his marke or signe on the Deed upon his son's back & then he put himself in the same posture & caused his s^d. son to signe the same Deed upon his back & also caused his other sons successively to do the like upon one anothers backs, the meaning whereof the deponent understood was that none of them might have any pretence of right by succession to disturb or molest s^d. Mr. Winthrop or his children, & further saith not. Deposed by John Grout this 14th of May 1684 before

Of William Grout less is known. He is supposed to have been a mariner, and, if the elder brother, might have been the Captain Growte referred to on p. 137. He and his wife Sarah disappeared at Charlestown soon after the acquisition of New York and New Jersey by the English, and are believed, on evidence that may be hereafter given, to have removed to New Jersey, where his family, still probably pronouncing their name Groot, accepted from their neighbors the then revered name of De Groot, and became absorbed by the Dutch, forgetting their English origin, but not, in 1833, their certain relationship to the "Groots of New England." William or his son John owned and entailed a splendid domain on Raritan River, upon which the town of Boundbrook is built. From him a respectable branch of the American De Groots have descended, who believe themselves to be of Dutch or French extraction. Of this branch was that fair and lovely one who gave me in earlier life her heart and hand, and whose premature death drew me into communion with the departed, and prompted these efforts to allure others to the same fountain of solace and instruction.

John Grout, afterwards Captain and Chirurgeon, in 1640 purchased a homestall of twelve acres in Watertown, of Capt. Tho. Cakebread, on which he, with his wife Mary, settled the same year. This lot was west of the Common, on which a meeting-house had been erected, and near the centre of the present township. In 1642 he married Sarah (Busby) Cakebread, the widow of the renowned Capt. Tho. C. and the daughter of Nicholas Busby of Wat. and Boston. By this marriage he came into possession of more lots in Wat., and on the decease of her father he received, May 26, 1659, a deed of "housing and lands in W. formerly her father's, and valued at £65, and also £10 for his daughter Sarah, for which he gave the executrix, Wid. Bridget B., his receipt." [Suff. Prob. 13, 344.] In 1643, without disposing of his estate in W., he removed to Sudbury, and built his house in that part of the town which is now Wayland, and on the north side of the road nearly opposite the dwelling of the late Wid. Hayward. Here he became one of the principal proprietors and citizens of the town, and received the first year a grant of Cranberry swamp. As the new towns were not allowed commissioned officers, he, with the title of Sergeant, took the command of her training band and retained it until disqualified by age, rising, in the mean time, in dignity, but not in authority, through all the intervening grades up to that of Captain. In 1651 he was placed on a committee for determining the division line between Sudbury and Watertown. May 15, 1656, he, with others, addressed a communication to the General Court expressive of their "consent and ownage" of the action of the Court, deciding a disagreement among the inhabitants of Sudbury about their titles to certain lands.

Oct. 7, 1662, a petition, numerously signed by the people of S., including the principal citizens, was presented to the Court of Sessions, praying "that John Grout be allowed to practise the mystery of Chirurgery," which seems to have been granted. March 29, 1668, Ens. Grout sold four acres in Watertown to John Livermore; and Sept. 4, 1668, he purchased for £50, of John Brigham of Marlboro', fifteen acres in Sudbury. [Suff. Deeds, 2. 175, and 4. 169.] On 26. (7) 1676, he was despatched with a letter to the Gov. and Council in Boston, to acquaint them with the appearance of hostile Indians about Sudbury, and recommended as able to give further verbal information. He was then 60 years old, and his military talents so appreciated that to him seems to have been mainly confided the service of defending the exposed settlement of Sudbury.

On the morning of April 20, 1676, the town was assaulted by about 500 Indians and several houses set on fire; but the inhabitants, under Capt. then Ens. Grout, "made a brave stand" of probably two or three hours in duration, until the arrival of Capt. Mason from Watertown, when they drove the Indians over Concord River and saved the rest of the town. Ensign Grout, says a record, "was courageous in repelling these assaults." In the bloody fights that ensued in the vicinity, Dr. Grout was doubtless called to dress the wounds of many, and to face dangers and hardships of which it is now difficult to conceive. He was not in the employ of the Government and entitled to pay. His services were voluntary and yet not unrewarded. He was soon presented with a captaincy, then a substitute in the Colony for knighthood in England; and the General Court, who made their last grant to the Narragansett soldiers about seventy years after the war, in townships called Narragansett No. 1, No. 2, &c., near N. H., as if more mindful of the services of Capt. Grout, passed an act, Oct. 13, 1680, allowing him to purchase of Indians 80 acres of a tract between Sudbury, Watertown and Wm. Jennings' grant, "if it belonged to Natick." Of this land, for a valuable sum in money and Indian corn, he received a deed, March 16, 1680-1, from Master Waban and John Magus. [Suff. D. 7. 349.] And when a dispute arose between Sudbury and Natick involving the validity of his purchase, the Gen. Court, after an investigation, enacted, June 4, 1685, that he "should lay out the 80 acres which he had purchased and possessed." [G. C. Rec.] This tract, Oct. 13, 1695, he sold for a valuable sum to —. [M. Deeds, 12. 249.]

From the offices which he held we may infer his early reception into the church and admission to the freeman's oath, although records of the facts may not exist. Capt. Grout, like a legitimate son of an ancient knight, was of a military turn. He had probably served in 1637 as a soldier in the Pequod war, and taken lessons of his neighbor, Prof. Cakebread. These qualified him for the post to which, on a sudden, he was evidently called, and in which he rendered services worthy of grateful commemoration.

"Capt. Grout was a worthy and prominent man, and of commanding influence in managing town affairs." Besides the care of the military of Sudbury for nearly forty years, he served the town thirty years as selectman, and seven years as town clerk; and from the frequency of his appearance as a witness on various trials before the Court of Sessions it is evident that he transacted much business, and that his testimony was highly valued. Capt. G. died —, 1697, aged 81.

CHAPT. II.

[REPORTED PRINCIPALLY BY MISS ELIZA GROUT GALE.]

1. Joseph Grout,² No. III., settled in Watertown, was styled cooper and carpenter, and became one of a mining co. with Hez. Usher of Bos. and Jacob Bullard of W. and others, who bought of Christopher Hall the right to all mines and minerals found and to be found on his land near Cold Spring in Groton. This suggests the origin of a tunnel, shown me as the work of Spaniards,² excavated under a hill near a brook west of G., which yields iron pyrites and yellow mica. He settled on the original homestead of 12 acres in W., which he sold Dec. 10, 1695. [M. D. 12, 145.] He made his will Sep. 1, 1720, which was proved Nov. 4, 1720, providing for his wid. Susanna, and giving to his dg. Susanna Smith £25, to dg. Mehetabel Grout £50, to be paid them in eight years after his decease. He made Joseph his executor and residuary legatee. [M. 36. 181. Elizabeth Grout,⁵ m. Nov. 1, 1795, Jonas Gale, b. March 6, 1765, s. of Nehemiah G. of Sutton, s. in S., now Millbury, where he died Nov. 21, 1814. She d. in Washington, D. C., June 8, 1850. Mrs. Gale united with a kind and benevolent spirit great energy and strength of character. For 58 years she walked with the Baptist church, exhibiting in her daily deportment unequivocal signs of deep and fervent piety. Truly might she be called a mother in Israel. The close of her long and useful life was serene; and, to the last, she utterly discarded her own goodness as a ground of justification, and placed all her trust in the merits of Christ. Her last words were, "Let me go, let me go to my Saviour." She had,

III. Leonard D. Gale,⁶ A. M., M. D., b. July 25, 1800, at Sutton, now Millbury. At the age of 14 he lost his father, and his training thereafter devolved upon his mother, who was a woman of great decision and energy and uncommon piety. Her first desire was to see her children Christians; the next that they should be well educated. Soon after the death of his father he was sent to school, and was placed first under the care of Rev. Dr. Going of Worcester, and afterwards at Leicester Academy. Here he acquired a taste for study, and decided upon a collegiate course. His mother, meantime, had removed to her native town, where she would have a better opportunity to educate her children. Here he pursued his studies, teaching a district school in winter; and in 1821, entered Brown University, Providence, where he remained three years. He then removed to Union College at Schenectady, where he graduated in 1825. The small patrimony left him by his father was now exhausted; he must henceforth make his way in the world by his own energies. He was not a man of brilliant genius, but he had that which is more necessary to success in life—a fixed purpose, untiring industry, and a patient, persevering spirit.

Having decided upon the medical profession, he entered the office of his cousin, Dr. E. G. Dannel of New York, as a pupil, in the autumn of 1825. Here he continued through the winter; but his health failing, he was unable to procure the means of support and continue his studies; so, after having attended one course of lectures, he gave up the study of medicine for the present and engaged in teaching. During the two years he was thus engaged, he applied himself to the study of the natural sciences, particularly chemistry, and commenced lecturing, delivering his first course in Peale's Museum.

He now resumed the study of medicine, and in 1830 received his M. D. from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the city of New York. The same year he connected himself with the Presbyterian Church, under the care of Rev. Dr. Cox, but has since removed his relation to the Episcopal Church. The nine years following, he remained in New York, struggling against reverses, but patiently persevering notwithstanding repeated losses and disappointments. During this period he was employed first as Assistant Prof. of Chemistry in the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, and afterwards as Prof. of Chemistry in the New York College of Pharmacy, (which latter place he held four years,) Prof. of Chemistry, Geology and Mineralogy in the University of New York, and Lecturer and Teacher of Chemistry in Madame Okiel's school, where he was engaged ten years.

In 1832 he was resident physician in one of the cholera hospitals, during the prevalence of the epidemic in that city, continuing meantime, with great ardor, the study of chemistry, and lecturing. In 1833 he was employed to make a Geological survey of the Island of New York, and the same year assisted Prof. Morse in constructing the Electro Magnetic Telegraph. In 1834 he published a Chemistry for Schools, the whole edition of which was destroyed by fire. A second edition was published in 1837, which met a better fate, and was well received.

Aug. 21, 1835, he was married to Anna E., a daughter of Capt. Lewis Smith, who commanded a vessel in the war of 1812. In the winter of 1839-40, he left New York, having been appointed Prof. of Chemistry in Jefferson College, Washington, (Mi.) where he remained two years, performing the duties of the President as well as his own. At the end of that period, he returned to New York; difficulties growing out of the commercial crisis at that time having so affected the pecuniary interests of the College it was necessary to suspend operations. The four years following, he was chiefly employed in manufacturing chemicals. In 1843, Prof. Morse commenced laying the wires for the Electric Telegraph between Washington and Baltimore, and Dr. Gale was employed to assist him.

In 1846 he received the appointment of Assistant Examiner in the Patent Office at Washington. In removing thither, the vessel which contained his effects, among which were a very valuable library of seven or eight hundred volumes and his chemical apparatus, was wrecked, and the whole lost without insurance. His family, among whom was his aged mother, barely escaped with their lives.

His life had been hitherto a succession of losses and disappointments, such as few, without the aid of God's grace, would have endured without faltering. Twice he had been robbed of everything, twice lost his property by fire, and now the wreck had nearly completed the work. But grateful to God, who had carried him through so many difficulties and had now spared to him the lives of his family, he applied himself with renewed energy to his new employment, and, by good management and economy, succeeded in a few years in retrieving his fortunes. Two years after he was promoted to a chief Examinership, which place he still retains, and is now the oldest Examiner in the office. His department is the Chair of Chemistry. He is an active member of Trinity Church in Washington City, and has maintained throughout his life an unblemished moral character, is a sincere and consistent christian, liberal to the poor, and a ready and cheerful contributor to every christian object. In the social relations of life, those who know him best appreciate him most highly. He had 1. Clara Augusta,⁷ b. Aug. 21, 1837; 2. Wm. Lewis,⁷ March 14, 1841, d. March 18, 1842.

VIII. Elizabeth Grout,⁶ b. July 29, 1810, resides unm. at Washington, D. C. and unites with other useful pursuits that of genealogy. The contents of this Chapter are only an abridgment of the collections she has disinterestedly made and gratuitously reported, and imperfectly show what may be accomplished by female hands in this department of useful historical research. May her labors be continued in perfecting and enlarging this Genealogy, in anticipation of a demand for a volume of Grout and De Groot history by the next generation.

39. 185. Jonathan,⁵ Rev., A. M., grad. Harv. Col. July 21, 1790, studied Theology with Rev. Dr. Lyman of Hatfield, was licensed Aug. 7, 1793, preached first at Hawley, where the church voted him a call Aug. 20, and he was ord. Oct. 23 ensuing, in a barn yet standing, which had been converted into a place of worship. "Mr. G." says a Rev. cotemporary, "was a peacemaker and a man of an excellent spirit;" "he was a diligent, laborious, and successful minister; he loved his people and they loved him." He remained sole pastor of this chh. about 40 ys., and nominally 42, until his death. He seems to have been excused some portion of his time for missionary labors; for another of his brethren says of him, "he was a bright, noble, generous, sociable, and free hearted man; not a Calvinist of the highest grade, yet a good man and popular preacher. He had a loud and commanding voice, and was one of the most popular missionaries in Maine." As an expression of their respect and gratitude, the people of H. after his decease, June 2, 1835, erected him a monument, with an inscription just and honorable to both. Mr. G. m. CHAPT. III.

1. Jonathan² Grout (No. V.) settled upon the homestead in Sud., m. Abigail Dix, b. March 15, 1676-7, dg. of John Dix by wf. Elizabeth Barnard, [dg. of John B. of W. (see Bond)], and d. intestate. His wid. Abigail and son Jonathan were appointed administrators, and his estate was inventoried May 11, 1730, at £1849.10. Jonathan Fisk, June 15, 1730, was appointed guardian of his dg. Patience in her 18th and of his son Peter in his 16th year. June 13, 1731, wid. Abigail quitclaimed to sons Jona. and John her right of dower; and June 11, 1753, made her will, giving her estate to three minor chil. of her son Jona., late of Worcester; to her son John of Lunenburg, to her dg. Patience Graves of Narragansett (No. 2), and to her dg. Abigail Grout, making the latter her executrix. Will proved Dec. 4, 1753. [M. P. 19, 366-7, and 25, 428.] He had,
 7. 2. I. Jonathan,³ Feb. 9, 1702, d. 1748; m. Hannah Hurd, June 6, 1743.
 - II. Josiah,³ 1703, d. Nov. 18, 1706.
 10. 3. III. John,³ Oct. 14, 1704, d. June, 1771; m. Joanna Boyenton.
 4. IV. Abigail,³ Sep. 1708, was unm. in 1753.

 22. 6. VII. Peter,³ May 29, 1715, d. unm. about 1742.
2. 7. Jonathan³ purchased of James Holden, July 20, 1744, 90 acres of upland with housing, and 6 do. of meadow. This farm is situated $\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. of Quinsigamond village, and $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of City Hall in Worcester, and is said to contain the field that was first ploughed in the township. He soon after rem. from Sud. to Worcester, where he d. intestate in 1748, a. 46. Commissioners were appointed June 25, 1748, who appraised his estate in Wor. Co. at £3410.15.1, O. T. and his lands in Sud. at £134.8. Zach. Hurd became guardian of some or all of his chil. [W. P. 3, 52 and 59.] His wid. Hannah Hurd administered on his est. He had,

 9. II. Silence,⁴ Nov. 8, 1745, at Worcester; m. — Gates.
 - III. Priscilla,⁴ Aug. 13, 1747, all of whom, Nov. 24, 1769, signed an agreement to a division of their mother's dower. Priscilla, unm., made her will Nov. 3, 1773, giving her estate to Lavina Brown, Benoni Grout, Jona. Grout, Silence Gates, and Jason Duncan to whom she was engaged, which was proved Jan. 10, '74. [W. P. 12, 491.] Nathan Perry, adm.
3. 10. John,³ Esq., is presumed in early life to have received a classical education, but did not graduate. He must have been a man of superior natural talents. He studied law, and during the latter half of his life, if not before, transacted business as an attorney. He m. Joanna Boynton, from Rowley, and March 18, 1727-8, purchased of John Goodrich, for £40, a house and 45 acres in the S. town, W. of Groton, called Turkey Hills, now Lunenburg, [M. D.]; and afterwards of Richard Wheeler, for £58, a home lot and meadow and a

- town right in Poquiog, now Athol, on Miller's River. [W. D. 10, 527.] Oct. 12, 1736, he sold to his br. Jonathan 35 acres in Sud. Oct. 15, 1740, he bought of Zach. Gould for £70 a tract of 45 acres in Lunenburg; and Nov. 10, 1740, of Hilkiah Boynton of L., for £300, a lot of 40 acres in L. [W. D. 13, 353.] He afterwards removed to Rindge, N. H. and next to Jaffrey, where he d. In N. H. more of his history remains to be gathered. He had at Lunenburg, 86. 20. xii. Solomon,⁴ June 27, 1751, m. Ruth Putnam.

114. 21. xiii. Jehoshaphat,⁴ Esq., Aug. 7, 1753, d. Sep. 6, 1806; m. Anna [Parker].
6. 22. Peter,³ r. unm. at Sud.; May 17, 1736, bought of Rev. Tho. Frink of Rutland, for £100, an original right of a new town N. W. of Rut., and lot No. 26 N. of the meeting-house; and June 21, 1737, of Sam'l Sawyer of Lancaster, for £165, a messuage in Petersham; and March 29, 1737, of John Witt of Marl., for £34, lot No. 4 in a tract in Upper Ashwelot, with all rights in all after divisions in said township. [W. D. 13, 343.] Sep. 19, 1740, when "in good health," he made his will, giving two lots in Sud. to his br. Jonathan, £150 to his sister Patience, and the rest of his estate to be equally divided to his mother, sister Abigail, and br. Jona. He appointed Ephraim Curtis, Esq., his executor, who declined, and his br. John of Lunenburg, May 31, 1742, was appointed in his room. [M. P. 22, 472.]
8. 23. Jonathan,⁴ being only 4 years old at the death of his father, was taken to Sud. where he resided with his uncle Hurd until he was 16, when he returned to the farm that had been assigned him in Worcester, and was allowed to carry it on. He made an industrious and respectable citizen, was often chosen to town offices, and in 1785 enrolled with a comparatively small number from the extensive and populous township as fit for a juryman, an endorsement of character which modern usage has almost deprived of signification. He m. Anna —, who d. Aug. 25, 1827, and had,
24. i. Prudence,⁵ Feb. 19, 1770.
115. 25. ii. Jonathan,⁵ Feb. 14, 1772, d. April 31, 1849; m. Sally De Wolf.

 v. Hannah,⁵ May 7, 1781, rs. unm. at Worcester.
11. 28. Hilkiah,⁴ Maj., m. Submit Hawkes, (b. in Deerfield about 1735, d. at Weathersfield, Vt. 1817), settled near Fort Hinsdale, N. H., where she, with Mrs. Jemima How and others, was taken captive by Indians, July 27, 1755, carried to Canada with her three small children, parted from some of them, and sold to a French gentleman, probably by the name of De Melle, who treated her kindly during a captivity of 3 years. When ransomed, she was compelled to leave her children behind, and it was not until 3 years more had expired before she recovered them. Hilkiah the eldest never returned, and the mother, believing him dead, named a second Hilkiah. Circumstances, however, occurred which induced the belief that he was adopted and raised an Indian, took the name of Peter Westfall, passed his life with the Cattaraugus Indians in N. Y., who made him a chief, and that from him Henry Westfall, Esq., of Baldwinsville, and others of this name in N. York, have descended. If dates are correctly given, Mrs. G. could not, at the time of her captivity, have been 20 years old, and the sufferings of her fellow captives, as given in the narrative of Mrs. How, must have been hers. Maj. Grout, after the recovery of his family, resided at Northfield, Mass., but eventually settled at Weathersfield, Vt., where he d. at an advanced age. She became a member of the Congregational chh. and d. at W. at the age of 85. They had,

13. 40. John,⁴ Esq., became a lawyer, and when N. York attempted to extend jurisdiction over the territory which is now Vermont, and erected the Co. of Westmoreland, he was appointed Dist. Attorney by the Gov. of N. Y., not improbably through the agency of a De Groot relative, and took up his residence at Chester. When the revolt of the Colonies took place, he was a loyalist, and retired to Canada and settled as a lawyer at Montreal, where he d. He m. and had two daughters, who were ladies of great talents and literary accomplishments. One of them, Frederica, m. a Capt. Ferguson of the Royal Army, who cruelly betrayed her affection and confidence, and she ever after refused to see him, suppliant as he became. For her wounded heart she seems to have found a solace in literature. Of the other daughter nothing is reported but her devotion to books, rendering her insensible to common domestic duties.

14. 41. Elijah,⁴ Esq., settled abt. 1766 upon a rich interval on Connecticut R. in Charlestown, N. H. ; served the town in various offices, was Jus-

16. 63. Jonathan,⁵ Hon. Of the early history of this eminent man almost nothing reliable has been reported, or gathered from public records, while that of his mature life is so extensive, requiring so many explanations of public measures and of the private transactions of others, as to fall, for the most part, without the compass to which this article must be confined. He was engaged in the French war, doubtless, as an officer, left Crown Point Sep. 22, 1760, and seems to have acted as bearer of despatches. He m. the same year his cousin, the daughter of Gov. Page? of N. H., with whom he is said to have previously resided, but in what capacity is not known. He settled in Petersham, on a farm owned by Gov. P., became a lawyer and the master spirit of the community, and, with his copatriot Gen. Ward, of the entire County of Worcester, moulding for successive generations the political character of his neighborhood, and receiving from them every office in their gift which he would accept. He was a good whig, and early present with his regiment at the siege of Boston, and had he continued in the service, such were his peculiar talents, his name might have descended with those of Sullivan, Stark, Greene, and other heroes of the revolution. But as a friend to the cause, he rendered service equally important in the inspiring influence which he exerted. His natural talents were of a high order, and he wrote with rare ability. He was a man of the world, considered ambitious and artful, but of his patriotism none could doubt. He was, with Caleb Strong, Elbridge Gerry, Fisher Ames, &c., elected, 1789, a member of the first Congress under the Federal Constitution, and in this capacity befriended the administration of Washington; but afterwards, when the original parties were completely formed, he was included in the democratic ranks, then a minority in Massachusetts. At this time of life he is described as "very fleshy, of medium height, fair complexion, and a very handsome man."

Col. G. engaged largely in land speculations, owning at one time 40,000 acres in Vermont and N. Hampshire, including a township in Vermont, to which he secured the name of Lunenburg, in honor of his natal place, and where for years he passed much of his time. He accumulated and left a very large estate, of which his heirs are said to have been fraudulently deprived. But he seems to have been involved in many lawsuits, and to have experienced the ordinary course of Providence, that sends adversity after prosperity. He d. Tamorin or Thomasine, and settled at Newbury, 1635; was admitted freeman 1638; resided in Haverhill, 1646; afterwards in Salem, and d. in Newbury, 1682.

Col. Hale⁶ was a merchant and resided at Rindge. On the breaking out of the Revolutionary war, he was Capt. of a company of minute men, with whom he marched the morning after the battle of Lexington; was appointed by the Province of N. H. Major in one of the three regiments of the Continental line raised by her, and subsequently promoted Lt. Col.—then Col.—was stationed for a year or more at Ticonderoga, under Gen. St. Clair. On the retreat of St. Clair before Burgoyne, in 1777, he was taken prisoner by the British, at or just after the battle of Hubbardton; was unjustly accused of cowardice in that battle, which charge he indignantly denied and demanded a court martial; went home on parole; was recalled within the enemy's lines; left home June 14, 1779, and died a prisoner in the hands of the British at New Utrecht, Long Island, Sept. 23, 1780, aged just 38 years.

His widow Abigail (Grout) Hale died at the residence of her son Harry, in Chelsea, Vt., Sept. 14, 1838, aged 93 years, 5 months and 21 days. She was a very superior woman. In answer to my request, her youngest child, Harry Hale, Esq., now in his 78th year, has consented to give me "facts for a brief note of her character." But as these illustrate in a degree the character of her father's family, if not her grandfather's, and are in themselves too good to be omitted in a mere family memorial, I take the liberty to insert the following extracts from his letter:—

"My mother was a person, as I think, of very ardent disposition, discriminating mind, and just sense of right and wrong; ready to befriend any one in circumstances of need; liberal to the poor, and ready to resist the wrong doer with all the force of her mind. I will give one or two instances. She administered on my father's estate. A person professing to be a friend, possessed himself of about $3,000 belonging to the estate, in her absence and against her will. He said he did it for her benefit. She did not thank him, and told him she felt competent to take care of it without his interference. He refused to restore it. She commenced a suit against him in the N. H. courts, and, after going from the lower to the highest court, obtained a verdict for the whole amount. He professed to be aggrieved, said the decision was unjust, and, being a man of great influence in the State, petitioned the legislature to grant him a new trial. His request was granted. Anew it commenced, and at the last court of dernier resort he produced witnesses which she said were false, and she could prove them so. At the end of this trial the verdict was in his favor. No way discouraged by this result, she thought what was 'sauce for a gander might be sauce for a goose,' and she applied to the legislature for another trial, which was granted, and she came out triumphant, and recovered the full amount of debt, damages and cost, which was paid. Each of these three trials must have been in court from two to four years. How many females of the present age would have the courage to go through such a scene, having a very artful and influential enemy to contend against?

"Some time between 1790 and 1800, my mother received from the U. S. about $3,600 for my father's services during the war of the revolution. A person of much influence and wealth and a professed friend applied to her for the loan of that money, proposing to give her a note, signed by himself and a son, for the payment. An agreement was made that they might have what she had to spare, by giving 5 or 6 notes for $500 each. Such notes were executed, payable to her or her order on demand, with annual interest, with the understanding that if the interest was punctually paid and any one of said notes paid when she needed it, the remainder might remain while she considered it safe. A year expired but no interest came. A plea was urged that money was very hard to be got—that she was not in immediate need—that she should not eventually lose anything by them, &c. &c. Another year passed by, and still no interest was paid, and the same plea was urged as before. Patience was now exhausted, and a suit was commenced on one or more of the notes, and property attached. The signers of the notes were both lawyers—the one old and artful, the other young and vigorous—and every artifice that ingenuity could devise was used to delay a final judgment, and some incidents were peculiarly favorable to the defendants; but after several suits, which were in progress from five to ten years, the notes were all collected in full, with legal costs.

"You may possibly think, from the above, that all her powers were exerted for the acquisition and retention of dollars and cents, regardless of every other object. This was far from being the case, and to convince you I will give another incident. After my father's decease a claim was presented against the estate of about $2000, which my mother said she knew to be unjust, and which, if in her power to prevent it, should never be allowed; and, if allowed, should not be paid. It was allowed, and an execution issued for the amount against her as adm'r, and, for want of property, against her body! She did go to jail and was delivered to the keeper of the jail, 'within said prison,' there to remain until said execution should be fully paid in full of all damages, costs, jailor's fees, &c. Her determination was to spend the remainder of her life in the jail yard, and to have her body buried in the limits, by doing which the execution would be fully satisfied. You will probably say, 'My dear sir, you have not only failed to prove otherwise with regard to her money-getting propensities, but have added testimony in confirmation of my opinion.' But please hear me through. There were many circumstances which very much ameliorated her condition as a prisoner. Her own brother Jehoshaphat was the jailor; her brother Elijah of Charlestown was on hand to give bonds for the liberty of the jail yard. She had horse and saddle to ride whenever she chose, and although the distance she could ride was limited, yet it was an indulgence of which she was extremely fond. She would always have the best horse within her knowledge, if money would buy it. She boarded in her brother's family, and had every attention paid her which a person in her situation could desire.

"There she remained, I should think, not less than six months, when an event occurred which called her suddenly home. When she left for Keene, she left me and my sister, then in her 18th year, to manage our domestic affairs, in which we succeeded very comfortably—a female friend, living very near and several years older than my sister, calling on us almost daily, and most of the time spending the night with my sister. In Sep. 1795 my sister was taken sick with a fever, and in a few days the physicians said there was no prospect of her recovery. My mother was immediately informed. Her mind was at once made up. I cannot remain here, said she, under these circumstances; I must go, and do what I can for her, and, if she dies, be by her to perform the last acts of kindness, and follow her to the grave as chief mourner. Thus deciding, in an hour's time, regardless of jail limits and bondsman, she was on her horse, and in three hours more by the bedside of her darling daughter, and only two days before her death. Soon after the funeral ceremonies, my uncle Elijah Grout appeared, and, after salutations of usual occurrence, spake rather reproachfully to my mother for leaving the jail limits and subjecting him to the liability of having so great a debt to pay. Her reply was worthy of the dignity of a matron and a parent. My dear brother, said she, would you wish me to have acted the part of a miser, and, knowing that my daughter was in the most extreme danger and that my presence might possibly save her life, would you, I say, for the paltry sum for which I was holden, have had me so unfeeling, as to remain there, and suffer her to die without the consolation of her only earthly parent? No; had every cent I was worth on earth, even the bed on which I slept, been necessary to pay the bond, everything should have been sacrificed that I might enjoy the luxury of doing what I could for my child. But, says my uncle, I am liable to be sued any moment, and to have all my property attached and taken from me. My dear brother, said she, cheer up, and only continue your journey a little farther and you shall have the money to carry back with you to pay the debt; so saying she went to her locker and brought him some notes and said, 'take these, and call on John Cushing, a wholesale merchant of Boston, who is the signer, and he will pay you as much as you wish.' Her proposal was acceded to, and he soon returned with the sum needed.

"My mother was a person of almost boundless charity to the poor and needy. I never knew her to send away a worthy poor person with an empty hand, but almost uniformly loaded them with her bounties; but for idle loafers she had no sympathy. She was a great reader, and always took more or less of the local and religious publications of the day. She was by no means an ordinary letter writer. I have seen writings of hers, on local and religious subjects, which, for strength of argument and depth of reasoning, would not suffer, in my opinion, by the side of the writings of many females of finished education of the present day.

"I would not contend that she was without faults, in common with all others; but, taking her all in all, I do not think that in all my protracted life I ever knew a person, male or female, possessed of more originality of thought, more power to distinguish between right and wrong, more untiring perseverance in pursuing the right and repressing the wrong, or one more charitable to the poor, according to her ability, than this same mother of mine."

These extracts, though written by her son, contain no exaggerations as I infer from other testimony. Of her trials and hardships incident to the war of the revolution and the absence and death of her husband, and of the heroic manner in which she met them, he makes no mention. These would form materials for too extended an article for this work, however desirable to be remembered by her latest descendants. She was a most devoted wife. Such was her anxiety for her husband while a prisoner on L. I., that she rode on horseback 30 miles and back in one day to secure the conveyance of a letter to him.

85. vii. Harry Hale,⁵ Esq., b. Feb. 10, 1780, was the same as a posthumous child, his father having bid a final adieu to his family 8 mos. before he was born, and d. when he was 8 mos. old. The moulding of his character devolved, therefore, entirely upon his mother. His early opportunities for education were restricted to district schools and a term of 4 mos. at the Academy in Westford, Ms. He commenced life for himself in 1798, as a farmer, and labored 4 years, when, his health failing, he sold his farm at Rindge, and May, 1803, embarked in mercantile business at Windsor, Vt. Here he was chosen to town offices, and to the command of a company of militia. In 1807, he removed to Chelsea, his present residence, and there continued in trade until he retired many years ago. Esq. H. has been no office seeker, but has been much sought for office. In 1807, he was urged by members of the Legislature of Vt. from Orange Co. to accept the office of sheriff, but he utterly refused in deference to older residents of the Co. In 1814 he accepted the appointment. By the town of C. he was chosen very many times Lister, Selectman, Treasurer, Justice of the Peace, Overseer of the Poor, Grand Juror, Trustee of U. S. surplus fund, and, in 1828, '32 and '36, Representative to the Leg. of Vt. In 1832 and subsequently he was appointed Clerk of the Supreme and County Courts for Orange Co., and the same year chosen by the Leg. a Bank Commissioner, and by annual elections continued in this responsible office for 5 yrs. At the organization of the Mutual Fire Ins. Co. of Orange Co. in 1840, he was chosen a. Director, and held the office 10 years, serving as President the last 5. He has long been a Life Director of the American Bible Society, actively engaged with other benevolent institutions, and held a high place in the regards of good men and the public at large. He m. - II. Harry,⁵ (Maj.) b. Dec. 8, 1793, d. "June" or "July" 19, 1849; m. Dec. 24, 1818, Milatiah Jones Sumner, b. March 2, 1796, d. Mar. 1845, dg. of Salem Sumner of Keene, by wf. Mary French. Maj. G. at the age of 13 years lost his father, and at 17 yrs. his mother. Thus bereft he went to Boston, and was for several years clerk in the wholesale store of Jerry Fitch. He then returned to K., where he went into business with Wm. Lampson, and was subsequently connected with Phineas Fisk of K. In 1816 he rem. to Lima, N. Y., where and in Mendon he entered into partnership with G. W. Atwell in carrying on two stores, two flouring-mills, and several asheries; and subsequently had for his partner E. Atwood, and in 1838 Franklin Carter. In 1836 one of their stores was burnt, which they rebuilt. In 1848 he retired, and on closing up his business transactions with merchants in Boston, which had been of above 30 years, he was presented with many valuable presents in attestation of their high regard for his strict honesty and other excellencies of character. "His heart," says an obituary published of him, "was ever open to sympathy, and his purse ever ready to relieve the needy. Having an ardent, persevering and indomitable spirit, which was never depressed by adversity, he combatted and overcame difficulties frequently attendant upon the settlement of a new country, which would have borne down an ordinary man. No man ever inspired a more perfect confidence in his business acquaintances generally, than Maj. G., and for more than 30 yrs. his name was synonymous with integrity and punctuality; and he d. as he had lived an honest man. He had,

1. Mary Sophia,⁶ Dec. 31, "1821" or "22"; m. Nov. 25, '41, Isaac Wells of W. Avon; had 1. Elizabeth,⁷ '42; 2. Henry Grout,⁷ '44, at Lima; 3. Gertrude,⁷ b. & d. '51 at Chic.
2. Henry Cook,⁶ Nov. 7, 1825, was educated in Bos. for a dentist; has become well established as such at Lima, and, by adopting parental counsel for his guiding star, he has succeeded his father in the confidence and esteem of the community. He was m. March 15, 1851, by Rev. George W. Montgomery of Rochester, to Amelia C. Pierce, dg. of Silas P. Esq. of W. Bloomfield, N. Y.

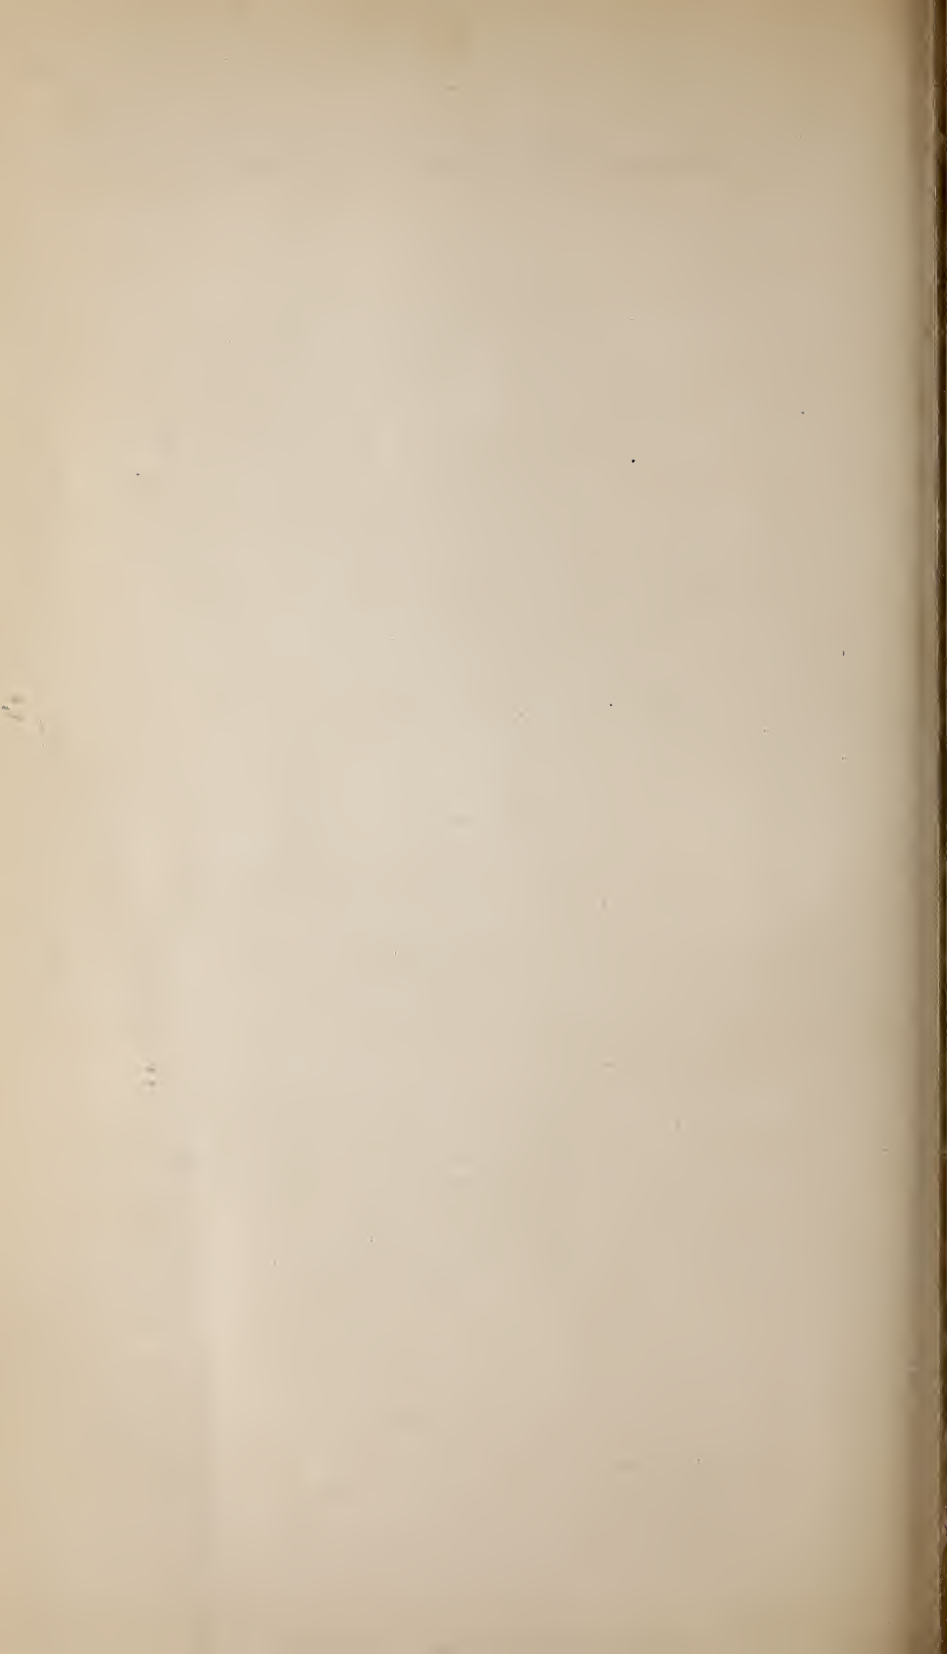

25. 115. Jonathan Grout⁵ was one of those excellent men whose character it is a privilege to contemplate. His opportunities in early life were above the ordinary. Beside learning the trade of book-binding, he acquired a good English education at the common schools in Worcester and the Academy in Leicester, and became a well-qualified and successful teacher of District Schools. So long did he continue to instruct as to acquire for life the title of Master Grout. He had like many of the race a genius for mathematics, compiled and published a School Arithmetic, which was for a time much used, and published several small devotional works of his own, calculated for the place since filled by Tracts. He settled in Millbury as a binder, and, besides carrying on the business during his life, dealt in stationery and useful books, ever observing such exact honesty as to give currency to the common saying that if all men were as good as Master Grout, there would be no need of laws. He had no ambition whatever for office, but was ever ready to aid others invested with it in performing its duties. His writings in MS., designed for no eye but his own, prove him to have been a theologian and a most attentive and discriminating hearer of sermons. He was a complete Puritan in everything except their faults, an Israelite in whom there was no guile, passing his probation under a sense of the perfect vanity of this world, and in anticipation of a better; and in his prayers and examples he has left a rich legacy to his posterity and the race. He m. Nov. 13, 1811, Sally De Wolf, from Lyme, Ct., b. March 12, 1792, d. Oct. 19, 1826, and a 2d wf. who survives; had at M.,

But for his kindness and liberality none of the race had ever seen this publication. He had, 1. Charles

July 6, 1851, a prominent and good citizen, a kind neighbor and father, a true and affectionate husband, and a judicious, industrious, conscientious and hopefully pious man; had, at Petersham,
- i. George Grout Hapgood,⁶ D. D., b. Feb. 11, 1804, who, like most superior men, had a superior mother, distinguished in her time for education and refinement, ingenuity and enterprise; and, in her latter days, for the consecration of herself to God in a profession of religion and of her children in the ordinance of baptism. Of his childhood nothing remarkable is ascertained except such a rare activity as betokened shortness of life, and which, in the confinement of a city or workshop, had proved fatal. But fortunately it was allowed full scope upon a farm, on one of the highest tables in New England, with her loftiest mountains in full view, in the very field where the human body attains its finest form and greatest vigor, and the angel of genius communicates most freely with mortals. Here he grew up and attained his majority, with no other opportunities than were afforded by district schools and a single term at Hadley Academy, working "from a sense of duty" on the farm in summers, and teaching school winters. At the age of 18 he was supposed to be in a consumption, and his attention was then first directed to the subject of religion. At the age of 21 he resolved to gratify his "insatiable longing for an education," and returned to the Academy in Hadley, where and at Amherst Academy, under able teachers, he laid the foundation of that accurate scholarship for which he is distinguished. While pursuing his studies in these institutions he taught the same school two winters in Hadley. In 1827 he taught six months in the village of Cazenovia, N. Y., where he became united with the Meth-

GOULDING.

THIS is an English name, and pronounced Goolding in distinction from Golding, a name common to the Celtic Irish. It was originally local, and borrowed from Goulding on the borders of Wales, anciently Gouldingham, derived from goal (a bound) and ham (a hamlet or town), but relieved of the last syllable before the first publication of a catalogue of English towns. It is not to be found in Domesday Book, but occurs in Rheimer's Foedera, in Burke's History of the Peerage, and on the early rolls of Parliament. Alanus de Gouldingham is mentioned in 1302; John Goldynton (Borderingtown) in 1327; and Thos. Goldyng in 1345. In 1514 John Guldon was a member of Parliament from Cornwall, and must have been a knight. In 1519, Thomas Goulding, Clerk, with the Bishop of Norwich, was appointed executor to the will of Lord Cornwallis; and Sept. 27, 1641, Edward Goulding was created a Baronet.

Of the Gouldings who early appeared in this country, was Rev. William, minister of Bermuda, who attended the Thursday Lecture in Boston, Nov. 5, 1646. Peter Goulding was of Boston in 1665. Capt. Roger Goulding, master of a vessel, was of Rhode Island in 1676, and rendered eminent services in Philip's war, in acknowledgment of which the Court of Plymouth granted him 100 acres at Pocasset, east of Mount Hope Bay. [See Drake's Book of Indians.] John Goldin was of Huntington, Long Island, 1683. Joseph and William Goulding were the same year of Graves End, L. I., and proprietors of land and stock. Jacob Goulding and wife Elizabeth had Jacob, born at Boston, Jan. 11, 1699, and are no further reported. George Goulding was of Westerly, R. I., 1738-39.

None of these, except Peter, are ascertained to have left descendants in New England, N. York or N. Jersey. If there are any, they are extremely obscure.

Circumstances favor the belief that Peter G. was the brother of the valiant Capt. Roger G. and originally from Shipdam, 6 miles from Norwich, Eng., and a descendant from Rev. Thomas G., co-executor with the Bishop of Norwich; yet nothing reliable on either point has been discovered. He settled in Boston as a sadler, where he often acted as an attorney in the Court of Sessions. No record exists of his admission to either of the churches, or to the oath of fidelity; and he must be excepted in the list of Puritans on our front title, not more for his non-profession and late arrival, than from his will and failure to impress traits of puritanism upon his descendants. He must have been, however, a man of morality and talent, and of rare enterprise and courage, and, by his marriage, connected with the aristocracy of the colony. In 1667, he was in Virginia. Oct. 21, 1670, he acted as attorney to Joseph Deakin of Boston, in a suit against Tho. Jenner, mariner, for the recovery of a negro slave, to the sale of whom, 3 years before in Virginia, he testified; and again, Sep. 10, 1672, to Henry Harris and Richard Travis, in an action against Tho. Edsell. On 1 (2) 1673, he was engaged for Edward Michelson and Mathew Bridge, who, as his assignees, had sued Thomas Edsell. [Rec. of Court of Sessions.]

Sep. 1671, in the Court of Assistants, he acted as sub-attorney unto Thomas Bullock and wife of Shipham, Norfolk Co., Eng., in a suit against John Checkley of Boston, which was carried before the Gen. C. at their session, Oct. 1672, and decided in favor of the plaintiffs. [Suf. Deeds.]

From his admission to these several Courts and the standing of some of his employers it is evident that he was for his day a real lawyer, and an advocate of ability. His chirography was without vanity, plain, and most beautiful; and must have been acquired in some favored school in England, for in style it was more than a generation in advance of that of his New England cotemporaries. But the proceedings of the Courts were not always to his mind, and he was too independent to avoid collision with their Honors. He was prosecuted and fined for charges that he had divulged against the Court and Clerk of Suffolk Co. In consequence of this, he, Oct. 18, 1681, addressed a complaint and petition to the G. C. who, instead of affording him relief, hastily sentenced him to make a public acknowledgment of his fault, to the satisfaction of the Court, or to pay a fine of £20 to the treasurer of the colony, and to stand committed until the sentence should be performed. The Court, however, as if conscious of rashness, suddenly became more tolerant, and so far satisfied with an ambiguous acknowledgment, if it was any at all, as to resolve that, "at the petitioner's request, this sentence, as to the fine and the petitioner's acknowledgment, is respite till the next General Court or Sessions that comes first." [Rec. of Mass., Vol. V. p. 330.] We hear nothing more of the case. The occurrence not improbably disgusted him into a resolve to remove from Boston, for on the 11th of April following, before the next session of the G. C., he bought of Isaac Negus of Taunton, 200 acres north of Merrimack River, on a branch of Beaver Creek. It is not ascertained that he attempted a settlement here, yet it is highly probable; and if so, that he was again induced to remove by the prevalence of witchcraft at that time among his neighbors. [Midd. D., 8, 21.]

A second attempt to settle Quinsigamond [Worcester] was undertaken in 1683, and he purchased a town right of Thomas Hall, and probably took up his residence there until the settlement was a second time broken up. By this right he at the first division of lands drew 5 planting lots of 10 acres each for a homestead, where the city of Worcester stands; and at the 2d division, 79 acres; and at the 3d, ditto. 157 acres, to which his son Palmer, in behalf of himself and two brothers, revived a claim in 1713, which was allowed. Beside his town right, he became the owner of 3,020 acres at Assanamesset [Grafton], which seems to have been included in the south part of Worcester (?) About 1694 the settlers of Worcester were again dispersed, and he appeared at Sudbury, where he died in 1703, and 11 years before the settlers were permanently established at W. Here he must have made considerable improvements, for his homestead of 70 acres, after having been 9 years abandoned to the enemy, was appraised at "£2x.", while his 3,020 acres hard by, was valued at only "£4x."

Sep. 4, 1694, he was appointed guardian of Mary Eagins or Higgins, dg. of John A. or H., late of Boston. This indicates that he had been made rectus in curia, and died in civil communion with the powers there were.

COPY OF HIS WILL.

I Peter Goulding of Sudbury, in the Co. of Mid'x, in the province of the Mass. Bay in N. E., Gent., being in good health and sound memory and understanding, do make, publish and declare this instrument written, to be my last will and testament, as First followeth. I freely and willingly yield and give up my soul unto God who gave it, trusting, hoping and praying that it may be saved in, by and through the meritorious death and passion of Jesus Christ, who died for the same, and in hopes of my resurrection unto life with him. And my body I commit unto the earth from whence it came, therein to be decently buried by my executrix herein named, the expense thereof not amounting unto more than 40s.

And my small estate y^t. God has given me I do give and bequeath as followeth:—

Unto my loving daughter Martha Smith, the wife of John Smith of Hadley, I do give one piece of eight, and do entreat her and her good husband to accept of the same, (God having given them a good estate,) who never displeased me worth the remembrance.

Unto my Elizabeth, ye wife of Wm. Jenison of Sudbury, I give 1s., or the value thereof, and no more, she having had higher keeping than the rest, and much out of my little at her marriage; and I believe and partly know from her own mouth she hath sought the ruin of me and my poor family in this life.

Unto my eldest son Windsor I do give unto and forgive and acquit him of all that he oweth me, and do request him to be contented therewith, and with what more my executrix will give him.

Unto my son John Goulding I give one piece of eight, as a token of my love, and do intreat him to accept of the same unto full contentment, and with what more his mother will give him. And God hath already given him by honest labor and means an estate surmounting mine.

Unto my sons Thomas, Peter and Palmer, I give all the real estate I shall die legally possessed of, after the decease of my executrix, unto them, each one, an equal proportion for quantity and quality, consideration being had, and unto each of their heirs forever.

Unto my daughters Sarah, Jane, Mercy, Abigail, and Arrabella, I do give unto each of them one good cow not above six years old, as each one of them shall attain the age of twenty-one years, or are married sooner with the approbation of their mother, Sarah, my executrix.

All the remainder of my estate (my just debts being first payed or secured to be paid) I give unto my loving and well beloved wife, Sarah Goulding, during her natural life; and afterward unto all or any of my sons or daughters, as unto her shall seem best to bequeath the same by will. And lastly, I do make and appoint my said wife sole executrix of this my last will and testament. In witness whereof I have hereunto put my hand and seal, on the 27th day of April, in the 2d year of the reign of our sovereign Lady of England, Queen Anne.

PETER GOULDING and a Seal.

Witnessed by Tho. and Hopestill Brown, Samuel King, and Tho. Brintnall, and probated Nov. 8, 1703.

His estate, consisting of lands all at Hassanamesset and Worcester, and the usual personal property of a farmer at Sudbury, was appraised at £265 17s. His pewter and brass furniture was valued at £10. His stock consisted of 23 swine, 3 cows, 1 heifer, 1 yoke of oxen, and 8 steers. [Mid. Prob. L. X. p. 355-7.]

He seems to have been only a sojourner at Sudbury, waiting an opportunity to reoccupy in safety his homestead at Worcester, and had already waited 9 years. During this time he probably returned to his trade, uniting therewith shoemaking; for one of his sons, who must have grown up in the interim, was early styled cordwainer, and others sadler, and his youngest resided in Sudbury as a cordwainer 20 years after the death of his father.

Peter Goulding m. Jane ———, who became the mother of 3 and probably 5 of his children; and 2d, Sarah Palmer (?), the sister of Hon. Thomas P., Esq., of Boston (?), and had,

I. Peter,² recorded in Boston without date on a list for 1665, d. yg.

4. 14. Windsor Goulding,² "sadler," settled in Boston, where, Feb. 25, 1706, he, with Ephraim Fenno, cordwainer, purchased for £75 a house lot, which they mortgaged the next year to obtain security for the payment of £100 to Paul Dudley, and soon after lifted the mortgage. [Suff. Deeds, 23, 93.] No further trace of him has been discovered. He probably went to Virginia. He had at Boston by wf. Elizabeth,
 - I. Winsor,³ July 1, 1701.
 - II. Winsor,³ March 22, 1702, [pr. 1702-3.]
15. III. Winsor,³ Oct. 11, 1704.
16. IV. Sarah,³ Oct. 9, 1706.

5. 17. Thomas Goulding,² removed to S. Carolina, where he died and administration on his estate was granted Nov. 8, 1723, to Wm. Jenison of Sudbury. His interest in lands at Worcester, drawn and to be drawn in the right bequeathed by his father, was appraised at £140. He probably left issue, as nothing indicates a division of his estate among his brothers and sisters in Mass.

7. 18. John Goulding, Capt., d. at Holliston between June 16 and Aug. 12, 1750, aged, as is supposed, about 68. He was a man of great size and almost superhuman strength and endurance; eminent for enterprise and energy, and the master-spirit of the settlement in which he spent most of his days. He was of the nobility of his time, a gentleman of many virtues, an excellent neighbor and public spirited citizen. According to tradition and circumstances, he had in early life been engaged in trade. In Dec. 1705, he was of Sudbury, where he had m. Abigail Curtis, dg. of Joseph C. by wife Abigail Grout (dg. of Capt. John G. by wf. Sarah [Busby] Cakebread), and grd. dg. of Henry Curtis "Gent." of Watertown and Sud. by wf. Mary Guy, dg. of Dea. Nicholas G. of W. She was of wealthy and respectable parentage, the niece of the valient and intrepid Ephraim C., the first planter of Worcester (see His. of W. and of Indian wars), and sister to — Curtis, who settled where Joseph C. resides in Medway. Her father, b. 1647, d. Nov. 26, 1700, leaving her three gold rings, a silver spoon, a cow and his "new grant" on the W. side of Sud. R." in S. [Mid. Prob. 10, 96-8]. This grant of 130 acres, John Goulding, yeoman, and wf. Abigail,

"living in Medfield,"* sold, Nov. 30, 1705, for £30 to Benj. Parmenter, they having been m. probably a little before and certainly between that time and the date of her father's will, Nov. 23, 1700. He soon returned to S., for Dec. 25, 1705, Eliah Adams, merchant of Boston, with his wf. Rebecca, for £110 current money of N. E., deeded "to John Golding of Sudbury, within the Co. of Middlesex, N. England aforesaid, sadler, all that tract of vacant land which he lately purchased of Dean Winthrop, late of Pulling Point [Chelsea], of 500 acres, surveyed, platted and laid out by Joshua Fisher April 1, 1659, adjacent to and in part abutting on the South [upon the] line of Medfield and a stony ridge in part, and Boggastow Brook towards the E. and S. E., and upon a pond in part toward the W., and towards the N. on a tract of vacant land therewith laid out to Francis Vernon, and return thereof made to General Court at their session Oct. 18, 1659, and by them approved and confirmed. Excepting and reserving 125 acres [now Moses Rockwood's], part of of the said tract of 500 acres, on the S. side thereof, which the said Dean W. allowed and set off to the said Josh. F. for laying out the same." May 10, 1723, for £57 he received of Wm. Rider, Jr. a deed of 50 acres of upland, with allowance for roughness, situated W. of the former W. line of Medway, which had been laid out to R. in 1716 and 1718; and $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres of meadow near Winthrop's pond, bounded S. by Benoni Learned, N. by Judge Sewell's farm, and S. W. by land that had been previously granted to him by the proprietors of Sherborn. [Mid. D., L. 22, p. 383; L. 25, p. 393.] These purchases extended his land from Bogestow brook on the E. to Chicken brook on the W. He afterwards became the owner of the land between the latter brook and the N. end of the 50 acre lot bought of Rider,—making his farm nearly four miles in length, embracing much of the very best land in H.

Upon his first purchase he settled, in the spring of 1706, and located his buildings with much taste and judgment on the S. E. side of an uplift, which bears his name, and about seventy rods E. of Winnekeening Lake. He erected one of the most elegant houses in the Colony, which stood until nearly 1800. The carving upon its fragments these eyes surveyed with wonder and admiration of a former taste. While Holliston was an integral part of Sherborn, he was rated the highest except one; was selectman 1719 and '22; town clerk 1722, and most conspicuous in accomplishing a division of the town in 1724. After this, he was appointed by the General Court as "a principal inhabitant of H." to summon the inhabitants qualified to vote, to meet for the choice of town officers. He served H. as town clerk 1724-'33, and as selectman 1724-'30, and '32, '33 and '40. He had allotted him a pew in the most honorable part of the meeting-house, and through life was treated with the highest respect, and for half a century afterwards remembered with reverence and quoted as authority.

June 16, 1750, he made his will, written by Daniel Emerson and witnessed by him, Henry Morse and Silas Pratt, giving to his wife

* As he there styled himself yeoman, he had probably purchased 101 acres of the heirs of Peter Adams, on which Joseph Curtis of Medway resides, which he sold afterwards to her brother, or he went there with his bride to pass their honeymoon with him.

Abigail, for life, an annuity of £26 13s. 4d.; to his son Curtis, £13 6s. 8d.; to his dg. Mary Foster, £93 6s. 8d., and to his son John, all his personal estate, he to pay the above named legacies; stating that he had previously disposed of his lands by deeds of gift to his sons. This will Curtis G. and Jonathan Foster, two of the heirs, contested before the Probate Court, Aug. 12, 1750, yet the judge, after the examination of the three above witnesses and many others, and receiving the written testimony of Rev. Messrs. Bucknam and Prentiss, and hearing "learned counsel on both sides," decided in favor of the will. This decision, in view of the testimony of Rev. Mr. Prentiss, who had the very best means of judging of the testator's disposing ability, appears, at this distance, truly surprising. From it the opposition appealed to Lt. Gov. S. Phipps and Council, and gave the required security to prosecute the appeal. The result has not been ascertained, but circumstances indicate that the will stood.

Capt. Goulding's widow, Abigail Curtis, made her will Aug. 10, 1761, giving to her son Curtis, 5s.; to her dg. Mary [Foster] Cook, 5s.; to her gd. dg. Abigail Goulding, 5s. and her silver cup, and to her son John, the residue of her estate. Witnesses, Silas Pratt, Joseph Curtis [pr. of Med.] and John Metcalf. Will proved Feb. 10, 1766. She d., aged probably about 84 years.

10. 19. Peter,² a blacksmith, settled first in Worcester, where, in 1718, he had occupied a 50 acre lot three years, thereby securing it as a grant from the proprietors of W. He afterwards removed to S. Carolina, leaving his other real estate in W. still undivided from his brothers. After the decease of his br. Thomas, in 1723, he appointed Palmer Goulding and Wm. Jenison his attorneys (the latter being then administrator to Thomas G.) to secure a complete division of the lands in W. bequeathed to him and his brothers Thomas and Palmer. He had, by commissioners, 125 acres laid off to him, with "1 acre allowed in every 30 for swag of chain ;" while to Palmer G. were assigned "5 ten acre lots of upland, being the first division or homestead belonging to their father." [W. Prob. X. 337.]

At Dorchester, Berkley Co., S. C., July 11, 1728, he executed, for £120, a deed to Wm. Jenison of W., innholder, of "all his right and proportions of land in W. given him in the last will of his honored father, Peter G., sometime since of Sud., deceased." [W. Deeds, XXVIII. 156.]

The Gouldings of S. C. are presumed to be descended from him, and perhaps his brother Thomas.

13. 20. Capt. Palmer Goulding of Sudbury, "cordwainer," July 17, 1722, for £75, conveyed to John Biglo of Marl., his interest in "a five ten acre lot in the N. part of Worcester, formerly George Dauson's of Boston (d)." [W. D., Vol. 22, p. 44.]

He removed, the next year, to Worcester, and, Oct. 1, 1723, for £260, conveyed to Col. Samuel Browne of Salem, 1,206 acres in the S. part of W. in four parcels. [Id., 22, 363.]

And, March 27, 1724, all his title to, "after divisions of land in the N. half of W.," to Henry Lee. [W. D.]

Nov. 2, 1728, he, for £21 5s., sold to Thomas Palmer, Esq. of Boston, 17 acres in Wor., on Millstone hill, near Bladder pond. [Id.]

He built his house in Worcester where the 4th Cong. chh. now stands, and there carried on the business of tanning, shoemaking, making malt, curing hams, &c., on an extended scale for his day. In his dwelling, Richard Rogers, in 1732, was employed by the town to keep school. Tradition represents him and his children to have been of extreme size, very ingenious, and "capable of doing any thing." As soon as the inhabitants had completed their meeting-house, he was placed on a committee to seat the meeting, and was included, with Adam Winthrop, Esq., Judge Thomas Palmer and 13 others of the aristocracy, to whom pews were allowed. In 1726 and '29, he was chosen constable; selectman in 1730, '31, and '37; treasurer in '38, and assessor in '32, '33 and '36.

April 18, 1732, he sold to Wm. Jenison, for £100, a lot of 17 acres on both sides of French R., and 47 acres on the S. bound of Wor., and 5 ten acre rights [originally his father's] in all lands yet to be laid out in the S. half of W. Jan. 16, 1729-30, he bought, for £10, of Jona. Moore a messuage of 10 acres in W.; and, Feb. 16, '33-4, another messuage of 10 acres, for £20, of Mathias Rice. He bought, July 14, 1734-5, for £20, of Benj. Gates 3 acres of meadow; and, March 25, '35, of Thomas Rice, for £18, 3 acres of do.; and of Elisha Rice of Sud., Sep. 20, '33, for £65, 4½ acres of do.; and of John Oulton of Marl., for £40, 8 acres of do. He was at the capture of Louisburg, June 17, 1745, in command of a company. Feb. 24, 1750, he, with Wm. Johnson, for £137, bought 184 acres, bounded partly on the E. by Quinsigamond Pond, "late the estate of Isaac Morse (d)." [W. Deeds, L. 30, p. 323.]

He d. at Holden, Feb. 11, 1770, aged 75, and was interred at Wor. No record exists of the settlement of his estate. Tradition says that he once visited his brother at the South, and returned horror-stricken by the cruelties of slavery, and alienated from his brother for the part he took in them. He m. at Concord, Dec. 4, 1722, Abigail Rice, who d. at Holden, Feb. 17, 1773, a. 70; had,

Y., where he contracted a consumption, and in 1838 rm. to Little Rock., Ark., where a paper gave him the following character: "His whole conduct and conversation with us was such as to leave an impression of his uncommon worth." As a man, he possessed all the ennobling traits of our nature, with but few of its frailties; as a physician, he was an ornament to his profession; as a Christian, he was sincerely pious, humble and devout. Although for many years he was the subject of deep bodily suffering, yet he was always cheerful and affable. The storms of life, which lower so fearfully over the prospects of many, and which agitate so deeply the feelings of multitudes, were all sanctified to him. With high aims he lived, and with dignified Christian composure he died. "The memory of the just is blessed."

TWITCHELL.

THIS name occurs rarely in the directories of London and Dublin; and is, doubtless, a corruption of Tuchel, an English name of local origin and high antiquity. At the introduction of the feudal system by William the Conqueror, and the division of the kingdom among his followers, A. D. 1085, 26 districts were assigned to "Alvered de Ispannia," one of which, in Devonshire, was called "Tuchel."* No local name in England, thus early introduced, has failed to fix itself upon some family. That this manor was held by the descendants of this ennobled Spaniard until the introduction of lower or sir names, and that one of his race then received his name from it, is highly probable; for, in 1309, mention is made of William Tuchel. Later than this, I have not found the name thus spelled in English history. But, in books of heraldry, occur two coats of arms—both very simple, and, therefore, very ancient; the one, "7 sheldrakes or.," and the other with "the field replenished with marlets or.," by the name of Tuchet, both Gu. Neither of these are the arms of the present Earl of Castlehaven, alias Lord Audley, whose family, for four hundred years, have spelled their names Touchet, having, probably, altered the orthography to get rid of a Saxon name, and publish a Norman French origin.† Thomas Touchet was of Whitley in the reign of Henry VII. John Touchet, as Lord Audley, received, in 1461, of Edward IV., the manor of Shere, Vachery and Cranley, in Surry, and died in 1491; but he was not the first who bore this title and had a manor. From 1405 to 1631, the family of Touchet held the baronage of Audley, which became forfeited. The title, however, has continued, or been recovered; for, in 1838, it belonged to Thickness Touchet, to which Hon. George E. Thickness Touchet was heir apparent, and, possibly, possessed of such family history as might connect the New England Twitchells with them and Alvered, the founder of the race. The manor Tuchel is supposed to be now called Twichin, a parish of Devon. The ancestor of the New England Twitchells was, no doubt, from that part of the kingdom where ancient Tuchel was situated. His name was first registered Twitchel, and his son's "Tuchel;" but afterwards, with slight variations, both modes of spelling their names were practiced indiscriminately—and, even at this day, in Dublin, the names of Twitchell and "Touchel," the name of a Huguenot, are, by the common people, invariably pronounced alike—Twitchell,—which indicates their original identity with Touchet' and Twichet'.

Joseph Twitchel, or Tuchel, the common ancestor of the race in this country, was probably from Dorsetshire, adjacent to Devonshire, as early as 1633, and perhaps 1630. He settled at Dorchester; and, being recognized as a member of some chh., was admitted to the free-man's oath May 14, 1634, and had land assigned him Feb. 18, 1635–6. On 8 (1) 1644, he or his son Joseph was admitted to the chh. of D.

1. i. Joseph,¹ who died at Dorchester 13 (7) 1657, pr. um.
2. ii. Benj.,¹ who removed from D. ab. 1663 to Bogistow, having, it is presumed, bought 100 acres of Kaine's grant, and built his house ab. 80 rods S. W. of Death's Bridge., in Sherborn, where

* "Alvered de Ispannia ht 1. mans. que vocatur Alferdintona huic ē 1 mans. que vocatur Tuchel," and in another place it is called "Tuichel," and in another, "Terra Alveredi Ispaniensis in Deven-esira."—Doomday Book.

Alvered must have been a great favorite with the Conqueror, for few had so much land assigned them. Of the 26 mansiones, (manors or estates,) 23 were in Somersetshire. Alvered de Breton, alias "de Merleberg," a Norman, and perhaps his son, had several ditto. Allotments were also made to three of his daughters, and his blood has doubtless gone extensively into the noble families of England, if it has not been upon the throne.

† As surnames were not introduced until long after the conquest, the occurrence of Touchet in the Chronicles of Normandy, and on the dubious Battle Abbey Roll, have little or no weight against the probability above suggested. Lord Audley derives his surname from Ormus Touchet, a personage of a later age.

the cellar-hole is yet to be seen. He soon after removed, and was dismissed from the chh. in Dorch. to the chh. in Lancaster. Here he is supposed either to have died, or, in 1675-6, to have been killed by Indians, and his house burnt. Immediately afterwards, his family reappeared at Sherborn, and s. in the vicinity of his former home. Joseph took possession of the 100 acres, which was afterwards sold to Samuel Morse, of Medfield. 21. 166. Eleazer Twitchell,⁶ one of the original proprietors and first settlers of Bethel, Me., removed thither in the winter from N. H., about 1780, while the wilderness around abounded with Indians, many of whom were hostile to the settlement of the whites and to the cause of the colonies then struggling for independence. This rendered the situation of Mr. T. and company peculiarly dangerous and perplexing, and required of them great caution and forbearance. Several of the inhabitants were soon seized by Indians and carried to Canada and kept as prisoners until the close of the war. Among the number was Mr. T., but through great presence of mind and determination of will he foiled the attempt of his captors and made his escape. With this exception he ever lived at peace with his Indian neighbors, won their confidence, and by his energy and perseverance contributed much to the settlement and prosperity of the place. He m. Martha Mason, b. May 28th, 1751, dg. of Moses M. of Dub. by wf. Lydia Knap, dg. of Jesse K., of Boston, and found in her a companion every way qualified to counsel, aid, and encourage him in all the trying scenes through which they passed. Her generosity, kindness, and affability secured the esteem and friendship of her Indian neighbors, and contributed much to the good understanding between the infant settlement and those with whom they mingled. They had —

176. 181. Almon Twitchell,⁷ M. D., like many of New England's sons who have attained professional eminence and elevated positions in society, was brought up on a farm, and accustomed to manual labor. His early opportunities for the acquisition of an education were confined to district schools of the humblest character and the shortest annual terms, seminaries of a higher order being then too remote and expensive for the limited means of his father. He seems therefore to have early set about educating himself, so that at the age of 18 years he commenced teaching, and made it his annual winter vocation until he commenced the practice of medicine. In Apr. 1837, he began the regular study of his profession with Dr. Ruel Barrows of Fryeburg, and continued with him for three years. In 1840 he graduated at the Medical School of Brunswick, Me., and immediately commenced practice at Paris, Me., from whence, after three years of successful labor, he removed to Bethel, his native place, where he now resides in the enjoyment of a wide practice and the peculiar confidence of his fellow-citizens. In 1856 he was elected from the Co. of Oxford to a seat in the Senate of Me. He m. Jly., 1843, Phebe M. Buxton, dg. of Capt. Jeremiah B. of N. Yarmouth, and had —

180. 198. Ozmon M. Twitchell,⁷ M. D., spent his minority with his father upon a farm, and 2 ys. afterwards at the Academy now established at B. In 1842 he began the study of medicine with his br. Almon, with whom he remained until 1846, when he graduated at the Med. School in Hanover. Since then he has resided as a practitioner at Milan, N. H., sharing largely in the confi-

His wife, Amy Perry, d. Oct. 9, 1835. Capt. T., previous to his removal to Me., kept a tavern at S., served the town as an Assessor, and had the command of her militia at the funeral of Washington. In 1816 he united with the Cong'l chh in B., with which he walked through life. He was of a philosophical turn of mind, and many years ago published the following Riddle, which has not yet received a solution:—

The Earth and the Moon travel around the Sun. If they travel one way, every time they go around the Sun there will be one day more than the Earth revolves on its axis, and one Moon more than the Moon travels around the Earth. If they travel the other way, the Earth will revolve on its axis once more than we have days, and the Moon will travel around the Earth once more than we have Moons.

QUESTION. Which way should they travel to have the extra day and extra Moon?

6. 251. Benoni "Twitchell"³ was evidently a man of character and consideration, distinguished for courage, energy, and enterprise. He was one of the 30 grantees to whom Wm. Taylor, Peter Sergeant, John Nelson, and John Danforth, heirs of Joseph Dudley, Wm. Stoughton, and Maj. Rob't Thompson, the original grantees of Oxford, conveyed that grant July 8, 1713, on condition that they settled upon it within two years, the same having been relinquished and forfeited by "the 30 French Protestant families whom they had brought over" and settled conditionally upon it. Jan. 14, 1722-3, he was styled on Oxford records Innholder ; and between Jan. 1, 1720-1, and April 15, 1740, he was largely engaged in the transfer of real estate in O. and vicinity. In 1727 he purchased of John Chandler, of Woodstock, 100 acres, containing a mansion house in Oxford village, which he had previously owned, and which, May 10, 1733, he, then living on Manchaug farm, near Oxford, sold to his son Seth, of the aforesaid place, for £40, and £120 of Seth's portion of the 100 acres. He became the proprietor of lands at Poquiog, now Athol, and July 16, 1740, for the tender love he bore towards his son Jeremiah, gave him a deed of lot No. 10, on the E. side of the river, and W. side of a highway in P. "March 8, 1744--5, Benoni T., of Thompson Parish, in Killingly, Ct., being by Divine Providence, engaged in the expedition against Cape Britton," made a "deed," or rather will, giving all his lands at Oxford, to daughters Abigail and Hannah, and after the death of his wife, Hannah, all the household goods left to her, and all his "debts, money and dues" to Seth. He lived to return to Oxford, where, May 10, 1748, he acknowledged the above named deed. Suf. Deeds, L. 27, p. 174; 39, 281; Worc. Deeds, L. 1, p. 221; 2, 70; 2, 369, 37, &c. He had

Aug. 26, 1748, he bought for £365 O. T., of John Vinton, 70 acres in Dudley, bounded on the S. by Woodstock. He subsequently lived in Sturbridge, and afterwards removed to Athol. He had

25. 281. Eli Twichell,⁵ Esq. in early life removed to Bethel, on Androscoggin R., Me., then an entire wilderness, with only ten white inhabitants. The place was still occupied by Indians. He was a man of genius, and the wants of the settlement drew it out. He became blacksmith, carpenter, cooper, watch and clock-maker, and manufacturer of all his own tools and of every article required by the farmer, mechanic or tradesman. There are still preserved in the family, many relics of his workmanship, among which are a compass and chain. He imbibed the spirit of '76, and was among the first to resist British oppression in the field, as his noble father had been in the General Court. In the battle of Bunker Hill he received a wound in his arm, which always troubled him to the day of his death. He became a member of the first court of sessions for Oxf. Co., and represented B. in the house, and Oxf. Co. in the senate of his State. He was of a kind, generous, charitable and forgiving spirit; a man of daily family prayer, an efficient supporter of an evangelical ministry, and one of the pioneers in the cause of temperance. He inherited a strong constitution, which, by regular industry and strict temperance, he preserved to the age of almost 87 years. He d. Nov., 1845.

- xi. Wm. L.,⁷ M. D., b. Feb. 17, 1825, at Bethel, Me. The first fourteen years of his life were passed in his native town, in which time he was favored with the usual advantages of common schools, and had the additional privilege of spending a few months at the Academy on Bethel Hill. In the fall of 1839 he removed, with his father's family, to Rushville, Yates Co., N. Y. The following winter he commenced attending school at the academy of that place ; and, being extremely fond of study, soon began to cherish the idea of obtaining a liberal education ; and, as a consequence, he then, and subsequently, whenever he had an opportunity to attend school, pursued a course of study preparatory to entering college. When about nineteen years old, an unfavorable combination of circumstances compelled him to relinquish his hopes of entering college. However, in the spring of 1846, being then of age, he resolved to engage in the study of medicine ; and, in the fall of that year, he returned to his native State, and soon commenced his studies under the instructions of Dr. John D. Lincoln, of Brunswick, Me. In May of 1850, he graduated at the medical school in Brunswick, and in July of the same year went to California, where for three years he devoted most of his time to gold mining, attending to the practice of medicine only when he could not well avoid it. In July of 1853 he started on his return to the Atlantic States, and arrived in New York on the 10th of August.

On the 26th of August he was married to Miss Lydia P. Russell, only daughter of Mr. Jacob Russell, of Richland, Oswego Co., N. Y. A part of the fall was spent in visiting friends in western New York and in Maine, and for the remainder of the time he was employed in a drug store in Brunswick, Me. About the first of December he went to New York, where he spent the winter, as a member of the class at the medical college on Thirtieth street, and in attendance upon clinical lectures at Bellevue hospital. On the first of March, 1854, he moved to Benton Centre, Yates Co., N. Y., where he settled and engaged in the practice of his profession, and where he still continues to reside and practice at the present time, May 18th, 1857.
