Kittery Opens Celebration Of Tercentenary

KITTERY, July 25—Ideal summer weather favored the opening of the four-day observance by Kittery of the 300th anniversary of the incorporation of Maine's first town.

Yesterday was designated as 'Open House Day' and no less than eight of Kittery's places of interest were opened to the public.

Among the places opened were the Bray house, built in 1662, believed to be the oldest house in Maine; the Lady Pepperrell mansion; Sparhawk mansion, built in 1742 by Sir William Pepperrell, hero of the Battle of Louisburg, as a present for his daughter, Elizabeth on the occasion of her marriage to Nathaniel Sparhawk, son of a Rhode Island clergyman; the Dennett Garrison house, the First Congregational church, built in 1730, the old parsonage; the John P. Benson studio and the William Dean Howells library.

The Lady Pepperrell house is now owned by the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities and has been extensively renovated since the disastrous fire of December 1945. Because of illness the Sir William Pepperrell house was not open to the public.

Today is "Governor's Day" and as a special feature, the Portsmouth Naval Base will be opened to the public. There will be an opportunity to go aboard the USS Johnston, a destroyer, and the USS Odax, a submarine, which was built here.

Friday afternoon at Traip academy field there will be a speaking program with Gov. Horace Hildreth of Maine and Gov. Robert F. Bradford of Massachusetts as the Kittery Town team, and a handicap mile run. In the late afternoon after the speaking program the two governors and other officials will visit the Naval base where a 19-gun salute will be fired in honor of the two chief executives. The party will be met by Rear Admiral John H. Brown, Jr., USN, commander.

After the customary honors they will be escorted on a tour of the base and ship by Admiral Brown and the commanding officers of the Naval shipyard, Naval Hospital, Disciplinary Barracks and the Marine Barracks.

Colonial Sunday Is Observed By Kittery Church

KITTERY, Me., Aug. 17 — The rich historical heritage of the First Congregational church in Kittery Point was vividly portrayed at Sunday's annual observance of Colonial Sunday.

The two-century-old church was nearly filled to capacity as the service in memory of Capt. William Whipple and his son, Gen. William Whipple, who was born in the Whipple Garrison house in Kittery in June 1730, and later one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Captain Whipple donated the first piece of communion silver, a cup, to the church in 1728.

General Whipple was christened in front of the church pulpit Feb. 14, 1731, by the Rev. John Newmarch, whose role was reenacted Sunday by the Rev. Roderick A. Macdonald, pastor.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham C. Alvord, in colonial costume, and their infant son, Christopher Drake Alvord, represented the Whipple family.

The first two scenes depicted the presentation of the communion cup to the church and the christening of General Whipple.

Deacons Henry Barter and John Fernald were portrayed by Selectmen Joseph W. Cutts and Reginald F. Berry, both present-day deacons.

The final scene was the reading of the Declaration of Independence by the Rev. Benjamin Stevens, D. D., second pastor of the church, who was portrayed by Mr. Macdonald. The historic document had been ordered read in each pulpit throughout the colonies.

Dudley Herbert, instructor of English at Traip academy, was

More than 50 members of the congregation were in colonial costume.

Others participating in the service were Mrs. Macdonald as Madame Newmarch; Dorothy Woods, Joanna Newmarch; Mrs. Cutts, Mistress Barter; Mrs. Berry, Mistress Fernald; Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Weners, Sir William and Lady Pepperell; Joanne Goss, Elizabeth Peperell; Harry Whenal, Charles Chauncey, and Mrs. Whenal, Madame Chauncey; Oscar T. Clark, sexton.

Hymn singing was in colonial style with the tune "lined out" by the percenter, Carroll H. Evans, organist and choir director. No instrumental music was used.

After the service a pilgrimage to the church burying ground across the street was led by the costumed choir. Mr. Macdonald conducted a memorial service at General Whipple's grave. The Whipple grave and that of Dr. Stevens were decorated by Dorothy and Hazel Jean Woods, children of Mr. and Mrs. Eldredge Woods.

Communion silver on display in front of the church pulpit, included the cup given by Captain Whipple, and other pieces presented to the church by Lady Pepperell after the death of her husband Sir William. Also exhibited was a portrait of General Whipple loaned by the school board of Portsmouth.

Kittery, Me., the historic town at the mouth of the Piscataqua river, by the sea, has in hand the preparation of an elaborate program which will be presented at its Old Home week celebration, August 16 to 22. Sunday will be a day of religious worship; Monday, a day of greeting and assignment of guests; Tuesday will be Veterans' and Military day, and a clambake, with Gov. John G. Winant as guest of honor; Wednesday, sports of all kinds; Thursday, annual meeting and field day of "Piscataqua Pioneers," a historical pageant, both afternoon and evening; Friday, no special program; Saturday afternoon, clambake at Fort McClary park. Open house, reunions, and

EARLY MAINE

A Collection of Scholarly

MAINE HISTORICAL SKETCHES, by Augusta F. Moulton; Lewiston Journal Print Shop; 293 pp.

Recent happenings have made Mr. Moulton more generally known as the donor of a beautiful union to Bowdoin, from which he graduated in 1873, than as the state historian of Maine. In the latter role, however, he has been busy quietly with a work for which students of Maine history will ever hold him in gratitude. To numerous books of local history he adds this collection of 16 sketches, dealing with widely differing phases of Maine's early history, and all bearing evidences of scholarly thoroughness supplemented by the use of the literary graces.

Some of them are addresses that Mr. Moulton has delivered upon public occasions in recent years—as at the dedication of the tablet marking the place where the famous Ranger of John Paul Jones fame was built in 1778; at the dedication of the Maine memorial at Valley Forge, where there were more than 1000 Maine men among the troops credited to Massachusetts, and at the centennial celebration of Bangor Theological Seminary.

Other articles deal with the first naval battle of the revolution, fought off the shore of Machias, June 11, 1775, and resulting in the capture of the British armed schooner, Margaretta; with the ancestry of Maine's first Governor, William King, whose father moved from Watertown to Scarborough in 1744; with the early settlements on the coast of Lincoln county, where there were colonies of French and English long before the Mayflower anchored in Plymouth harbor; with Maine as a royalist province in the century before the union with Massachusetts, and with the status of women in the early settlements.

Some of the other articles are less local in their significance—in fact not of any special Maine significance. For example, those dealing with the relation of the English Whigs to the American revolution and with Webster's famous 7th of March speech, of which the centenary is at hand. Also that studying the career and character of Anne Hutchinson, Boston's outstanding feminist of the 17th century, who is likened to Savonarola by Mr. Moulton. The volume has a foreword by Maine's most eminent contemporary newspaperman, Arthur G. Staples, and a prefatory poem, "Makers of Maine," by Frances Wright Turner of Ellsworth.

PREFACE.

Nearly ten years ago a history of old Kittery was begun by Dr. William B. Lapham, encouraged by John F. Hill, now Governor of Maine. Dr. Lapham collected much useful material and outlined some chapters of the proposed work. All his material has been utilized, but no line of this book was written by him. His arrangement and style of expression could not be made to harmonize with the author's plan and language, yet due credit is cheerfully accorded to the memory of Maine's leading local historian, whose town histories and historical essays are well known.

The death of Dr. Lapham caused his material to be laid aside a few years. About three years ago, by the encouragement of Governor Hill, the author was induced to begin anew the history of old Kittery and her families. The sources of information are sufficiently pointed out in foot-notes and the preface to the genealogical notes. The many helpers have been indicated in like manner.

This work was begun with no subscription list, and its financial success rests upon its own merits. The aim has been to write such a book as the many descendants of old Kittery families would like to read and own. Hence special attention has been given to genealogy. The location of the first settlers is also a specialty. The maps and illustrations have been prepared at great expense of labor and money, and their excellence is largely due to the Suffolk Engraving Company. With camera in hand the author rode throughout Kittery and Eliot and sailed up and down Spruce Creek and the Pascataqua. No pains have been spared to obtain historical and descriptive detail.

It is easy to be wise beyond what has been written. Old residents will note the omission of many items that they would have put in print, and doubtless some corrections and additions to the genealogical notes will suggest themselves to many readers. The author would be glad to hear from such. He has tried to avoid repetitions, to leave something to works already published, and not to weary the reader with unimportant details. Some things, that would be very interesting to the present inhabitants of Kittery, Eliot and the Berwicks, would be tiresome to the distant reader.

It is hoped that this book will be received as a welcome contribution to the history of the colonization of Maine and that somebody may be stimulated to do a better work for old York and other coast towns.

LAYING THE FOUNDATIONS.

It is not thought best to begin this history by recounting the discovery of America by the Norsemen and the early exploration of the coast of Maine. Those stories have been often told and the facts are well known. To copy or to repeat in other words what has been well written already is a disagreeable and useless task. The historian either should bring to light something previously hidden from public view, or should show the significance of events already chronicled. Much that properly belongs to the history of Old Kittery will be touched only lightly in this book for the sole reason that it has been published repeatedly. I prefer not to exhaust the subject rather than to exhaust the patience and waste the time of the reader. Yet to collect and arrange the scattered materials of history so as to indicate some logical connection may bring to the reader some pleasure and profit.

In 1620 James I. granted to forty noblemen, knights and gentlemen, styled the Council of Plymouth, a charter embracing the territory from near the mouth of the St. Lawrence River to the vicinity of Philadelphia, and through the continent from ocean to ocean. The Council granted, 10 August, 1622, to Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Captain John Mason, all the lands between the Merrimac and Kennebec Rivers, reaching sixty miles inland, with all the islands within five leagues of the shore. This tract was called the Province of Maine. In 1629 Gorges and Mason divided their grant, and on the seventh of November of that year the Council of Plymouth granted to Mason the land lying between the Merrimac and the Pascataqua, to be called New Hampshire. Capt. Walter Neal was authorized to give Mason possession.

Gorges retained the tract between the Pascataqua and the Kennebec. Minor grants were made from time to time, sometimes overlying lands previously granted. This caused uncertainty as to the rightful ownership. To more firmly secure possession where improvements had been made and where more were planned, a grant was made by the Council of Plymouth, 3 Nov. 1631. The grantees were Sir Ferdinando Gorges, Capt. John Mason, John Cotton, Henry Gardner, George Griffith, Edwin Guy, Thomas Wannerton, Thomas Eyer and Eleazer Eyer. The grant was situated on both sides the harbor and river of Pascataqua, five miles in breadth on the southwest side of the river from the sea to Edward Hilton's Plantation, and a breadth of three miles on the northeast side of the river and stretching thirty miles into the country. Only one deed from this Company is on record in Maine. It was from the Company's agent, Walter Neal, to Thomas Cammock, and the land deeded was what was afterward known as the Shapleigh farm in Eliot. Williamson says that "Neal sold all the land in Kittery between A. D. 1632-4,"¹ and bases his statement on the authority of Sullivan, who says, "All the lands in Kittery were granted in the year 1632 and from that time to 1635 by Walter Neal, who was an agent both to Gorges and Mason."² I can find no authority for these statements, while subsequent deeds given by Gorges contradict them. Those historians may have had in mind the division of property in 1633, mentioned below, but Capt. John Mason was the only one wise enough to take a deed from Gorges, to whom all this land had been originally granted. If Williamson and Sullivan simply mean that all the lands in Kittery that were sold between the years 1632 and 1635 were deeded by the agent, Walter Neal, they are probably correct, except as to the last date, for Neal returned to England in 1633; but Cammock was the only grantee whose deed is recorded. It is probable that Thomas Wannerton and Henry Jocelyn also had deeds from Neal of land adjacent to Cammock's, but there is no record in the Registrar's office.

The company of which Walter Neal was the agent and that owned land on both sides of the Pascataqua has been incorrectly called the Laconia Company in the index to the first volume of York Deeds. Laconia was the name applied to a tract on the western shore of Lake Champlain, secured to Gorges and Mason by a charter in 1629.¹ The company on the Pascataqua did not remain long in existence, and in the division of its property, 6 Dec. 1633, Newichawannock fell to Mason, to whom Gorges gave a deed, 17 Sept. 1735, "of all that part or portion of land beginning at the Entrance of Newichawannock river and soe upwards alongst the Said river and to the ffurthest head thereof and to containe in breadth through all the length aforesaid Three miles within the land from every part of the said River." This embraced all the improvements on the Newichawannock River. The deed covered a strip of land three miles broad and fifteen miles long. It reached from one quarter of a mile below Great Works River into the present town of Lebanon. The other members of the company, besides Gorges, received divisions each about three miles in breadth, along the Pascataqua, but their rights were never respected, though they sent an agent over to represent them in 1688.²

Capt. John Mason died in December, 1635, and the settlers in Newichawannock seem not to have regarded the just claims of his heirs. The town of Kittery subsequently confirmed the claims of those who had long possessed and cultivated lands. Humphrey Chadbourne and Thomas Spencer took deeds from the Sagamore Rowles, in 1643. The heirs of Mason tried to recover their property but in-vain. In 1690 they sold their claim to Samuel Allen, Esq., merchant, of London, who made a test case in an action of trespass and ejectment brought against Humphrey Spencer of Newichawannock, grandson of Thomas Spencer, in a court holden at Wells, in 1704. The suit was decided in favor of Spencer under a law of Massachusetts Bay for limitation of actions and quieting of possession. On appeal to the Court of Judicature at Boston the decision of the lower court was confirmed. Thus the heirs of Mason never realized anything from all the money and pains he expended in the settlement of what is now South Berwick.

A Short View of Mrs. Ann Mason's Case, touching her lands in New England, was presented to the General Court of Massachusetts in 1652 by her agent, Joseph Mason. Therein it is said "that the Inhabitants of Ketterie and Agamenticus taking advantage of the Death of Capt. Mason & Sr. Ferdinando Gorges, ²Maine Hist. Coll. Vol. IV., p. 320.

&c., and the absence of their heires have Devided great Quantities of the said Lands at Pascataway that lay in Comon to all the said Associates amongst 30 families of themselves many of them being the servants & children of the servants of the said Capt. Mason." It may be said in justification that after the death of Mason there was no one to pay these servants wages nor to transport them back to England. There is evidence that they were left destitute of means of support.¹ They did the only thing possible to them. They seized the lands and property of Mason at Newichawannock, and thus each became lord of his own manor. The legal claim of a distant heir, after the lapse of a score of years, had little force when opposed to the actual possession of many settlers. Mason's loss was their gain. The case was not much different after the death of Gorges. The grants he and his agents made were respected. The rest of his lands were granted by the inhabitants of Kittery to themselves.

In 1635 the Council of Plymouth surrendered its charter, and the King appointed eleven of his privy councillors as "Lords Commissioners of All His American Plantations." Sir Ferdinando Gorges was made Governor of New England, and the division belonging to him, between the Pascataqua and the Kennebec, was now called New Somersetshire. He sent his nephew, William Gorges, as governor of this province, who opened the first Court at Saco, 28 March 1636.

Charles I. gave a new charter to Sir Ferdinando Gorges, 3 April 1639. His former grant was enlarged so as to extend inland one hundred and twenty miles, and the old name, the Province of Maine, was restored. It comprised about one-sixth of the present area of the State. Thomas Gorges, cousin of Sir Ferdinando, was made Deputy Governor. He came over in 1640 and remained about three years. By him a number of land grants were made within the limits of old Kittery, but the majority of the earliest settlers all along the river seem to have been squatters, whose right to land was confirmed by the town some years later. They came over in the employ of John Winter at Richmond's Island, of Capt. Mason at Newichawannock, of Neal and others at Strawberry Bank, and of Shapleigh at Kittery Point.

Sir Ferdinando Gorges never visited his Province, on which he spent thirty years of care and twenty thousand pounds of his estate. On his death in 1647 his affairs in America were neglected. The new town of Kittery assumed that all the land within her borders belonged to her and could be given away to whomsoever she chose. The most wealthy and influential naturally got the largest grants. They have never been disturbed in their ownership, and the reason may be briefly stated.

The northern boundary of the Massachusetts Bay Company was three miles north of the Merrimac River. Here arose questions of interpretation. What was meant by the Merrimac River? its mouth? or its source? or the most northerly point of its course? The authorities of Massachusetts sent surveyors into the woods of New Hampshire, who fixed the northern boundary so as to include about all the settled portions of New Hampshire and of Maine, thus robbing the heirs of Mason and of Gorges of all their lands. Agents of Massachusetts persuaded the citizens of Kittery to accept her government in 1652 and the submission of other towns in Maine followed within a few years. But many were dissatisfied, and commissioners were sent from England to investigate rival claims. In 1677 the High Court of Chancery decided that the northern boundary of Massachusetts was three miles north of the mouth of the Merrimac. The Province of New Hampshire was given to the heirs of Capt. John Mason, and that of Maine to the heirs of Sir Ferdinando Gorges. At once the Massachusetts government purchased Maine of Ferdinando Gorges, grandson of the original grantee, for twelve hundred and fifty pounds. Thus Maine with enlarged limits remained under the government of Massachusetts till she became a separate State in 1820. The town grants of Kittery were never questioned. Indeed the Commissioners in 1652 agreed to leave them undisturbed. The titles to most of the lands held in Kittery, Eliot and the Berwicks are based upon grants from the town. The few heads of families at the time of its incorporation called themselves the original proprietors, though how they got any just title to the lands of Gorges does not appear. The lands held in common were divided among their descendants about a century later.

It would be hardly proper to publish a history of Kittery without biographical sketches of the two men who were the promoters of its settlement, notwithstanding so many excellent accounts of them have been already published. Neither Gorges nor Mason ever visited this region, according to general opinion, though it was asserted in a legal suit that they together made a voyage along the coast of Maine. Both spent many years and much money in planting colonies along the Pascataqua, and neither lived to see the fruits of his endeavors. While their associates soon became discouraged and withdrew from the enterprise, these two continued to plan and expend their money for the development of the plantations as long as they lived. Both were men of marked ability and of sterling character. Maine should honor herself by the erection of suitable memorials to Capt. John Mason at South Berwick and to Sir Ferdinando Gorges at York. The descendants of those whom these two men sent at their own expense to this country are scattered in great numbers throughout Maine and all the United States. Many of them still reside upon the lands which Gorges and Mason purchased at a great price. All such, together with the patriotic citizens of Maine, should unite to do tardy honor to the memories of these two great patriots and philanthropists.

Sir Ferdinando Gorges was the youngest son of Edward Gorges and the grandson of Sir Edmund Gorges and Lady Anne Howard. He was born in 1565, probably in Clerkenwell. He became a soldier early in life, and in 1588 was taken prisoner by the Spaniards, in the Low Countries. Three years later he was captain in the English forces sent to aid the King of France against the Leaguers. He was wounded in battle, and for gallantry and bravery was knighted by the commander of the English forces before the besieged city of Rouen, 8 Oct. 1591. In 1595 he was rewarded with the command of the Fort and also of the Isle of St. Nicholas at Plymouth, England. He held that position till 1629 with honor to himself and to the nation. It is said that the trivial circumstance of having seen some kidnapped aboriginal Americans in Plymouth first interested him in colonization schemes and so changed the tenor of his life. He formed the acquaintance of the leading men interested in the same subject. In 1629 he resigned his post at Plymouth and retired to Ashton Phillips, in Somersetshire, where he devoted the remainder of his life to the furthering of his plantations in Maine. He wrote a narrative of the efforts of himself and his associates, which was published after his death. He was specially interested in the colony at York, first called Gorgeana, which was chartered as a city. Here lived two near relatives of his own name as Deputy Governors. A mere accident prevented him from executing his plan of visiting his Province of Maine. He died 14 May 1647.

Capt. John Mason was son of John Mason of King's Lynn, Norfolk County, England, who married Isabel Steed. He was baptized 14 Dec. 1586. There is some evidence that he was for a time a student at the University of Oxford. He married, 29 Oct. 1606, Anne, daughter of Edward Greene, of London, goldsmith. He became a captain in the English Navy and commanded an expedition to the Hebrides in 1610, the expense of which he paid and was never reimbursed. He then became Governor of Newfoundland, where he remained about six years. He made a survey and map of the island and wrote "A Brief Discourse of the Newfoundland," which was printed in 1620. In 1626 he was made Treasurer and Paymaster of the English armies employed in the wars with France and Spain. In 1634 he was appointed captain of the South Sea Castle, at Portsmouth, England. He was already Vice-President of the Great Council for New England. When Sir Ferdinandio Gorges was made Governor of New England, Mason was chosen as Vice-Admiral. All these offices show the esteem in which he was held and his executive ability. His relation to the plantations in Maine and New Hampshire are incidentally set forth elsewhere in this book. He died in December, 1635, and was buried, probably in Westminster Abbey. From his only child, Anne, who married Joseph Tufton, there are descendants living in America. He is justly styled the founder of New Hampshire. He might also be called, and more precisely, the Founder of the Berwicks, Maine. He was a Churchman, and hence was spoken of slightly by Winthrop and the Puritans of Massachusetts, but the Bay State can boast of no nobler founders than Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Capt. John Mason, wise, able, patriotic, self-sacrificing, and not without the religious spirit, as their letters and acts testify. It is time for the sons of Maine and of New Hampshire to quit singing the praises of the Puritan Fathers, who were not their fathers, and to magnify the deeds and characters of the great men who gave them "a local habitation and a name."¹

EARLIEST SETTLERS.

The honor of having first seen the shores of the Pascataqua is, doubtless, due to Martin Pring, who in 1603, sailing in the Speedwell and the Discoverer, coasted along the shores of Maine from the Penobscot and sailed up a river three or four leagues, probably to Quamphegan Falls. Particular mention was made, in the narrative of the voyage, of the beautiful groves and sundry sorts of beasts they saw, but no natives were seen to traffic with and so their stay was brief. They did not find, either, the medicinal sassafras of which they were in search. In 1614 Capt. John Smith of Pocahontas fame touched at a group of islands which he named for himself, the Smith Isles, but which somehow got the name, Isles of Shoals, as early as 1630, and have retained it. He, too, probably carried away some report of the river and its wooded banks. The fishermen learned earlier than we know that there was good fishing near the mouth of the Pascataqua, and the islands were manned, if not inhabited, when the mainland had only a few scattered settlers. For many years no woman was allowed to be a resident there.

There is no historical record of any settler at the mouth of the Pascataqua earlier than 1623. There is an indenture, dated 14 Dec. 1622, between David Thomson of Plymouth, England, and three merchants, Abraham Colmer, Nicholas Sherwill, and Leonard Pomery, which recounts that the Council for New England had granted six thousand acres of land to Thomson, 16 Oct. 1622. There has been found in the Public Record Office in London a Patent to David Thomson and two others "for a pt of Piscatawa river in New England." This shows that the name of the river was well known in London in 1622, and that probably David Thomson had visited it. The point in the river may have been that which for some unexplained reason only a few years later was called Thompson's Point. The grant seems to have been an infringement upon that of Gorges and Mason, made two months earlier. This may be a reason why Thomson did not remain long.⁸ The early accounts all call him a Scotchman, but the indenture names him as of Plymouth. His marriage to Amias Cole was recorded at Plymouth, 13 July 1613. He came over in 1623 and built a house at "Little Harbor," now Rye, N. H. The spot has been located at Odiorne's Point. Some say it was a stone house, afterward called Mason Hall. Only three or four companions came with him and the building of such a house as the first one in a wilderness was difficult if not improbable. Others think that the stone house may have been built later by workmen sent over by Mason. At any rate Thomson had a house of some kind and lived in it till 1626, when he moved to an island in Boston Harbor, which has since borne the name, Thompson's Island.⁹ This had been granted to him by the Council at the same time with the six thousand acres. He died soon ⁸The General Court granted the above mentioned island to John, son of David Thomsen, 10 May 1648. It is probable that he became of age a little before that time. In the first volume of Suffolk Deeds, under date 27 (2) 1650 is found the following: "John Thompson of London acknowledged himself indebted to Joseph Jackson & Hugh Browne of Bristol mercht in the sume of one hundred & sixty three pounds six shillings to be pd to them or theire Assignes in merchantable Codd fish at price current at Marble heade or Isle of Shoales at or before the last of may 1651, at the rate of 30 Ryals p Kint binding himselfe Execut & administrators for pformance, & in speciall his Island called Thompsons Island by way of Mortgage, with warrantee to make good the mortgage, dat 18 (2) 1650 & acknowledged 26 (2) 1650 before Increase Nowell

John Thompson & a scale,

Though said to be of London John Thompson was still in Boston and planned to deliver goods at the Isle of Shoals the following year. The Court Records of York County show that "John Tomson" was plaintiff and Thomas Withers defendant in a suit in 1650. Nicholas Frost was attorney for Tomson. The same year Francis Champernowne brought action against John Tomson for taking away a boat. The case was arbitrated. This may have been the son of David Thomson. There are those who declare that he died in obscurity in Greenland, N. H., and that descendants are now living. His half-sister, Mary Maverick, married, 8 Dec. 1655, John Palgrave; and second, 20 Sept. 1660, Francis Hooke, the magistrate of Kittery Point. It would not be strange if John Thompson lived in the vicinity. A John Thompson is mentioned in N. H. Court Records in 1660 and was a juryman, 10 July 1671. He seems to have been of Portsmouth. For all that is known about David Thompson see Proceedings of Mass. Hist. Society, 1876, pp. 358-371.

after, leaving an infant son, John, and widow, who married Samuel Maverick of Noddle's Island, or East Boston.

Little is known about David Thomson's stay in New Hampshire. He was visited by Capt. Christopher Levett in 1623. When Walter Neal arrived in 1630 as the agent of Gorges and Mason, no rights of Thomson were recognized. He probably left because he learned that an earlier patent covered his possessions. His place could not have been much more than a fishing station, and his nearest and, so far as is known, only neighbors were ten miles or so up the river, at a place afterward called Dover Neck, where Edward Hilton and his brother William settled in 1623. If there were any fishermen's huts built on the eastern shore of the Piscataqua before 1631, there is no record of the fact. To be sure Williamson says, "Mention is also to be made at this time of the settlements commenced on the northerly banks of the Piscataqua and the river above. These were at Kittery Point, at Spruce Creek, at Sturgeon Creek (Eliot), at Quampeagan Falls (or the Parish of Unity), and the ancient Newichawannock (or Berwick), some or all of which were seven years of age in 1631, being collectively called the Plantation of Piscataqua."¹ He offers no authority for the statement. None has been found. I have not been able to discover any evidence whatever that there was a single settler within the bounds of old Kittery before 1631, unless it were William Hilton, who planted corn in Eliot at an early date. This fact will be mentioned later.

About the first of June, 1630, Captain Walter Neal arrived at Little Harbor, or Piscataqua, as it was often called, as Governor of Mason's Province. He found but few to govern. Ambrose Gibbons came at the same time as factor, or general manager of the plantation. Not all had forsaken the place with Thomson, and some servants came with Neal. He occupied the house left vacant by Thomson, and after three years returned to England. In 1631 came other servants and agents, among them Humphrey Chadbourne as chief carpenter. He built the Great House at Strawberry Bank, now Portsmouth. Capt. Thomas Cammock probably came with Chadbourne, the same who afterwards settled at Black Point, in Scarborough, but earlier may have lived in Eliot. Depositions indicate that Thomas Withers, Thomas Spencer, and Thomas Crockett came in 1630 or 1631.

The plantation at Newichawannock was begun probably in 1631. Ambrose Gibbons had charge. Mason and others wrote to him under date 5 Dec. 1632, "We praie you to take care of our house at Newichewanick, and to look well to our vines; also, you may take some of our swine and goates, which we pray you to preserve." This implies that a house had been built some time before and vines planted. Here trade was carried on with the Indians, who sometimes came to the number of one hundred. A deposition shows that a piece of land was purchased of the Indians. It probably lay on both sides of the little Newichawannock River, called by the natives Assabenbeduck, and now known as the Great Works River. July 13, 1633, Gibbons wrote to Mason that Thomas Wammerton had charge of the house at Pascataqua or Little Harbor and had with him William Cooper, Ralph Gee, Roger Knight and wife, William Dermit and one boy. Not a large colony, but Neal had been ordered previously to dismiss his household and return to England for consultation. With Gibbons at Newichawannock there were his wife and daughter Rebecca, who later became the wife of Henry Sherburne, Charles Knil or Neal, Stephen Kidder or Teddar, Thomas Clarke, and Thomas Crockett, who is sometimes miscalled Crockwood. Gibbons was then planning to withdraw from the service of Mason and to settle at "Sanders Point," near Portsmouth. He frees his mind a little in this letter to Mason. "You complain of your returnes; you take the coorse to have little. A plantation must be furnished with cattle and good hire-hands, and necessities for them, and not thinke the great lookes of men and many words will be a means to raise a plantation. Those that have been heare this three year, som of them have neither meat money nor cloathes—a great disparagment. I shall not need to speak of this; you shall hear of it by others. For myself, my wife and child and 4 men, we have but $\frac{1}{2}$ a bb. of corne; beefe and pork I have not had, but on peese this 3 months, nor beare this four months, for I have for two and twenty months had but two barrells of beare and two barrells and four booshel of malt; our number commonly hath bin ten. I nor the servants have neither money nor clothes." No wonder that agents put on such short rations of beef, pork and beer should seek other employment, and that servants without either money or clothes should help themselves to Capt. Mason's belongings soon after the news of his death reached them.

In 1634 the prospect brightened. The Pied Cove, that had made one or two trips before, came again with more live stock for the plantation. It brought also to Ambrose Gibbons "one hogshhead of malt to make you some beare." His lamentation had not been unavailing. Mason wrote to Gibbons that stockings, suits of clothes, sugar, raisins, wine, and other good things had been sent, and no satisfaction had been received therefor. He says, "I have disbursed a great deal of money in ye plantation, and never received one penny." The agent had sent back to England some furs and quantities of stone taken from about a mile below the Great House at Strawberry Bank, supposed to contain iron.

COW COVE AND THE OLD WARREN FARM.

The Pied Cove arrived 8 July 1634. On the 13th "she cast anchor some halfe a mile from the falle; the 18th day the shippe unladen; the 19th fell downe the river; the 22d the carpenters began about the mill; the 31th of August the iron stone taken in the ship." So wrote Gibbons to Mason. The vessel brought a fine breed of cattle, imported from Denmark. The place where they landed, half a mile below the falls, is known as Cow Cove unto this day. The carpenters who came over to build the mills were James Wall, William Chadbourne and John Goddard. These were the first mills erected in New England, to be run by water, though there were windmills for grinding corn in Newtown, now Cambridge, and in Plymouth a year or two earlier. Winthrop records that on the 18th of October, 1632, "Captain Canmoock and one Mr. Godfrey, a merchant, came from Piscataquack in Captain Neale his pinnace and brought 16 hogs heads of corn to the mill."¹ This was a long way to carry a grist. Wall, Chadbourne and Goddard came under a contract to work for Mason for five years,² after which they were to have fifty acres of land on lease for the term of three lives, paying an annual rent of three bushels of corn. Mason's idea was to have a great estate or manor after the style of English lords, and to rent land to tenants. This is the reason, probably, why so few of those persons sent over by him settled in the vicinity of Newichawannock. They could get independent ownership of lands elsewhere for a small price. It was some time after Mason's death before squatters were bold enough to build houses for themselves upon Mason's lands. Then those who could took deeds from Indian chiefs and as soon as possible had their claims confirmed by the town.

A deposition of James Wall is of sufficient interest to warrant its being printed again. "The deposition of James Wall, taken the 21 of the 3 month 1652. This Deponent sayeth that aboute the year 1634, he with his partners William Chadbourne and John Goddarde, came over to New England upon the accompt of Capitaine John Mason of London, and also for themselves, and were landed at Newichawannock upon certaine lands there which Mr. Gileslem [Henry Jocelyn] Capitaine Mason's agente brought April 14. 1653. Joseph Mason brought action, in Norfolk County Court, against John Goddard "for breach of covenant in not building a saw mill and a corne mill and keeping the same in repayer and worke the full time of five years next after his arrivell and for not contineweing in ye worke of ye sd covenant as doth more att large apperre. them unto, with the ladinge of some goodes, and there they did builde upp at the fall there (called by the Indian name Asbenbedick) for the use of Captaine Mason and ourselves one sawe mill and one stampinge mill for corne wch we did keep the space of three or foure years next after; and further this deponent saith, he built one house upon the same lands, and soe did William Chadbourne an other & gave it to his sonne in law Thomas Spencer who now lives in it; and this deponent also saith that we had peaceable and quiete possession of that land for the use of Captaine Mason afforesaid, and that the said agente did buy some planted ground of some of the Indians which they had planted upon the saile land, and that Captaine Mason's agente's servants did break up and clear certain lands there and planted corne upon it and all this is to his best remembrance.

George Smyth."

The following deposition locates precisely the mills built by Mason:

"The deposition of Jeames Johnson, aged 50 years, or thereabouts; this deponent saith, that upon the steep fall beyond Thomas Spencer's house, there stood part of a Mill wch was said to be Capt. Mason's 16 years since, to the best of my remembrance & farther saith not.

"Taken before me the last of May, 1652.

Tho. Wiggin."

Henry Jocelyn became Governor of Mason's plantations after the departure of Walter Neal, and he declares that he had a grant of land on the east side of the Pascataqua, together with Thomas Wannerton and Capt. Thomas Cammock. He removed to Black Point soon after the death of Mason and became one of Deputy Governor Thomas Gorges' Councillors.

It is said that Humphrey Chadbourne succeeded Gibbons as steward at Newichawannock, but on what authority I know not. In 1638 Francis Norton of Charlestown, Massachusetts, was appointed by Mrs. Ann Mason as her agent for the management of all her property in America. After two years he departed from the Pascataqua and is said to have driven to Boston a hundred head of cattle.¹ The servants were left to shift for themselves, and Francis Small deposed, 8 Sept. 1685, that after Norton had left the place "the other servants shared the residue of the goods and stock among them, which was left in that and the other plantations, and possessed themselves of the houses and lands." Certain deponents testified that Norton's driving away of the cattle was about 1645, but it was probably earlier, for Humphrey Chadbourne took a deed of Sagamore Rowles in May, 1643, and he would not be likely to do this before Mrs. Mason's agent had relinquished the plantation.

PIPE STAVE LANDING.

The Names of Stewards and Servants sent by John Mason, Esq., into this Province of New Hampshire.

Feb. 13, 1652. Joseph Mason was plaintiff in an action, in Norfolk County Court, against Francis Norton "uppon accompt, for ye number of three and twenty head of cattell great and small, wch ye sayd Norton did receive from ye hands of Mr. Henry Jocelin our agent. * * * * as also other goods as milestones amounting to ye value of 30 pounds or 40 pounds sterling, as also for selling ye cattell of ye lands whereby we were displanted off our stock to our great damage." The plaintiff withdrew his action. This looks as though Norton immediately succeeded Henry Jocelyn.

Under this heading the New England Historical and Genealogical Register published in 1848 the following names. It is said to be a copy of an old document. The origin of the document is not stated. There is good reason to believe that the list is reliable. It has been published many times, with some variations in the spelling.

Walter Neal, Steward,	Thomas Chatherton,
Ambrose Gibbins, Steward,	John Crowther,
Thomas Comoock,	John Williams,
William Raymond,	Roger Knight,
Francis Williams,	Henry Sherburn,
George Vaughan,	John Goddard,
Thomas Wonernton, Steward,	Thomas Furnold,
Hinry Jocelyn, Steward,	Thomas Withers,
Francis Norton, Steward,	Thomas Canney,
Sampson Lane, Steward,	John Symonds,
Reginald Furnald, Chirurgion,	John Peverly,
Ralph Gee,	William Seavy,
Henry Gee,	Henry Langstaff,
William Cooper,	William Berry,
William Chadborn,	Jeremy Wolford,
Francis Matthews,	James Wall,
Humphrey Chadborn,	William Brockin,
William Chadborn Jr.,	Thomas Walford,
Francis Rand,	Thomas Moor,
James Johnson,	Joseph Beal,
Ant. Ellins,	Hugh James,
Henry Baldwin,	Alexander Jones,
Thomas Spencer,	John Ault,
Thomas Furrall,	William Bracket,
Thomas Herd,	James Newt,
Eight Danes,
Twenty Two Women,

Letters and papers reveal other names that should be added to the list. They are Thomas Blake, Thomas Clarke, Thomas Crockett, William Dermitt, Stephen Kiddar or Teddar, and Charles Knill or Neal.

The eight Danes, according to the deposition of Francis Small, were sent "to build mills, to saw timber, and tend them, and to make potashes." Their names are nowhere given, and whether they remained in New England or not is uncertain. A tradition, recorded among the papers of Hon. Mark Dennett, says three of them were "Bensore,¹ Miller and Peterson."

How much we would give to know the names of the twenty-two women! One was the wife of Ambrose Gibbons, another the wife of Roger Knight. Another wife is mentioned in a letter, whose is not declared. It seems that all the rest became wives very soon after their arrival, for Gibbons wrote to Mason, 6 Aug. 1634, "a good husband with his wife to tend the cattle, and to make butter and cheese will be profitable; for maids they are soone gonne in this countrie." There were no long courtships. Delays were dangerous. The proposal was, doubtless, made at first sight. The women stepped from the deck of the Pied Cove into a log cabin, after short ceremony before some Justice of the Peace, perhaps the Governor. There was no minister to tie the knot in those earliest days. "Little Beck" Gibbons, as she is lovingly called in letters, was the only child in the settlement. The women came not merely to keep house and play the lady. They helped to clear and plant the ground, and to build the cabin.

About the men named in the list something more definite is known, and the reader may be interested if the scattered notices are brought together.

CAPT. WALTER NEAL had been a soldier for some time before coming to Pascataqua in 1630. He was Governor of all New England east of Massachusetts, though he had but few people to govern. He built the earliest fortification on Great Island, now Newcastle, N. H. On his return to England in 1633 he was made Captain of the London Artillery Company, which office he retained till 1637. There is some trace of him at Plymouth, England, in 1630. Nothing is known of his origin, family, or subsequent career. A Walter Neal, born 1633, is mentioned often as living in Greenland, N. H., from 1653 to 1702, from whom there are many descendants.

AMBROSE GIBBONS first comes to view as Steward of Mason at Newichawannock, though it has been asserted that he began a settlement at Cape Ann in 1621. In 1634 land was granted to him at Sanders Point, between Little Harbor and Sagamore Creek. He soon moved to Oyster River, afterward Durham, N. H. He is mentioned as a Captain in 1642. He was one of the Selectmen of Dover in 1647 and 1648. He died 11 July 1656. His wife's name was Rebecca. She died 14 May 1655. Their only child, Rebecca, married, 13 Nov. 1637, Henry Sherburn. She died 3 June 1667. He was an honest, capable, and faithful steward, and knew better than his employer what the plantation needed.

CAPT. THOMAS CAMMOCK was a nephew of the first Earl of Warwick. He was sent out "for discoverie." Neal deeded him a lot in Eliot that became the Shapleigh homestead. In 1631 he had from the Council of Plymouth a grant of Black Point, in Scarborough, where he made his home. He died in 1643 while on a visit to Barbadoes. About all his property he willed to his intimate friend, Henry Jocelyn, who married his widow Margaret.

WILLIAM RAYMOND is unknown. John Raymond was purser of the Pied Cow. This suggests a possible error in the first name.

FRANCIS WILLIAMS is called Governor of the Province of Mason in 1640. He made an agreement with Sir Ferdinando Gorges, in 1635, to plant a small colony on six thousand acres of land in any place he might choose. He selected lower Kittery, which was sold to Francis Champernowne. Instead were deeded to Francis Williams and wife Hellen one thousand acres in the northern part of what is now Eliot. Hubbard says that he died at the Barbadoes soon after 1640. He brought with him to the Pascataqua eleven persons.

GEORGE VAUGHAN remained but a short time in the Province. He started for England in 1634 and arrived the following year. Nothing more is known of him.

THOMAS WONERTON or WANNERTON had charge of the house at Strawberry Bank till about 1644, when according to the deposition of Francis Small he carried "quantities of goods and arms belonging unto Mason's Plantation and sold them unto the French that did inhabit Port Royal." He had a grant of land next to Cammock's. He was killed in an attack upon a house on the Penobscot in 1644. Winthrop says he had "been a soldier many years and lived very wickedly." He should not be confused with the partner of Gorges and Mason, who bore the same name. The Court Records of New Hampshire say that on the fifth of the fifth-month, 1643, Thomas Wannerton "for striking his wife with a stoole was admonished not to do soe any more." His widow, Ann, married Thomas Williams of Portsmouth and in 1670 brought action against Richard Cutt for refusing to let them have the third of a house and land which was her former husband's. The verdict was for the defendant.

HENRY JOCELYN was son of Sir Thomas Jocelyn, born about 1611. Soon after Mason's death he removed to Black Point, Scarborough, and was a Commissioner under Deputy Governor William Gorges, attending the first court held 25 March 1636. He may have served as agent for the company till 1638. In such a capacity he signed a lease in 1637. He declares he had a grant on the Pascataqua, together with Cammock and Wannerton. We read of "Watts' Fort alias Point Joslain" in the first book of Town Records, p. 66. He married the widow of Capt. Thomas Cammock and received in Cammock's will the estate at Black Point. It has been said and disputed that being driven away by Indians he went to Pemaquid, where he died in 1683. He was a man of high character and always held responsible positions in the government of the Province.

FRANCIS NORTON was an inhabitant of Charlestown, Mass., in 1637. He acted as Mrs. Mason's attorney and agent after 1638. He became a member of the church at Charlestown, 10 April 1642. His sympathies were with the government of Massachusetts, and he is charged with having connived with its encroachments for his own private ends. Mason's storehouse at Newichawannock was burned in 1645, and it may have been then that Norton drove away the hundred cattle to Boston and sold them for about twenty-five pounds apiece.

SAMPSON LANE succeeded Wannerton as steward at Strawberry Bank in 1644. He remained three years and returned to England. None of these ten Governors and

REGINALD or RENALD FERNALD was the surgeon or physician of Mason's Colony. He lived at Strawberry Bank, and died in 1656 on Pierce's Island and was buried, it is said, at the Point of Graves in Portsmouth. His wife's name was Joanna. She died in 1660. One who has given much study to the genealogy of the Fernald family has told me that the descendants of Reginald Fernald number fifty thousand.

RALPH and HENRY GEE. A deposition of Henry Langstaff, about 1699, states that Ralph Gee kept the cattle of Mason and was also employed in making staves, etc. He lived in the stone house at Little Harbor, probably after the departure of Mason's agents. He was given a plantation adjoining, and at his death in 1645 William Seavey, to whom Gee was much indebted, got possession of said plantation, and Joseph Mason, in 1660, gave Seavey a quit claim deed of it. The name Gee is still found in Maine.

WILLIAM COOPER. Hubbard says that one Cooper of Pascataqua was drowned in December, 1633. It was probably William. The Coopers of Berwick are descended from Alexander Cooper, who, according to tradition, was one of Mason's company and landed the first cow at Cow Cove.

WILLIAM CHADBOURNE was one of the millwrights and carpenters who came in 1634 to build the mills at Newichawannock. His son HUMPHREY came before him, in 1631, and built the Great House at Strawberry Bank. WILLIAM JR. lived in Portsmouth. He had wife Mary and daughter Mary, who married John Fost. Humphrey Chadbourne settled at Newichawannock and was one of the leading citizens in the town of Kittery.

FRANCIS MATTHEWS received from Richard Vines, Henry Jocelyn, and Thomas Wannerton, 1 Oct. 1637, a lease of a hundred acres of land for a thousand years, "on the north west side of the great Island, commonly called Muskito Hall." He signed the Exeter Combination in 1640. He bought land at Oyster River of William Hilton, 7 July 1641. He lived at Durham Point. He died in 1648 and his widow Thomasin after 1684. They had three children, BENJAMIN, who had a grant in 1654 and was taxed, 1661-8, in Dover. His son Francis married, 23 Feb. 1691-2, Ruth Bennet. WALTER, taxed in 1668. He had wife Mary and died in 1678, leaving children, Samuel, Susanna Young and Mary Senter. MARTHA, who married a Mr. Snell and second a Mr. Browne. The descendants of Francis Matthews write their name Mathes.

FRANCIS RAND, born 1616, was a juryman at Portsmouth in 1656. He was killed by Indians 29 Sept. 1691. His wife was also killed by Indians while her husband was gone to mill. His will, dated 31 Dec. 1689, names wife Christian, sons Thomas, John, Samuel and Nathaniel, and daughters, Sarah Herriek and Mary Barnes. A son Francis, born 1650, was living in 1669. His son John, born 1645, married Remembrance, daughter of John Ault of Oyster River.

JAMES JOHNSON, born 1602, signed a petition from Bloody-Point in 1643, was ferryman in 1648, and had a part in the distribution of land in Portsmouth in 1657. Widow Mary Johnson was living in Portsmouth in 1678. There are many Johnsons in Kittery and vicinity, and the name James occurs frequently.

ANTHONY ELLINS was constable in Portsmouth in 1655 and was living there in 1678. He died soon after this, and the inventory of his estate mentions "3 Bibles and ten other books;" also "Anthony Ellins Island." The total estate was valued at £375. The inventory of his widow Abigail is dated 8 Sept. 1681 and mentions a house on Great Island which she "brought with her when she married said Anthony." There is no record of any children.

HENRY BALDWIN. Unknown.

THOMAS SPENCER was born in England in 1596, and is said to have come over in 1630. He married Patience, daughter of William Chadbourne. He was a planter, lumberman and tavern-keeper at Berwick. A large number of descendants perpetuate an honored name. He died 15 Dec. 1681, and his wife in 1683.

THOMAS FURRAL, unknown.

THOMAS HERD, unknown. There was a John Heard in Dover and another in Kittery in very early days.

THOMAS CHATHERTON, unknown. Michael Chatterton signed the grant of the Glebe in Portsmouth, in 1640. The Court ordered, 26 May 1646, "that good wife Chatterton shall go to her husband before ye 20th of ye next month: if she will not goe, to make a warrant to send her by the Marshall."

JOHN CROWTHER signed the grant of the Glebe in Portsmouth in 1640. In 1648 he deeded to Ambrose Lane land near his dwelling house. In 1656 "the houses and land and the Island which was formerly possessed by John Crowder" were granted to John Jackson.

JOHN WILLIAMS, unknown. There were plenty by the name of Williams, in the early days, both in Kittery and at Oyster River.

ROGER KNIGHT, born 1596, bought land in Portsmouth of Thomas Wannerton 4 Jan. 1643: was of Portsmouth in 1667. Had wife Anne in 1652. A daughter, Mary, married John Brewster, according to Savage.

HENRY SHERBURN, born 1612, came in the ship James, arriving 12 June 1632, in eight weeks from London. He married, 13 Nov. 1637, Rebecca, daughter of Ambrose Gibbons. She died 3 June 1667 and he married second, Sarah, widow of Walter Abbot. His home was on Great Island and in Portsmouth. He was church warden in 1640 and died in 1680. His descendants are many.

JOHN GODDARD came as a millwright in 1634. He had a lot on Dover Neck in 1648. Was made freeman of Dover in 1653. In 1669 he sold land at Oyster River to William Williams. The inventory of his estate is dated 12 Nov. 1660. Widow, Welthea, married John Symonds. She was born in 1621 and was living in 1703. John Goddard's children were JOUN, born 1621, probably unmarried, came to an "untimely death" about 1674; BENJAMIN, living in 1672; DAUGHTER, who married John Gilman; DAUGHTER, who married Arthur Bennet; DAUGHTER, who married James Thomas. A daughter, MARTHA, perhaps one of these, married Elias Crichtett. The Goddard name is spread widely through Maine and New Hampshire.

THOMAS FERNALD, supposed to have been a brother of Dr. Reginald. Nothing is known of him.

THOMAS WITHERS was born in 1606, as a deposition shows. He had from Sir Ferdinando Gorges four hundred acres in Kittery, directly opposite the city of Portsmouth, and eight hundred acres more at the head of Spruce Creek. He was a Commissioner in 1644, Deputy to General Court in 1656, and prominent in the affairs of the town. His wife's name was Jane. He died in March or April, 1685, and his widow married William Godsoe in 1691 and was living in 1703. Three daughters, SARAH, married John Shapleigh about 1673; MARY, married Thomas Rice about 1675; ELIZABETH, married (1) Benjamin Berry, 27 Nov. 1688, (2) Dodavah Curtis before 1702.

THOMAS CANNEY bought land of Capt. Wiggin in Dover in 1634. He was living in 1671, and had second wife, Jane, in 1655. He lived on the Pascataqua shore of Newington. Children were THOMAS, born before 1645, married Sarah, daughter of Anthony Taylor of Hampton. She married (2) John Wingate. JOSEPH, married Mary Clement. DAUGHTER, married Henry Hobbs. MARY, married Jeremy Tibbetts.

JOHN SYMONDS came in 1634 and was in the employ of John Winter in 1636. He was appointed, before 1652, to lay out lands in Kittery. Was Selectman in 1659. Had a town grant in 1661, near Boiling Rock, but had lived a little above that point from 1640. His second wife was Welthea, widow of John Goddard. A daughter, Rebecca, by first marriage, married William Hilton of Exeter. Symonds was a juryman in Dover in 1672.

JOHN PEVERLY was a resident of Portsmouth in 1678. Thomas Peverly was a land-owner in Portsmouth in 1657; and married Jane, daughter of Thomas Wolford, and had children, John, Thomas, Lazarus, Samuel, Jeremiah, Sarah and Martha Noble.

WILLIAM SEAVEY, aged about 75 years, deposed, 3 Sept. 1676, that he came as a fisherman to the Isles of Shoals "about a year before Capt. Neale went from this country for England." He came, then, in 1632. He was constable at the Isles of Shoals in 1656 and a Selectman in Portsmouth in 1657, where he was living in 1682. He had a grant of 50 acres in what is now Rye, N. H., in 1652 and bought land there, in 1669, of Jane Drake, widow of William Berry. This land is still owned by Seavey's descendants. His wife's name is thought to have been Mary. His children were WILLIAM, b. 1649; JOHN, b. 1650., m. 29 July 1686, Hannah Philbrick, widow of Joseph Walker, and moved to Bradford, Mass.; ELIZABETH, b. 1652, m. (Philip) Odiorne; and STEPHEN, m. Anne ———.

HENRY LANGSTAFF was living at Bloody Point in 1643, and was Selectman in Dover in 1651 and several times thereafter. Pike, in his Journal, says that he died 18 July 1705, nearly one hundred years old. He had a son Henry, mentioned in 1698 and 1713. A son John removed to New Jersey about 1667. A daughter, Sarah, married Anthony Nutter. Another daughter, Mary, married Eleazar Coleman.

WILLIAM BERRY is said to have been the first settler at Sandy Beach, in Rye, N. H. He signed the Gilebe conveyance in 1640 and died about 1654. His widow, Jane, married Nathaniel Drake. Children were JOSEPH, mariner of Portsmouth, married Rachel—bought half an acre of land of Withers in Kittery in 1683; JOHN; JAMES, had grant in Kittery in 1673; WILLIAM; ELIZABETH married John Locke about 1652.

THOMAS WOLFORD was the first settler of Charlestown, Mass. He removed to Portsmouth and, it seems, was in the employ of Mason. He lived first at Great Island and later at "Sagamore Creek." Jeremiah Wolford may have been his brother. Thomas was a church warden in 1640, a jurymen in 1654, and died in 1666. His wife, Jane, was born in 1598 and was accused of being a witch by Robert Couch in 1670. His children were THOMAS, JEREMIAH, Martha, born 1645, who m. Thomas Hinckson and (2) John Westbrook; JANE m. Thomas Peverly, (2) ——— Goss; HANNAH m. Mr. Jones; MARY, b.

1635, m. Wm. Brookin and (2) Wm. Walker; ELIZABETH, m. Henry Savage. Jeremiah, son of Thomas Wolford, made his will 16 April 1662, leaving widow, Mary, and children, JEREMIAH and THOMAS, and two daughters. Widow, Mary, married John Amensene.

JAMES WALL, millwright and carpenter, signed the grant of the Gilebe in Portsmouth in 1640 and the Exeter Combination the same year. He was living in Exeter in 1638 and in 1652. Moved to Hampton, N. H., where he died 3 Oct. 1659. The name of his first wife is unknown. He married (2) Widow Mary Tuck, daughter of Thomas Philbrick of Hampton. There were two daughters by each marriage, ELIZABETH, m. Thomas Harvey; SARAH, m. Thomas Dow; MARY, b. 8 Jan. 1656, m. John Marston; and HANNAH, b. 17 March 1658, m. Benjamin Moulton. (See Dow's History of Hampton, Vol. II, p. 1024.)

WILLIAM BROOKIN or BROOKING was a land-owner in Portsmouth in 1657, and resident there in 1678. Either he or a son William married Mary, daughter of Thomas Wolford. He died in 1694 and his widow married William Walker and was living in 1720 at a great age. His daughters, REBECCA, m. Thomas Pomeroy; MARY m. a Mr. Lucy; SARAH m. Jacob Brown; and MARTHA m. John Lewis; RACHEL, and another who m. John Rouse. (N. E. Reg. Vol. IX, p. 220.) Henry Brookin deposed in 1670 that he was aged about 27 years. (Cf. Landmarks of Ancient Dover, p. 31.)

THOMAS MOOR, unknown.

JOSEPH BEAL, is thought to have been the father of Arthur Beal of York and so the ancestor of a large family of Beals.

HUGH JAMES, unknown. William James was in Kittery about 1650 and sold land to John Diamond.

ALEXANDER JONES, born 1615, was the first owner of the land where now is the village of Kittery. He sold to William James. He had a part in the distribution of land at Portsmouth in 1657, was of the Isles of Shoals in 1661. Married Mary, dau. of Thomas Wofford, probably. Children, Sarah, Samuel, John, born 1641, and Alexander, it is said.

JOHN AULT, born 1601, lived at Oyster River, 1645-1679. Had wife, Remembrance, who came over about 1638. Children, JOHN: REMEMBRANCE, m. John Rand; REBECCA, b. 1650, m. Thomas Edgerly of Dover.

WILLIAM BRACKET, unknown. Perhaps an error for Anthony Bracket, a settler in Portsmouth before 1640.

JAMES NEWT or NUTE lived on Dover Neck. Was alive in 1691. Signed the Dover Combination of 1640. In 1660 he was fined for entertaining Quakers four hours forty shillings per hour, "according to law." Children, JAMES, b. 1643, had wife, Mary, died about 1691; ABRAHAM, born 1644, living in 1724. There are many descendants.

III.

KITTERY POINT.

The southern part of the boundary between Kittery and York is a shallow stream that winds through marshy lands and has several small branches. At high tide one narrow channel connects it with Kittery harbor. The main channel is not deep and is difficult of entrance especially at low tide when the surf is rolling in. Perhaps for this reason it has been called from as early as 1645 "Braveboat Harbor." Its salt marshes were granted in small lots to the early inhabitants of Kittery, for here fodder could be cut for their cattle. At the head of the harbor the earliest settlers were John Andrews, Christopher Mitchell and James Foye.

West of Braveboat Harbor and on the northeast side of the mouth of the Pascataqua is a large island, first known as Champernowne's Island. It was granted by Sir Ferdinando Gorges to Arthur Champernowne 12 Dec. 1636. It comprised, as then was estimated, about five hundred acres and was named Dartington in the grant, from the name of an estate owned by Champernowne in England. At the same time another five hundred acres were granted to Champernowne, northeast of Braveboat Harbor, in York, to be called Godmorrocke. All this Francis, son of Arthur Champernowne, inherited. He belonged to an aristocratic family of England, was "cousin" of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, and had served as Captain in the navy. For some years, 1640-57, he lived on his estate in Greenland, N. H., and probably transferred his residence to Kittery for purpose of easier trade. John Archdale, agent for Gorges, deeded, 20 Oct. 1665, three hundred acres to Champernowne on the mainland, "between the land of Thomas Crockett & an house formerly the Sayd Capt Champernownes." The town granted five hundred acres to Champernowne, 17 July 1666, "adiojneing to the house where Capt Lockewood now liveth, Neare the lower end of the Town by the water side, that runneth towards Braue boate Harbour." The grant was "to begin next Major Shapleighs land, & not two much breath by the water side, to the Preiudice of the Inhabitants towards Braue boate Harbour:" Champernowne had two houses. One was near the eastern end of his island and commanded a fine view of the ocean and of the Isles of Shoals. On its exact site is now the attractive residence of Mr. John Thaxter. Here seems to have been Champernowne's principal place of abode.

THE THAXTER COTTAGE, ON SITE OF CHAMPERNOWNE'S HOUSE.

Champernowne sold his island to Capt. Paul White in 1648, but the sale, though recorded, was somehow annulled. He sold the western end of it to Nathaniel Fryer, 5 June 1672. Fryer gave eighty acres of this to his son-in-law, John Hincks, and sold the rest of it, 20 Aug. 1700, to Robert Eliot for one thousand pounds. This end of the island alone was then estimated to contain "a thousand acres, more or less." Eliot deeded this conditionally, 15 June 1705, to his son Robert, and 10 Feb. 1709, to his son-in-law, Timothy Gerrish, and wife, Sarah. Robert Eliot, Jr., may be supposed to have died meanwhile. Since the last date the western end of the island, which is separated from the eastern part by a creek and marsh, has been known as Gerrish's Island.

Champernowne deeded the eastern end of the island to his wife, Mary, and to her daughter by a former marriage, Elizabeth Cutt, who married Humphrey Eliot. After these moved to South Carolina, they sold to Richard Cutt, and this part of the estate of Francis Champernowne has since been known as Cutt's Island.

Champernowne sold his estate on the mainland, 16 Nov. 1658, to Walter Barefoot, including his "lower house." This was situated near the mouth of Champernowne's, now known as Chauncy's Creek, at its junction with the outlet of Deering's Guzzle. It was later the residence of Charles Chauncy, Esq., and later still of Col. Paul Lewis.¹ Theodore Keen's house stands very near the site of Champernowne's. Here the view of the harbor is one of the finest.

Walter Barefoot sold the house and thirty acres to Sylvester Harbert in 1661. Harbert sold it to Nathaniel Fryer, 29 April 1662, and he sold it, 2 Nov. 1663, to Richard Lockwood. Hubbard records, under date of 24 Jan. 1671, that "Capt. Lockwood's wife, going in a canoe with a drunken fellow from the great Island to Kittery side, was carried away by the tide and never heard of more;"¹ but Richard Lockwood and wife, Deborah, signed the deed conveying their estate at Kittery to Simon Lynde 22 Sept. 1671, and the same wife, Deborah, is mentioned before that year. Hubbard's date is probably inaccurate. Lockwood is no more mentioned in the history of Kittery. A daughter, Deborah, married John Phoenix, and another daughter, Ann, married Ephraim Lynn. At the time of the last sale Robert Edge was living on the northern boundary. He was supported by the town in his old age.

Francis Champernowne died in 1687 at the age of seventy-three. He married in old age the widow of Robert Cutt and left Hubbard's History of New England, p. 648.

no children. In wealth and social station he ranked higher than any others of the early settlers on the Pascataqua. Traces of his old wharf near his lower house may still be seen, and here he had a warehouse and carried on extensive trade. His remains rest in a little plot of ground enclosed by a stone wall, a little east of where his house stood, on Cutt's Island. Only a heap of rough stones marks the grave.

In a deed dated 14 Dec. 1648, Champernowne mentions the fact that he had already granted one hundred acres to "John Pearce of Noodles Island." This was on the mainland, at the western end of Champernowne's estate, known afterward as Pearce's Neck. This John Pearce should not be confused with one who afterward lived in York, Maine, and had wife, Phoebe, in 1670, and whose daughters married Micum McIntire and a certain John Bray of York. Some have fallen into this error. The widow of John Pearce of Kittery was named Eleanor. She made her will in 1675 and named a son Joseph, who died at sea about 1676 and left all his estate to Margery Bray¹ of Kittery, the same who married Col. William Pepperrell and became the mother of the Baronet. Had it not been for the untimely death of Joseph Pearce, Margery Bray might have become his wife, and so there would have been no Sir William Pepperrell and perhaps no conqueror of Louisburg. The other children of John and Eleanor Pearce were Mary, who seems to have married Joseph Fleete in 1670, and Sarah who married, first (Alexander?) Jones, second, Hughbert Mattone in June, 1673, and third, Henry, son of Thomas Seavey of Portsmouth. Mattone deposed that "Sary" married him when she knew that her first husband was alive and then sailed away with Jones to the Barbadoes. She declared in 1681 that Mattone had threatened her life and deserted her "above these seven years." They were divorced. By her third marriage she had a son, Joseph Seavey, who with wife, Hannah, sold, 10 May 1710, a portion of John Pearce's homestead in Kittery to Dominicus Jordan. The eight acres included the house, garden and orchard "commonly known by ye name of John Pearces house and land," situated "on ye westerly Side of ye Steping Stones between sd Steping Stones & Mr. Roger Dearings house." Some of these Stepping Stones may still be seen, though some have been removed. The deed was renewed in 1712. The land sold was then bounded "upon ye Southard Side with ye Creek going into Braveboat harbr and upon ye North Side of ye Cove going into mr Roger Dearings building Yard and upon ye Eastwd side bounded with ye Creek which goes between ye Neck & ye Land formerly Called Lockwoods land & upon ye Northside with two Acres belonging to ye Neck which is bounded by ye land which was formerly Accounted Majr Nicholas Shapleigh & now in ye possession of Mr Roger Dearing & lying near ye highway & by ye house of mr Robert Mitchell which Neck & Two Acres of land formerly was in ye possession of John Pearce decd & after ye decease of John Pearce was in ye possession of Joseph Pearce his son." It may be added that Margery Bray was not allowed to peaceably inherit Joseph Pearce's estate and that Sarah Jones-Mattown-Seavey, who was made executrix of her brother's estate, retained his property against a suit brought by William Pepperrell, in 1685, for his wife's inheritance.

Next west of John Pearce George Palmer bought one hundred acres of Walter Barefoot. Palmer and wife, Elizabeth, sold this to Dr. Henry Greenland, 15 Oct. 1666. This Greenland, born in 1628, as a deposition shows, was at Newbury, Mass., 1662-4, and was ordered to depart from the town. He lived at Kittery Point from 1666 to 1672, when he went to Piscataway, New Jersey, where a colony of Baptists had gone from the Pascataqua and carried the name with them in a modified form.¹ Greenland seems to have been a political disturber. He was engaged in lawsuits with his neighbors and at last was tried at the house of John Bray and fined. He was banished from the jurisdiction of Massachusetts in 1672. His will names a son, Henry, and sons-in-law, Daniel Brynson, Cornelius Longfield, and Francis Brynson. His wife, Mary, was living in 1684. It seems from the following depositions¹ that she was accused of being a witch. They are of interest as illustrating the superstitious notions of the times and preceded by twenty years the famous witchcraft craze at Salem.

Greenland sold his place at Kittery Point to William Broad, fisherman of the Isles of Shoals, 15 Oct. 1669. It was then bounded by land of Nicholas Shapleigh on the northwest and by land of Abraham Corbett on the southeast. Broad and wife Abigail sold it to Digory Jeffreys, 9 June 1670, and by him it was sold to Roger Deering, 8 Sept. 1694. Digory Jeffreys was living on land adjacent in 1662 and then bought four acres of Nicholas Shapleigh, which Jeffreys and wife, Mary, sold, 5 June 1669, to John Moore, Senr., fisherman of Star Island. The lot included "two Necks or Islands." Jeffreys married for second wife, before 1683, Ann, widow of Thomas Crockett.

West of Jeffreys, or later Roger Deering's land, which his son-in-law, Robert Mitchell, occupied, is a large tract of land called the Point as early as 1651 and probably so called from the very beginning of its settlement. It was originally owned by Alexander Shapleigh, having been granted to him by Gorges, and was inherited by his son, Nicholas Shapleigh. The latter sold twelve acres "between the land of Thomas Langley and Digory Jefferie" to John Bray, shipwright, 29 Sept. 1662. Bray added to his lot, 20 Nov. 1666, by the purchase of twelve acres more from Job Alcock, who must have acquired it from Thomas Langley. It adjoined Bray's lot on the west, "twenty-seven Land yards by the water side." On it stood Langley's house, which was to be removed in the following April. Bray gave one acre of it to his son-in-law, William Pepperrell, 17 Nov. 1682. It was the southwest corner, next to Langley's, running from the wharf and building yard to the road.

THE BRAY HOUSE.

The house built by John Bray, probably in 1662, is still standing and is the oldest house in Kittery. It is yet a comfortable dwelling-house, and its interior finish tells that it was once considered a home of luxury. The house was anciently larger than at present, and here in 1672 and 1673 John Bray kept a public house of entertainment and was directed by the Court to put up a sign. Some have spoken of this as the birth-place of the mother of Sir William Pepperrell, but as she was born in 1660, it is more likely that she was born in Plymouth, England. There is no record of John Bray at Kittery before 1662. He was one of the pioneers in ship-building and laid a foundation for the future wealth of his son-in-law, William Pepperrell. An interesting old painting is shown in the Bray house. Some say it is a view of Kittery Point, in England; some think it is a picture of Louisburg. Here court was sometimes held in the old days before county buildings were known.

The house of Col. William Pepperrell will be described in another chapter. The Pepperrells kept buying land on all sides of them till they owned the greater part of the Point and much land elsewhere. The elder Pepperrell had a tannery west of his house and near the water, which gave the name to Tan House

FORT McCLARY.

Beach. The Park House is at present near the spot and takes its name from the small park in which the baronet kept some deer and moose.

Thomas Langley, who has been mentioned, is called a merchant "of yelland of barbadoes" in 1660. We find him settled in Kittery in 1662, next neighbor to Bray on the west. He took the oath of allegiance in 1680 and was living here in 1690. His wife, Hannah, witnessed a deed in 1675. Hannah Langley, probably a daughter, married John Brawn, Jr., in 1684, and in 1698 John Brawn and wife, Anna, sold a house and a small piece of land that belonged to the Langley estate to William Pepperrell. Langley must have owned a part of the land now occupied by Fort McClary, called Fort William as early as 1690. Fifty acres of the western part of this government reservation were granted to John Bray by the town. The grant bordered on land of Francis Hooke. The Fort was anciently a garrison house or Block House of wood. It has been rebuilt, doubtless, in imitation of the ancient structure. Huge blocks of granite lying about show that the government once planned an extensive fortress here, but the old methods of defense are now obsolete, and the fort is of little worth except as an ancient landmark. The soil about it is worthless and seems never to have been cultivated nor dwelt upon in the earliest days.

Francis Hooke bought of Nicholas Shapleigh, 4 Aug. 1674, three acres of land whereon was "a house or tenement formerly built possessed & enjoyed by Roger Russell." The strip of land ran from the river to "Back Cove" so called, a branch of Crockett's Cove, and was bounded by Shapleigh's land on east and west. A little later Hooke added seven acres more to his lot. A plan of his house and lot appears on the town records. He was a son of Humphrey Hooke, an alderman of the city of Bristol, England. He married, 20 Sept. 1662, Mary, widow of John Palgrave and daughter of Samuel and Amias (Cole-Thompson) Maverick of Noddle's Island, now East Boston. He lived at Winter Harbor, in Saco, before moving to Kittery Point. He was Justice of the Peace, County Treasurer, member of the Council and Judge of Probate and of the Court of Common Pleas. He was popular with all parties. It is written of him that "no other of that age in the province was so public-spirited and highly useful, none better beloved." He died 10 Jan. 1695, leaving no children. His widow lived here for some years, and in 1715 the property passed into the possession of William Pepperell.

Passing Francis Hooke's we arrive at "Warehouse Point," where the first settlement in the present town of Kittery was made. A Court record, dated 15 Oct. 1650, is as follows: "Forasmuch as the house at the river's mouth where Mr Shapleigh's father first built and Mr. William Hilton now dwelleth, in regard it was the first house there built and Mr. Shapleigh intendeth to build and enlarge it, and for further considerations it is thought fit it should from time to time be for a house of entertainment or ordinary, with this proviso, that the tenant be such an one as the inhabitants shall approve of."

William Hilton, brother of Edward Hilton, who settled at Dover Neck in 1623, was licensed to keep an ordinary here 27 June 1648. He had already been living here for some time, as the following deposition shows. Feb. 22, 1687-8, Frances, wife of Richard White, aged 70 years or thereabouts, deposed "that about forty-six years past (1642) shee lived in a house at Kittery poynt that stood then between the house that was Mr. Morgans & the house that Mr. Greenland afterward lived in, which house above sayd the deponent's husband, William Hilton, did hyer of Major Nicholas Shapleigh."

PHYLLIS' NOTCH.

At about the middle of Warehouse Point there is an opening in the rocky coast line and a pebbly beach, from which there is an easy ascent between cliffs of rock. It is a fine natural site for a ferry landing, and here, too, in later times ships were built. The place is now called "Phyllis' Notch," so named from a colored woman who once lived near by. As one stands at the opening of this notch, facing the water, on the left may be seen the site of the first house built in Kittery. Old residents say that the traces of a cellar were once more apparent than now. Here was a warehouse and the "ordinary" above mentioned. It was built by Alexander Shapleigh in 1635. Doubtless, fishermen's huts preceded this, but there is no record of such.

Hilton was succeeded as tavern-keeper by Hugh Gunnison, who had married for his second wife Sarah, daughter of William Tilly and widow of Henry Lynn. Gunnison leased from Shapleigh, 5 June 1651, for twenty-one years, five hundred acres of land "at the Point where Mr. William Hilton now dwelleth" and "upwards towards Capt. Francis Champernowne's land." Sarah Lynn before her marriage to Hugh Gunnison in 1647 had been tenant for three or four years to Mr. Shapleigh "in an old house at the river's mouth at puscataquah." Here, in 1644, was made the deed by which Richard Vines conveyed six hundred acres at the head of Spruce Creek to Thomas Withers.¹ Gunnison seems not to have met the conditions of the lease and did not remain long in Shapleigh's house. He bought of Robert Mendum, 15 July 1654, two houses situated upon the Point: also Mendum's land on the west side of the mouth of Spruce Creek where Mendum and John White did plant and all the land that was given to said Mendum by the townsmen. This sale is recorded in the Court Records. Mendum had bought of Thomas Crockett, 21 Sept. 1747, a house and four acres, which Crockett had bought of William Wormwood and belonged originally to the estate of John Billing. This was, probably, the lot sold by Mendum to Gunnison. William Wormwood appears in 1683 as a settler on York River.

In a deed dated 24 Dec. 1662, Shapleigh describes a sale as follows: "A warehouse which is now in my possession & is Scituate on a point of Land on ye Eastwd Side of Piscattaqua river mouth Comonly called and known by ye Name of ye warehouse point Together with a Tract of Land near Adjacent & thereto Adjoining Containing Twenty pole or rod or there about in length upon a Southwest & by west line runing from ye way that lyes by ye South end of Robert Wadleys fence to a certain point of rocks that lyes by ye river Side butting with ye warehouse So down to Low water mark & Seven pole in breadth or thereabo runinge upon a west & by north line from ye sd South Corner of Robert Wadleys fence down to Low water mark upon a Straight line into ye Cove within ye sd Warehouse point & is bounded by a ridge of rocks Lying by ye Side of ye sd Robert Wadleys fence."

This Robert Wadleigh was the son of John Wadleigh of Wells, Me., and later of Exeter, N. H. The following is found in the Court Records under date of 5 July 1661, "Whereas there is a demand for a house of entertainment at the place called the Poynt, where sometimes Hugh Gunnison did reside, and whereas there is a constant necessity for transportation across the Piscataqua River at that place, the Court orders that Robert Wadleigh keep an ordinary there and take charge of the ferry over to Capt. Pendleton's side." His license was renewed the following year, after which he disappeared from Kittery history. He was at Oyster River in 1666 and later at Exeter, N. H. He became a prominent man in New Hampshire, where he was Deputy, Commissioner and Judge.

Robert Mendum was licensed to keep an ordinary at the Point as early as 1644 and was in the business in 1650. There seems to have been a lack of cordiality between his family and that of Hugh Gunnison, who was a rival in the tavern business, for the Court Records of 1650 declare that Goody Mendum was fined five pounds for saying, "The devil take Mr. Gullison and his wife." Hugh Gunnison continued to keep an ordinary and run a brew-house here at Warehouse Point and also near the church till his death in 1660. His widow married Capt. John Mitchell and later Surgeon Francis Morgan, who seems to have succeeded Henry Greenland as physician at the Point. Sarah Morgan was licensed to keep an ordinary at the Point in March, 1663-4, and Francis Morgan had a license 4 July 1671.

In 1654 William Reves testified that sixteen or seventeen years before, or about 1637, he heard a dispute between "John Treworthie and Phillip Swadn (Swallow) Concerning the plase that John Treworthis howse then stvd on which is at piscadeway river, at the harbres moythe near the howse whar hygh Gollisen last built. I heard Phillip Swaden say, whos land then it was, to John Treworthie, I give you lvt leave to build yovr howse and to have fre egrasse and regrass from the water side to yovr howse and to the sapit (saw-pit) and not else."¹ Match this with the following, dated 5 May 1636, when the agent of Sir Ferdinando Gorges sold unto Edward Johnson "for the proper use of John Treworgy of Dartmouth Merchant" "500 Accors of Land bordering upon the North East Side of Pascataquacke River for ye extent of weh 500 Accors upon the River Side he is to have with and from the South East Coane (corner) of Phillip Swaddens now Wigwam unto the Cricke which turns up to braue Boat Harbour." There was to be paid an annual rent of "100 of Merchandable Codde dride" and one-half the profits of a "ferre" that might be established.¹ This shows that Phillip Swaddow was living here as early as 1636 and that he had his wigwam precisely at the place where Alexander Shapleigh built the first house, for the land granted to Treworgy was the same as that granted to Shapleigh and took its bounds from the same point of departure. This was at "Warehouse Point." This is further confirmed by the following found in the first volume of Suffolk Deeds, folio 128. John Treworthie deposed, 25 Oct. 1650, "that the cellar weh is at Pascataway now standing neere the house weh William Hilton now lives in, did not any way belong to the land weh was bought by me for my Grandfather, Mr. Alexander Shapleigh."

Feb. 2, 1646, John Treworgy sold to Robert Mendum a "parcel of land which his cellar was built upon and from his cellar unto his new house which now he hath built." The land between this point and Spruce Creek did not belong to Shapleigh but had been granted to other parties. Who were they?

The York Deeds have the following curious record, dated 10 Jan. 1639: John Billing and John Lander, who had been fishermen in partnership, agree to divide their property. Billing was to have "the house which hath the Chimney in it being the Westerne End of the House & the Lofte over it And John Lander is to have the Chamber being the Easterne End of the House & the Lofte over it And John Billine is to have half the Land that is cleared & alreadie fenced & his part is to be bounded to the South And John Lander is to have the other Halfe bounded to the North & John Lander is to have one Halfe of the Shallop & all Things thereunto belonging And the said John Lander is to have the Starbord Side & John Billine to have the Larbord Side & the other Halfe thereunto belonging. And the said John Lander is to have free Egresse & Regresse to come to the Fire for his Uses so often as Occasion shall need And John Billine is to have One Halfe of the Land that is uncleared that doth belong unto the House & it is to lie bounded to the South And John Lander is to have the other bounded to the North And John Billine hath the old Sowe & two young Suttts And John Lander is to have the Little Sowe & two young Suttts." William Wormwood and John Reynolds witnessed the contract. Thus they were to live and fish together in love and harmony. Perhaps Billing got married about this time for he died not long after and left only one child John.

To show that they were not squatters we have a record found in the proceedings of York Court. It is dated 23 Feb. 1639. John Billing and John Lander, both of Piscataquack, fishermen, sold to Joseph Milles (Miles) eight acres of land situated upon Spruce Creek, conditioned that he should pay the grantees six pence an acre for each and every acre he should clear and plant upon, which rent was to be paid annually upon the feast day of Michael the Arch Angel. The record declares that they had the land from Sir Ferdinando Gorges. Miles sold his interest in this land to Thomas Crockett, planter, 16 Nov. 1647, and Crockett sold it to Rice Thomas Dec., 1647.

In 1645 Billing and Landers had, also, grants from Gorges of six acres of marsh at Brave Boat Harbor. That the above mentioned eight acres were not the full extent of their real estate on Kittery Point is shown by a further Court record. Both Billing and Lander were deceased in 1646. They probably went off a-fishing and never came back. Billing's widow had married Rice Thomas before 6 March 1647, and she testified then that her late husband gave William Wormwood two acres and that John Lander gave Wormwood two acres. These four acres passed through several hands to Hugh Gunnison, as we have seen already.

In 1656 John Billing, Jr., and his mother, Mrs. Rice Thomas, sold to Thomas Crockett a house and land, "at the place Comonly called the Poynt, near the Harbours Mouth, a part of ye necke of Land on which Major Shapleighs stoore house stands on, Which house & Land I had possession of a Inheritance, after ye decease of my father, John Billine Senjor, the former husband of my Mother the abovesd Elizabeth Tomass."

John Billing and John Lander were in the employ of John Winter in 1636 at Richmond Island. They both signed the "Grant of the Gilebe" in Portsmouth in 1640, but it is evident that their habitation was at Kittery Point. Lander left no descendants so far as I have been able to learn, although in 1693 administration was granted to Elizabeth Lander on the estate of her husband, James Lander, late of Kittery.¹ The descendants of Billings are numerous.

Thomas Crockett has been mentioned several times. He was in the employ of Ambrose Gibbons in 1633-4. A number of witnesses testified that Gorges granted him a neck of land within Spruce Creek about 1641. He lived at Warehouse Point and had land extending to the north shore of Kittery Point. The grant made to him by Gorges was "the Necke of Land that lyeth on the further side of the crieke that runs behind Mr. Gunnisons house." It "lyeth over against the field of Tho Crockett, within Spruce Creek." He lived at Kittery Point most of the time till later than 1658, though he was for a short time near the head of Braveboat Harbour and kept a ferry there. He had a grant of land in York in 1651 and signed the submission to Massachusetts in York in 1652. In 1667 he had built a house upon Crockett's Neck and was living there. This Neck was divided among his sons and sons-in-law. His widow, Ann, married Rice Thomas. The descendants of Crockett are many.

Poor Rice Thomas, born in 1614, was working in a brew-house at Kittery Point as early as 1646. He shifted about from one house to another, was awhile at Braveboat Harbor, returned to the Point and died there in great poverty. In 1684 complaint was made to the Court that he was "very sick, weak, overrun with vermin and under deep suffering." The Selectmen were ordered to take speedy and effective means for his relief. There is no record of any descendants.

Abraham Corbett was a man of some prominence at the Point for a few years following 1667. He was a distiller. He came from Portsmouth and moved from Kittery to Sheepscot, Maine. He bought a house and a few acres of land near Warehouse

Point of Thomas Crockett and of his son, Ephraim, on which the old brew house stood, and bounded by land of Francis Morgan. He bought the part of the Champernowne estate lying on the mainland, over four hundred acres, and, 10 Sept. 1769, gave a trust deed of it to Henry Greenland and Walter Barefoot for the benefit of his wife, Alice, and children, John, Elizabeth and Alice. In 1672 the most of this was sold by Corbett to Nicholas Shapleigh. The deeds show that Walter Knight and Rice Thomas were living about this time a little east of Champernowne's or Lockwood's house.

The first physician, or "chiurgeon," that history mentions at the Point was Henry Greenland, 1666. Next appeared Francis Morgan, fourth husband of her whose maiden name was Sarah Tilly. He is mentioned as late as 1673. At this time Kittery Point was a busy place. The land-owners, as we have seen, were not many, but there were evidently a number of small houses rented to fishermen and shipwrights. John Bray had established his ship-yard. His son-in-law, William Pepperrell, succeeded him in the business and launched many a vessel of sturdy oak and pine. Roger Deering carried on the same business. The brew house was one of the first buildings erected, it being a felt necessity for the new population. This was managed successively by Hilton, Gunnison, and Corbett. A ferry connected the Point with Great Island and Strawberry Bank, and the ferry boat sometimes ran up the Pascataqua to Sturgeon Creek and Dover Point. Kittery Point was on the highway of travel. A pathway called a road had been laid out to York as early as 1649. All eastern travel was along that road. Therefore the old Shapleigh House was a well patronized "ordinary," where home-made beer and West India rum were dispensed under restrictions of Court, which then as now did not always restrict. There must have been many fishermen living here, for Pepperrell is said to have had sometimes a fleet of a hundred vessels on the Banks of Newfoundland. There were a number of saw-mills on the small streams that flow into Spruce Creek, which gave employment to many. The hunters and trappers brought in furs and sometimes scalps for sale. The Indians came here for trade and now and then clear onto the Point for less civil purposes. The main highway gradually was improved and streets were laid out leading down to the wharfs. Elegant houses were built, like those of Champernowne, Bray, Pepperrell, and doubtless Francis Hooke, the magistrate. A new meeting-house took the place of the old one in 1671, and Jeremiah Hubbard and others here officiated. For a century or more Kittery Point was, perhaps, the most active and prosperous place of business in the County of York, which was co-extensive with the Province of Maine.

WAREHOUSE POINT.

Passing Warehouse Point we come to the church, of which something is said in another chapter, and opposite it the cemetery. The ancient road ran pretty nearly straight on to the ferry at Spruce Creek. Just east ^{ward} of the cemetery and separated from it by a street are the traces of an older private burial place. Pieces of broken headstones lie near the wall, and only one slate headstone remains standing in the yard of Mr. Cutts. It is that of Mrs. Mary (Rollins) Gunnison, wife of Elihu Gunnison 2d. Why was she buried here? It is probable that this is the burial place of Hugh Gunnison and his descendants for at least two generations, and that Hugh Gunnison lived near by. It is known that Francis Morgan, who married Gunnison's widow, lived here in 1667, and mention is made of the brew-house on the point northwest of this place at the same date. Again the northwest part of Kittery Point is called "Brew-House Point" in 1712, when it was bought by William Pepperrell of Elisha Hutchinson.

It is fortunate that a plan of Kittery Point has been preserved, which locates its inhabitants at a later date. In 1840 Mr. Pelatiah Fernald made a plan accompanied by a written description of the dwellers at the Point and onward to the York line in

THE GERRISH HOUSE.

1775 and 1848. From his plan the following facts have been taken for the most part. North of the road after crossing the bridge at Spruce Creek lived in 1775 Edmund Stevens, a tailor, "the great-grandfather of Polly Chambers," as Mr. Fernald tells. He married Lydia Halbrook 8 March 1764. East of him and where Charles Duncan afterward lived stood the house of Joseph Vincent. It was taken down and carried to Salem, Mass. Up the road further and on the north side lived Mr. Snellings, a baker. On the right hand or south side of the road and near the Creek was Tobias Walker, and a few rods south of him was Josiah Berry, a caulker, doubtless son of George Berry who married Deliverance Haley and bought two acres here, on which his house was then standing, 21 May 1712. His daughter, Deborah, married William Walker about 1723, and hence the proximity of the Walker family in 1775. William Walker bought of John Hix (or Hicks) 23 May 1739, land at Kittery Point where Hix

formerly lived. A few rods south of Berry was Elihu Weeks, a carpenter. South of Weeks, where the heirs of Robert F. Gerrish now live, was Samuel Smalleorn, and east of him was Capt. William Pillow. The last two houses are still standing, and that of the Gerrish heirs is a storehouse of old furniture and heirlooms of many families and generations, a visit to which will well repay the lover of the antique. Passing up the lane to the corner one would see in 1775, near the Gunnison burial place, the residence of Joshua White, a cooper, and near by a store belonging to Capt. Joseph Cutts, which was burned. White bought of John Hix, 26 May 1735. White's house disappeared long ago. North of White's stood and still stands the mansion erected for the widow of Sir William Pepperrell, now owned and occupied by J. Chester Cutts.

The present church and parsonage were built about 1729 and will be spoken of in the chapter on Ecclesiastical History. Beyond the church, on the south side of the street lived a Mr. Buckley, where William Tobey lived in 1848. Nearly opposite a lane runs north to the mansion, built in 1742, of Col. Nathaniel Sparhawk, son-in-law of Sir William Pepperrell. It is still standing and well preserved. In 1848 it was occupied by Roger Deering, and has lately been purchased by Hon. Horace Mitchell.

We will let Mr. Fernald tell the story for Warehouse Point in his own words. "Where Mr. Daniel Billings' house stands Mr. James Hickey occupied a small house belonging to Sir William. He was a rock blower. Next was Silas Darby. His house and land were mortgaged to Sir William, now owned by Asa Frisbee. South of Capt. Frisbee's was E. Greenough. Where Capt. J. Lawry lives was Capt. Robert Oram. Next was Capt. Robert Follet, the father of Mercy Follet now living. Next was Capt. Joshua Moore. Next on Holbrook Point was William Holbrook. Next was Cicero, a colored man. Next was Col. Sparhawk's red store and wharf, destroyed. Coming round into the cove was William Whitmore, a goldsmith. A few rods north was Mr. Allen's."

THE CHAMPERNOWNE.

It must be pretty nearly the site of E. Greenough's house that is now occupied by "The Champernowne." This favorite summer resort was built in 1890 and enlarged in 1897 by Hon. Horace Mitchell, the present proprietor and manager. The accompanying engraving leaves nothing more to be said about the exterior and its surroundings. Within will be found rest, comfort, health and pleasant associations. All the old landmarks of Kittery Point are within a short walk of this hotel.

Mr. Fernald's description of the Pepperrell Mansion will be found in another chapter. In 1775 Capt. John Underwood was living in the Bray house, and next east of him was Dr. Nathaniel Todd. Then came in order on the same side of the street Capt. William Moore, widow Margaret (Deering) Cleare, Roger Deering, Jr., William Deering and Roger Mitchell. Opposite Capt. William Deering was John Deering. The house was built for his grandmother, Joan (Bray) Deering about the year 1700. It is still in good condition. East of this lived Richard Mitchell and widow Mary Ball.

JOAN (BRAY) DEERING'S HOUSE,

Mr. Fernald's plan takes us on further. Where the Spruce Creek road comes in at right angles with the road to York and on the north side of the latter stood, in 1775, a large tavern kept by James Caswell. Beyond him and on the same side of the road lived Furber Allen and next was Joseph Fitzgerald.

This brings us to Roger Deering, who lived a little back from the road and on a hill, where the original Deering house stood. On the south side of the road and about opposite to Deering lived Thomas Frizzell. Beyond Roger Deering on the north side of the road was Joseph Deering and next was Richard Seaward. A little beyond is Tenney's hill, where the Baptist meeting-house stood in 1807.

IV.

A TRIP UP SPRUCE CREEK.

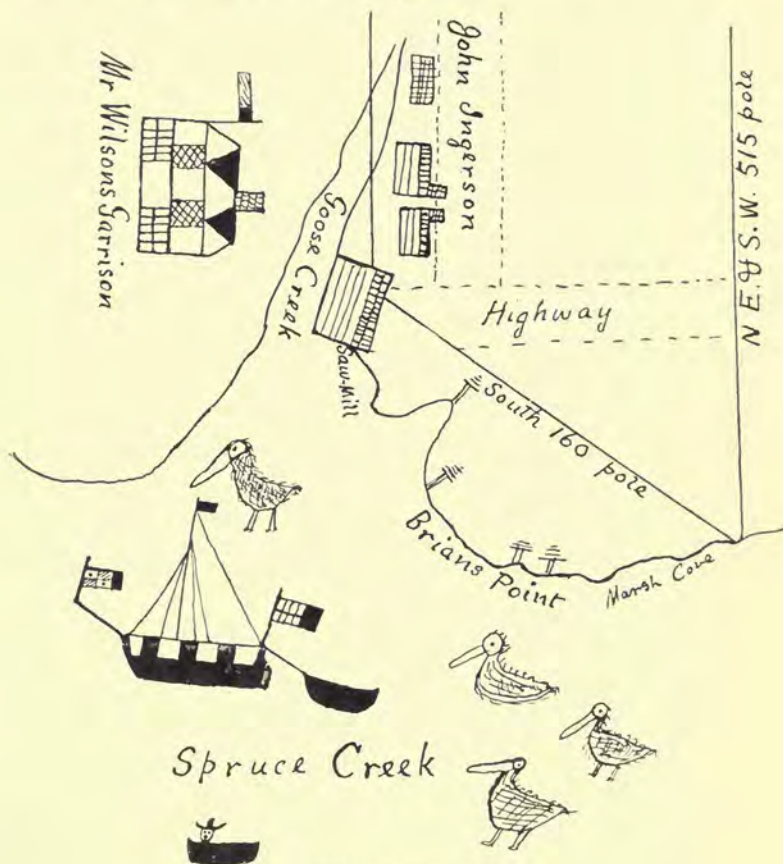

Sailing up Spruce Creek one would soon pass a cove on the east side, called in the early times Crockett's Cove or Creek according as it was viewed at high or at low tide. North of this was Crockett's Neck. When Thomas Crockett died this neck was divided among his sons and sons-in-law. Henry Barter, who married Crockett's granddaughter, had a portion of the Neck and added thereto in 1697, by buying twenty-seven acres or more of Thomas Hooper of York. Hooper's wife, who was Elizabeth Small, a servant of Francis Champernowne, received this in the will of Champernowne.

North of the neck is an inlet called in the old records sometimes Crockett's Back Cove and sometimes Tucker's Cove. North of it Nicholas Tucker bought forty acres of Champernowne, 17 May 1686, "running from ye Stage point East." On Tucker's Creek was a saw-mill owned by Elihu Gunnison, Joseph Wilson, Henry Barter and Andrew Haley. It is mentioned in a deed in 1708 and had then been long used. Tucker's house stood not far from the mill.

Adjoining Tucker's land on the north-east were the fifty acres of John Frink which he bought, 13 Oct. 1699, of Richard Bryer, whose wife had received it as an inheritance from Champernowne. In 1702 Frink sold twenty acres bordering on Tucker's land to William Bryer. George Frink, probably brother to John, bought thirty-five acres of Elihu Gunnison, 9 May 1702. This was a little further north and bordered on land which Gunnison had sold to John Ingersoll.

North-west of John Frink's land lay the grant of three hundred acres made to Hugh Gunnison 16 Dec. 1652. It corresponded pretty nearly to the land between what are now called the Norton and the Bartlett roads, extending down to Spruce Creek. Hugh never lived here, but his son Elihu settled here about 1675 and built a mill on Goose Creek. This is now a very small stream and is known as Wilson's Creek. It runs into what was called in 1652 and for many years thereafter Goose Cove. Here Gunnison's land began.

GOOSE COVE, 1696.

(Traced from the Town Records.)

It seems that Elihu Gunnison built vessels here, for he mentions in a deed in 1712 his "building yard." Sixty acres of the original grant were sold to Richard Endle 17 Dec. 1701. His father, Richard, had lived here before him and died before 1695. In the deed special mention is made of "thirty foot square of land where ye sd Endles father and Mother were buried for a burying place for ye sd Endle and his family for ever ye same not to be plowed." Endle's farm was said to be at Briant's or Bryan's Point, so called for reasons unknown. Richard Endle, Sen., was a fisherman at the Isles of Shoals in 1661. He bought this land on Spruce Creek, 14 Oct. 1665, of Francis Morgan, who had married the widow of Hugh Gunnison. Morgan had some claim to the land through this marriage, but it seems to have been an uncertain one, and so Richard Endle, Jr., took another deed of Elihu Gunnison. The name Endle has long been extinct in Kittery, but the descendants of Richard Endle are many in the Wilson and allied families. The farm of Endle eventually came into the possession of Gowen, son of Joseph Wilson.

In 1697 Elihu Gunnison sold to his brother-in-law, John Ingersoll, a portion of his land "near unto the Saw-Mill at goose Creek," "bounded by Kittery road on the North-west and on the northerly side by the lands of the sd Ingersoll;" also a piece of land by the water side. This Ingersoll was a son of George Ingersoll of Falmouth and had a grant of land in Kittery in 1671.

Next north of Richard Endle at "Briant's Point" we come to the homestead of Gowen Wilson. He signed the submission to Massachusetts in 1652 and received, 19 Jan. 1658, a grant of twenty-four acres on the east side of Spruce Creek and on the south-east side of Robert Mendum's lot. Twenty-one acres more were granted to him, 12 June 1673, lying between his own land and that of Richard Endle and Goose Cove on the south-east. These two grants made a farm forty-five rods wide by one hundred and sixty rods long. His house, which was a garrison, stood near the junction of the Norton road with the road that runs up the east side of Spruce Creek.

Wilson gave, 2 June 1684, eleven acres of his lot, on the northerly side, as a marriage dowry to Andrew Haley, who had married his only daughter, Deborah. Haley had before this been a fisherman at the Isles of Shoals.

Next north is a tract of land which includes the "Ashen Swamp." It was granted by the town to Robert Mendum, 16 Dec. 1652, and extended to the head of Braveboat Harbor. One quarter part of this, or about eighty acres, was sold by Nathaniel, grandson of Robert Mendam, 14 April 1713, to Samuel Skillin formerly of Exeter, N. H. The lot was "bounded on ye Northwest by Joseph Weeks his land & on ye Southeast by Andrew Hales Land." Skillin had married Rhoda, sister of Andrew Haley, Jr. About the same time Skillin purchased of other heirs of Robert Mendum the rest of the original grant, except twenty-five acres sold to Joseph Weeks, 2 March 1672, and a lot to be occupied by John Fennick as long as he lived.

The lot of Joseph Weeks was "on the East side of spruce Creek beginning at Turkey point, and from thence along by the water side to a great pine, and from thence Northeast unto an Ashen Swamp."

Adjoining Joseph Weeks on the north seems to have been the lot of Nicholas Weeks, sold to him by Jonathan Mendum 21 May 1681, for "two oxen & one Cow." It was on the East side of Spruce Creek, "beginning in at Martyns Cove at a stony brooke runneing up into the woods so fare as the sd Mendums Land runneth East & by North, & more over to runn from the sd Martins Cove by the water side unto John Phoenix his bounds."¹

We have now arrived at the head of Spruce Creek, whither Mendum's grant extended. On the east is "Pine Point" and just south of it is Martin's Cove. On the west side of the Creek is "Eagle Point," and the point to the north lying between the eastern and western branches of Spruce Creek is "Oak Point." In 1643 Gorges sold to Thomas Withers four hundred acres on the Pascataqua, which will be described later. About the same time he allowed Withers to choose four acres of meadow anywhere on Spruce Creek. March 20, 1644, Richard Vines as agent for Gorges sold to Withers for ten pounds "Six hundred ackers lieing and being at ye head of Spruce Crick at the marsh where the said Tho. Withers have formerly been possest of by Mr. Tho. Gorges and made use of, bounded with two other Creekes one on the Easter side and ye other on the West side." The four acres used by Withers were probably "Eagle Point Marsh." The town confirmed this sale to Withers, 24 May 1652, and added a grant of two hundred acres more, "one hundred Acers at Eagle point, on the west side of the Cricke, & the Cricke of Water It selfe, & one hundred acres at Martines Cove, on the East side of the sayd Cricke, & soe to goe up along on both sides the sayd Cricke, untill eight hundred acers of Land bee accomplished."² Alexander Jones, who was present when the deed was made, testified in 1666 that Withers' land on the east side began "at a Necke of Land called Pine Poynt," and on the west side "at ye Western Cricke that goeth in West at Eagle Poynt Marsh."

LOWER KITTERY, 1635-1700.

Withers sold, 4 April 1664, to John ffennicke twelve acres "Joyneing to a necke of Land Called pine poynt." It measured twenty-four rods on the water side and extended up into the woods eighty rods. There was a neck of land on the north side called the "burned neck." Fennick sold this lot to Peter Lewis 13 March 1670. A lot bordering this on the north, measuring forty-five rods on the water side by eighty rods into the woods was sold by Withers to John ffenicke, 10 April 1675, and the latter sold this also to Peter Lewis, 12 April 1675. Lewis bought of Withers a strip "behind his lot," twenty by sixty-nine rods, 25 Nov. 1685. Fennick, or Phoenix, had a town grant of twenty acres, 18 Aug. 1679, which was laid out to him in parcels at several times. This land seems to have been southeast of the land sold to Peter Lewis at about the head of Martin's Cove and on the southeast side of the Cove. It bordered on land of Nicholas Weeks, on the parsonage land which included Pine Point, and on land of Enoch Hutchins, Sen. Phoenix bought, also, twelve acres of Jonathan Mendum in 1672. This probably adjoined his town grant on the south.

Enoch Hutchins bought of Thomas Withers, 7 July 1675, a tract of land "the one end facing upon Spruce Cricke, being twenty foure pooles in breadth, & runneng up by a brooke on the South side of It, one hundred & sixty pooles." It thus contained twenty-four acres. Its location is more definitely stated in Hutchins' will, wherein he speaks of his Garrison house and "about thirty acres more or less fronting the maine Creeck Bounded in breadth by Rowland Williams and Martins Cove." This was in 1693. Enoch Hutchins was killed by Indians in his own door, 9 May 1698, and his wife, who was Mary Stevenson of Dover, was carried into captivity. This seems to locate Hutchins' lot between Peter Lewis on the north and Nicholas Weeks and John Phoenix on the south, at Martin's Cove, just south of Pine Point.¹

Thomas Withers had a daughter, Elizabeth, who married Benjamin Berry and after his decease Dodavah Curtis. Withers willed to this daughter "all that Land on the Eastward side over aganest John Shapleighs, between John Hoole & Lewis." Jane, widow of Thomas Withers, confirmed this by a deed, dated 14 March 1690. It specifies the "land from Edmund Hamans Reaching home to Peter Lewiss, aboth sides the Easting Creek." Here Hamans is named on the northern boundary because Hoole had sold to him between the date of the will and that of the deed.

A plot of this region was made by John Godsoe when John Shapleigh sold, 26 Nov. 1762, to Richard Keating "land whereon I lately lived," containing sixty acres, "bounded Southerly and southwesterly by the mill pond and creek called Spruce Creek, northeasterly by land of Joseph Wilson, northerly and northeast-erly by the road, westerly and northwesterly by the land of Ben Hammons," and "my three-quarters of the mill thereto adjoining and the Dam, etc., and one half acre on the west side of the Creek." James Johnson and wife, Lydia, sold, 17 March 1763, to Richard Keating ten acres, "bounded Southwesterly by Spruce Creek and on other parts by Richard Keatings land," "it being the land where my father Samuel Johnson of Kittery dec'd formerly lived, near the grist mill that stands on said creek where the old saw mill stood." The plot shows Benjamin Hammons' house and barn with the road between them; also the house of Keatings, formerly of Dodavah Curtis; also the old house of John Shapleigh on Oak Point in 1679. A portion of the land marked in the plot as belonging to Joseph Wilson seems to have belonged originally to Henry Bodge. In 1701 it is described as "eight acres lying on the North side of Spruce Creek, butting on the Creek at the westerly end and on the other sides by David Hutchings, Rowland Williams & ye Parsonage land and is the land whereon Bodge lived in his life time."

Withers and Benjamin Berry, sons of Elizabeth (Withers) Berry, just mentioned, deeded the southern part of the above mentioned tract to Andrew Haley, 11 June 1718. It contained twenty-five acres, bounded "on ye South Side by ye Lands of Peter Lewes and on ye East End with ye Lands of ye sd Andrew Haley and ye North Side with ye Eastern branch of Spruce Creek as far as ye Channel of ye Branch of sd Creek goes and on ye west End with ye sd Spruce Creek down to Low water mark."¹

deeded by her and her second husband, Dodavah Curtis, to her son, Withers Berry, 8 March 1722. It was described as "on the eastern side of the river called Spruce Creek over against Oak Point," containing fifty acres, bounded "Eastwardly by the Country road and Southwardly by the Eastern Creek and Westwardly by the river of sd Spruce Creek and Northwardly by Benja Hamons his Land." Withers Berry gave this back to his mother in his will and she willed it to her cousin Nicholas Shapleigh in 1743, together with the saw-mill on Spruce Creek.

That saw-mill was erected by Withers earlier than 1681, and in 1683 ten acres of land on the east side of the river were sold to James Johnson, "beginning eight rodd above ye saw Mill and running thirty rods on the Creek." Johnson bought, also, one quarter of the saw-mill and corn-mill near by. This James Johnson was a mill-wright from Hampton, N. H., and lived in Kittery only a short time, though his son Samuel settled there.

Next north of Dodavah Curtis was a tract of seventy-five acres sold by Thomas Withers to John Hoole, July, 1671. Hoole sold the southern half to Edmund Hammons, 26 July 1681, who had already bought two acres adjoining of Withers, in 1679. Here he and his son, Benjamin, lived many years. This family should be distinguished from the Hammond family that lived on the Pascataqua River. No connection between the two families has been traced.

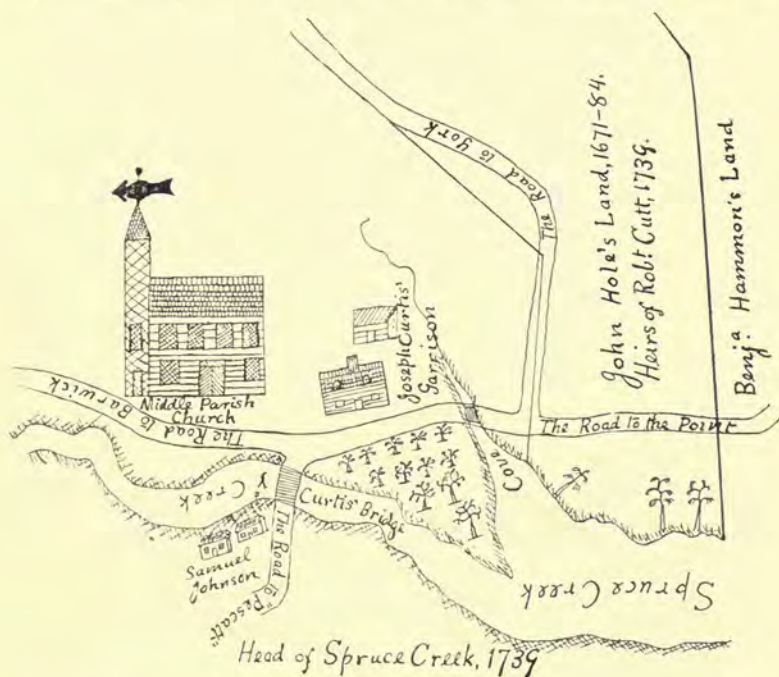

Hoole sold the rest of the lot purchased of Withers, together with a town grant, to Joseph Curtis, brother of Dodavah already mentioned, 12 Nov. 1684. The lot contained one hundred and thirty-five acres. John Hoole had a house here in 1682. His wife's name was Elizabeth. He is later called a merchant of Barbadoes. The name has not been handed down in Kittery.

Joseph Curtis had already bought of Withers, 12 June 1682, eighty acres situated north of Hoole on Spruce Creek and bounded on the south by a "little Cricke where formerly Mr Hooles sparrs layd." Curtis had a Garrison house, and he well needed it, for he was pretty close to the frontier settlements. East of him Henry Bodge owned a small place called "Pudding Hole." He sold this to Curtis in 1682. Curtis was "bounded on ye upper side by Capt. Wm. ffernald."

The accompanying illustration shows more clearly than words can the situation at the head of Spruce Creek in the olden time. The basis of it is a plot drawn by John Godsoe, surveyor, and spread upon the town records by Tobias Leighton. It is, probably, the only picture in existence of the Middle Parish Church. The houses appear in the original plot without any names attached, but it is evident from old deeds that the owners were as here indicated. The road to Pescatt is that to the Pascataqua River at Woodman's Ferry, where the old Rice Tavern now stands.

We will now go down Spruce Creek and glance at the settlers on the west side. Just across Curtis' Bridge and north of the road lived Samuel Johnson after he moved up from the east side near Shapleigh's Mill. He died here in the year the plot was made. He bought this piece of land of Nicholas Shapleigh in 1719. West of Johnson lived James Pickernell. South of Johnson lived Dr. Pierce a little later, and south of him was Shapleigh's "Oak Point Farm." This lay between the main branch of Spruce Creek and the "Western Creek," so called. North of the Western Creek was "Ox Point," sold to Richard Manson of Portsmouth in 1680, and by him conveyed to his son John. South of Manson lived Paul Williams in 1689.

South of the Western Creek was Eagle Point, where Thomas Withers owned another farm. Indeed, his land stretched clear through from the river at Woodman's Ferry to Spruce Creek at this point. Twelve acres of the northerly part of Eagle Point were sold by Withers to John Ball in 1667, and the town added a grant of ten acres more, adjoining on the west, in 1671. Ball conveyed the whole to his son-in-law, Francis Pettegrow, in 1717, for maintenance of himself and wife, Joan, during life. He was then bounded on the west by John Shepherd and on the south by William Godsoe. The first William Godsoe married the widow of Thomas Withers and so got possession of Eagle Point and lived there. There are faint traces of his cellar about twenty-five rods from the extreme point of land and midway between two apple-trees still standing. The private burial-place of the Ball family is marked by seven or eight distinctly rounded graves near the hilltop west of where Ball's house stood. The Shepherd graveyard is further southwest, and the numerous rough granite headstones indicate that it was the burial place of several families in this vicinity. Shepherd's house stood down in the field, perhaps a quarter of a mile west of the graveyard.

At the head of the Western Creek Nathaniel Keen bought one hundred acres of John Shapleigh in 1691. This farm is now owned by Rufus Harrison Remick, and his house stands on the site of the old Keen residence.

In 1725 John Shepherd mortgaged a piece of land bounded on the northern side "by the Western Branch of Spruce Creek and the Land Caled Kerremuck." It seems to have been a local designation of a small lot of land. The following deposition¹ explains the name and furnishes other information.

"The deposition of Robert Eliot, Esq., of full age Testifieth and Saith that some time in the ——— in the year 1689 he made an agreement with John Shepard, Senr., of Spruce Creek, about the ten acres of land which Corromack Ogada bought of Ephraim Crocket of sd Spruce Creek Deceased, which agreement was this. That sd Deponent was either to goe up myself or Send to run ye line between sd Shepard and sd Corromacks land afore Specified, which when done was to be a final end of all difference between sd Shepard and sd Corromack for sd ten acres of land. Accordingly I ye Deponent sent my Son Nathaniel Eliot up with Nicholas Heskins, Enoch Hutchins and Mr. William Godsoe, run ye line and laid out sd land of sd Corromacks as doth more fully appear by the draught of sd land given under sd Godsoes hand as Surveyr. And this was to be a finall end relating to sd land for ever and further ye sd Shepard did engage to stand to ye abovesd agreement, his heirs and assigns.

Samuel Penhallow."

This land was granted to Ephraim Crocket in 1672, sold by him to Charles Ogrado, yeoman, of Portsmouth, by him to Robert Eliot in 1689, and by him to Nathaniel Keen, 3 July 1687, or two years before Ogrado signed the transfer to Eliot. Why Charles Ogrado is called Corromack in the deposition does not appear. It may have been a nickname, and the land was called "Kerremuck" for a long time.

In company with Moses A. Safford, Esq., I had a delightful stroll over the whole region west of Spruce Creek from Eagle Point to Ram Island, anciently called Grantum Island. We were able to locate eighteen of the old residents by the distinct traces of their cellars. The first dweller south of William Godsoe was John Waters, a fisherman. The deed was given by Thomas Withers, 13 May 1674, but it declares that the land was sold "to John Waters before his decease, in the yéare ffty one." The lot contained eight acres, "sixteen rods in breadth by the water side," and so running back into the woods eighty rods on a west south-west line, and bounded "on the North side with a little Cove & Spring: on the south side, next adjoining to Alexander Joanes his land." Mary, daughter of John Waters, married Henry Benson, sometimes written "Bencent," and they sold these eight acres to Thomas Jenkins, blacksmith, 12 July 1672.¹ It is quite impossible to mistake the location of the house near the water side. It was a beautiful and convenient location for a fisherman. Benson bought thirty acres of Dodavah Curtis in 1702, and so lived in the eastern part of the town.

Alexander Jones, who lived next south of Benson, died before 1722. The place passed to his son Daniel and from him to Daniel's son, Alexander. Old residents still remember the place as the "Jones field." A house, the last on this side of the Creek, was moved from this place within the memory of some now living. Alexander Jones was living here as early as 1674. He was probably son of the Alexander Jones who came over with Capt. John Mason's Company, and doubtless received this land as a grant from the town.

The selectmen, with consent of Thomas Withers, granted, 2 June 1669, to John Ameredeth and John Fenix twenty-four acres near Eagle Point, thirty-five rods by the water side, adjoining Robert Cutt's headline, "along ye sd headline to ye water side upon a northwest and southeast line." In 1706 John Phoenix and William Sentle request that this piece of land be divided, "at a place called Broad Cove near Eagle Point." Sentle had married a daughter of John Alcock. Phoenix sold his share to his son-in-law, Hezekiah Elwell, in 1710. It was "at the head of Broad Cove," bounded "on the west by the road that goes to York and on ye southern side by land of Walter Denniford & on ye northern side by land of Mr. Godsoe. Sentle sold his share to Denniford in 1709. Denniford bought eight acres adjoining on the south, of Nicholas Shapleigh and others, heirs of Thomas Withers, 14 June 1731. This last lot was seventeen and a half poles in breadth on Broad Cove and stretched one hundred and eight poles to the highway that goes to York, where the lot was only eight poles in breadth. — It was bounded on the south by land of William Fernald and of Thomas Cutt.

We come now to the original estate of Robert Cutt, that stretched from Crooked Lane to Broad Cove. His son, Richard Cutt, gave to his brother-in-law, Richard Bryer, 16 Dec. 1693, "all that creek of water lyeing betweene the land of him the said Richard Bryar and John Muggridge generally known by the name of long Creeke goeing in at the mouth of broad Cove,"—"as all priviledges runs of water small Creekes or riuets or any waters that pass therein out of any brooke or swampe into the aforesaid Creeke as also liberty to Dam over the said Creek in any part thereof for the erecting of a Corne mill or sawmill or fuling-mill."¹ The remains of the dam here built are very noticeable.

¹York Deeds V, 166.

It was made of large stones, blasted and transported hither with much labor and expense. The dam was wide enough for a carriage road upon it. About the middle of it was the site of the mill. The millstone of red granite, still seen, was probably brought from across the Atlantic. There is no stone like it in Kittery. On both sides of Long Creek cellars indicate that large houses once stood, and on the hill to the west probably Richard Bryer lived. A road ran from the mill westward to the York road. Another road ran southward toward Whipple Cove.

A beautiful meadow stretches southwest from Long Creek and the mill dam, and beyond the meadow rises a rocky hill, which commands a view of all Spruce Creek and adjacent lands. On the southern slope of this hill there are traces of half a dozen or more cellars, a brickyard and a blacksmith's shop. The hill slopes roughly to the west in a point projecting into Spruce Creek, called anciently Long Point, when William Seely's land was described as beginning "at Kirkes [Carle's] his land & so up by the water side of Spruce Creek, to ye Middle of a poynt of Land Called long poynt to a high pine tree on yt poynt." The point was afterwards known as Morgrage's Point. The cellar of John Morgrage is distinctly traceable. Once there was a lawn thirty or forty feet broad south of it, but the waters of the Creek have washed the land away clear up into the cellar, and so there has been erosion all around the little curving bay southward to what was once "Carle's Point." On this bay was once a shipyard, and half buried spars could be seen here within the memory of some. Here must have been, nearly two hundred years ago, quite a village of artisans. Nobody remains to tell the tale. The land on this bay was granted, 10 May 1667, to William Seely, first husband to Elizabeth, daughter of Hugh Gunnison. It was bounded "by ye creek on ye east side and on ye southwest end with a cove comonly called Karles cove and on ye south East with Karles land," and on the other side "by Mr. Robert Cutts fence." The grant contained twenty-five acres. Seely's widow married Thomas Cowell, and she sold this grant, 4 Jan. 1678, to Abel Porter. He sold it, 22 March 1679-80, to Michael Endle, and it was then called "Engle's Point." Endle deeded it, 15 Dec. 1691, to John Morgrage for maintenance during life, and it remained for many years in the Morgrage family.¹ Seven acres of the southwest part of it were sold to William Bryar, 18 Nov. 1710, and he sold the same to Diamond Sargent, 15 Jan. 1717-18. Morgrage bought of Richard Cutt, 28 June 1695, "a tract of land whereon the sd Morgridg doth now dwell," bounded with Spruce Creek, Broad Cove and the Mill Creek. This looks as though Morgrage then lived just east of the mill dam, where a cellar may be seen. Cutt calls Morgrage "my well beloved friend."¹

South of the little bay above mentioned is now a rocky little island, called Negro Island from the fact that a negro servant of Mr. Cutts lost his life there. Its connection with the mainland has been, evidently, washed away, so that at high tide a reedy marsh appears. This was first owned by Richard Carle and was called Carle's Point. The cove south of it and west of Ram Island was Carle's Cove. The point was sold by Carle to John Shepherd in 1666, by him to William Seely the following year, and by Elizabeth Seely to Rev. William Scriven, 15 Nov. 1673. Traces of Carle's house may yet be seen, I am told by the present owner of this land. Carle had wife, Amy, and a daughter Amy, who married Samuel Knight. Carle had a grant of fifteen acres on Spinney's Cove, and he and Knight lived there.

After Rev. William Scriven went to South Carolina his son sold this land and twenty acres more on the west of it to Robert Cutt.

We have now arrived at "Gunnison's Neck, south of Carle's Cove," and passing Grantum or Ram Island we sail out of Spruce Creek into the Pascataqua River at the entrance of Crooked Lane. This introduces us to a new chapter in the history of the old settlements.

ALONG CROOKED LANE.

The neck of land lying between Spruce Creek and Crooked Lane was called Gunnison's Neck. It was originally owned by Robert Mendum, and here he and John White did plant. Mendum sold it to Hugh Gunnison, 15 July 1654. Gunnison leased this to his two sons-in-law, William Seely and William Rogers, 15 March 1658-9. It was described as a "Certain Necke of Land liing & being on the north west side of Spruce Cricke at the entering of the mouth of Crooked Layne, as alsoe a little island situate and being in Spruce Cricke Commonly Called Grantums Yland." The lease was for twenty-one years, but after the death of Hugh Gunnison his widow, in 1660, gave a deed of the place to Seely and Rogers. In the conveyance an exception was made of two acres granted to Francis Trickey. After the death of Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Seely, it seems to have come into the possession of their brother, Elihu Gunnison. Indeed William Rogers deeded his half to Elihu Gunnison 6 May 1675. The whole neck was confirmed unto Gunnison at a legal meeting of the inhabitants of the town, 10 May 1703. In a deed he says that the land had been possessed and improved by his father, Hugh Gunnison. The neck contained about sixty acres. Elihu Gunnison, Jr., received it from his father and lived near to the ferry landing, perhaps twenty rods below the present bridge.

Elihu Gunnison was appointed to keep a ferry over Spruce Creek in 1699, the earliest ferry I have found any record of at this point. A deed dated 3 Aug. 1699, also mentions "the present high way or road that goes to ye point or to ye sd Elihu Gunnisons house or ferry."

The point of land jutting in a southerly direction, at the mouth of Spruce Creek and of Crooked Lane, was sold, 29 May 1700, by Elihu Gunnison, Jr., to his brother-in-law, Josiah Skillin. It included an acre and a half and was bounded on the northwest by land of Samuel Pray, "on the north by a country road," — — "and on all other parts with ye river Vulgarly Called Crooked lane, running out with a long point into ye sd river." Skillin sold it, 4 June 1710, to Jonathan Dam with "Saw pitt & Sellers, with ye ground ways for Shipbuilding." Here, then, was another ship-yard. The point is now occupied by summer cottages, the most prominent of which, in the picture, is known as the Bradbury cottage.

Next to Jonathan Dam lived Samuel Pray, who bought, 23 Aug. 1699, an acre and a half, twelve rods in breadth by Crooked

GUNNISON'S NECK, 1902.

Lane, and northwest of him were the "lands of Mr. Hubert," probably William Hubbard, who lived here but a short time. Joseph Gunnison purchased a small house-lot west of Pray in 1721, and John Follet, who had married Sarah Gunnison, was then living west of Gunnison and probably had been living there since his marriage in Boston, in 1700. A deed says that Follet was a butcher.

We must now have arrived near the two acres mentioned above as belonging to Francis Trickey, fisherman. He was, probably, a brother of Thomas Trickey of Dover, and was himself a taxpayer in Dover in 1639 and a resident of Portsmouth in 1652.

He died about 1682, and his son John in 1686. Sarah Trickey, widow of Francis, was living here in 1691. It was their daughter, Martha, who married Elihu Gunnison. Another daughter, Sarah, married Samuel Winkley, and he was living here in 1705. Three generations of Winkleys here worked at their trade of boat-building. A grant of twenty acres, made to Francis Trickey in 1656 and reaching from Crooked Lane to Spruce Creek, was laid out to Samuel Winkley in 1702.

Next to Francis Trickey there was a tract of twenty acres, twenty rods on the water side by one hundred and sixty rods into the woods, granted to John White, 19 June 1654. White sold this to George Lydden, seaman, 9 May 1670. It lay "between the land of John Merriadah (Ameredeth) and Francis Trickey." Lydden sold the easterly half of his land to Edward Clarke in 1672. Clarke died between 1672 and 1677, and the land was soon in the possession of Edward Lydden, probably son of George. The westerly half of the original grant was sold by the heirs of George Lydden, 20 July 1698, to Roger Kelly, who was still the owner in 1710. Kelly had been a fisherman at the Isles of Shoals. Edward Lydden's part was sold to Samuel Skillin in 1705, and he sold it in 1710 to his brother, Josiah Skillin, who had taken for his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Lydden.

The next lot of twenty acres on the west was granted, 19 June 1654, to Thomas Duston. It was 28 by 120 rods and reached from Crooked Lane to Spruce Creek. In a deposition, made 28 April 1661, Thomas Duston gave his age as about 55 years. He signed the Dover Combination in 1640 and was before Court in New Hampshire for debt, 5 May 1643. He is mentioned in Kittery in 1650 and was constable there in 1652. He had rented his place on Crooked Lane to Richard Downe in 1659-60 and was then living in Portsmouth. Elizabeth Duston, his widow, gave a deed of the place to John Cutt, 19 March 1662. There seems to have been some litigation about it years later, and the heirs of Duston recovered the place. In 1678 Lucy Wills, aged about 46, and Sarah Lidden, aged about 38, testified that Thomas Duston's house was formerly burned and he had to mortgage his land to John Cutt. They say, too, that after Duston's death, his widow married a Mr. Button.¹ She married Matthias Button of Haverhill, 9 June 1663. She was his third wife. She died in Haverhill, Mass., 16 July 1690.

June 8 1703, administration was granted to Thomas Duston of Haverhill on the estate of his father, Thomas Durston of Kittery.¹ This fixes the parentage of the famous Thomas Duston or Dustin of Haverhill, who married, 3 Dec. 1677, Hannah, daughter of Michael and Hannah (Webster) Emerson. They had eight children, seven of whom were rescued by him when the Indians burned his house 15 March 1697. The babe was dashed against a tree. Hannah with her nurse and a youth were carried away. In the night the three captives arose and killed their twelve Indian captors and returned home with twelve scalps besides their own.²

The Kittery records say that, 14 Dec. 1733, there were laid out to Timothy Duston, John Watts and others, heirs of Thomas Duston, twenty acres granted to Thomas Duston, 19 June 1654.³

Meanwhile the land had been occupied by others. John Cutt transferred it to John Ameredeth. It was described as lying between the "lands of Robert Cutt and George Lydine." John Ameredeth died 26 Jan. 1690, leaving widow, Joan, and daughter, Joanna, who had married John Alcock. After the death of Alcock William Sente lived at this place.

West of Ameredeth was a broad tract of land, containing about three hundred acres, lying between Crooked Lane and Spruce Creek, granted by the town, 16 Sept. 1651, to Richard and George

OLDEST GARRISON HOUSE.

Occupied by Robert Cutt and later by William Whipple.

Leader and John and Richard Cutt. William James was then living near the northwest limit of the lot, on Crooked Lane. The whole lot soon passed into the possession of Robert Cutt. On a point of land, southeast of a little cove, he built his house, a portion of which is still standing. It became famous as a garrison house and later the residence of William Whipple. It is now the residence of Mr. Harrison J. Philbrick, who is justly proud of its old traditions and the abundance of antique furniture and ornaments that adorn its interior. The picture here presented shows the rear of the house, the foliage preventing the obtaining of a front view.

At this point Cutt carried on his business of ship building. The estate of Robert Cutt fell to his son, Richard, and he, 28 June 1694, sold the easterly half of it to his brother Robert, "excepting William Scrivens Land on Barnes Point given him by me before this." In the same deed the land of William Scriven and of Mary Churchwood are mentioned on the northern boundary. These lands had been deeded by Richard Cutt to William Scriven and to Mary Cutt in 1686, twenty acres to each, bordering on Broad Cove in Spruce Creek. It appears as though Mary Cutt had married Humphrey Churchwood before marrying Richard Bryar. William Scriven had married Bridget, sister to Richard Cutt, the grantee. There is no evidence that he lived on this northern lot, but it is known that he lived on the point of land just west of the old Cutt mansion. In the year 1700 Cutt sold eighty-five acres to Tobias Fernald, which soon passed into the possession of William Fernald. The tract began "at ye Middle of ye Cove at Low water mark agaainst Mr. William Scrivens Warf and Land" and the boundary on the west was "ye Middle of ye Cove at low water Mark by the land that was Mr. William Deaments Deceased." The tract had a dwelling-house and barn thereon. The house and land of William Scriven at "Barnes Point" were sold, 29 Oct. 1704, to Nicholas Frost of Portsmouth. It was "adjacent to Mr. Robert Cutts' dwelling-house," about half an acre, "now in ye occupation of the Reverend Mr. John Newmarch Minister of sd town." This Nicholas Frost was a mariner, son of Nicholas Frost the "beaver trader," and had married Dorothy Mendum. He was not at all connected with the family of Nicholas, the father of Major Charles Frost. It is doubtful whether this Nicholas Frost ever lived in the house he bought of Scriven, for he sold it, 10 March 1707-8, to Diamond Sargent. Diamond Sargent, tailor, of York, sold it, 19 Aug. 1717, to "James Webber, cordwainer, once of Yarmouth." This house long ago disappeared, though the doorstep, over which the Rev. William Scriven walked, may still be seen. It was voted that school be kept at the house of James Webber in 1734. Webber sold to William Whipple, 13 March 1739.

¹York Deeds IV. 132.

Next west of the Cutt estate was a tract of land purchased by John Diamond, ropemaker, of William James, 15 June 1651, lying between Cutt and Thomas Withers. In the deed William James says that he bought the land of Alexander James.¹ John Diamond signed the submission to Massachusetts in 1652, was constable in 1659 and Clerk of the Writs in 1662. He was a shipbuilder, as a deed shows. John Spencer of Saco says that one of his shallops was "built for mee at Pischataqua by John Dyamond." He died before 1667. His sons, John, Andrew and William, received portions of his estate. William had ten acres next to Robert Cutt.

TRIPE'S POINT.

It was twenty rods wide on the water side. William Diamond died about 1678, and his widow married Edward Carter and afterward James Blagdon. In 1691 Joan Carter sold to her son, John Diamond, twenty-eight acres on Crooked Land, ten of which she had bought of Dennis Downing, it having been granted to him by the town. Probably John Diamond soon died, for the land was again in the possession of his mother in 1702. She was then Joan Blagdon, and she and her son-in-law, Richard Tucker, and wife, Grace, sold the aforesaid ten acres to Sylvanus Tripe, who had married her daughter, Margaret. Here, then, on Tripe's or Traip's Point, William Diamond was the first settler. The land long remained in the possession of the Traip family, and John Pettegrew, son of Elizabeth (Traip) Pettegrew, lives there now. The railway to the Navy Yard has taken away a portion of this old estate. The house, now in ruins, was perhaps built by William Diamond and was certainly occupied by the first Sylvanus Tripe.

We come now to the present village of Kittery Foreside. All the land here was originally owned by Alexander James (Jones?) and then by John Diamond, the shipbuilder. For ten years or more Thomas Wills lived as the next neighbor to William Diamond on the northwest, or right in the heart of the present village. Thomas Wills, Jr., married Sarah, daughter of Walter Abbot of Portsmouth, and it was Abbot's intention to give this place to his son-in-law, who was a mariner. But he failed to execute the deed of gift, and so after his death his sons, Peter, Thomas and John Abbot, deeded this lot to Thomas and Sarah (Abbot) Wills, 30 Jan. 1688. They had a daughter, Sarah Wills, who married John Gear (spelled also Gere, Geare and Geere.) He was a juryman in 1694 and died before 1712. Sylvanus Tripe, in his will dated 29 Dec. 1714, says, "It is my will that there be a convenient Space of Land allowed at the point before the house for a common Landing place for them [his children and heirs] & from the said landing place or water Side a Convenient quantity of Land next to the widow Gear her Land for a highway for them to the Country road."

Feb. 4, 1728-9, Sarah Gere of Portsmouth deeded to her son Samuel Gere of Kittery and son-in-law John Abbot of Portsmouth a dwelling house and thirteen acres, granted to Richard Abbot 13 June 1659, by him sold to Walter Abbot, and from him descended to his daughter, Sarah Wills, and "from her descended to me." John and Sarah (Abbot) Gear had son Samuel, the same undoubtedly who married, 7 Jan. 1724-5, Abigail Hodsdon, and daughter, Joanna, who was baptized with Samuel 17 April 1715 and evidently married John Abbot. Another daughter may have been Abigail, who married John Thomas 24 Dec. 1733.

Thomas Wills senior had for a second wife the widow Lucia (Treworgy) Chadbourne in 1669. After his death, about 1688, she married Hon. Elias Stileman of Portsmouth. Some have confused this Thomas Wills, who is sometimes written Wells, with the Rev. Thomas Wells of Wells, Me.

The town records have the following under date of 2 May 1674, "Measured and layd out unto John Deament [Diamond] his house lot with an addition of sixty rods in length at ye head of it, the whole containing forty acres three quarters and thirty rods on ye south east side of Mr. Thomas Withers land, 182 rods in length from ye river into ye woods and on ye south east side 160 rods long and ye breadth by ye river 51 rods and at ye head in the woods 71 rods."

KITTERY FORESIDE.

Since the days of John Diamond there has been more or less of ship-building at this place. The village, however, had little growth till the Navy Yard was established on the island near by. It is now a thriving village and a close contrast with Tripe's Point, which remains about as it was two centuries ago. The village has quite outgrown its rival at Kittery Point. It can not yet be told what the new development of the Navy Yard, the Electric Road, and the Water Works may do for this ancient place, now almost entirely modernized. No old landmark remains, so far as I have been able to learn.

It may have been John Diamond, 2d, who was put to death with torture by Indians in Wells in 1602. John Woodman was administrator of his estate and sold forty acres to Nicholas Walden in 1699, which Walden sold back to Woodman at once. Here Woodman lived and kept the ferry "from Withers point to Strawberry banke." The town records say that "John Woodman presenting his request to the Selectmen and others the inhabitants of this Town, for their approbation for his keeping a Ferry from Kittery to Strawberry Bank, as it was granted to him by the Court in the year 1692, which is granted by the town and voted accordingly by the Majr parte thereof." In connection with this the following record is of interest. "The town receiving a Citation from the General Court on the Petition of John Langdon to have a bridge from his Island to Kittery and to keep a Ferry from said Island to Portsmouth, May 12, 1792, the town voted an answer to said Citation, that in 1692 the County Court granted to John Woodman and his heirs and assigns the Privilege of keeping a Ferry from Kittery to Portsmouth and that in 1699 the town of Kittery gave their approbation and grant to said Woodman in like manner, and said Ferry had been in their possession to the present time as their Property in fee simple and that the town are of opinion that to take it from them without compensation would be unconstitutional." When the bridge to Portsmouth was built, about 1828, some compensation was allowed to the heirs of John Woodman. Woodman sold his house and ferry to his son-in-law, John More, in 1724.

Next northwesterly to Diamond's was the grant of four hundred acres from Gorges to Thomas Withers, 1 March 1643. It was bounded on the southeast side "with a Cricke & burnt tree," and also on the "Nore west side with a Cricke and burnt tree." Withers received at the same time two islands south and southwest of his grant, containing by estimation two hundred and eighty acres. The grant to Withers stretched away in a northeast direction towards Spruce Creek two hundred and seventy-six rods, till it met the land that was afterward granted to him at Eagle Point, on Spruce Creek. It was two hundred and forty rods in breadth. The northeast half fell to his son-in-law, Thomas Rice, and the other half to another son-in-law, John Shapleigh. Portions of Shapleigh's half were sold to the Rev. John Newmarch and to Shapleigh's brother-in-law, Stephen Eastwick. Rice's part remained among his descendants for many generations.

Thomas Withers came over with Mason's company in 1631. His wife's name was Jane. He was Deputy to General Court in 1656 and held town office frequently. The greatness of his land grants shows the estimation in which he was held. He held the offices of Councillor and Commissioner. His death occurred in March or April, 1685. His widow married William Godsoe in 1691 and was living in 1703. His daughter Sarah married John Shapleigh about 1673. Another daughter, Mary, born in 1660, married Thomas Rice about 1675, and a third daughter, Elizabeth, married first, 27 Nov. 1688, Benjamin Berry; and second, before 1702, Dodavah Curtis. Her two sons, Benjamin and Withers Berry, died unmarried. Thus the name Withers perished with the first settler but his descendants are many in the Shapleigh, Rice, and allied families.

The island granted to Thomas Withers in 1643 was divided between his daughters Mary and Elizabeth. Here Benjamin Berry lived for a short time and then it was called "Berry's Island." James Heard had a house-lot here in 1671. It has been called Langdon's Island and Badger's Island according to the name of its owner. The original name, Withers Island, ought to be applied to it, so as to preserve an ancient landmark and to commemorate one who had a very important part in the early history of Kittery.

VI.

UP THE PASCATAQUA.

The last chapter left us at the northern limit of Thomas Withers' land, opposite Strawberry Bank. Robert Mendum was his next neighbor on the northwest. We have met him before at Kittery Point, where he built a new house in 1648 and where, doubtless, he was licensed to keep an ordinary in 1644. He was constable in 1652 and Selectman in 1673. He had a grant of one hundred and forty acres in 1651. We have seen also that he owned land on the east side of Spruce Creek, though he never lived there. He died in 1682 and his son Jonathan inherited the homestead on the Pascataqua.

Next above Mendum the original settler was Jeremy Sheres. His surname is written also Sheires, Sheares, and Shores. He is first mentioned in 1649, when he rented for seven years a new house of Nicholas Frost. The contract was not fulfilled. Sheres and wife Susanna sold, 14 Nov. 1664, their one hundred acres which had been granted by the town, 3 March 1651, and moved to Cape Neddick in York, where he was living in 1680.¹ The purchaser was Nathaniel Fryer of Portsmouth, who sold it to Christopher Adams, 1 March 1668. It was twenty-four rods in breadth by the water side and lay "between the Lands of Robert Mendum on the wester side and William Palmer on the Nother side." Christopher Adams signed a petition in Braintree in 1645 and is thought to have been a brother of Henry Adams, ancestor of the Presidents Adams. He was a mariner of Portsmouth at the time when he bought this place. His will made 13 June 1686 and probated 21 Sept. 1687, is recorded in Boston. The inventory included one hundred and twenty acres in his "plantation" and seventy acres bought of William Palmer and Peter Glanfield. A plot of his farm is on the town records, comprising all between Mendum's Creek and Mast Cove, 44 by 360 rods.

William Palmer was in Kittery as early as 1642. His daughter Sarah married William King, to whom Palmer gave sixteen acres at the eastern end of his lot, lying along "Mast Cove." Palmer gave, 21 April 1670, twelve acres to Peter Glanfield and entrusted to him his little daughter Rachel, then only three years and nine months old, to be brought up. The forty acres sold to Adams lay at "Palmer's Point." The Adams "plantation" thus comprised the point of land on which the Railway Station now is. Palmer moved to Cape Porpoise in 1675.

The lot occupied by Peter Glanfield was first granted to Joseph Alcock, son of John Alcock of York. He sold to Christopher Joyse and Edward Clark. Clark soon died and his widow, Mary, married John Smith, senior, of Cape Neddick. She was daughter of George Farrow of Ipswich, and was born 6 Jan. 1644-5. Samuel Knight sold the land to Glanfield in 1682. I have found no record of any descendants of Glanfield.

¹The inventory of his estate was made in 1701. Mention is made of a son-in-law, John Green of Boston.

North of Glanfield was a lot owned by Thomas Spinney. His grant of two hundred acres lay on both sides of the "Great Cove," later called "Spinney's Cove." Though the grant was made in 1659, it is probable that he had been living here for some time.

Above Thomas Spinney, on the east side of Great Cove, was a lot of fifteen acres originally owned by Thomas Turner and mortgaged by him to George Walton of Portsmouth, 16 Aug. 1659. Probably the land was unimproved and therefore was regranted by the town to Richard Carle. He sold six acres of it to his son-in-law, Samuel Knight, in 1684. Knight sold this, and Carle sold all the rest of the original grant to Samuel Spinney in 1682 and 1693.

Then came Christian Remick's twenty acres, granted 17 July 1661, and laid out 22 Feb. 1665. He deeded this and other grants east of it to his son Isaac, who sold the same to John Dennet, Jr., 2 May 1698, and moved to South Carolina. Dennet added to his farm by purchase of Richard King's seventeen acres in 1700 and by town grants. This farm has been in the possession of the Dennet family until now. The house, built about the year 1720, stands "on the east side of the Eliot road about a mile above Portsmouth Bridge." . . . "The Remick of whom the farm was purchased resided in a house on the bank of the Creek west of the road, and opposite the Dennet house."¹

In 1697 there was a dispute between Thomas Spinney and Christian Remick about their boundary line, and in consequence the accompanying plot of lands appears in the records of the Superior Court at Boston with the following statement:

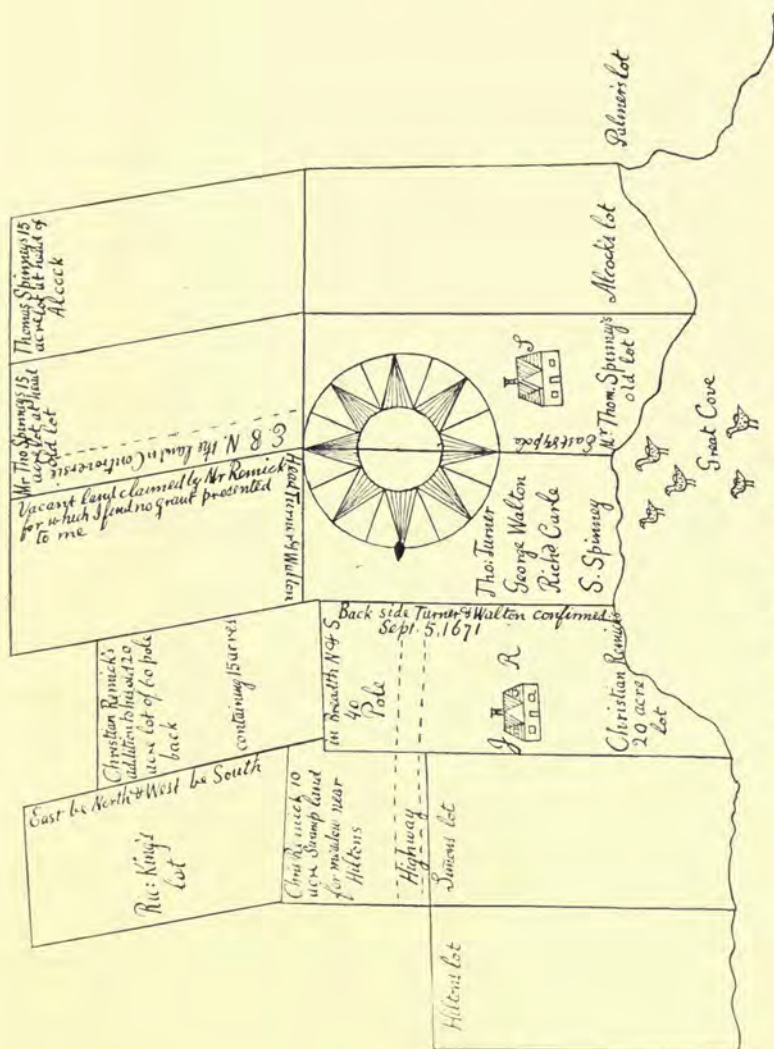

"Kittery, December 18th, 1697. At the motion and Request of Mr. Thomas Spinney layd out the Norther bounds of his old lot in the great Cove as also his addition at the head thereof containing fifteen acres, and in running out the aforesaid bounds as they were shewed to me by the sd Thomas Spinney and John Spinney I find the land in Controversie claimed by Mr Christian Remmick and Improved by Samll Spinney to fall within Mr Thomas Spin-

EAST SIDE OF GREAT COVE, 1697.

The plot is of interest as locating the old residence of Thomas Spinney, marked S, and also that of Isaac Remick, marked J. R.

The lot on the plan, marked "Simons lot," was granted to John Symonds, 17 Feb. 1661. It passed through the hands of Andrew Newcomb and William Hearle to the ownership of John Fernald, who lived on Eliot Neck. The lot of William Hilton, shown on the plan, was owned successively by John More, John Seward and James Fernald. The last lived here. The descriptions of the lots are confusing in the transfers, and it may be that the surveyor marked Symonds' lot as Hilton's and vice versa. All these lots on the east side of the Great Cove were forty rods in width and contained twenty acres.

Above James Fernald lived John Sloper in 1679, when he bought the lot of Stephen Paul, and above Sloper lived at the same date Richard Gowell. The land of Gowell was partly in what is now Eliot and partly in Kittery. A brook which is the dividing line between the towns ran through Gowell's land. He had only a few acres on the Cove, bought of Richard King in 1686. This was bounded on the south by the above mentioned brook. The rest of Gowell's land was his by grant of the town. His house was south of the town line and north of the brook.

Let us now return to the river lots. Thomas Spinney owned and lived on the extreme point of Eliot Neck. Near by lived his sons-in-law, John and Samuel Fernald. John Fernald bought of Widow Elizabeth Edwards, 1 March 1669, twelve acres near the Boiling Rock, which her husband, Stephen Edwards, had purchased of James Johnson, 7 April 1664.

Above Spinney and the Fernalds was a lot originally owned by John Alcock, son of the Joseph Alcock who has been mentioned before. He sold it, 10 Aug. 1681, to Peter Dixon. This Alcock was a shipwright and is the one who married Joan Ameredeth. The fifteen acres are described in the deed as "nere ye boyling Rock having ye River of Piscataqua on ye Southwest side thereof and is bounded on ye South East with ye land of Thomas Spinney and on ye Northwest with ye land of Christian Remax and ye north East with ye land of the aforesaid Peter Dixon."

Christian Remick received his first grant before 1651. Additional grants were made from time to time till he had two hundred and forty acres. He was a leading citizen, filling the offices of Surveyor, Treasurer and Selectman. His homestead on Eliot Neck was given to his son, Joshua. His house stood near the river, not far from the family burial ground. The graves of many of the earlier generations of Remicks are marked by unlettered headstones of rough granite, and close by a fitting memorial has been erected by Lieut. Oliver P. Remick, a descendant of the emigrant, Christian Remick.

MONUMENT OF CHRISTIAN REMICK.

Next north of Remick was Gabriel Tetherly, who bought, 1 May 1660, twenty acres of Thomas Onyon, the same, probably, who was afterward killed by Indians in Portsmouth. Daniel King lived north of him in 1674. Tetherly's land came into the possession of his son-in-law and administrator, Richard King, who sold sixteen acres of it to his son, Richard King. The latter sold, in 1716, a house lot of half an acre to John Scriggin. It was next to Remick's land and separated from the river and landing place by a road. Gabriel Tetherly had a shipyard here.

Next above Tetherly and King, on the river, the first settler known was John Andrews, who sold his house and lands to Daniel Paul and Bartholomew Smith, 21 March 1648, and moved to Braveboat Harbor. The deed mentions John Symonds on the north. The next year Paul bought a house and an acre of land of Richard Cutts, that had been owned and occupied by Stephen Sanborn, afterward of Hampton. It adjoined the land of Paul. His son, Stephen Paul, married a daughter of Antipas Maverick, who lived further up the river. Stephen inherited the homestead. Daniel Paul was a shipbuilder. He is first mentioned as a "mariner," which usually meant the master of a vessel, in Boston, 26 Aug. 1640. He declared himself from Ipswich, England, and gave a letter of attorney for the sale of lands in Ipswich and delivery of money to his wife, Elizabeth. He signed the submission of 1652 and had grants in 1653 and 1665. The last was "in the great cove below ye Boiling Rock," and he sold it to John Sloper, 14 Feb. 1679.

It seems that a portion of the lot bought by Paul and Smyth got into the possession of Joseph Alcock, Paul's son-in-law, for he sold it in 1662 to Weymouth Lydston, fisherman, and Gilbert Lugg. Lugg's half of the purchase passed to Charles Nelson, and was bought of his heirs by John Lydston. The Lydstons long lived here.

John Symonds came over with Mason's Company in 1634. He was in the employ of John Winter in 1636, and was appointed to lay out land in Kittery before 1652. Selectman in 1659. His farm on Eliot Neck was granted to him by the town. The name of his first wife is unknown. A daughter, Rebecca, married William Hilton, afterward of Exeter. He married for second wife, in 1668, Welthea, widow of John Goddard of Dover Neck and Oyster River. Goddard had come over in the same company with Symonds and died in 1660. It appears that Symonds after his second marriage lived in Dover.²

Symonds gave his homestead in Kittery to his son-in-law, Hilton, in 1667. He was probably son of Edward Hilton, the first settler at Dover Neck. He conveyed it to his son, Richard Hilton, 4 May 1684, except a house lot of three acres. It was described as land "formerly possessed and enjoyed by my father in Law John Simons being bounded on the Northwest side with Mary Bachellors high way and on the Southeast side with Daniel Pauls high way," to run back from the river "till it comes to a running brook that is ye head of it." This land passed into the hands of John Downing of Dover, who sold it, 23 Jan. 1699, to Joseph Hill of Kittery, formerly of Oyster River. Peter Staples was then living on the northeast and Charles Nelson on the southeast in part. It remained in the Hill family for many years. Others lands of John Symonds, west of the Great Cove as we have seen, passed to the ownership of John Fernald.

Under date of 14 Feb. 1648 we read in the York Deeds, "Mrs. Batchellers Lot is bounded from the High Way betwixt George Rogers his Lot & hers to the Hie Way betwixt John Simmons his Lot & Hers by the water Side & so up into ye woods backward to a little Brook of Water & to run thither upon a Northe East & by East Line." She was the third wife of the Rev. Stephen Batcheller of Hampton. He had moved to Portsmouth in 1647 and took her, "an honest neighbor," as house-keeper. Soon after he married her, though he was about eighty-seven years of age, and in 1650 he was fined in the Court of Norfolk County for not publishing his marriage according to law. There is no evidence that he lived in Kittery, and he soon applied for a divorce, which was refused. He left America about 1655 and died near London in 1660, aged one hundred. She applied for divorce in 1657 and evidently obtained it, though there has been found no record of it. She seems to have been a widow at the time of her marriage and had two children. Mary Batcheller married Thomas Turner and, 4 July 1674, they sold their lot to Peter Staple. Turner made a deposition, 23 June 1683, aged then 73. His estate was administered in 1684. The lot was described as "Land formerly granted to my wife by Mr. Thomas Gorges & alsoe regranted & confirmed to her by the Town of Kittery." This may be a hint as to who she was.

May 20, 1641, Thomas Gorges authorized "Robert Beedle to seise on & make use of the lot between George Rogers & John Simons & I promise in time Convenient to Draw up his lease." Nothing more is known of Robert Beedle, but the Town Records say that in 1679 ten acres were granted to Christopher Beedle which had been granted to his father Christopher Beedle in 1669, "at the head of the lot that was his grandfathers." Joseph Hill, who married Susanna, daughter of Christopher Beedle, Sen., relinquished all claim to this ten acre grant in favor of Peter Staples 20 March 1703-4. Christopher Beedle, Jr., held the ten acre lot in 1693, and his estate was administered by Peter Staples, 13 Sept. 1708. It would appear from the above that the third wife of the Rev. Stephen Batcheller was Mary, widow of Robert Beedle, and that is why the town laid out to Mrs. Batcheller the lot which Gorges had given to Robert Beedle.¹

Peter Staple had a grant in 1661. He married a widow, named Elizabeth, and died about 1719, leaving three sons. The farm remained long in the Staple family.

George Rogers was in the employ of John Winter at Richmond Island in 1639. He was living on his lot next north of ¹York Deeds I. 5, Part. II., 11 and VII., 29.

Beedle, afterward Staple, in 1641, and the lot was confirmed to him by the town in 1648. It was then bounded on the north by a highway and the lot of John Green. He was a juryman in 1650. There is no mention of him after 1654. Since Richard Rogers was living on this lot a few years later, it is concluded that he was the son of George. The estate continued in the Rogers name till within about a dozen years. It would appear from a Court record of March 1651 that the wife of George Rogers had died and that the children were left in need of care. The Court then ordered that one of his children should be entrusted to "Daniel Hard;" Edward Rishworth was to dispose of another, a girl, at Hampton; Anthony Emery was to have another and Miss Shapleigh was to have the youngest. "Benjamin Rogers is to have the cow that Goodman Emery had from his father."

The southern part of the original lot of George Rogers was before 1667 in the possession of Richard Miller. His wife, Grace, was, possibly, one of the daughters of George Rogers. She had as a second husband Christopher Banfield. Her children by first marriage were Samuel, Mary and Martha Miller. Samuel married Mary Neale, and they deeded the homestead to Banfield in 1696, and then the name of Miller disappeared from the early history of Kittery. Banfield sold his lot of ten acres to Richard Rogers in 1697.

The next lot above Rogers was John Green's. It was confirmed to him by the town in 1648 and was "bounded from a tree by a Gut Side above Franks Fort in ye bottom of ye Cove." It was estimated at thirty acres and was a square lot, and the little island of Franks Fort, containing about an acre, as a subsequent deed declares, was added to the grant, "over and above." Green had additional grant in 1656, further up the river, in Berwick, and moved there, leaving this lower lot to his son Richard.

Robert Weymouth bought a portion of the Green lot, on the south side, and added to it by town grants. His estate was administered in 1662. James Emery bought the place and sold it to Stephen Robinson in 1663. Robinson moved to Oyster River, and sold his place in Kittery to Joseph Hammond, 5 April 1679. Here Joseph Hammond built his garrison, a little north of the present Greenacre Hotel, and here the Indians did their best or worst to capture it. They got Hammond at one time but failed to take the garrison-house. We shall have occasion to speak of this again. Joseph Hammond was the son of William of Wells and was one of the most prominent men of his times and Province. He married a sister of Major Charles Frost. He was for many years Town Clerk, a Councillor, Selectman, Deputy to the General Court, Major in the Militia, Recorder of Deeds, and Judge of the Court of Common Pleas.

The rest of the Green lot passed, after many years, into the possession of Joseph Hammond or of Stephen Tobey, who lived next north thereof.

We have now arrived at Franks Fort, a very ancient name and still retained. It is a small island and is fast disappearing by the erosion of the river's current. Its neighbor, Watts Fort, sometimes called Darbys Fort in the old deeds, is now no longer seen at high tide. It was about a mile above Franks Fort. The reason for these names no one has yet discovered. They never served as fortifications, though they may have been named because of their resemblance to such at a distance. The stretch of water below Franks Fort has borne the name of "Long Reach" from the earliest days.

Beginning at the cove just above Franks Fort and extending northwest two hundred and forty rods and inland five hundred and eighty rods, or just half way to York River, is a tract of land known in ancient deed as "the Knowles Purchase." Some have supposed and written that this Knowles was an Indian Sagamore, perhaps confusing him with Rowles the Sagamore of Newichawannock. Even Sullivan, in his History of Maine, mis-calls the latter, Knowls. The owner was the Rev. Hansard Knollys, sometimes called Knowles, third pastor of the Church in Dover, N. H. Knollys was a graduate of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, and had preached in England nine years before coming to America. He came to Dover in 1638 and left there for England in 1641. He probably purchased this tract of land from Henry Jocelyn soon after his arrival in this region, and he sold it to the General Court of Massachusetts before his return to England. The record is as follows: "The Court agreed to buy Mr. Hansard Knowles his purchase for thirtye pounds, as hee tendereth it." After his return to England Mr. Knollys became a Baptist preacher of note and quite a voluminous author. He was a learned man and of pious character. He suffered imprisonment and stoning for his religious convictions. He died, as it is written, "in a transport of joy," 19 Sept. 1691, aged ninety-three years.¹

A PORTION OF THE BAY LAND.

The Court gave this land to William Hawthorne of Salem in return for some services, 14 Oct. 1651.² He was the emigrant ancestor of the great novelist, Nathaniel Hawthorne. It was next sold to Capt. John Leverett of Boston, for "eight Hodgscads of Sault & ten thousand foote of boards." Leverett sold it to Thomas Broughton, who sold it, 4 July 1659, to Major Thomas Clark, a merchant of Boston, who had extensive business relations with this region. The heirs of Clark were Mehitable Warren, Elisha Hutchinson and wife, Elizabeth, and these sold the land, 18 Dec. 1699, to Joseph Hammond, Esq., David Libbey, Matthew Libbey, Daniel Fogg, and Stephen Tobey. All the grantees except Hammond had been living here for some years without any proper title to the land. A plot of this land is still preserved in the Massachusetts Archives, as "laid out by John Evens at the request of Mr. Peter Coffin in the presence of Capt. John Wincoll, Capt. Charles Frost, and Lt. Joseph Hammond, Selectmen of the Town of Kittery, the tract of land being 870 acres." The deed reserves "Thirty Acres' or thereabouts lying within ye limits and boundaries abovesd now in ye Possession of Joshua Downing."¹ This large tract was known as the "Bay Land" and commonly so called. A glance at the shore line in the map will show that the strong current from the Great Bay opposite has dug out a broad bay on the Eliot shore. Dr. J. L. M. Willis has pointed out that a chain of rocks and shoals extends from Watts Fort to Franks Fort, rarely appearing at low tides, and that this chain was, doubtless, the ancient river bank.²

In the division of the land Joseph Hammond paid for and received one-third, the part toward the north, and in consideration of the fact that Joshua Downing was already well established on Hammond's division, the latter was allowed a strip eighty-eight rods wide. There was a lawsuit about this later, and Downing was allowed a lot of land extending from what was afterwards called Nutter's Cove to Watts Fort. The other four divisions were each thirty-eight rods wide. Stephen Tobey was awarded the southerly division, David Libby³ the one north of him; Matthew Libby came next, then Daniel Fogg and last Hammond. We must pause to inquire who these men were.

Thomas Tobey is said to have come from the west of England or from Wales to Long Island, N. Y., and about 1640 to have settled at Sandwich, on Cape Cod. The records of Sandwich mention him there in 1644. James Tobey appears in Kittery in 1687 and deeds land to his sons in 1695. So he must have brought a family with him. He was killed by Indians, 21 May 1705.

Matthew and David Libby, brothers, were born in Scarborough and were sons of John Libby, who was born in England in 1602 and came over with John Winter in 1632. The Indians drove them out of Scarborough to Portsmouth, and thence they came to the Bay Lands. Both lived to old age and had large families of children.

²Old Eliot, Vol. III, p. 186.

³In the map of Middle Parish there is an error. The lot of David Libby is marked as Matthew's and that of Matthew Libby as David's.

NUTTER'S COVE.

Daniel Fogg was son of Samuel Fogg of Hampton, N. H., who is said to have emigrated from Wales. Daniel first settled in Scarborough, and the Indians persuaded him also to leave for Portsmouth. He married Hannah Libby and lived to a good old age. The descendants of these five men who bought the land of Hansard Knollys are numerous, and their names still survive in Eliot. They have an honorable record, and one of Fogg's descendants has done, as all will admit, more than any other to collect and transmit the ancient history of the town.

Mention has been made of Joshua Downing, who held thirty acres in the northwest corner of Hammond's division, bordering on the river. The history of that lot and of a few small lots north of it will take us back a little from the dates of which we have been writing.

Old deeds show that John Vgroufe, for so he signs himself, though he is more frequently called Newgrove, was living here as early as 1635. He may have bought a part of Jocelyn's¹ grant. He is mentioned in the Court Records of 1640 as an inhabitant of Pascataqua. Mary Vgroufe witnesses one of his deeds. He signed the Dover Combination of 1640 and owned land there earlier than 1642. James Nute of Dover sold to his son, James, 15 Feb. 1671, land bought "many years since" of John Newgrove, then of Dover. In 1694 Sarah Morrill of Boston was administratrix of her father-in-law, John Ugrove's, estate in Kittery, and it seems that he had not sold all his land there, "lying and being between Watts fort and ffranks fort."

In 1646 Ugrove, who had "taken a liter to go in till Michaell-mass," wrote to George Smyth of Dover to sell his house and lands, and consequently Smyth sold, 18 Dec. 1650, to Dennis Downing, already a tenant, Ugrove's house-lot and thirty acres of upland.² Downing was a blacksmith. His son, Joshua, inherited this place. He left sons but no grandsons, and so the surname Downing has been long extinct in Kittery.

Vgroufe, Ugrove or Newgrove, had sold lots earlier than the date of this sold to Downing. Reynold Jenkins testified in 1683

¹A court record, dated 30 March 1647, says: "John Ugrove's house and ground attached to answer Henry Jocelyn Esqr in an account in the case for damage to the value of ten pounds."

²York Deeds III. 114-115.

that "between forty & fifty years since," that is, earlier than 1643, he bought "six acres of Land of John Newgrove, beginning at the water side between the Lands of Thomas Joanes & Joshua Downing." Jenkins built a house and lived here for a while, and after the death of William Everett offered the place to his widow, in the charity of his heart, but the widow seems to have been too proud to receive it as a gift, as a deposition of her daughter, Martha, afterward Nathan Lord's wife, shows. At the age of forty-two she testifies that "when she was little, her mother having ten shillings of her, as the Deponent heard my mother say, which money the Deponents mother Margaret Euerett layd out for six acres of Land which shee bought of Renald Jenkins, which Land this Deponents husband would not accept of, upon ye refusall wrof the Deponents mother gave him a steere in lew yrof & her mother sould that six Acres of Land to Mr. Will Leighton.¹ Did Boaz treat Ruth any better than friend Jenkins did this little fatherless child and her mother? On the other hand Joshua Downing crowded his line fence too far north and encroached upon this little six acre lot Widow Everett did not remain long in affliction, for in 1656 she and her second husband, "Isacke Nash" of Dover, sold to William Leighton this six-acre lot and also the original homestead of William Everett, a little further up the river.

John Vgroufe, alias Newgrove, sold also to Abraham Conley a six-acre lot just above this of Jenkins, 1 Jan. 1638. Conley was already a tenant. He sold it, 24 June 1648, to Thomas Jones. It was "next adjacent unto House & Field of William Everet." Jones sold it, 30 Nov. 1686, to William Leighton's son John, who had already inherited the original Everett lot, the next one north. Thus he had three small lots combined into one farm.

Of William Everett not much is known, nor can we tell how he acquired his lot, probably by purchase from Wannerton. He appears in Court records of 1640, and was licensed to keep an ordinary in 1649. He seems to have been a sea captain and to have been lost at sea. He was a man of some consequence and must have had a spacious house, for all the inhabitants of Kittery were called together here, 16 Nov. 1652, to hear Simon Bradstreet and others tell why they ought to come under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts. Everett's son William died also at sea, sine prole, and his only daughter, Martha, married Nathan Lord.

The point of land on which William Everett lived is shown in the picture of Franks Fort. It was first called "Point Joslain," and has long been known as Leighton's Point. Its southern shore once extended out fifty feet or more from the present bank, and some persons now living can remember apple trees growing on Watts Fort, which is now entirely washed away. At low tide its location can be discerned easily. Mr. George Leighton pointed out to me a place a little out beyond the present bank, perhaps ten rods to the north and a little west from Watts Fort, where within his remembrance there could be seen an old cellar, and beyond it there was an ancient warehouse and ferry. That cellar probably marked the spot where William Everett lived and where Kittery's inhabitants signed their submission to the government of Massachusetts. Some memorial should mark the spot.

The ferry at this point was a very ancient one, kept by Thomas Trickey and his son, Zachariah, and later by John Knight, alias Chevalier, all of whom lived at Bloody Point on the opposite or Newington shore. In his diary President John Adams mentions having once crossed here. The ferry points at the reason of an "ordinary" here in 1649 and also shows why there were numerous settlers in this vicinity.

Some have supposed that William Everett's house stood a little west of the site of the Old Leighton House, on Leighton's Lane, but this seems to me improbable. The Leighton House was built in 1690 according to Mr. Fogg, and was demolished in April, 1895. It stood on the exact spot now occupied by the house of Mr. Leander H. Plaisted. The ancient road or lane ran from a little west of this house almost straight northwest toward the river, north of the old burial place. The present road swings around to the south. The old parish cemetery, west of Mr. George Leighton's, is now overgrown with pines, and only two headstones remain, though there are indications that scores of the old settlers here were buried.

The location of William Everett's house is still more clearly indicated by the following testimonies:—

"The testimony of Martha Lord aged eighty-four years or thereabout saith that her father William Everett formerly of Kittery in the County of York deceased did in his life Time dwell on a Tract of Land in Kittery aforesd now in the possession of Capt. John Leighton and that said Everets House stood by an old orchard & a certain run of water Issuing into Piscataqua River, which run of water is Northward from the most Northerly Point of Watts Fort so called, which house my mother lived in & possessed after the Death of my sd Father untill she married with Isaac Nash & they sold the same to Mr. William Leighton. And that she never knew or understood that Major Shapleigh claimed any further than the lane between him and Nicholas Frost deceased. She further saith that her Father died about seventy-two years since.

Elizabeth Gowen [daughter of Major Charles Frost] aged seventy-nine years thereabout testifieth to the Truth of what is written above onely she doth not Remember Willm Everetts living on the place abovesd but his widow after his Decease."¹

York ss. March 18, 1723-4.

Thomas Jones, already mentioned, was born in 1609, as a deposition shows, and was a servant of Alexander Shapleigh in 1639. He came upon the town for support in 1686. He seems not to have been connected with any others by the name of Jones in old Kittery.

Capt. William Leighton, born about 1625, is said to have settled in Kittery about 1650, though I have found no trace of him before his purchase of the Everett lot of Nash in 1656. The same year he married Katharine, daughter of Nicholas Frost, who after Leighton's death in 1666 married Major Joseph Hammond. The deed from Nash locates his lot "neare ye poynt of Land Commonly Called Watts Fort." It lay between the lands of Thomas Jones and Nicholas Frost and ran to the back part of the Great Swamp. This brings us to the first dwelling place of Nicholas Frost.

It has been often written that Frost settled where his son ¹York Deeds XII. 8.

Charles afterward lived, and this earlier homestead has been overlooked. It is not supposable that Nicholas Frost settled in 1634 two miles from the river, with no road nor neighbors, when he could have almost his choice of good lots bordering on the river. The following deposition is enlightening. Philip Swadden, or Swaddow, testified in 1673 that thirty-eight or thirty-nine years before, that is, in about 1634, the time of Frost's arrival with his family, "Mr. Thomas Wannerton gave to Nicholas Frost a Pcell of Land up in Piscataqua River, now known by the name of Kittery, which pcell of Land was bounded, on the East with a little Cove, Joyneing to the Fort Poynt, on the South West on the River, on the North West Northerly with a great stumpe called the Mantilltree stumpe; which is about the Middle of the Lane wch Joynes to ye Land which Major Nicho. Shapleigh now possesseth, & soe runneing into ye woods as fare as the sayd Wannertons Land went, which tract of Land Mr. Thomas Wannerton gave to the sayd Nicholas Frost to come to bee his Neighbor." Wannerton, then, was living here about 1634, perhaps in the house afterward occupied by William Everett. He held a large section of land granted by Gorges. It adjoined Cammock's, afterward Shapleigh's, on the southwest. A strip along the north of his grant Wannerton gave to Frost without any deed, and later he seems to have sold the whole tract to Nicholas Shapleigh. Nov. 24, 1653, the selectmen confirmed to Shapleigh "all those tracts of land bought of Capt. Cammock and Mr. Wannerton the breadth whereof is from the Mill Creek by the water side unto a little fresh brook of water near unto Goody Everetts where she now Dwells and so backward into the woods by the same breadth half way to York and to run upon an East by north line or upon that line where those Evidenceys of Capt. Camocks & Mr. Thomas Wannerton doe specific always provided that if any other former grant made by the Town fall within this said tract of land they are to remain good to them their heirs or assigns forever."

Another deposition throws light upon the early residence of Nicholas Frost. John White in 1679 testified that forty-two years before, or about 1637, "Mr. Alexander Shapleigh and Mr. James Treworgy did agree with the Neighbors dwelling at and about Sturgeon Creek that there should be alwayes a high way from Nicholas ffrosts house down to Sturgeon Creek and Soe along to the Ceaders And the said high way hath bin held ever Since without Interruption." This is of interest as showing when the Country road through Shapleigh's land was first in use. The southern end of that road brings us to the lane that ran down to the ferry, and at the upper end of that lane stood, evidently, the house of Nicholas Frost in 1637. This is where some have supposed William Everett to have lived. There seems to have been dispute between Nicholas Shapleigh and Nicholas Frost's heirs as to the rightful ownership of the land given by Wannerton to Frost, and how much the heirs of Frost retained I can not say. Whatever it was seems to have come into the possession of the heirs of William Leighton. The inventory of Nicholas Frost's estate, 1663, mentions "The house & Land at Kittery, Joyneing to Willia Leighton, by estimation 30 acers." The inventory of the estate of John Frost of Boston, 1687, mentions twelve acres here still in the possession of the Frost family. In 1651 the town granted to Nicholas Frost three hundred and forty acres, "joining on the west to Anthony Emery's land and on ye east side of ye land with a brook which runs into Agmenticus river." This may have been a compensation for taking away a part of Wannerton's gift and awarding it to Shapleigh. Other grants were made to Nicholas Frost from time to time till he had one of the largest estates in Kittery. Just when he built his house on the southern slope of Frost's hill is not known, but it was probably about the time the grant of land was made, 1651. It was a garrison house built of large hewn square logs.

There is conclusive evidence that Nicholas Frost was on the coast of Maine as early as 1632. He probably returned to England for his family and came again in 1634. He was born in Tiverton, Devonshire, 25 April 1585. He was chosen constable in 1640 and he served repeatedly as one of the selectmen. He was a man of force and leadership and reared a distinguished family.

ALONG THE NEWICHAWANNOCK.

In our sail up the Pascataqua we have now arrived opposite a historic place, called Hilton's Point, on Dover Neck. Here the first settlement in this region of the country was made by Edward and William Hilton, in 1623. It is probable that some of those who came with the Hiltons soon made their homes on the east side of the river Newichawannock, as it was called by the Indians, from this point upwards.

The first grant above the lot of Nicholas Frost, afterward William Leighton's, was the earliest one recorded. It was from the Laconia Company to Capt. Thomas Cammock, 2 June 1633. It was confirmed to Cammock by a deed from Walter Neale, agent of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, 1 May 1634, and described as a piece of land on the east shore of the Pascataqua, "where William Hilton lately planted corne, being bounded on the north side with a small Creeke known by the name of Cammocks Creeke and on the south side with a small Rivolett abutting upon the lands allotted unto Thomas Wannerton gent." Here is our reason for saying that Wannerton first owned the lands possessed later by Frost, Leighton and Shapleigh. Cammock sold this tract to John Treworgy, 10 Jan. 1636, who seems to have acted as agent for his grandfather, Alexander Shapleigh, the same who had five hundred acres at Kittery Point. The tract extended half way to York River and contained about seven hundred and fifty acres. Here his son, Nicholas Shapleigh, made his home, at "Sandy Hill," and Cammock's Creek came to be called Shapleigh's Creek. It is better to hold onto the first names.

Mention is made in 1633 that William Hilton had been planting corn over in Maine. Was this an old Indian corn-field, and did Hilton live at the Neck opposite and row across to cultivate his field? So some have thought. The Court Records, perhaps, furnish a clue. Oct. 25. 1653, William Hilton recovered judgment in the sum of one hundred and sixty pounds against Ann Mason, executrix of the will of Capt. John Mason of London, deceased. Of this sum fifty pounds were for the proprietary of his land, which the defendant took from him, and for the vacancy of one year's time and cutting down his house and for other injuries, ten pounds, and for the interest for the whole sixty pounds for the term of one and twenty years, one hundred pounds. Twenty-one years previous to 1653 carries us back to 1632, the time when William Hilton was planting corn on the estate afterward Shapleigh's. He had a house here and reason for calling the land his own, which the Court acknowledged.

Nicholas, son of Alexander Shapleigh, who built the first house at Kittery Point, was one of the most prominent men of old Kittery. He served as one of the Provincial Councillors from 1644 to 1652 with the exception of one year. He was also County Treasurer and one of the Commissioners to hold the first term of Court in York County, in June, 1653. He was several times on the Board of Selectmen and Deputy to the General Court. He was appointed, in 1656, Major in the Militia. As Justice of the Peace he was qualified to marry, and once, in 1660, he was presented at Court for marrying Capt. John Mitchell and Widow Sarah Gunnison before their publication. He gave sympathy and entertainment to the early Quaker preachers, for which he, with two other Selectmen, was deposed from office and disfranchised. Yet he was afterward elected as Deputy. In 1667 he had command of the Militia in Maine and in 1678 was one of the Commissioners to conclude a peace with Squando and the Sagamores on the Androscoggin and Kennebec rivers. He was extensively engaged in lumbering and milling, owning with others mills on Spruce Creek, Cammock's Creek and Sturgeon Creek. He had a long lawsuit with Hugh Gunnison about sale of land at Kittery Point, the record of which in the Supreme Court at Boston has been published in the Maine Historical Collections. He was in 1674 imprisoned and fined two hundred pounds for the offense that, to use his own words, "I did inconsiderately and out of foolish pity receive and conceale William Forrest and two others being in a sudden hurry, my compassion overcoming my reason." These were accused of piracy. His sister, Katharine Hilton, sent in a touching petition that he be released, reminding the Court that "38 years since, in a time of great searsity, in this land, our father layd out a good estate, for the supply of this Country, & the settleing some part of it, & in a season of there want supplied them soe reasonably with provisions, that it was thankfully accepted and acknowledged by the Authority then in being."¹ He was at one time owner of Sebas-codigan Island, off the coast of Harpswell. The town of Shapleigh was named in honor of him, he having once bought that township of Francis Small. He was killed at the launching of a vessel at the shipyard of John Diamond, at Kittery Foreside, 29 April 1682. A spar struck him on the head as the vessel moved. The early prosperity of Kittery was due as much to this man as to any other. He left no children, and his nephew, John Shapleigh, inherited his estate. The farm at "Sandy Hill" has been held by a Shapleigh ever since about 1636.

The bridge near the mouth of Canmock's or Shapleigh's Creek is a recent affair. In the old times there was only a lane along the river and a fording place here. The dam was a few rods west of the present bridge, and the mill was at the northerly end of the dam. In the will of Samuel Hill, dated 28 Aug. 1713, mention is made of "the Saw mill, griest Mill and Wind Mill, as also the Dwelling House and Land Lying and adjoyning to Shapleigh's Creek." Hill owned an interest in the mills.

The next lot above Shapleigh was owned first by Edward Small, to whom it was granted by Thomas Gorges, 28 July 1643. It contained a hundred acres, "lying between the two Creekes." Small had built a dwelling house and cultivated a field. He came to the Pascataqua about 1632 and is said to have been a kinsman of Sir Ferdinando Gorges. He was a magistrate in 1640. We find him at the Isles of Shoals in 1653. Perhaps he went back to England. Francis Small, afterward of Dover and Kittery, is thought to have been his son.

Small sold this lot to Antipas Maverick, 23 June 1647. Feb. 17, 1653, the town granted and confirmed to Antipas Maverick "all that tract of land where he now liveth betwixt ye two Creeks, the Creek on ye South Side of his house called and known by ye name of Mill Creek and ye Creek on ye North Side of ye tract of land comonly known by ye name of Daniel's Creek." This locates Maverick's house near the mouth of Shapleigh's or Cammock's Creek and north of it. A mortgage in 1661 describes it as "on the South East side bounded by the Mill cricke & on the North East side by a Cricke sometime known by ye name of Danjell Dauises¹ Cricke." The lot ran back to Sturgeon Creek. Exception was made to land enclosed and possessed by William Ellingham, granted unto him for twenty-one years. "And alsoe except those Two Tracts of Land granted by the Town of Kittery unto Nicholas Frost & Anthonie Emerie, if they shall happen or appeare to be within the bounds of the aforementioned Land." A deed in 1686 calls the two creeks "Daniels Creek & Camocks Creek."

There is some cause for thinking that Antipas Maverick was brother to Samuel Maverick of Noddles Island, or East Boston. If so, he was the son of the Rev. John Maverick of Dorchester. Antipas was of the Isles of Shoals in 1647. He signed the submission of 1652 and was licensed to keep an ordinary in 1659. He had a brother, Moses, who lived in Marblehead. Antipas Maverick died in 1678.

The one hundred acres of Maverick were increased by grants from the town, and the whole estate was sold by his heirs, at different times. Samuel Hill seems to have bought two pieces, one next to Shapleigh's Creek, which he willed to his son, Samuel, and another, bought in 1686, further north, which he willed to his son, Benjamin. Alexander Dennett bought, 7 June 1682, forty acres, being thirty rods in breadth on the river. Then came a lot once occupied by William Ellingham, a lumberman, which passed to John Shapleigh and from him to Edward Ayers. This takes us to "Daniels Creek." Then came the upper lot of Samuel Hill, lying "between ye lotts of John Morrell & Edward Ayers."² This estate has remained in the Hill family ever since. Samuel Hill was the son of John Hill of Dover. He married Elizabeth Williams in 1680 and settled in Kittery soon after. He owned land also in Portsmouth.

²York Deeds XI. 112.

The lot next to Hill on the north was granted, 1 Nov. 1654, to Anthony Emery. Henry Pouning was then on his north and there was a certain cove between them. The house of Emery and a small piece of land had been bought by him of John White, 15 Nov. 1648. White moved a little north, as we shall see. He seems to have lived at Kittery Point and at Crooked Lane before moving to this region. Emery had kept an ordinary at Dover Neck as early as 1643 and he was licensed to keep one here in Kittery in 1650. His farm passed to his son, James, who in 1673 sold it to Abraham Conley. John Morrell bought it of Conley, 27 July 1676, in exchange for land further north. This place has remained for more than two centuries in the Morrell family. Here was a ferry, in the old times, across to Nicholas Harford's on the Dover side. It was kept by Morrell and later by Harford. Henry Kirke and wife, Ruth, lived on a two-acre lot near by, which Morrell later added to his estate.

North of John Morrell was a lot of six acres granted by the town to Henry Pouning, 3 March 1651. He lived in Boston, where his family are recorded, and died about 1665. His widow, Elizabeth, and children, Sarah, Mary, Daniel, and Elizabeth, who had married Jonathan Bridgham, sold this lot, in 1684, to Jabez Jenkins. It was then thus bounded: "John White next Henry Pounding on the North, now in ye hands of Robert Allene, & the land formerly belonging to Anthony Emery, on ye South, now In the possession of John Morrall."¹ Jabez was the son of Reynold Jenkins, who has been mentioned several times. Reynold was in the service of John Winter at Richmond's Island as early as 1634. He was living here on the Newichawannock about 1640 and is mentioned in 1683. He was affiliated with the Quakers from the beginning of their preaching in Dover and Kittery, and he and neighboring Friends were more than once presented at Court for not attending the services of the church on the Lord's Day.

March 3, 1651, there was granted to John White a lot "next unto Pounings twenty-four rods by the water side and so back into the woods unto the way that goes from cold harbour unto Sturgeon Creek." This "pcell of land and housing" was "assigned to William Thompson and his heirs forever at a town meeting at ¹York Deeds IV. 27.

Kittery by the above named White" 15 Oct. 1656.¹ John and James Thompson, sons of William, sold this, 20 March 1708, to Francis Allen, and it has been held in the Allen family ever since. At the time of the last sale it was bounded "on the north with the land formerly belonging to Philip Benmore and Nicholas ffrost now in the possession of John Morrell Junr and on the South with the land of Jabez Jenkins," containing twenty acres.

Philip Benmore bought his lot of James Emery. Benmore's daughter, Temperance, married Charles Adams, Jr., of Oyster River, who sold it, 26 March 1682, to John Morrell. Charles Adams, Senior, with a family of nine was killed by Indians soon after this sale. It appears that Temperance escaped, for she as a widow acknowledged the deed in 1696.

The lot next north was owned by Nicholas Frost, Jr., and passed from his heirs to Jabez Jenkins in 1696. North of this lot and reaching to the mouth of Sturgeon Creek was the old Frye homestead, where Adrian Frye was living, probably as early as 1663, the date when he is first mentioned as witness to a deed. His son, William, inherited the place, and sold ten acres of it, the point lying between the river and Sturgeon Creek, to Philip Pike, 4 April 1713. It was "commonly called Frys Point," and there was reserved "a burying Place of three Rod Long & Two Rod Wide fronting on Dover River." The original grants from Cammock's Creek to Sturgeon Creek were soon cut up into smaller lots and were transferred so often that it is difficult to trace them. We have tried to find the original settlers only. This was a busy place and more thickly settled than most parts of the town. The occasion of this was the mills on Cammock's and Sturgeon Creeks. Four ordinaries, or inns, are mentioned in this region, at Everett's, Maverick's, Emery's, and Jenkins'. The ferry at "Cold Harbour Point" and the road thereto from Sturgeon Creek are mentioned as early as 1651. These indicate the line of travel to and from Dover.

Old deeds refer to the whole river front from Emery's, later Morrell's, to the mouth of Sturgeon Creek as "Cold Harbour," "Cole Harbour," "Coole Harbor," and various other spellings. The small inns of England, where shelter without fire could be found, were named "Cold Harbors." This name was, doubtless, applied to the ordinary which Anthony Emery was licensed to keep in 1650, in connection with his ferry. He may have hung out his sign with that name. Soon the name indicated a region and gradually it extended itself up as far as Sturgeon Creek, just as Thompson's Point moved about from one place to another, as we shall soon see. The location of the earliest house at Cold Harbor is shown by a cellar between an elm tree and the river bank. The ferry landing was perhaps twenty rods north of this and the road to it is still easily traced. The Morrell burial ground is on the northerly slope of a hill, southwest of the cellar.

The tract of swamp and upland, covered with pine timber, lying between Sturgeon Creek and a cove above it, was granted at an early date to merchants and lumbermen. Stephen Greenham is one of the earliest mentioned, who had his "wigwam," or lumber camp, near "Greenham's Gutt," the little rivulet that empties into Mast Cove. John Wincoll declared that he bought Greenham's lot for "my brother," Thomas Broughton, and paid him six pounds therefor. The statement is found in the Records of the Supreme Court in Boston. William Ellingham was another who owned timber land here and built him a house near the mill on Sturgeon Creek. He married a daughter of Thomas Booth of York, sold out to Thomas Broughton, and is found later in York as a carpenter. Broughton carried on business here and at Quamphegan for some years. In 1651 the town made a grant to Nicholas Shapleigh of lumber in this tract. He erected mills and, lest the owners of land on Sturgeon Creek should be damaged, he gave a bond to the inhabitants "to keepe two Cannows on the up side of the sd Danme, for their transportation, & likewise wn the sd inhabitants shall find thejre marshes to be overflowne at any tyme, wn it may hurt them, upon notis from them, to take up the wast gates," and also to deliver boards to the inhabitants at three shillings per hundred.¹

All this land seems to have been regranted by the town a few years later. Many of the inhabitants of this region had a few acres of marsh here. A settler would have a grant of wooded upland in one place and a small amount of marsh land several miles distant in some cases. This was because grass and hay were scarce before much of the land had been cleared. A piece of swale grass or an old Indian corn field was a valuable acquisition.

The first settler that is known immediately north of the mouth of Sturgeon Creek was Christopher Banfield or Banefield. He married Grace, widow of Richard Miller, and later Sarah (Libby-Tidy) Rogers. The earliest mention of him is in 1672, and he is called sergeant in 1700. He wrote his name and acted as a surveyor. On the occasion of his marriage to widow Rogers he deeded to John Tidy, her son by a former marriage, forty acres "on the Northwest side of Sturgeon Creek," "abutting on Newichawannock River." There is no record of Banfield's family. Samuel Banfield witnessed a deed in Kittery in 1709, and Hugh Banfield witnessed a will in Portsmouth in 1715.

John Tidy and his family lived here many years and gave their name to "Tidy's Swamp" near by. The surname has been long extinct, though there are many descendants. March 5, 1699, the town granted to John Morrell thirty acres north of Christopher Banfield's, fronting on the river seventeen poles. Morrell sold this to Tidy in 1710. John Hoyt then owned a piece of land east of this, the same who afterward lived in Newington, N. H.

It seems that Abraham Conley owned some marsh next above Tidy, three and a half acres of which he sold to Peter Wittum in 1672.

June 1, 1676, John and Jonathan Nason had a grant of one hundred acres of which John deeded his share to his nephew, Jonathan Nason, Jr., in 1702. It extended up to "the brook that runs into Mast Cove," "above Waymouths improved land." That is the brook that has been called "Greenham's Gutt." The cove is called, in the deed of 1676, "upper Mast Cove," probably to distinguish it from Mast Cove near Franks Fort and another just below Eliot Neck. Thirteen acres of the estate of Jonathan Nason, senior, were sold, 14 June 1703, to his son-in-law, Henry Snow. This bordered on Edward Waymouth's land, "lying at the head of a creek commonly called by ye name of Mast Creek," which land had been previously owned by Anthony Emery and by James Emery.

Next above Jonathan Nason's, on the river, lying between Mast Cove and Creek and the next creek above, is a neck or point of land of about fifty acres, which the Indian Sagamore, Rowles, sold, if it could be called a sale, to Katherine Treworgy, 3 Oct. 1651, "for two bottles of Liquor to me in hand paid." It was "commonly known by the name of Tomsons Poynt, an ould Corne ground which I the said Rowls have formerly made use of & improved." It was thereafter sometimes called "Trueworgy's Point," "lying between two Cricks." Katharine Treworgy married William Hilton and in 1674 sold this land to her son, Samuel Treworgy, who in turn deeded it to Richard Chick. His son, Richard, sold it to Peter Dixon, who sold it to Joseph Goold, 11 July 1709. It was long the homestead of the Goold family.

The earliest mention of Thompson's Point in Kittery that I have found is in a town grant to Thomas Broughton, 4 Oct. 1650, of land above Sturgeon Creek extending "towards Tompson's Point." In the deed above cited it is said that the place long possessed by the Goold family was commonly known as Thompson's Point before 1651. Why was it so called?

Thomas Gorges granted to Francis Williams and wife, Hellen, one thousand acres of land lying "on the northeast side of the River Pascattaquack over against Tompsons pointe, wch is bounded with the most northerly brooke or creeke commonly called the blacke creeke, next adioyning to Sagamor Runacwitts old planting ground on the north, and from thence alongst the said River to run Downe towards the harbours mouth unto a creeke or cove next adiacent Amiciskeg point so called by the natives on the south, containing in length upon the said River aboute half a mile more or lesse." This was recorded 13 Aug. 1644, though it was probably written at an earlier date. Thompson's Point, then, in 1644, was over in Dover and on the southern shore where the Cochecho River joins the Newichawannock. "Thomsons point house" is found in the Dover tax list of 1648. Some have supposed that William Thompson lived there, but there is no statement to that effect, and William Thompson is not mentioned till 1656. The more probable supposition is that the point was named for David Thompson, the first settler at the mouth of the Pascataqua. He must have explored all this region and may have built a house here as well as at Little Harbor. At any rate the name, Thompson's Point, soon began to be applied to the point opposite, in Kittery. A little later the lots north of it were located, in deeds, "near Thompson's Point." The next transfer located the lot "at Thompson's Point." And there was a special reason for this after 1656, for then Miles Thompson began to live just north of the "Black Creek," which thereafter was called Thompson's Brook, and the lot just south of the brook was called Thompson's Point. Thus the name migrated from New Hampshire to Maine and up the river. Thompson's Brook became the dividing line of the Parish of Unity, and later the boundary between Berwick and Eliot.

Francis Williams is said to have died in the Barbadoes soon after this grant was made to him. No one took possession, and so the town granted the land to other persons. It was laid out in lots of twenty-four rods breadth on the river. Next north of Joseph Gould lived John Neal and his son, Andrew. The land was originally granted to James Heard and Thomas Etherington. It was bounded "on the south by lands granted unto one Mrs. Katherine Treworgie" and on the north by land "granted unto one William Ellingham." This was said in 1676, when James Heard's widow, Shuah, deeded the land to John Neal. When the latter gave it to his son Andrew in 1694, it was bounded "on the north by widow fergusons."

The transfer of the next lot from William Ellingham to Daniel Ferguson is not on record, but Ferguson must have settled here before 1659, when "the creek by Daniel Ferguson's and Anthony Emery's" is mentioned. He and his neighbor, William Furbish, together bought land further inland of James Emery, in 1667. The dividing line between Ferguson and Furbish was laid out by referees in 1680. Both probably came from Dover, N. H., where William Furbish is found as early as 1648.

North of Furbish was a lot of one hundred acres twenty-four rods wide, granted by the town to Major Charles Frost, 16 Dec. 1652. In 1664 Frost sold fifty acres of this to William and Richard Oliver, brothers and fishermen of the Isles of Shoals. It was described as "near unto the place called Tomson Poynt" and bounded "on the north with John Heards land and on the south with Will Furbish his land & on the east with marked trees." It passed through several hands to Thomas Rhodes, who had married a daughter of Miles Thompson and bought the Heard lot, above named, in 1680. A daughter of Rhodes married Samuel Shorey, and he at length got possession of all the land lying between William Furbish's farm and Thompson's Brook. Here the Shoreys lived for many generations. In John Heard's will it is declared that one John Ross had a house here before 1675, and he was to remain undisturbed in the possession of it so long as he lived.

VIII.

THE PARISH OF UNITY.

We are approaching now to a distinct settlement, as we pass the mouth of Black Creek or Thompson's Brook, called later Shorey's Brook, with low lands and reedy marsh on both sides. What is now South Berwick was anciently called Newichawanoch, Quamphegan, or the Parish of Unity, and later Berwick. The saw-mills on the Great Works River attracted settlers to that neighborhood and soon all the river lots were taken, up the river to Salmon Falls and down to Thompson's Brook. This took its name from Miles Thompson, to whom in 1656 was granted the first lot above it. The Thompson family dwelt here for many years.

His next neighbor on the north was Nicholas Hodsdon, who, June 16, 1674 bought of John Wincoll thirty acres which Wincoll had bought of John Heard in 1651. It had a dwelling house when bought by Hodsdon. It was bounded on the south by the lands of Miles Thompson and on the north by "Burch Brook & Cove," and on the east by "the highway that leadeth toward Sturgeon Cricke." In 1673 Hodsdon had bought of Peter Wittum forty acres just east of this river lot. He probably had had still earlier a grant from the town, adjoining the lot purchased. Hodsdon came from Watertown and earlier from Hingham, Mass., where he was living in 1635. He deeded his homestead to his son, Benoni, in 1678, except seven acres whereon his son-in-law, John Morrell, was then living. The deed mentions land of "Left Plaisted late deceased" on his northern border. In 1679 the forty acres bought of Wittum were deeded to Timothy Hodsdon.

Roger Plaisted had his lot, 13 July 1669, from John Wincoll, to whom it was granted by the town in 1652. Lt. Elisha Plaisted inherited it and his widow, Elizabeth, sold it in 1693 to John Plaisted, senior. It was bounded on the south "with a brooke yt runs along by Nicholas Hodsdons land into birch point cove," and on the north by James Emery's house-lot, "being the length of the rest of the lots" and containing eighty acres. In another deed it is called "birchen point lot."¹

Above Lt. Plaisted James Emery had a grant of fifty acres in 1654, "on the south side of Daniel Goodings Lott, bounded with the same Lyne according to order forty-eight rod:l by the water sade." Emery sold this, 20 Jan. 1696, to Philip Hubbard, who had married a daughter of Daniel Goodwin. It was then bounded on the north by the land of Daniel Goodwin, Jr., and by a "Small brook and valley which is a parting bounds between sd land and Daniel Stones land and from thence running as the fence now Stands to a tall white oak stump standing within Daniel Stone's Garrison."² The Hubbard Garrison House stood on the spot where Isaac Libby now lives. Mr. Libby has a number of bullets, plowed up from the soil near his house. These are very suggestive.

Daniel Goodwin received his lot by town grant in 1654. It was divided among his sons Daniel and Moses and his son-in-law, Daniel Stone, who received five acres of the southwest corner.

¹York Deeds IV. 86.

²York Deeds IV. 96.

The next lot of fifty acres "in the place where Barnet Squire had a loote formerly granted," was granted in 1654, to John Green, Sen., who, as we have seen, lived at first down by Franks Fort. In 1683 his widow, Julian, deeded this lot next to Goodwin to her son-in-law, John Searle, to be divided between her grandsons, John Searle, Jr., and John, son of Nicholas Jellison, when they should become of age. John Searle, Jr., relinquished his claim to his father in 1707. There is no other mention of John Jellison. The Searle family seems to have departed early from Kittery.

"On the northwest side of John Green's," Thomas Abbot, who married Green's daughter, Elizabeth, had fifty acres. On the north and west sides were lands yet in common. By a vote of the town in 1652 the "fowling marshes" above Birch Point were declared to be common land. They extended from Birch Point to Peter Grant's Point. Here any inhabitant might cut hay and thatch grass. One Benjamin Waymouth of Dover, in 1700, carried off some thatch grass from this place, for which there was legal action against him for the recovery of five pounds. These "thatch Banks" were let by the town to John Cooper in 1710.

Next above Thomas Abbot was a lot granted to John Lamb, 15 July 1656. He sold it to James Emery, and Emery sold it to Peter Grant, 21 Oct. 1659.¹ The Grants occupied this lot for many generations.

Above Peter Grant the next lot was that of John Taylor, granted in 1655, fifty acres "on the north side of John Lambs lott and called by the name of brisparns cove." It is called elsewhere "Onisiprus Cove." Taylor died about 1690, leaving a widow, Martha, and daughters, Mary; Katherine, who married Charles Cahan and administered his estate in 1688; Sarah, who married Elisha Clark; Deliverance, who married William Goodwin; and Abigail, who married Moses Goodwin. The widow died about 1702. The farm passed to her son-in-law, William Goodwin, and long remained in the possession of the Goodwin family.

James Warren came next, whose lot was laid out 15 July 1656, "on the north side of John Taylor's lot." His daughter, Grizel, married Richard Otis, who was killed at the massacre of Cochecho in 1689. She was carried as a captive to Canada and there it is recorded on her testimony that James Warren was a native of Berwick, Scotland, and that his wife, Margaret, was a native of Ireland. James Warren, Jr., became a leading citizen, being often selectman, commissioner, and surveyor. The name Warren has survived in Berwick until the present. Warren's estate fronted on Cow Cove, shown on page twenty-two.

Alexander Maxell received his grant of land the same day as Warren. Maxell settled in York and sold this grant to John Neal, who in 1662 sold twenty-five acres of it to Nathan Lord. Lord probably came over with Abraham Conley, whose daughter Judith was his first wife. This was before 1640. He is first mentioned as a signer of the submission to Massachusetts in 1652. He doubtless lived with Conley near Cold Harbor, and, after his marriage to Martha Everett, in the lower part of Berwick, east from the country road. The place is called "Mount Misery" in a deed, referring presumably to Rocky Hill, called also Craggy Hill. The place of his later sojourn belonged to a region called "Old Fields," stretching south from Great Works River for some distance. It was probably an old Indian planting ground. Here he had a garrison house, which long ago was demolished. The Lords are found still in Berwick and almost everywhere else, for they are very numerous and have borne an honored name.

Next north of Lord's were the two hundred acres of Richard Nason. Feb. 4, 1664, he sold to Nathan Lord nine acres, "adjoining unto Certain lands of ye sayd Lord, wch hath been & now is in the possession of ye sayd Lord," and "runs along by the head of the secund swampe on the southeast over the brooke," and "on the North & by East, directly from Richd Naysons Barne, it is bounded with Certen marked trees, marked with two letters R & N & is part of a great Prcell of land granted upto the sayd Richd Nayson by ye grant of the Town of Kittery."¹ In 1694 Nason deeded this place to his sons, Benjamin and Baker. It was then bounded "on the south with the land of Widdow Lord" and on the North with the "lands that were late Thomas Spencers deceased," and on the west with the tide water. In 1654 Nason sold to George Leader for John Beex and Co. a strip of land four rods wide "beginning at pipe Stave poynt & soe downe along the river unto the next fresh water Cricke." It contained "one acre more or less lying upon ye Side of the River commonly called Pipe staff point, formerly bought of Richard Nason." So it is described in 1687, in a deed from Robert Tufton Mason, grandson and heir of Capt. John Mason, to Eliakim Hutchinson of Boston. It is one of the oldest landmarks in old Kittery. It is mentioned in the Dover Town Records of 1639, and Richard Nason was living there at that date. The place is often mentioned as the Lower Landing or Pipe Stave Landing.

THE NASON-HAMILTON ESTATE.

It was the head of navigation at low tide, and when Pipe Staves were the most common form of currency must have been a very busy place.

It awakens curiosity to find Richard Nason here in 1639 or earlier, in peaceful possession of a large tract of land adjoining to Mason's grant, yet never mentioned as one of the company sent over by Mason. He may have had charge of the Landing, then much in use. Col. Jonathan Hamilton lived here at the time of the American Revolution and built the house shown in the accompanying illustration. Here is the opening scene in The Tory Lover, written by a gifted lady of the Parish of Unity, Miss Sarah Orne Jewett.

Next north of Richard Nason were the two hundred acres granted by the town to Thomas Spencer, but occupied by him long before the grant. In 1662 he deeded twelve acres of this to his son-in-law, Thomas Etherington, "bounded with the lands of Richd Nason on ye or nere ye South and West," adjoining unto lands of Daniel Goodwin on the North and East. The same day he gave to his son-in-law, John Gattinsby, twelve acres east of Etherington. Aug. 14, 1667, Spencer gave to his son-in-law, Daniel Goodwin, six acres "Wron his house & barne now stands." Oct. 20, 1663, he deeded to his son, William Spencer, land lying along the river. July 20, 1676, he deeded thirty acres to his son, Humphrey Spencer, east of Goodwin's land and bounded "on the northwest by the highway that leadeth toward York." This highway is called, in 1711, "The path that leads from Nichewanock meeting house to York line," showing that roads in the early days were little more than bridle paths. The residue of Spencer's two hundred acres, the eastern part, furthest from the river, was given to Moses Spencer.

We have now arrived at the "Assabumbeducke River at Newgawanacke," so called in an inventory in 1669. This was the name given by the Indians, though it is oftener called, in old deeds, the Little Newichawannock. The mills built by Chadbourne, Mason's agent, in 1634, after Mason's death fell into disuse and then into misuse, for his servants appropriated to themselves all that they could carry off. In 1651 the town granted to Richard and George Leader¹ the use of this mill privilege with ¹Richard Leader was formerly employed in Ireland about mines and came to New England in 1645 to superintend iron works at Lynn, Mass. He had wife and two children and called Richard Cutt "my brother." He went to London in 1652 with remonstrance to Cromwell against the usurpations of Mass. He was in Kittery in 1653 and 1654 and had five grants of land. Robert Jordan was appointed to administer his estate 27 Dec. 1661. A daughter, Ann, married Mr. Clarke of Portsmouth and had a daughter Sarah. She calls herself "only surviving child" in 1670.—See Dean's Capt. John Mason, pp. 92-3.

George Leader was brother of Richard. He settled at Newichawannock in 1652 and was juryman in 1664. Feb. 13, 1652, Joseph Mason brought action in Norfolk County against Richard Leader for tresspass, "for building and erecting certaine houses on our lands att Newitchewanick. . . . & for cutting downe our tymber there to erect a saw mill in our Antient possessed place whereon wee formerly began and do intende to pceed in ye like worke imcadately."

lands adjacent within the limit of a quarter of a mile on both sides of the river. The Leaders set up a gang of nineteen saws, which made such an impression upon the people round about that the place was called "Great Works." It is called so on the town records 2 Feb. 1663, and the river itself soon came to be known as the Great Works River, which name abides.

After the death of the Leader brothers the mill fell into disuse. An inventory made in 1669 mentions "A broaken house ready to fall, & a barne much out of repayre, two orchards with out fence with a Tract of Lands liing on both sides the River esteemed at foure hundred Acers more or less granted by the Town, Meddow at Tottanocke & at boabissa pond, & Whittes & Parkers Marsh, the broaken Mill with the Irons & Vtensills, the Falls and Tymber grant, the Smyths shopp with bellows Anvell, beekorne vice Sledg Hammer & some ould Irons, ffoure halfe hundred wieghts, An Iron beame, an ould Copper & an ould Kettle, & two ould Iron potts." The whole was appraised at £493.¹

Eliakim and William Hutchinson, brothers, got possession of the property and rented it to various tenants, the chief of whom was Roger Plaisted. Sept. 19, 1717, Martha Lord, aged about seventy-seven years, deposed that "She very well remembers mr Tuckers living at Great Works after mr Leader Left ye place which was upwards of sixty years ago. And further this Deponat Saith that mr Rogers Plaisted dweld at ye Same place fifty Seven years agoe or thereabouts and he & his Sons have Mostly been in Possession Ever since. And further Saith that ye Town of Berwick from Sturgeon Creek up to Toziars above Salmon falls hath been inhabited above Sixty years."² May 23, 1720, Daniel Goodwin, aged sixty-four and upwards, testified that Roger Plaisted rented Great Works mills of Hutchinson fifty years agoe, and after him Thomas Dowty and several other tenants of Hutchinson.³ John Lamb's landing place is mentioned in Goodwin's testimony. This was on the Great Works River, near the head of the land granted to Leader, a "place Called John Lamb's Landing Place where Hee burned Char-Coales."¹

The next settler north of the mill grant was Humphrey Chadbourne, who bought of the Sagamore Roles or Rowls, 10 May 1643, "Half a Mile of Ground which lieth betwixt the Little River & the Great River to begin at the Norther Side of ye old Ground." "Mr. Roles doth except a Parcel of Ground called by the Name Comphegan wch he doth keep for himself." Three years later Roles confirmed a sale to Chadbourne of his fish weir at "Little John's Falls," reserving for himself the right to as many small alewives as he wanted and "Half ye great Alewives that shall be taken at that Ware from Time to Time for ever." These falls are the succession of rapids in the Newichawannock River, opposite the land bought by Chalbourne.²

The tract of land called Quamphegan, or Quampeagan, was the private estate of Sagamore Rowles, it seems. March 19, 1650, he sold it to Thomas Spencer for five pounds. It was "a

Parcell of Land called by the Name of Quamphegon & bounded betwixt the two little fresh Creeks nearest adjoining unto the same & the uppermost Bounds in Length to go to the First little Swamp that lieth at the upper End of the said Ground.¹ The name was extended to the falls near the present bridge at South Berwick, and then to the river and to a region on both sides of the river. In a deed from John Clark to Thomas Abbot, 3 Sept. 1701, the parcel of land sold by Sagamore Rowles is described as "bounded on ye Southwest side by ye brook next below the falls and by Humphey Chadbourn's ffarm and on ye Northwest end by land of John Crafford, the maine river and Salmon fall brook bounding the remainder." In a deed from Thomas Abbot to his son, 30 Jan. 1710, fifty acres are described as being "in Dover, at a place commonly called by the name of Quamphegan." John Lovering and son John had dwelt there since 1663.²

As early as 1652 Capt. Thomas Wiggin and Mr. Simon Bradstreet had erected a saw-mill here. Thomas Broughton³ dis-

It was "over against ye Falls whereon is planted a Saw Mill commonly known by the name of Capt. Wiggines & Mr. Bradstreets Saw Mill together with the sd Falls on which the sd Mill is planted my Propriety extending it selfe Halfe way over the sd River called by the name of Quamphegon River. The aforesd Land extending it selfe above & below the sd Falls bounded with Two Little Fresh Creeks or Rivers nearest adjoyning to the same."

June 9, 1659, there were granted by the town to Roger Plaisted one hundred acres at Salmon Falls, "bounded on the southeast by a fresh water brook that bounds Mr. Thomas Broughton's land." Plaisted, then, was the settler next in order on the river. The brook mentioned was Salmon Falls Brook, so often called. It is now locally known as Hog Point Brook. The same day sixty acres were granted to William Love, "adjoining to Roger Plaisted's lot, above the Salmon Falls." William Love was living here as early as 1655, when "William Love's Bridge" is mentioned in a deed. He was taxed in Dover in 1658, was licensed to keep a public house of entertainment in 1680, in Berwick, and was one of the selectmen in 1683. His house was captured by Indians in 1689. Nov. 28, 1688, Samuel Willis, Esq., of Hartford, married his widow, Mary Love. She died before 1695, and Willis sold to John Taylor of Hampton, his "late wife's brother," the estate of William Love. Taylor sold it, two hundred acres, to Edward Sargent in 1697, and Sargent sold it in 1707 to Ichabod Plaisted. Thus the two original grants above named became united in the possession of the Plaisted family.

Mary, and the births of seven children are recorded in Boston. Besides these George, John, and Elizabeth Broughton, who had grants of land in 1672, in Berwick, were his children. George Broughton married Pearne or Perne —, and had five children recorded in Boston, 1667-1677. He died before 1701, leaving daughter, Rachel, who married Thomas Rew of Boston, Mary Broughton, Rebecca, who married Edward Cowel of Freeto, Mass., and Sarah Johnson.

John, son of Thomas Broughton, born in 1647, as a deposition shows, married Abigail, daughter of Rev. John Reyner of Dover, N. H. He died before 1710, leaving Nathaniel of Boston, daughter Mary, wife of Jacob Fowle of Woburn, Mass., and daughter Abigail Broughton. His widow, Abigail, had married a Mr. Kendall before 24 March 1709-10.

BERWICK 1631-1700

William Pile or Pyles had the next lot north of William Love and sold it to James Smith before 1663. It was granted to Pile 26 Oct. 1659 and contained fifty acres. James Smith willed it to his son, James, in 1687, and the latter sold it to Joseph Pray, 24 May 1703. It was then forty rods wide on the river and ran back till it included one hundred and thirty-six acres. The Prays long dwelt here.

In 1659 the town granted to Richard Tozier sixty acres "adjoining to William Pyles lott above the Salmon falls." Here Tozier had a garrison house, and here he was killed by Indians 16 Oct. 1675. The house was standing till within half a century. The house occupied by Charles Collins now marks its site. Nathan Lord, who married Martha Tozier, lived here.

Next above Tozier John Wincoll had a grant of one hundred acres 11 Dec. 1662. The same day fifty acres next north were granted to George Veasy, which he and wife, Mary, soon sold to Wincoll. The southern half of his own lot Wincoll sold to Benoni Hodsdon, 31 May 1671. John Wincoll came to Kittery from Watertown, Mass., and signed the submission of 1652. He was representative to the General Court in 1653, 1654 and 1655, and was often selectman. He returned to Watertown for a time and represented that town at General Court in 1658. With the Broughtons and John Hull he was interested in the saw-mills at Salmon Falls and had extensive grants of land and lumber above the Falls. He served many years as Justice of the Peace and Associate Judge and again represented Kittery at General Court in 1675, 1677 and 1678. He was for many years a surveyor and laid out most of the original lots in Berwick. He was captain in the militia and in 1675 while he was with his company at Scarborough his house at Salmon Falls was burned by Indians. He served for a time as Clerk of Courts and Register of Deeds and of Probate. He was killed by a fall from his horse 22 Oct. 1694. He married Mary Etherington about 1675 and Olive, widow of Roger Paisted, before 1683.¹

John Wincoll of Portsmouth, mariner, and wife, Deborah, sold the homestead of Capt. John Wincoll at Salmon Falls to John, son of James Smith, 6 March, 1709.

¹See York Deeds, IV, 86 and p. 11 of the Preface.

Clement Short had a grant of the next fifty acres, 11 Dec. 1662. Clement Short, Jr., had a grant in 1685. Thomas Short of Boston sold this lot granted to his father in 1662 to John Key and William Grant, 25 Dec. 1706. This was probably the Thomas Short who married Elizabeth, daughter of Capt. John and Mehitable Frost of Boston.

The next four lots were granted on the same date as the last three, 11 Dec. 1662, to John Key, James Grant, James Barry, and Micum McIntire in order, proceeding north. They were all thirty rods in breadth by the river side and extended into the woods two hundred and sixty-seven rods. Additional grants were made at the head of these lots a few years later. The lots of Barry and of McIntire passed into the possession of Philip Hubbard in 1706, the former through William Goodwin and the latter through Daniel, son of Micum McIntire, who was one of the early settlers of York. When McIntire's lot was laid out, in 1662, it was "bounded on the north by several marked trees" and was, doubtless, the frontier lot. There is no evidence that McIntire or Barry lived on these lots.

The lot granted to James Grant was owned a few years later by Edward Toogood, and by him was sold to Timothy Wentworth in 1705. Wentworth's descendants still occupy this lot. Here he had a garrison. Toogood lived down in the field, nearer to the river. An old cemetery is close by. Toogood removed to Portsmouth.

Thus we have sailed up the river and gone around the falls, marking the estates of the first settlers. Thousands of descendants of almost every emigrant will be interested to know the precise spot of the original homestead. The location has been indicated on the maps as nearly as can now be determined. The history of the region is not complete till we know the settlers on the New Hampshire shore, for the river was at first the highway, and often the nearest neighbors lived across in ancient Dover. On the west side of Salmon Falls Thomas Hanson and Ralph Twombly had grants in 1658. Edward Taylor lived just below, who later removed to Exeter. John Tuttle and Ezekiel Wentworth had grant of mill privilege here in 1701. On the Dover side of Quamphegan Falls lived in earliest times John Lovering, near the end of the present bridge. His son John sold the place to Thomas Abbot, and from 1725 onward Benjamin Wentworth lived here. Below the Falls is a strip of land along the river called "Sligo" as early as 1708. At that time Henry Tibbetts had a hundred acres here, and next below him lived James Stackpole and his son, Philip. His farm now belongs to the estate of the late Samuel Hale. The accompanying illustration is presented to show the style of the old warehouses that once were seen at short intervals along the river. This was the last to be demolished a few years ago, and some thoughtful artist has preserved it. The place was called Stackpole's Landing in 1714.

Below Stackpole lived Thomas Canney, 2d, and Henry Hobbs built ships near by, and Thomas Wallingford lived at Madam's Cove. Then came David Hamilton and later Sylvanus Nock and the Sligo garrison house, about opposite to Richard Nason's. Next were the houses and lands of Lt. Hatevil Nutter and Benjamin Weymouth. This brings us to William Stiles' at St. Albans Cove, opposite Nathan Lord's. The land from here to Cochecho Point was owned by a company and had no settlers in the old time, that I can find. To locate the original settlers on Dover Neck and Bloody Point must be the task of a much needed historian of ancient Dover.

IX.

MUNICIPAL HISTORY.

It has been shown that there were no permanent settlers in old Kittery earlier than 1631 at what is now South Berwick, and a few years later at Kittery Point and at what is now called Leighton's Point in Eliot. Soon there was felt the need of courts and a duly established government. The first court for the Province of Maine was held at Saco in 1636. Its proceedings contain nothing that pertains to the history of Kittery. At the session held in Saco, 25 June 1640, there were present from Kittery James Treworgy, Edward Small, Nicholas Frost, John Heard, Philip Swaddow, William Everett, John Pickes, Andrew Heifor and Peter Wyer. The following from Kittery are mentioned as not appearing, Francis Champernowne, Stephen Crufford, John Lander, William Wormwood, John Andrews, Thomas Withers, John White, John Ugrove, Abraham Conley, Samuel Haynes, Edward Starbuck, John Hall, Thomas Spencer, Humphrey Chadbourne, and Thomas Brookes. Some of these names are never mentioned again as inhabitants of Kittery, and Champernowne, Starbuck and Hall were then living in Dover, N. H. It seems as though all the known inhabitants of the Province were required to make their appearance at Court on the 25th day of June every year. The functions of the Court were legislative as well as judicial. It made laws, appointed officers and rendered decisions in cases civil and criminal.

Some have asserted that there was a combination, for government, of the inhabitants dwelling on both sides of the Piscataqua in 1640. This was, however, the Dover Combination, and a few names are attached to it that before or after that date are found in Kittery, but in 1640 they were all dwelling in Dover. The "Piscataqua Plantation" in old records sometimes means the settlement on the east side of the river, and sometimes it means the settlement at Sandy Beach, or Rye, and Strawberry Bank, or Portsmouth, N. H., but these settlements on both sides of the river were never united under the government of one plantation or town.

Williamson says that "at the court of elections, Oct. 20, 1647, the Piscataqua plantations were formed into a town by the name of Kittery."¹ I have searched the court records in vain for confirmation of his statement. It is probable that the inhabitants of Kittery then began to act as a town. The earliest date on the town records is of a meeting held 19 March, 1648. The court record, dated 16 Oct. 1649, is as follows: "It is ordered by this Court and the power thereof that the Inhabitants of Pascataquack within the jurisdiction of this province have the full power of a township as any other towns within this jurisdiction have, and that all the inhabitants from Brabote Harbor and so eight miles above Newichawanocke with the Isles of Sholes to be within that township." The allusion to other towns within the jurisdiction is curious, since no other town existed. York had been chartered as a city under the name of Gorgeana in 1641, and the town of York dates from 1652.

As to the origin of the name of Kittery some have guessed at it and stated their guesses as historical facts. I found a statement in Hon. Mark Dennett's manuscripts, written by Luther Jenkins, that "Kittery was named by Sir Ferdinando Gorges for his oldest daughter, Kittrina, and means a pleasant location along the sea coast." An interesting legend, or an abbreviated novel, has been published to the effect that one Kitty Rye lived in the vicinity of the present Fort McClary in 1630 and that a little later she was wooed and won by one Philip Wamerton of Strawberry Bank, who was joked by his companions for going over to see Kitty Rye. Thus the place came to be called Kittery as a modification of her name.² I can find no evidence that any such persons ever lived. All this belongs to the realm of imagination. It is certain that Alexander Shapleigh, who built the first house at Kittery Point about 1635, came from a place called Kittery Point in Kingsweare, near Dartmouth, England, and without doubt he gave the name to the spot where he built. Kittery Point was so called before the name Kittery was given to the township, in all probability.

¹Hist. of Maine Vol. I, p. 303.

²Old Eliot Vol. II, pp. 21-23.

The town records give but little insight into the early history of the town. The principal business of the first town meetings seems to have been to confer grants of land. Old settlers were confirmed in the possession of lots they had cultivated for years, and new grants were made from time to time, to encourage lumbering and shipbuilding, to attract new settlers, and to supply farms to young men who had grown to full age. Even the town officials elected are not fully recorded. The first election of Townsmen or Selectmen, was 16 July 1648, and Nicholas Shapleigh, John Heard and Nicholas Frost were chosen, all from what is now Eliot, showing where the greater part of the population then lived. In 1651 Thomas Withers, Humphrey Chadbourne and Abraham Conley were elected Townsmen; in 1652 they were Thomas Withers, Nicholas Shapleigh, John Wincoll, Nicholas Frost and Anthony Emery; in 1654 they were Nicholas Shapleigh, John Wincoll and Anthony Emery; and in 1659 there were five, Nicholas Shapleigh, Thomas Withers, Richard Nason, James Heard and John Symonds. No other Selectmen are recorded before 1660. The fact that a grant of land was made, 14 Feb. 1648, by Nicholas Shapleigh, John Heard and Nicholas Frost as agents for the town, is evidence that these men were Selectmen also for the year preceding their recorded election.

In 1652 William Hawthorne, John Leverett and Henry Bartholomew were appointed Commissioners to treat with the people of Maine, to get them to acknowledge the jurisdiction of Massachusetts. This commission failed, and another was appointed the same year. The second commission was composed of Simon Bradstreet, Samuel Symonds, Thomas Wiggin and Bryan Pendleton. Wiggin was from Dover and Pendleton from Great Island, now Newcastle, and these well understood the feelings and condition of the people of Kittery. The Commissioners summoned the men of Kittery to "Assemble together before us at the howse of William Everet betweene seven and eight of the clocke in the morning the 16th of this present November." The inhabitants accordingly assembled and after some debate they signed a paper, a fac simile of which is here given. The original paper is about eight inches by six. It has thirty-four signatures, six of which are on the back of it. Just half of the number signed their own names. Since the other half made their marks in signature to deeds, it is evident that they were unable to write. In the report of the Commissioners an ostensible copy of this paper was presented, but the names are arranged in different order, and, moreover, seven other names are added, namely, James Emery, Christian Remick, George Leader, Nathan Lord, Joseph Milles, Philip Babb, Antipas Maverick and William Everett. These did not sign the submission. Perhaps they were not present, though William Everett should have been at his own house. It is more probable that they were persuaded to agree to the submission a few days later and after the grant of the commissioners to the town had been made. Their report shows that many were reluctant to sign without stipulated conditions. It says, "After long Agitacon with the Inhabitants about the whole business in hand they offered to Come vnder the government of Massachusetts Provided that the Articles and Conditions tendered by themselves might be Received as the grounds thereof, which being wholly denied by the Commissioners who tould them they must first submit to the Government and then they should be ready to Affoord them such priuiledges and Immunities as they should think meete to graunt; wherevpon at length they did submit." We have seen that in the signatures the report of the Commissioners did not exactly correspond to the facts. It was an amended or doctored report. So it was in the matter of the conditions on which the submission was signed. Those conditions were formulated and dated a few days later, but they were talked over and well understood before and at the assembly at the house of William Everett. The men of Kittery did not throw themselves blindly and unconditionally upon the generosity and liberality of Massachusetts, and some were too stubborn or too shrewd to sign their names to any compact till the conditions were "nominated in the bond." The conditions were of great importance, as a careful perusal of the grant of the Commissioners shows.

The handwriting of that time is sometimes read with difficulty. The document is as follows:

The fifth article of this grant was the one of most importance to the inhabitants of Kittery. It confirmed their legal right to the lands already possessed, whether granted by the town, by the Indians, or by the former Generall Court of the Province of Maine. Thus the government of Massachusetts was arrayed on their side against the claims of the heirs of Capt. John Mason and of Sir Ferdinando Gorges. Most of the occupied lots had been granted by the town before this date, and those who had any rightful claim to other lands were left undisturbed by the terms of the thirteenth article. All the rest of the land in Kittery was acknowledged as belonging to the town, that is, to those persons who signed the submission, who thus became proprietors. Their heirs and assigns received their proper shares in long subsequent divisions of the public lands.

Article seventh is of great importance. It admitted all the inhabitants of Kittery at that time as freemen, although they were not church members. There was no organized church till later. It established a rule for Maine different from that of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, where full citizenship was limited to those who were members of the church. This was a long step in the separation of church and state. It did not, however, grant toleration to any religious denomination, other than the orthodox church, for Quakers were later disfranchised, and Baptists were driven from the town. Non church members were preferred to dissenters, although the orthodox church was made up of dissenters.

Article thirteenth shows, as has been inferred above, that some had not at that time signed the submission.

The Commissioners, who had the powers of a civil and criminal court, appointed Thomas Duston and Robert Mendum constables for Kittery, and Philip Babb constable for the Isles of Shoals. At the same time Brian Pendleton and Thomas Withers were appointed judges, and Hugh Gunnison associate judge.

York submitted a few days later, and the eastern towns soon followed. Thus Maine became York County of Massachusetts. The relations were afterward somewhat disturbed and imperiled in consequence of revolutions in England, but in spite of all Maine continued to be a part of Massachusetts till 1820.

The town records tell but little of the history of Kittery. They contain scarcely an allusion to the Indian wars. There are the usual acts of towns about church matters, roads, schools, and grants of land. In such matters the history of one town is the history of every other town, and the patience of the reader need not be burdened with a repetition of the details. The old tax lists would be of great historical value, had they been preserved. I have been told by good authority that years ago such lists were used to kindle fires with by paupers at the poor-house, where the lists were stored. The following is the only tax list I have found on the town records, and it has been compared with a similar list found in the archives of Massachusetts. It shows who the landowners were in 1712, and it helps to determine where they lived. The list begins with the residents at Braveboat Harbor. It follows the settlers in succession down to the end of Kittery Point, where Thomas Allen seems to have been the only landowner actually resident, probably on Warehouse Point. Business activity had shifted from this place to the vicinity of the Pepperrells. Nathaniel Thomas never lived here, but at this time owned thirty-six acres at the extremity of the point, with two or three old houses. Then the list takes us up on the east side of Spruce Creek, and down on the west side to Elihu Gunnison's. Then it shows who lived along Crooked Lane in regular order and so on up to Berwick parish at Thompson's Brook. The inhabitants of Berwick are given without much order. The amount of taxation reveals in part the comparative wealth of the people, though we are loth to believe that William Pepperrell was not worth one-third as much as Ichabod Plaisted. Most of his property was elsewhere or in other forms than real estate. This was a tax on land alone. There must have been many other residents of Kittery, but who they were we have small means of determining.

A petition to form a township of the parish of Berwick was presented to the General Court before 20 Aug. 1700, for then the Court mentioned such petition and gave notice to the inhabitants of Kittery to answer to said petition at the next session of Court. There seems to have been opposition, and the matter dragged along for twelve years or more. No petition can be found in the Massachusetts Archives.

Under date of 20 March 1712, the following appears in the records of the Council, "Upon Reading a petition of Upper Kittery in the Parish of Berwick Praying to be made a Township, Ordered that John Wheelwright and Thomas Noyes and Capt. Lewis Bane be a Committee to repair to Kittery, giving Notice before Hand of their coming to the Select Men that they may attend them and hear their allegations and Objections (if any they have) why the Prayer of the Petition may not be granted, Mr. Wheelwright to appoint the Time of Meeting and to make their Report to the Court on the second Wednesday of their Session in May next."

June 3, 1713, the Council has this record, "A vote sent up from the Representatives referring to the affair of Kittery Read and Non concurred & voted that the House be desired to reconsider the vote of the Board after Committees report."

Under date of June 9, 1713, "For a final issue of the affair of Kittery Ordered that the Report of the Committee be withdrawn and laid aside and that the Precinct of Berwick extending from Thompsons Brook upward be henceforth a distinct & separate Town and have & enjoy all Immunities & Priviledges as other Towns have & do by Law enjoy, continuing the Name of Berwick. And ordered that all the present Town Rights & common & undivided Lands do yet remain to the Freeholders & Proprietors of Kittery & Berwick as before their Separation to be allotted & divided to & among the whole Propriety at such Time & in such Way & Manner as shall be agreed on by the Major Part of the Interested as the Law directs."

Consented to

J. DUDLEY.

Thus Berwick became a separate town, and Sept. 29, 1713, John Plaisted, Ichabod Plaisted, Benjamin Nason, Philip Hubbard, James Warren and John Croad assembled at the house of Capt. John Heard and there met William Pepperrell, Joseph Hammond, and Charles Frost, these being evidently the selectmen of the two towns, to treat about the division between the towns and any other matters relating to the same.

The new town included all that now belongs to Berwick, South Berwick and North Berwick, as well as a small part of Lebanon. At the time of its incorporation the population centered about the mills at Great Works, Quamphegan, and Salmon Falls. The northern part had few inhabitants. South Berwick was incorporated as a separate town 12 Feb. 1814, and a portion of Berwick containing five hundred and forty-four inhabitants was annexed in 1881. North Berwick was taken from Berwick and incorporated as a town 22 March 1831.

The population of the town in the year 1776 is given in the town records. The lower parish then contained nine hundred and twenty-three inhabitants, the middle parish six hundred and fifty-six, and the upper parish, now Eliot, one thousand four hundred and fifty-seven, making a total of three thousand and thirty-six. Some old tax lists of about this date and a little earlier inform us pretty accurately as to who were living in Kittery. A tax list delivered to Jonathan Hammond in 1751 gives the following names of persons residing from Great Cove to Sturgeon Creek. They have here been arranged alphabetically for more convenient reference.

John Allen, John Allen, Jr., John Brawn, Daniel Brown, Joshua Brooks, John Cole, John Crocker, Abraham Cross, Roger Deering, Ebenezer Dennett, Jr., Peter Dixon, Michael Devaughn (called Michael Vaughan in a subsequent list), Joseph Field, Stephen Field, Stephen Field, Jr., Abraham Fernald, Dennis Fernald, Joseph Fernald, Moses Fernald, Thomas Fernald, William Fernald, James Fogg, Parker Foster, John Frye, Andrew Green, Aaron Hanscom, Daniel Hanscom, James Hanscom, John Hanscom, Moses Hanscom, Thomas Hanscom, Thomas Hanscom, Jr., Timothy Hanscom, Samuel Hanscom, Uriah Hanscom, Joseph Hill, Samuel Hill, Jr., John Hickey, Joseph Hammond, Esq., Joseph Hammond, Jr., John Hammond, George Hammond, Daniel Knight, Gideon Knight, Thomas Knight, Edward Kennard, Michael Kennard, Samuel Kennard, Michael Kennard, Jr., Richard King, John Leighton, William Leighton, Ephraim

The tax list of 1756 for the same district adds the following names, David Boyce, John Deering, Edmund Coffin, John Foster, John Gowell, Jonathan Hammond, Jacob Garland, Widow Susanna Knight, Widow Martha Libby and son Reuben, Ephraim Libby, Jr., William Mallaley, Jonathan Moore, Edward Preble, John Pettegrow, Samuel Pettegrow, Timothy Richardson, Ichabod Remick, Tobias Shapleigh, Constable, Noah Staple, Robert Tripe and Thomas Tripe.

The list of 1758 adds the following names, James Fogg, Jr., Samuel Hanscom, Jr., Isaac Hill, Widow Sarah Lydston, Widow Hannah King, Ebenezer son of George Hammond, Jonathan Moore, Widow Patience Moore, Jeremiah Paul, Joseph Paul, Isaac Reed, Isaac Reed, Jr., Joseph Remick, John Spinney, Jr., Edmund Spinney, David Staple, Robert Staple, Solomon Staple, Jr., Ephraim Tobey, Jr., John Tobey, Jr., Samuel Tobey, Daniel Toward, John Scriggins, Jr., and Robert Young.

Among the papers left by Hon. Mark Dennett is a "Rate or Tax made on Tools and Estates Rateable in the Middle Parish in Kittery for paying ye minister's Salary and Other Parish Charges arising within the same at four Shillings on Each Tool and Two Pence on ye Pound for Estates." It is dated 30 Sept. 1763. The sum total of the tax was sixty-five pounds, seventeen shillings and eight pence. The names of the taxpayers are here arranged alphabetically.

The upper parish of Kittery was incorporated as the town of Eliot 1 March 1810. The leader in securing its incorporation and the chosen agent of the parish for this purpose was Andrew P. Fernald. This movement had been talked about from time to time for more than a century, and a petition and a counter petition had been drawn up in 1796. The reasons for desiring a separate township were the distance of many from the place of holding the town meetings, in the church at the head of Spruce Creek, the political combinations that had imposed upon the people of the upper parish undesired officers, the opposing interests of the seafaring people of lower Kittery and the farmers of the upper parish, the debt of the town with no adequate provision for liquidating it, and the dissensions arising from lack of unanimity in the choice of a pastor in the upper parish. The last was an affair of long continuance. Some seem to have determinedly disliked Parson Chandler for the sole reason that they could not have another person as pastor. It was hard for the minority to cheerfully acquiesce in the decision of the majority. Many were opposed to the incorporation of the town, but the greater part of the wealth of the new town was arrayed on the side of incorporation. All the petitions and incorporation papers have been published in the tenth number of the first volume of "Old Eliot," where also may be found lists of the tax-payers at that time.

The name of Eliot is said to have been suggested by Rev. John Eliot of Boston, an intimate friend of Gen. Andrew P. Fernald. He promised the town a meeting-house bell, which was never furnished, since there was no belfry. Some have supposed the name of the town to have been derived from Hon. Robert Eliot of Newcastle, one of the leading men in the early history of Scarborough, Kittery and Portsmouth. It is questioned whether any family relationship can be traced from him to the Rev. John Eliot above mentioned.

CONFLICTS WITH THE INDIANS.

For nearly half a century the first settlers of Kittery lived in peace and friendship with the Indians. South Berwick was a trading post, where the Indians often came in great numbers, yet there is no record of depredations or murders committed by them before the time of King Philip's War. Their chiefs, Runacwitts and Rowles, sold land to some of the settlers, and Rowles continued to live in the midst of the white men. It is to be feared that the settlers were not always just in business transactions and that fire-water was sometimes a poor compensation for valuable lands and furs. We read in Court records of trials for selling rum to the Indians.

The tradition has been published that the wife and daughter of Nicholas Frost were killed by Indians near the mouth of Sturgeon Creek. One account says this was in 1648; another says it was 4 July 1650. It is a noticeable coincidence that Major Charles Frost was killed by Indians 4 July many years later. There was no Indian War in 1648 nor in 1650. There is no hint in any public record that any of the inhabitants of Kittery were disturbed by Indians at that time. It is hardly credible, then, that a party of Indians entered Frost's house on Leighton's Point while Nicholas and his son Charles were away, captured wife and daughter, were pursued toward night, that a fight occurred in which Charles Frost, a youth of seventeen years, killed a chief and a brave, and that the next morning the mangled remains of the two women were found. So the story runs. It contradicts all we learn elsewhere about the peaceful habits of the Indians at this time. There are other evidences that some mythology has grown up about the early history of the Frost family.

King Philip's War broke out in June, 1675. It began in Plymouth Colony but soon was raging all along the frontier in New England. An attack was made upon the house of Richard Tozier, who lived above Salmon Falls. He was absent in the command of Capt. John Wincoll. Fifteen persons were in the house. A girl of eighteen held the door while the rest were escaping by the rear to the garrison. The savages cut down the door with their tomahawks, rushed in and struck down the heroic girl, leaving her for dead. She recovered and lived many years. One child of three years was killed by the Indians, and one was carried into captivity and held six months. The next day the house and barns of Capt. John Wincoll were burned.

A man and two boys were shot at Berwick 7 Oct. 1675. On the sixteenth of the same month the house of Richard Tozier was again assailed by a band of one hundred Indians and was burned to the ground. Tozier was killed and his son Thomas was either killed or carried off captive. Lieut. Roger Plaisted, who was in command of the small force at the garrison house, sent nine men to reconnoitre. They walked into an ambuscade, and three were shot. The next day a cart drawn by oxen was sent out to bring in the dead bodies, escorted by twenty men. No precautions seem to have been taken against the wiles of a foe known to be crafty. While the first body was being placed in the cart the Indians fired upon Plaisted and his men from behind a stone wall, logs and bushes. A few of the men escaped. Plaisted disdained to fly and threw away his life in a vain effort to fight almost alone against a hundred or more. He was cut down by a tomahawk. A son, Roger, was slain at the same time, and another son, whose name is unknown, is said to have been mortally wounded. Just before the encounter Plaisted and John Broughton had sent a dispatch for aid as follows:

"These are to inform you that the Indians are just now engaging us with at least a hundred men, and have slain four of our men already. Sirs, if ever you have any love for us and the country, now show yourselves with men to help us, or else we are all in great danger to be slain, unless our God wonderfully appears for our deliverance."

The hill that slopes down to the river just north of the railroad bridge at Salmon Falls is on the old Plaisted estate. A few paces east of the road that runs over that hill, and near the hill-top, is a marble slab that commemorates Plaisted and his sons. The peaceful surroundings are in beautiful contrast with the terror and excitement of that day in which men were falling, houses and mills were burning, and women and children were being led into captivity.

The Indians went south at least as far as Sturgeon Creek. Tradition says that at this time Richard Nason, Jr., was slain in his own door and his son Richard was taken to Canada never to return. Two men unknown were shot at Sturgeon Creek.

FROST'S HILL.

Capt. Charles Frost was caught some distance from his house and ten bullets were fired at him. He hastened to his house, where there were three boys. He shouted out to them as though the house were well garrisoned, and the Indians were alarmed and did not venture within gunshot.

It was about three years later that two hundred Indians were treacherously captured at Cochecho and sent to Boston, where some of them were executed for murders committed and the most were sold into slavery. This act of perfidy, in which it is said that Major Richard Waldron of Dover and Capt. Charles Frost joined reluctantly and under protest, was never forgotten nor forgiven by the Indians. Both Waldron and Frost paid the price of their bad faith with their lives some years later. The Indians had been invited to a friendly conference with an express pledge of safety, and were then entrapped by a sham fight.

After a peace of ten years King William's War began and raged for ten years more, during which time the whole frontier of Kittery was in constant alarm. The attack upon Salmon Falls and Quamphegan was in the spring of 1690 and has been best portrayed in the following letters:

Yesterday we gave accot of ye dreadful destruction of Salmon ffalls the pertieculers whereof please take as followeth:

The enemy made their onset between break of the day & sunrise—when most were a bed & no watch kept neither in fort nor house they presently took possession of ye fort to prevent any of ours doing it & so carried all before them by a surprize, none of our men being able to get together into a body to oppose them, so that in the place were kild & taken between fourscore & 100 persons, of wch between twenty & Thirty able men, the fort & upards of twenty houses burnt, most of the Cattle burnt in the houses or otherwise kil'd which were very considerable from thence the Enemy proceeded to Quamphagon where lived onely Thomas Homes who upon the Alarm retired from his house to a small Garrison built near his saw mill wheither also some of Salmon falls yt made their Escape fled, about 30 of the Enemies surrounded Homes house, but met with noe opposition there till fourteen men of ours came up from ye lower parts of ye Town, & undescried by ye Enemy, made a shot upon ye party of Indians at Holmes houe, Sundry of ym standing before the door, at wch shot they say three of the Enemy fell, ye rest run into the house & broke through ye backside thereof, & being more numerous than ours forced our men to retire, nine of them got safe home & five Escaped to Holmes Garrison, only one of ours wounded in the Encounter, then the Enemy burnt Holmes house & proceeded about a mile lower down & burnt the ministrs house wth two more & Assaulted Spencers Garrison but were repel'd and so retir'd. James Plaisted who was taken at Salmon falls was sent by Hope Hood (Commandr in chief of the Indians) wth a flag of Truce to Tho. Holmes for ye surrendr of his Garrison—promising liberty to depart upon his soe doing, but Plaisted returned not nor was ye Garrison surrendered.

The sd Plaisted who was in ye Enemies hands many houres Informed yt he saw of ye Enemy one hundred & fifty men well accountred & Guesses them to be about one half french; upon their taking possession he saith that ten of them french & Indians made A dance wch Hope hood told him were all officers, he also told him that his Brother Gooden who liv'd in Loves house was going to be try'd for his life by A Councill of Warr; for yt in their takeing Loves house the said Gooden had kil'd one french man & mortally wounded another & further that there was Eight french ships design'd for Pascataque River to destroy ye same.

The Alarm being given to all adjacent Towns in ordr to their releife we sent about thirty men from this Town, as many went from Dover, & a party from Yorke together with wt could be got from their own town, but before they could unite their force it was neare night & then they marcht with about 100 men under Comand of Capt Jo. Hamond Comandr of ye uper part of Kittery, the scouts yt went before just as they came within sight of Salmon falls discovered one of ye Enemy who was binding up his pack & staying behinde his Company fell into our hands wch proved to be a frenchman whose examination in short we herewith send to you & to morrow morning intend to send the persons towards you by land, none by Water being just ready to goe; our fforces proceeded in pursuit of ye Enemy & about 2 mile above ye ffort of Salmon falls at the farther house up in the woods there discovered them about ye setting of ye sunn, our men presently fell upon them & they as resolutely oppos'd them, in short the fight lasted as long as they could see friends from Enemies, in wch we lost two men, one of York another of Cochecho kil'd upon ye place & 6 or 7 wounded some is feared mortally; wt damage we did the Enemy we can't at present say. This is all ye accot we can at present Give; to morrow intend you shall hear againe from us; we Intrem Subscribe ourselves¹

Very little can be added to the narrative given in these letters. Drake in his Book of the Indians says that about thirty men were killed and sixty-four were carried into captivity. Williamson says thirty-four were killed and fifty-four were captured. About twenty-seven houses were burned, and two hundred cattle were killed. No list has been preserved of the killed and captured. From records in Canada it is learned that among the captives were John Key and his sister Abigail, whose brother James had been slain. Abigail was still a captive 5 March 1710-11. John returned to Berwick about 1695, married and reared a family there. Another captive was Martha Grant, and her husband, Christopher Grant, was, doubtless, slain at this time. She was daughter of Thomas Wills² of Exeter, Eng., and was born at Bristol, Eng., 18 Jan. 1653. Her mother was Mary Wadel.

² Was this the one who lived on Crooked Lane? See p. 84.

Her first husband was James Smith of Berwick, and a son, John Smith, was captured with her. They were both baptized, 3 May 1693, in Montreal. Both were redeemed and returned to Berwick. Williamson says that Mary Ferguson, a girl of fifteen years, was slain. Sarah and Abigail Ferguson, sisters, were ransomed from Quebec by Matthew Cary, October, 1695.

Other captives were Thomas Goodwin and his wife, who was Mehitabel, daughter of Lieut. Roger Plaisted. The husband and wife were assigned to different bands of Indians and so remained apart. After his escape he is said to have returned to Canada for the ransom of his wife. An account of her sufferings was written by Rev. Cotton Mather in his Magnalia, and has been often republished. Her son, about five months old, was barbarously murdered before her eyes and hanged by the neck in a forked bough of a tree. After terrible sufferings from grief, cold and hunger, she arrived at Montreal. The record of her baptism, written in French, has been kindly furnished me by Miss C. Alice Baker, who has published much about the captives taken in the French and Indian Wars. The translation is as follows:

"Mondav, 11 May, 1693, there was solemnly baptized an English woman called in her own country Mehetabel, and by the French who captured her in war, 18 March 1690, Esther, who was born at Barvic, in New England, 30 April (old style, or 19 May new style) 1670, of the marriage of Roger Pleisted, Protestant, and Olive Colman of the same religion, and was married to Thomas Gouden [Goodwin] also Protestant. She has lived for about three years in the service of Mademoiselle de Nauguiere [written also de la Naudiere]. She was named Marie Esther. Her godfather was Messire Hector de Catlieres, Chevalier, Governor for the King in the Isle of Montreal and its vicinity. Her godmother was Damoiselle Marguerite Renee Denis, widow of Monsieur Naugiere de la Perade, during his life Captain of the Guard of Monsieur le Conte de Frontenac, Governor of New France. The baptism was performed by M. Francois Dolie de Casson, Grand Vicar of the most Illustrious and most Reverend Monseigneur Bishop of Quebec."

I have heard the tradition from one of her descendants that Mehitabel Goodwin was married in Canada to a man named Rand (some say Pain) and that descendants are living in Portsmouth. This is highly improbable. She was baptized in May, 1693, and could not have been married before, and she was ransomed in October, 1695. The Rands of Portsmouth are all, doubtless, descended from the Francis Rand who came over in the company of Capt. John Mason.

A list of Garrisons in Kittery in 1690 has been preserved.¹ There were in the lower part of Kittery ten garrisons, John Morrell's, John Shapleigh's, Joseph Hammond's, John Alcock's, Joseph Curtis's, Joseph Wilson's, William Pepperrell's, and Widow Champernowne's. Not one soldier was in any one of these garrisons, but they were kept and defended by their inhabitants. In upper Kittery or Berwick there were eight garrisons, Major Charles Frost's, Benoni Hodsdon's, Jonathan Nason's, Daniel Stone's, Ensign Thomas Abbot's, Richard Nason's, William Spencer's, and Thomas Holmes', in all which garrisons there were but six soldiers. Major Frost had about fifty pounds of powder and one hundred pounds of shot. Such were the means of defense when the war began. It is evident that every house and inhabitant above Thomas Holmes at Quamphegan Falls had been swept away by the Indian massacre of the spring of 1690.

The inhabitants of Berwick were not left long undisturbed. William Vaughan in a letter dated 28 May 1690, says, "The Indians left Nechowanneck after having Dangerously Wounded one man, burn'd sundry houses, &c." The journal of Rev. John Pike of Dover, N. H., affords us some glimpses of the constant dangers to which all houses and inhabitants were exposed. He says under date of 28 Sept. 1691, "David Hamilton, Henry Childe &c were slain by Indians at Newichawannick." David Hamilton was son of a David Hamilton who died a few years earlier. Henry Child had married Sarah, daughter of Richard Nason, and left children.

In 1694 the Indians again raided Kittery from Berwick to Spruce Creek. Sarah, daughter of Benjamin Nason, was captured and held in captivity till 1699, when she was ransomed by Thomas Hutchins. The intentions of marriage of Thomas ¹Coll. of Me. Hist. Society, Vol. V, pp. 91-2.

Hutchins and Sarah Nason were recorded 26 July 1718. We would wish, for the sake of romance, that these were the same persons, but there is some evidence that another Sarah Nason married Thomas Hutchins.

Pike says that, 20 Aug. 1694, the Indians killed Henry Barnes, Edmund Hammons and his wife, as they were at work in a field at Spruce Creek. Four days later he records that, "Eight persons were killed and captivated at Long Reach, 5 at Downing's and 3 at Tobey's." About a year later, 6 July 1695, Capt. Joseph Hammond was captured while he was searching for a strayed cow in the woods. He was bound and left all night on Raitt's Hill, taken to Canada and ransomed after about five months. During his absence in Canada his garrison was attacked as the following letter from Charles Frost to Lieutenant-Governor Stoughton, shows.

It was during this year that Joseph Frye, doubtless son of Adrian Frye, aged fifteen years, was captured. He never returned, but married in Canada and descendants have been traced back to him. He was baptized in Canada under the name of Andre Frey.¹

A letter from Ichabod Plaisted to Capt. John Hill of Saco, dated 9 June, 1693, says, "Last night we had four persons carried away from the garrison by the Indians, and one wounded. The place was at Sturgeon Creek. And those carried away were Nicholas Frost's wife and two children and the Widow Smith." This was the wife of Nicholas Frost, the "beaver trader." Nicholas Frost himself must have been captured about this time and was reported as in captivity at Norridgewock in 1695 and as drowned in 1698.² Mrs. Frost and her children returned to Kittery. They must have lived on the farm long occupied by the Clark family of Eliot.

Major Charles Frost had long been hated by the Indians. They found their opportunity for revenge 4 July 1697. As he was returning from church at Great Works, about a mile north of his garrison house he fell into an ambush. Dennis Downing was shot with him and also Phebe, wife of John Heard. This has been taken to be Dennis Downing the blacksmith, but some think it was his son of the same name.³ The night after Frost's burial the Indians opened his grave, took out the body, carried it to the top of Frost's hill and suspended it upon a stake. His resting place was marked some years later with a flat stone, on which is a rudely chiseled inscription, "Here lyeth intrrd ye body of Mj. Charles Frost ager 65 years Deed July ye 4th 1697." The spot where he was slain is near a large boulder, on which is a suitable inscription. It is known as Ambush Rock.

Tradition says that the wife of John Heard was wounded and tried in vain to remount her horse. She begged her husband to leave her and save the children at home. The Indians chased him and shot his horse under him near his garrison. He escaped and saved his house and children.

²See Old Eliot, Vol. IV, p. 88.

³A letter found in Massachusetts Archives, dated 5 July 1697, was written by Richard Waldron to Lt. Gov. Stoughton, in which he says, speaking of Major Charles Frost, "himself & seven or eight in company yesterday in the afternoon coming homeward from Meeting at Nechowonke were ambushed by ye enemy. The Major and one Heard's wife were shot down dead, Heard and young Downing wounded, the latter mortally. They discovered about 8 or 10 Indians." This Dennis Downing, Jr., had a grant of land, 16 March 1694, which was laid out, 21 Dec. 1700, to his brother, Joshua Downing, at Beaver Dam.

Hon. Mark Dennett left on record a tradition concerning this John Heard. While out in the woods he was discovered by several Indians. He at once fled and the Indians pursued. Heard knew of an old hollow log in the woods, which he gained unperceived by the Indians, having killed his dog that he might not be betrayed. There he lay concealed. The Indians in their pursuit came and sat down on the log for rest. Heard listened to their conversation and heard them threaten what they would do to John Heard if they should catch him. He had previously distinguished himself in the Indian wars. In due time he emerged from his hiding place and returned home in safety.

Pike's brief account of Frost's death is as follows: "Major Charles Frost slain by the Indians (as returning from meeting betwixt Smith's garrison and his own) also Dennis Downing and Phebe Heard slain at the same time and John Heard wounded."

Pike's Journal says, "29 July 1697, James Gooden with two soldiers slain by the Indians as they were at work in the meadow, and William Gooden wounded." These were sons of the first Daniel Goodwin.

"9 May 1698, Enoch Hutchins was killed by the Indians at Spruce Creek, as he was at work in his field, and 3 of his sons carried away. The same day Joseph Pray of York was wounded." Tradition says the wife of Hutchins was also taken. Two of the sons were Jonathan, aged 14, and Samuel.

This long war reduced the population of Kittery to extreme poverty. The houses and barns of many were burned and their cattle killed. The schools were discontinued for fear that the children in going and coming would be exposed to hostile attacks. If religious services were held, they were attended by armed men. Petitions were sent to the General Court every year from 1694 to 1697, asking for relief from taxation and aid in paying the minister at Berwick. The following represents as well as any the sad conditions of the inhabitants.

To the Right Honorable William Stoughton Esqr

The Selectmen of Kittery humbly Petition That yor honors would Condescend to take thought concerning our poor Estate and accordingly be helpful to us. Tis more difficult abundantly plainly to represent our Calamity to yor Honors than solemnly here to groan under it; the latter during Gods good pleasure we must endure; which we hope by your sensible acquaintance therewith may in some measure be alleviated, if it might please yor Honors to abate the whole set proportion in that Province Rate which was Granted Novbr 18 1696 amounting to 36 lbs according to ye Treasurers Warrant Mar. 17 1696/7 which (severall things considered) we think scarce possible to be collected within our precincts

1. May it be thought on the Town in Generall are allmost overcome & discouraged by the tediousness of the Warr finding their Estate daily decaying and Expecting Poverty to come upon them like an armed man.

2. As indeed (blessed be God) some and those very few that can wth much adoe Get a Comfortable livelyhood, so very many are in the greatest extremity not having a days Prouison to live upon nor any thing where by to procure sustenance inso-much that it's wonderfull yt some do not perish for want, and they are destitute of money wherewithall to assist ymselues with things necessary, so we yor Honors humble supplicants cannot (with conscience) impose any burthen upon ym except yor honors after Consideration of ye Circumstances are pleased not to release yr Taxes.

3. As many of oure Inhabitants are very poor so we are very much charged by the maintenance of others who are not capable of getting yr necessary sustenance, as some aged some maimed and severall whose livings (further toward the East) the Enemy has ruined weh makes our own Town taxes not a little burthen-some.

4. No small charge considering our Poverty is expended in repairing of Garrisons whereby yet we are more disenabled.

5. We have disbursed this year already more for ye Publick than doth well consist with our Living especially seing tho we are for the most part husbandmen yet the greatest part of ye Town haue had little or no help by yr Summer Labr for Grain weh has occasion the disbursements of most to be large and of many Greater then their Incomes.

6. We are daily in expectation of the Enemies invading us (The Good Lord prevent them), We beg yor Honors would Consider our condition and be mindfull of our hard Circumstances, and would see Cause to release us from wt Publicq charge your honors Prudence shall think fit, especially the fore-mentioned Tax: However we humbly signify our Case (resting in Yor Judgmt) which if yor Honors Please to pitty in this regard we shall be very thankfull. In view of the fact that three similar petitions had been granted the foregoing one was refused, and a few months later the parish of Berwick sent up an independent petition, saying that the greater part of the parish had been wholly wasted by the Indians, that the mills had been burned or made useless by the war, that the people were closely confined to garrisons and could not attend to ordinary occupations without extreme danger, that the last corn crop had failed, insomuch that severall families might have perished, had not the charity of Connecticut neighbors prevented, that they were forced to expend much in caring for the poor and in repairing garrisons, and that lately the enemy had killed and wounded severall. Therefore they begged for twenty pounds a year while their calamity lasted, hoping thus to be able to pay the arrears of the minister.

From 1699 to 1703 there was peace. Then broke out Queen Anne's War, lasting till July, 1713. Kittery became at once a point of attack. Pike again is our chronicler. He writes under date of 30 Oct. 1703, "One Christopher Patrick, a soldier, was slain by the Indians betwixt Quamphegan and Salmon Falls, above half an hour after sunset. He had five guns discharged upon him and was shot with many bullets."

"28 Jan. 1704, about 9 or 10 in the morning, the Indians to the number of 30 or 40 made an attack upon Andrew Neal's garrison in the lower part of Berwick, killed a poor maid, wounded a lad who made his escape, burned three houses, killed many cattle, had one of their own crew sorely wounded, if not slain, and so drew off." Samuel Penhallow in his History of the Indian Wars gives a different account of this affair. He says, "At Berwick they killed one, wounded another, and burnt two houses. After that they made a descent on Andrew Neal's garrison, where they were vigorously repulsed by Capt. Brown, who killed nine on the spot and wounded many more, which so enraged those wretches that at their return they executed their revenge on Joseph King, who was then a captive among them, whom they fastened to a stake and burnt alive, barbarously shouting and rejoicing at his cries." Penhallow perhaps got his information from the captain's report of the engagement, and it seems to be somewhat inflated, when compared with Pike's record. There was an Amie Nell [Neal] of Newichawamock among the captives in Canada in 1699.

Pike records the following, 4 May 1705: "Many persons surprised by the Indians at Spruce Creek and York. John Brown, H. Barns, a child of Dodavah Curtis and a child of Enoch Hutchins slain,—rest carried captive by ten or a dozen Indians. Also Mrs. Hoit [Hoel it should be], running up the hill to discern the outery, fell into their hands and was slain." Penhallow speaks of Mrs. Hoel as a "gentlewoman of good extract and education." He says also, "The greatest sufferer was Enoch Hutchins in the loss of his wife and children." The Dennett manuscripts afford further particulars. This Mrs. Hutchins is called the great-grandmother of Col. Gowen Wilson. The family were surprised by the Indians, her husband shot at the door and she was ordered to prepare to march with them. She pulled her husband's body into the house and shut the door, and then with her two little boys was compelled to march. One of the boys was soon unable to keep up, when one of the Indians, thinking perhaps that the boy would be killed, kindly caught him up in his arms and ran away with him. Several days afterward the mother and boy were under the care of this kind Indian. One of the Hutchins boys is said to have split a wooden shoe from his foot with a hatchet, which feat won the admiration of the Indians. The other shoe was brought home from captivity and is still preserved. It was in the possession of Col. Gowen Wilson in 1869.

James Tobey and his son James were slain by Indians in the woods 21 May 1705. John Rogers was badly wounded the same day, but escaped and recovered. Lieut. John Shapleigh was killed 6 June 1706 "near the northeast corner of the Dennett farm on the hill about a dozen rods from Shapleigh's bridge so called" from this circumstance. His son Nicholas was captured at the same time and carried to Canada. Penhallow says that "in their march they were so inhumanly cruel that they bit off the tops of his fingers and to stagnate the blood seared them with hot tobacco pipes."

Again Pike records that, 16 June 1707, "Philip Carpenter, a Jersey man, with his wife and three or four children, was slain at Spruce Creek, about the middle of the day. The Indians being seven in number were met with by the English three or four times and fired upon. Some packs were taken, but the enemy got all off and escaped." A daughter, Mary, escaped or was ransomed, and twelve years later became the wife of John Deering.

30 Sept. 1707, "James Ferguson and his wife, members of the church at Berwick and worthy persons, were slain by the Indians as they returned from meeting. Nicholas Smith at the same time was wounded but escaped and got cured."

19 Sept. 1708, Robert Reed, a schoolmaster, and David Hutchins, ventured too far into the woods at Spruce Creek on the Sabbath, fell into an ambush and were slain. A lad, who was with them, escaped.

We learn from Penhallow that 1 June 1712, the Indians came again to Spruce Creek and shot James Pickernell "as he was locking his door and going to the garrison; they also wounded his wife and knocked a child on the head, which they scalped, yet it afterwards recovered." The tradition has come down in this family that both husband and wife were killed by Indians and their graves are still pointed out on Pickernell Hill. "They had been to the barn to milk their cows and the Indians shot them while passing between the barn and the house." So Hon. Mark Dennett records the story in 1866, as he received it fifty years before from Esther and Hannah Pickernell, aged members of the family.

In consequence of the ravages of the Indians in the first year of Queen Anne's War the people of Kittery sent up to the General Court a petition that the taxes of 1704 be abated. It is dated 28 Dec. 1704 and is signed by the Selectmen, William Pepperrell, John Shapleigh, John Leighton, John Hill, and Charles Frost. They say, "We have tried to raise it by all lawful means, but the people are utterly unable to pay it in money. . . . We have offered their Goods and Chattels at an outcry according to directions in the Treasurer's Warrant, but find none of abilitie to buy. . . . Considering the seat of Warr is with us, and ye Burden exceeding heavy as we are a poor Scattering People Necessitated to watch, ward, Scout, build Garrisons and fortifications, and one halfe of us to be furnished with Snowshoes and Mogginsins and all at our own charge,—and at every alarm Driven from our employment."

The Court resolved, "that the Sum of Thirty-eight pounds be abated to the poor of the town of Kittery, according to the Disposition of ye Selectmen and Representatives of sd Town,—they being most capable to relieve such as they Know have met with most sufferings by the Heathen. Provided that the names of P'sons and Sums respectively abated to them be by the Selectmen and Representatives laid before this Court at their next Session."

FROST GARRISON HOUSE,

The only one of Old Kittery that now remains.

The only Garrison House that remains is that on the farm of Frederick Frost, a cut of which is here shown. The hewn logs of which it is built are still sound. It was erected about 1733.

¹See Maine Recorder Vol. II. p. 114.

Peace lasted from July 1713 to June 1722. Then began what is sometimes called Lovewell's War. It continued till 15 Dec. 1725. Not many incidents of this war, so far as the inhabitants of Kittery and Berwick were concerned, have been put on record. Penhallow states that in May 1724, "Miles Thompson of Berwick was killed and his son was carried captive." He lived on the road which leads from Quamphegan to Wells, at Love's Brook. A man by the name of Stone was mangled and scalped near where Thompson fell, but he survived and lived to be an old man. Sullivan says, "His life was miserable; he wore a silver caul on his head, went on crutches, and had the use of only one hand, and was subject to strong convulsion fits."

It must have been during this war that a girl named Tamsen Ham was captured, probably in Dover. She remained several years with the Indians. After her ransom or the end of the war she married Thomas Spinney of Kittery and lived to great age.

The following story may be found in the Dennett manuscripts, and it has been published severall times with many embellishments. A certain Joseph Furbish is said to have married a Miss Hobbs. Twin sisters were born, Dorothy and Phebe. One morning, while the babies were in the cradle, the mother went out to milk the cows. She was seized by Indians, gagged with her handkerchief, and her hands were tied. Then a loud whoop attracted her husband, who seized his gun and ran to the rescue. He was struck down by a tomahawk and left for dead. The Indians set fire to the house after having plundered it but overlooked the babies in the cradle. The neighbors hurried to the burning house, rescued the babies and restored the wounded man to consciousness. One of the babes, Dorothy, afterward married John Dennet. The other, Phebe, married Elisha Littlefield.

After twenty-five years of absence the wife and mother managed to escape from the Indians. "Her extreme beauty had saved her." An Indian chief wished to marry her but she refused. She, however, nursed his infant son, who grew to manhood and revered her as his mother, the old chief having died. The Indian women looked upon her as something more than human. She taught them how to cook, nursed them when they were sick, and was considered by them as a sort of magician or medicine woman. Well, she stole away from them at last and wandered to the Atlantic coast. One account says she had been to the great lakes; another says she had been carried into the south. After arriving at the coast by selling trinkets she was enabled to get home. She found her husband "on the verge of the grave, both daughters married, each holding in arms her first born, named for the grandfather. Dolly's child was Joseph Dennet; Phebe's child was Joseph Littlefield."

All this is about as near the truth as most historical novels, though a lot of improbabilities have been very clumsily woven into the account. There was no Joseph Furbish at that time, as one can see by referring to the account of the Furbish family in this book. John Furbish married Hannah Littlefield and lived in what is now the northwest part of Eliot on the York road. The baptisms of his children indicate that his wife could not have been long away from home. He had daughters, Dorothy and Phebe, but they were baptized eight years apart. Hannah (Littlefield) Furbush may have been captured by Indians about 1725. If so, she returned after a short time.

In 1720 it was ordered that garrisons or places of refuge should be erected at the residences of the following persons; Andrew Neal, John Gowen, Jonathan Nason, Samuel Small, Jr., Capt. John Heard, Maj. Charles Frost, John Morrell, Senr., Capt. Nicholas Shapleigh, Capt. John Leighton, David Libby, Jr., Joseph Hill, John Staple, Maj. Joseph Hammond, Widow Spinney, John Dennet, Richard King, Senr., Joseph Curtis, Richard Rogers, John Adams, Robert Cutt, Lt. Elihu Gunnison, Nathaniel Leach, Nathaniel Keen, Rev. John Newmarch, Samuel Hutchins, Nicholas Weeks, Andrew Lewis, Col. William Pepperrell, Widow Wilson, Ebenezer More, Richard Cutt, Clement Deering, and Robert Eliot.

Agreeably to this order we find the following list of garrisons in the records of the town.

ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.

It has been supposed by some that Maine was settled by a godless sort of people, who cared little for the Sabbath and ordinances of worship. Some of the early Puritan writers spoke rather disparagingly of the state of morals and religion in Maine as compared with the piety and strict orthodoxy of the settlers at Plymouth and in Massachusetts Bay. It used to be said that, if one could not find a religion to suit him in Massachusetts, he might go to Maine. Another saying, attributed to the early settlers of the Isles of Shoals and of the neighboring coast, was that "they came to fish and not to pray." It was probable that for a few years, while fishermen were often moving from place to place and lived chiefly in their boats and without the companionship of wives and children, religious services were infrequent. But as soon as settlements began upon the mainland, due attention was paid to the ordinances of worship. Capt. John Mason sent over with his first colonists in 1631 a communion set, besides a "great Bible and twelve Service Books" thinking doubtless to establish a church of the Episcopal order. Whether such a service was held at Newichawannock or not does not appear on record.

As early as 1640 the Court imposed a fine for violation of the Sabbath, showing what the custom of the people was. In 1650 several were presented at Court for absenting themselves from religious services. Oct. 23, 1653, Hugh Gunnison was indicted for allowing his daughter, Sarah Lynn, to stay at home whole months from religious services. This indicates that regular religious services were held at Kittery Point before that date. Oct. 16, 1649, the following record was made, "It is ordered by the court and the power thereof, that all gode people within the jurisdiction of this province who are out of a church way and be orthodox in judgment and not scandalous in life shall have full liberty to gather themselves into a church estate, provided they doe it in a Christian way; with the due observation of the rules of Christ revealed in his words; and every church hath free liberty of election and ordination of all her officers from tyme to tyme, provided they be all pious and orthodox." Just what constituted orthodoxy the Court did not define. This was before Maine came under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts, and it is probable that considerable liberty of worship was allowed. We read of no persecutions till some years later.

Under date of July 4, 1659, the location of Meeting-Houses is alluded to in the following Court record, "In reference to the settling of all future differences among the inhabitants of Kittery concerning the placing of their meeting house, the court having heard both portions and finding that by the extreme length of the town it would be impossible for the inhabitants to meet in one place, decided that Franks Fort be ye petition bounds, and that the meeting house for the upper part of the town be located on the north east of the bounds of Sturgeon Creek in the most convenient place; and those families in Long Reach be at liberty to go the meeting house they may choose; then to be free from contributing to that part below the river. And that the public income of the town by mills, etc., should redound to such place as was first provided with an able minister, until both places be supplied; and that during the time that both places were provided, the said income should be equally divided." It seems, then, that before 1659 there was no church edifice north of Kittery Point. That there was one at the Point appears by a record made July 4, 1671, to the effect that the Meeting House for the lower division of Kittery, from Sturgeon Creek to Braveboat Harbor, should be set at the Point, "near where the old meeting house stood." Likewise a committee consisting of Richard Waldron, Edward Rishworth, John Davis and Job Alcock, appointed by the Court, made its report Oct. 12, 1669, to the effect that the new Meeting House be built at the Point, "where now the old meeting house stands." There must, then, have been a Meeting House very early, to be called old in 1669 and in need of being replaced by a new one. It was ordered also in 1671 that the inhabitants resident in the lower division pay a just proportion of the expense of building the house, provided that if the inhabitants that live from Spinney's

Cove upward shall erect a meeting house among them and maintain a minister, then those inhabitants in the lower part of the parish, who had received help from the upper part to build a Meeting House at the Point, should return back the same amount of money for building the Meeting House between Thomas Spinney's and Sturgeon Creek. That the old Meeting House at the Point was badly out of repair is shown by the fact that in 1670 the town of Kittery was presented at Court "for not providing a convenient place to worship God in upon the Lord's Day." Doubtless the first Meeting House was a rough structure within, having nothing better than pine benches for seats, unplastered and unheated. The second was somewhat better. In 1674 Thomas Withers gave to his daughter, Elizabeth, "a debt that is due unto me from the Town of Kittery of Twenty two pounds or thereabouts, wch I payd for the Meeting house & the land."¹ Perhaps he was the builder. In 1695 this was reported at Court as "very much out of repair soe yt it is very uncomfortable to meet in," and the Court ordered that it be repaired. A new church was built in 1727 which was burned about 1730. The present Meeting house at the Point was built immediately after that date. It stood out in the present street and faced the west, having a tall belfry. It was moved, turned toward the south and repaired in 1874.

Though the Court in 1659 decreed that there should be two Meeting Houses in Kittery, the inhabitants evidently thought there ought to be three, for at a town meeting held July 17, 1660, it was "agreed and fully and freely consented unto that this town of Kittery is by free consent divided into three parts for settling of three ministers, one in the east part as followeth, one at Nichewanick which bounds are to come down unto Thompson point brook formerly called the black Brook and from that Brook the second division it is to go downward to the great cove below Thos. Spinney's Point and the third division is to go down from the great cove unto Brave Boat Harbor with Capt. Champernown Island, all which three divisions according as they are divided each division to bear their own charges for the maintainance of their own Minister." The northern division was early called the Parish of Unity¹ and later Berwick. The middle division became the town of Eliot over one hundred and fifty years later. After the town of Berwick was set off from Kittery in 1713, then what was before the middle parish became the upper parish of Kittery, and the middle parish was that at the head of Spruce Creek.

The inhabitants along the river above Spinney's Cove were permitted by order of the Court to attend church at Portsmouth or at Dover and to pay one-half of their rates at the place where they worshiped, but it seems that as early as 1671 the people at Long Reach were agitating the matter of building a Meeting-House for themselves. The edifice was not erected till nearly thirty years later, but they had regular religious services on the Sabbath at some private house. At a meeting of the lower parish, held 13 Feb. 1693-4, it was voted that "ye minister shall preach one Sabbath at ye Point Meeting house & ye other Sabbath at some convenient place at ye Long Reach." Accordingly services were held there, though the long talked of church edifice had not been erected. At a legal meeting of the lower division of Kittery, dated Sept. 26, 1699, Capt. William Fernald, Mr. Elihu Gunnison, Lieut. John Shapleigh, Mr. Roger Deering and Mr. Joshua Downing were chosen a committee "to agree with the minister for his yearly Sallary and for the place or places to meet in for ye publick worship of God." The committee made their report to the people on the tenth day of November following.

"We the subscribers being Chosen by the Inhabitants of the Lower Devision of the Town of Kittery to answer Mr. Newmarch's proposals made to ye sd Inhabitants and for any other thing necessary and beneficial for the Town relating to the Settlement of the Minister, places of meeting, &c 1ly In reference to the places of Meeting we doe mutually agree that there be two places of meeting for the publick worship of God as formerly for the Term of four years from ye first day of June next and if it doth not consist with the interest of the minister and people so to continue then to take some other Methods that may be thought more beneficial and convenient for both.

2ndly That the house agreed upon to be built and ye land to be fenced in at ye ministry land at Spruce Creek Shall be proceeded in and carried on by the Committee chosen and appointed for that affair, and till that be finished the Inhabitants are to provide a convenient house for the minister.

3rdly We do agree that ye Ministers yearly Sallary Shall continue to be as much in the pound as now makes sixty pounds till it amounts to eighty pounds per year.

4ly We have agreed and Concluded that there Shall be a meeting house built at ye long reach on or near the ministry land, the Dementions to be as follows, That is to say, Thirty foot in length five and twenty foot in breadth & sixteen foot Stud and to be made fit to meet in by the last of June next and having duly considered that ye meeting house at Kittery Point was built and has constantly hitherto been repaired by the whole Inhabitants by Equall proportion, we doe mutually agree that is shall continue so to be and that it shall be finished & that the meeting house at the Long reach shall also be built and finished and kept in repair by whole Inhabitants by Equall proportion as also ye house and fencing at ye Ministry lands And whereas there has been a Demand of eighteen pounds to be paid by the Inhabitants of the Lower end of this Devision of the town to Some of ye Upper and we do by these presents agree & declare that the said eighteen pounds is quitted."

The meeting-house at Long Reach was erected at once, for under date of March 21, 1700, we read that it was voted that "Joseph Hill shall build a Pound upon his own land, near the Long Reach Meeting House, at his own cost." Also a deed dated May 2, 1702, mentions the "Lane between sd [Peter] Staples new dwelling house and the meeting house."¹ It was built on the ministry land, a plan of which appears on the town records, bounded on the south by Charles Nelson, on the north by William Tetherly, and on the west by John Lidston, Richard Miller and Peter Staples. The meeting-house was probably never completed. Under date of Nov. 27, 1706, the town voted that the Selectmen "shall with all convenient speed agree with some workmen to finish the Meeting house at ye Long Reach, that is to say, to bring it into the same Capacity as ye Meeting house at the Point is now." But the center of population was shifting. The need of a meeting house was felt further north. This at Long Reach seems to have been abandoned.

Under date of July 8, 1728, the town records allude to a "school in ye old meeting house at Long Reach," and a town meeting was called there in 1732.

May 27, 1684, William Crafts who kept an ordinary at Kittery Point, was directed by the Court to provide beer, victuals and cakes for the refreshment of many people who came from their homes to hear the word of God preached on the Lord's day. Here is another proof that religious services were regularly held. There is no complete record of the early ministers who officiated here. Court records show that Jeremiah Hubbard was pastor at the Point about 1667, and in 1672 thirty-five pounds were still due him, and the Court ordered the Townsmen of Kittery to collect the money and pay Mr. Hubbard. In 1676 twelve pounds were still due him, which he recovered by law suit.

In 1670 John Tucker willed a legacy to "Thomas Wells, Minister of the town of Kittery." Wells remained but one year and left through the influence of Mr. Francis Hooke. He was son of John and Sarah (Littlefield) Wells, was ordained at Amesbury, Mass., in 1672, and died 10 July 1734. The town was without a minister till about 1772, when one Isaac Wells preached a few times and seems to have satisfied all except Mr. Hooke. The inhabitants petitioned¹ that Mr. Wells might be settled at Kittery, but the Governor's Council thought he was "not the best able to Discern between sound & unsound doctrine" and so prohibited his preaching any more in Kittery, promising ere long to commend "an orthodox & pious preacher." The promise seems to have been unfulfilled, for, 6 July 1675, the Selectmen of Kittery were presented at Court "for not taking care that their children and youth be taught the catechism," and 2 July 1679 the lower end of Kittery was indicted for not getting a minister. The next minister we read of in Kittery was Benjamin Woodbridge,² in 1688-9. He was son of Rev. John Woodbridge of Andover, Mass., born about 1647, and died in Medford, Mass., 15 Jan. 1710.

In February, 1693-4, it was voted that the minister should have "five & fortie pounds per annum in money and Sutable accomodation for diet." Fifteen pounds a year were allowed for his board. A meeting of the lower division of Kittery was called, 13 May 1695, "in order to ye continuance of Mr. John Newmarch in sd Town."³ This is the first mention of the first ordained minister of Kittery, who filled the pulpit at Kittery Point for over half a century. He preached on alternate Sabbaths, during his early ministry, at the house of Capt. William Fernald and at Long Reach. He also taught school for many years. He was not ordained as pastor till Nov. 4, 1714, and then a Congregational church was organized with eighteen male and twenty-five female members. Mr. Newmarch graduated at Harvard in 1690. His ministry was a fruitful one. Both in the church and in the school he was the educator of the people of Kittery. His grave, in a clump of bushes near where he lived, was marked only a few years ago by a marble slab with appropriate inscription. This slab has recently fallen and is broken. The citizens of Kittery owe too much to this man to allow his grave to be uncared for. So many ancestors who slumber about him with unmarked graves deserve, too, a properly fenced and honored burial-place.

The salary of Mr. Newmarch was eighty-five pounds for the first year and one hundred pounds for every year after. There was from time to time a nominal increase of salary necessitated by the depreciation of currency. In addition he had the use of the ministry lands at Pine Point, on the east side of Spruce Creek, which he had liberty to rent for periods of seven years. In 1729 a parsonage was built near the church at the Point. It was forty foot by nineteen and two stories high. In 1733 the parish voted to dig a well on the parsonage land and to fence the burial place with a stone wall. In 1714 a bell was procured, for which Capt. Stephen Eastwick paid half the expense and had as an equivalent the privilege of building for himself a pew. All others paid five pounds for such a privilege. Mr. Newmarch was granted the pew that formerly belonged to Major Francis Hooke. After the fire of 1729 the ruined bell was sent to London to be recast into a bell of about six hundred pounds weight. It was sent again to London to be recast in 1742. In 1728 it was voted to allow Henry Miles six pounds a year "for ringing ye bell, sweeping the meeting house and keeping it clean & sanded and keeping ye dogs out."

The male members who subscribed to the covenant in 1714 were as follows, whose names are here arranged in alphabetical order: John Adams, Dea. Henry Barter, Dodav [ah Curtis], John Dennet, Ebenezer E——, Dea. John Fernald, James Fernald, John Ford, Samuel Ford, Elihu Gunnison, Samuel Hutchins, John Ingersoll, George Jackson, Thomas K——, Joseph Mitchell, John Newmarch, William Pepperrell and Samuel Skillin.

The women who signed the covenant were Margaret Adams, Annie Adams, —— Barter, —— Barter, Sarah Curtis, Elizabeth Curtis, Lois Curtis, —— Crocket, —— Crocket, —— Cutt, Sarah Fernald, Elizabeth Fernald, Temperance Fernald, Elizabeth Godsoe, —— Gunnison, Charity Hammonds, —— Ingersoll, Joanna Jackson, Temperance More, Margery Pepperrell, Mary Rice, Mary Rice, Jr., Elizabeth Rice, Elizabeth Sargent, and Joanna Williams.

The Rev. Benjamin Stevens, D.D., who succeeded Mr. Newmarch, was the son of the Rev. Joseph Stevens of Charlestown, Mass. He was graduated at Harvard College in 1740. In 1769 he was chosen President of Harvard by the Fellows of the College, but was not confirmed by the Overseers, being suspected of a leaning toward the mother country in the approaching conflict. Tradition says that he was a man of prodigious learning, as well as a faithful and laborious pastor. He was born about 1720 and died 18 May 1791. He was employed as a colleague of Mr. Newmarch in 1749 and was ordained as sole pastor 1 May 1751. He married 28 Sept. 1752 Mary Remington, daughter of Judge Jonathan Trowbridge of Cambridge, Mass. She was born 22 July 1718 and died 27 March 1763, leaving only one child, Sarah, born 7 Sept. 1753, who married, 24 March 1728, the Rev. Joseph Buckminster, D.D., of Portsmouth.¹

The church at Kittery Point declined after this on account of the decrease of population here and the building of too many churches in other parts of the town. In early days everybody could go to church, though the distance was four or even six miles. Three miles was an easy limit. The unchristian rivalry of denominationalism has scattered the old congregations in the rural districts and small villages. Now people think they must have a church and a minister exactly suited to their perverted tastes and within almost a stone's throw of their homes, in order that they should hear one sermon on pleasant Sundays. One Newmarch or one Stevens in Kittery to-day would be worth several of the churches and ministers that are now striving to bless that town.

The following ministers have served in succession the church at Kittery Point, Jonas Hartwell 1792-8, William Briggs 1798-1814, John Dutton, Stephen Merrill 1819-31, vacant 1831-7, Tobias R. Miller 1838-41. In 1840 the church was repaired and rededicated. Reuben Kimball 1841-50, Albion W. Fiske 1850-57, William A. Forbes 1857, Samuel H. Partridge 1859, M. C. Bartley 1859-60, William A. Forbes again 1860-63, Thomas L. Ellis 1863-8, Samuel S. Drake 1870. George W. Christie 1872-6.

In 1728-9 a church was built on Gowell's Hill, near the line between Kittery and Eliot, on land now owned by the Fernalds, nearly opposite the house of Henry Cole, facing the road to Spruce Creek. The church lot, five rods by eight, was deeded, 9 May 1728, by Jacob Remick, Jr., to William Gowell, John Gelden, James Fernald, John Fernald, Samuel Spinney, Thomas Rogers, John Fernald, Jr., Joseph Fernald, James Fernald, Jr., Nathaniel Fernald, Samuel Fernald, Robert Cole, Remick Cole, Abner Cole, John Worcester, Tobias Fernald, Jr., Jeremiah Spinney, Richard Gowell, Jr., Richard Rogers, John Lydston, Jr., Joseph Hill, Ichabod Remick, Joshua Remick, Jr., Isaac Remick, Samuel Remick, Jacob Remick, William Fernald, John Thompson, John Rogers, Peter Staple, William Staple, John Spinney, Gideon Lydston, Thomas Fernald, Peter Dixson, Josiah Paul and Richard Rogers, Jr., and to as many others of the inhabitants of Kittery as "shall contribute and assist in the building of a House for the public Worship of God."¹

This church was served from 1729 to 1734 by the Rev. John Eveleth. He was the son of Joseph Eveleth of Gloucester, Mass., and was born there 18 Feb. 1769-70. He graduated at Harvard College in 1689 and was ordained at Manchester, Mass., 1 Oct.

¹York Deeds, XIII. 15.

1693. He married Mary, daughter of Francis Bowman of Cambridge, Mass., 2 Dec. 1692. They had one son, Joseph, who died at the age of eighteen. Mr. Eveleth preached at Stow, Mass., from 1700 till 1717. He served the churches at Kennebunkport and Saco, 1719-29. Mr. Bradbury in his History of Kennebunkport says that Mr. Eveleth was not only minister and schoolmaster, but also blacksmith and farmer "and the best fisherman in town." He died 1 Aug. 1734, aged 65, and his tombstone may still be seen in a pasture, about half way from where the church stood to Great Cove. His wife died 2 Dec. 1747, aged 75, and was buried in Stow, Mass.¹

It has been repeatedly said that this was an Episcopal church, but I find no documentary evidence of it. Mr. Eveleth during all his previous life had been an orthodox Congregational minister. Mr. Jacob Remick was a member of the church at Kittery Point and afterwards of the church at the head of Spruce Creek. All his neighbors, to whom the land was sold, were adherents of the Congregational Church. Moreover, there is a vote of the parish recorded in 1734, the year Mr. Eveleth died, "that there should be a minister called to Preach the one half of his time at the head of Spruce Creek and the other half at Mr. Gowels Hill and so successively the one Sabbath at the one and the next at the other When the meeting house at the head of Spruce Creek is fitt to preach in during the space of twenty years." This vote was reconsidered and negatived at the next parish meeting. This does not look as though the church on Gowell's Hill was a regularly constituted Episcopal Church, though Mr. Eveleth may have read the Episcopal service.

We have just seen that the church at the head of Spruce Creek was being built in 1734, though Rev. John Newmarch, by a vote of the parish, 10 Aug. 1724, was to "preach the one half of his time in Mr. Joseph Curtises old house or in some other convenient place near the head of Spruce Creek for ye time to come." On another page may be seen a picture of the church built in 1734 as sketched upon the Town Records by Tobias Leighton in 1739. In 1735 the parish voted to employ a minister here and to raise one hundred pounds for his support. There was no regular pastor for some years. In 1743 it was voted to pay Mr. Timothy Brown thirty-seven pounds, "he preaching at the head of Spruce Creek ye year ensuing." In 1750 the Middle Parish was separated from the Lower Parish, and the Rev. Josiah Chase became its first ordained minister, 19 Sept. 1750. He was born at Newbury, Mass., 20 Nov. 1713, and graduated at Harvard in 1738. Having attended a wedding, 26 Dec. 1778, he missed his way in a snow storm, fell into the Creek near his home and was drowned. His body was recovered the following morning.

The Rev. Joseph Litchfield was ordained 3 July 1782, as the successor of Mr. Chase. He served till 1827, when being enfeebled by age and admiring the zeal and energy of the Methodists he with his people requested the Maine Conference to send them a minister. The Rev. Paschal P. Morrill was sent. Thus Congregationalism at the head of Spruce Creek passed over to Methodism without friction, and a Methodist Church has been maintained there ever since. Mr. Litchfield died 28 Jan. 1828. The old church was burned in 1834, and a new one was built the following year. The present church edifice was built in 1879 at a cost of about $2,200. The parsonage was built in 1842.

M. E. CHURCH, KITTERY FORESIDE.

The growth of the village at Kittery Foreside caused the organization of a second Methodist Episcopal Church about 1867. The church edifice was built soon after, a cut of which is here presented. Its growth has been slow but steady, and it is now prospering under the pastorate of Rev. George C. Andrews.

The first class of Methodists, formed in 1828, consisted of Gowen Wilson, who was class-leader, Nancy Wilson, William W. Fernald, Waite Fernald, Mary Cutts, Julia Fernald, Thomas Mason, Elzira Johnson, Susan Pettegrew, Hannah Caswell, Abigail Pickernell, Susan Neely, Robert Cutts and Hannah Cutts.

The Methodist Episcopal Church at Eliot Neck was organized 24 Oct. 1866, and the church was built in 1868. For further particulars of Methodism in Kittery and Eliot see Allen's History of Methodism in Maine, pp. 390-92.

I have found no record which tells when the first meeting-house at the Parish of Unity was built. A Court Record of 1659, already cited, shows that there was no meeting-house there at that date and that the project of building one was under discussion. It has been stated by Mr. George W. Frost that the building was erected in 1653, and he cites documentary evidence to prove this.¹ The date of the Court order is May 4, 1652, and it is signed by John Wincoll, Sec'y. Now John Wincoll was not chosen Clerk of Court till 1689, and he served till his death in 1694. Moreover, it is stated that Charles Frost, James Neal, James Emery, William Chalbourne, Ichabod Plaisted, and John Heard, were given authority to select a lot and build a meeting-house that should be thirty by forty feet in dimensions. All of these men were probably either under age or unborn in 1652. Ichabod Plaisted was born in 1664. There is, doubtless, an error in the date of the document, and the date should be 1692 rather than 1652. In that case it has reference to the building of a second church, for a meeting-house is mentioned in Berwick in 1683. It may have been their intention to build a church in what is now Eliot. At any rate the church then ordered by the Court was never built.

The Parish of Unity was presented at Court, 15 Sept. 1668, for not settling a minister, and again 12 Oct. 1669, for not having a minister "these five or six years." This takes us back to 1663, when they seem to have had a minister and probably a meeting-house. It is reasonable to conclude that the first meeting-house in Berwick was built between 1659 and 1663, probably in 1660. A sketch of this oldest church has been drawn by Mr. George W. Frost, as described to him by his grandmother, who died in 1845, aged 81, and therefore never saw the meeting-house herself but received her account of it from her ancestors. The description probably preserves some of its features.

The upper part of Kittery was presented at Court again, 2 July 1672, "For not providing a minister," and again 30 June 1680. The next record found is as follows: "At a meeting of ye Inhabitants of Berwick September ye 7th 1683 voted fifty pounds to be given to Mr. John Emerson towards ye building of a house to be paid in money or other pay equivalent vidz. Merle pine boards at twenty shillings per thousand foot Mercht wheat at four shillings six pence per bushell pease at four shillings per bushell pork at 3d per lb. beef at 2d per lb. all merch to be delivered to Mr. John Emerson or his order in Berwick to be rayased by rate ypon ye inhabitants."

At the same time there were granted to Mr. Emerson fifty acres of land "east of ye ministry or school lands" and "a convenient pcell of ye ministry land by ye meeting house to Mr. John Emerson for a house lot." The house lot was "taken out of that end of ye Ministry land that lies next Sluts corner" and "four acres out of ye ministry land by ye meeting house to be laid out on that side next to Mr. Hutchinson's land."¹ These ministry lands, one hundred and fifty acres, had been laid out, 19 July 1669, "on ye north side of ye way which goes towards Wells," east of "Sluts corner Brook."

This John Emerson was of Salem and a graduate of Harvard College in 1675. He was nephew of the Rev. John Emerson of Gloucester. He was probably never ordained. He was school-master at Newbury in 1681 and at Salem from 1699 till his death, 10 March 1712. It is related of him that he visited Major Waldron at Cochecho the day before the massacre, 27 June 1689, and was urged to lodge there, but refusing had a remarkable deliverance. In 1689 he received twelve pounds for services eleven weeks as chaplain to the military forces at Berwick. His ministry at Berwick probably extended from 1682 till about 1692.²

Edward Thompson was the minister at Berwick, 1694-5, as shown by marriages reported by him and recorded at Alfred, Maine.

The tradition has been put into print that the meeting-house was destroyed by fire about 1692, but the following record seems to contradict this, though it may have been so injured by fire as to be not worth repairing.

Selectmen.

The new meeting-house was built at once and was dedicated, 4 June 1702, by Rev. John Pike, assisted by Rev. John Wade. It stood on the lot where Charles Hanscom now lives, on the hill near the northwest corner of Brattle and South streets. Persons are still living who remember the militia trainings in the yard in front of the church. It was not finished till 1750, or later, and then it was thought to be one of the finest wood churches in New England. In 1757 a church was built at Dover, N. H., of the same dimensions and general plan, from which we learn that it was forty-seven feet wide by seventy long, with a belfry and tall spire.¹ It was standing in a dilapidated and abandoned state in 1845. It was used by the Methodists from 1829 to 1836, the new Congregational church in South Berwick having been built in 1828.

John Wade, the first ordained minister of Berwick, graduated at Harvard College in 1693. He was ordained 18 Nov. 1702, and died 13 Nov. 1703, aged 28 years. He married, 3 Sept. 1696, Elizabeth, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Waldron) Gerrish of Dover. They had two children John, born 16 July 1699, and Sarah, born 20 Sept. 1701. He probably preached at Berwick several years before his ordination, for 22 Nov. 1699 he bought of James Stacpole three acres and a quarter of land which originally belonged to the Spencer estate and was purchased by Stacpole of Ephraim Joy, 2 Nov. 1696. Here Stacpole kept an ordinary or public house of entertainment. The land was "bounded on the south-east by the way going from the great work to the River, Northeast by Mr. John Plaisted's land Some-time called Parkers field, Northwest by the Burying place in ye land of Humphrey Spencer Deceased; Southwest by land of sd Spencer or the Countrey Road." Widow Elizabeth Wade sold this land to the Rev. Jeremiah Wise, 13 June 1707. It was then described as "near to the meeting-house," and John Hill was the owner of the land formerly belonging to John Plaisted. Thus we have the parsonage of John Wade and Jeremiah Wise located, east of the cemetery and near the northwest corner of the streets that there meet.

The church at Berwick was organized the day the new meeting-house was dedicated, June 4, 1702. The original members were seventeen, as follows: Daniel Goodwin, Peter Grant, Major Joseph Hammond, Ichabod Plaisted, Charles Frost, Joseph Hammond, Jr., Henry Nock, John Fernald, Peter Staple, Daniel Emery, Nathan Lord, Benoni Hodsdon, Job Emery, Abraham Lord, Richard Tozier, Samuel Small and John Gowen.

Jeremiah Wise, the second ordained pastor of the church, was called 26 Nov. 1707, and remained forty-nine years, till his death. He died 20 Jan. 1756, in the 77th year of his age. He was the son of Rev. John Wise of Ipswich, Mass., and graduated at Harvard in 1700.

After the death of Mr. Wise the Rev. John Morse of Blackberry Hill, where a church as an offshoot from this at Great Works had been organized 3 April 1755, occasionally preached. He was succeeded at Blackberry Hill by Rev. Matthew Mirriam, 25 Sept. 1765.

Rev. Jacob Foster was ordained at Great Works, in 1756. He was born in 1733, son of William and Hannah (Durkee) Foster of Ipswich, Mass. He served as chaplain in the Revolutionary Army in 1777. He removed to Packersfield, N. H., in 1781 and is said to have died at Nelson, N. H., 3 Dec. 1798. He graduated at Harvard in 1754.

He was succeeded after a short time by Rev. John Thomson, son of Rev. William Thomson of Scarborough. He graduated at Harvard in 1767, was ordained as the first pastor of the church at Standish, 26 Oct. 1768, and was installed at Great Works 7 May 1783. He continued here as pastor till his death, 21 Dec. 1828, aged 89 years. During the last four years of his pastorate Rev. George W. Campbell was associated with him as colleague, who was dismissed the same day that Mr. Thomson was buried. During his ministry the new church was built at South Berwick village. Before its erection services had been held for some time in the Academy.

This church has since been served by Rev. Seth H. Keeler, 1829-1836, Rev. Andrew Rankin, 1837-1840, Rev. William Bradford Homer, 1840-1841, who died in office, Rev. Benjamin R. Allen, 1842-1854, Rev. Alfred Emerson, 1857-1858, Rev. Ephraim W. Allen, 1858-1865, Rev. Sylvanus Hayward, 1866-1873, Rev. George Lewis, 1874 till the present time.

The Massachusetts archives show that a petition for a new parish in what is now Eliot was received by the General Court in 1713, but the petition itself has disappeared. The petition seems to have been granted, and a committee was appointed to decide about the location of the new meeting house. The people were called together at John Leighton's, 20 April 1714, "to make choice of a learned Orthodox and pious pson to Dispense ye word of God" among them. A Mr. Fish is said to have been called who seems not to have accepted the call.

Sept. 6, 1716, a committee consisting of John Wheelwright, Louis Bane and Abraham Preble reported that they had consulted with the inhabitants of the north parish of Kittery, and they recommended that the proposed meeting house be located "on ye Plains on ye West Side of ye High way that leads from Capt John Leighton's Dwelling House towards Sturgeon Creek opposite against Mr. Brooks orchard." This shows that the church was built after 1716, probably the following year, and it fixes its location. The parsonage stood just back of the present residence of John L. Emery. It was a two story house in front, sloping back to one story in the rear. The location of the church has been stated by one who had every opportunity to learn as "a few rods north-east of the juncture made by the two roads" and "a few feet back from the road on a level and pleasant green." It was like most New England churches of that time, a two-story oblong structure with gable roof, with the entrance on the south side, with galleries across both ends and the side opposite the pulpit, which fronted the main entrance. Mr. Fogg says that it was forty by fifty feet in dimensions and twenty-five feet high, and that it was demolished in 1837. He drew a sketch of it about fifty years ago, from which the accompanying cut has been made. It reveals more than words can.

It is not known just when Rev. John Rogers began his ministry, but it was probably as late as 1719, since he was librarian at Harvard College 1715-18 and had a child born in Ipswich, Mass., in August, 1719. He was son of Rev. John Rogers of Ipswich, born in 1692, and graduated at Harvard in 1711. He died 16 Oct.

1773 after a pastorate of fifty-four years. His character and ministry have been fully set forth by another.¹ I chanced to see a letter written by "Rev. Mr. John Rogers, Jr. pastor of the 2nd church in Kittery" in the Christian History, a weekly publication, under date of July 4, 1743. It was addressed to the "Assembly." In it he exclaims, "Oh that something may be said against Arminianism as well as Antinomianism." It is presumable that he preached Calvinism pure and simple. Would he stir in his grave if he should hear the modified Arminianism that has supplanted the ancient Calvinism of the Congregational Church?

CHURCH AT LEIGHTON'S POINT, 1717-1837,
As sketched by William Fogg.

The church was organized 22 June 1721 after a fast. Rev. Nathaniel Rogers of Portsmouth made the opening prayer; Rev. John Newmarch preached; and Rev. William Shurtlief made the concluding prayer. Then they went to the house of Rev. John Rogers, and the confession of faith was read and owned by the following persons, John Rogers, Joseph Hammond, Samuel Hill, Nicholas Shapleigh, Stephen Tobey, Daniel Fogg and James Staples. These were the founders of the Congregational church at Eliot. On the twenty-fifth of October, 1721, Mr. Rogers was ordained and installed. His father gave the charge. Rev. Jonathan Cushing of Dover, N. H., gave the right hand of fellowship. Rev. Nathaniel Rogers of Portsmouth, uncle of the pastor, preached the sermon from 1 Thess. V. 12, 13.

November sixth a meeting was held at the house of James Staples in order to choose two deacons. William Tetherly and James Staples were chosen by written ballots. After the decease of James Staples choice was made of Thomas Knight as deacon.

By a unanimous vote of the church, 17 Feb. 1768, Alpheus Spring was chosen as colleague of the pastor, and he was ordained 29 June 1768. Rev. Mr. Carye of Dedham made the opening prayer. Rev. Mr. Symms of Andover preached from I. Cor. II. 1-4. Mr. Rogers, the pastor, prayed and gave the charge. Rev. Mr. Chase of the third Parish gave the right hand of fellowship. Rev. Mr. Stevens of the first parish concluded with prayer.

Rev. Alpheus Spring was born 10 May 1739, at Watertown, Mass., son of Henry and Kezia (Converse) Spring. He was educated at Nassau Hall, which has developed into Princeton University, where he graduated in 1766. He received the degree of Master of Arts at Dartmouth College in 1785. He married, 18 May 1769, Sarah, daughter of Simon and Mercy (Sewell) Frost. He died of fever 14 June 1791. He was a man respected for his ability, admired for his zealous activity in the work of the church, and beloved by all the people of his parish.¹

The successor of Mr. Spring was Rev. Samuel Chandler, born in Lexington, Mass., 16 Feb. 1766, son of John and Beulah (Merriam) Chandler. He graduated at Harvard in 1790 and was ordained as pastor of the second parish in Kittery 17 Oct.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, ELIOT.

1792. He married, 30 May 1793, Lydia Spring, daughter of his predecessor. His death occurred 8 Aug. 1828. He records that he baptized seven hundred and forty-six during his ministry. At his ordination Rev. Mr. Cushing of Waltham made the introductory prayer. Rev. Jonas Clark of Lexington preached. Rev. Dr. Haven of Portsmouth made the ordaining prayer. Rev. Samuel Langton of York gave the charge. Rev. Mr. Buckminster of Portsmouth gave the right hand of fellowship, and Rev. Mr. Fiske of Cambridge made the concluding prayer.

There were extensive revivals of religion in this parish in 1742 and 1815. Up to 1820 three hundred and thirty-eight persons had been added to this church since its foundation, one hundred and forty under the pastorate of Mr. Rogers, fifty-one under that of Mr. Spring, and one hundred and seven under that of Mr. Chandler. The number of communicants in 1820 was one hundred and twenty-five.

Since the death of Mr. Chandler no preacher has remained long enough to make any decided impression on the history of the town. His successors have been Josiah C. Merrill 1831-2, Elisha Bacon 1836-40, Ivory Kimball 1840-42, Josiah B. Clark 1842-5, John Baker 1845-8, Calvin Chapman 1849-50, Jeffries Hall 1852-6, Otis Holmes 1858-65, William H. Cutler 1865, Charles Peabody 1865-70, Benjamin T. Sanborn 1870-75, D. S. Hibbard 1880-84, James Lade 1885-89, T. F. Millett 1890-94, A. L. Golder 1894-6, Andrew L. Chase 1897-1900, and J. Edward Newton, the present pastor from 1900.

THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

In 1662 King Charles II gave freedom of worship to all except Quakers. Of them he wrote, "We Cannot be Vnderstood to direct or wish yt any Indulgence should bee granted to those psons Comomly Called Quakers, whose principles being Inconsistent with any kind of Gouverment, Wee have found it necessary by the Advise of our parlament here to make a sharpe Law against them, And are well contented that you do the like."

The same year Alice Ambrose, Ann Coleman, and Mary Tomkins, Quakeresses, came to Dover, N. H., and received very harsh treatment from the authorities there. They were thrown down stairs, dragged through snow and mud and thrown into the water. The following order was issued.

"To the Constables of Dover, Hampton, Salisbury, Newbury, Rowley, Ipswich, Winham, Linn, Boston, Roxbury, Dedham, and until these vagabond Quakers are out of this jurisdiction:—

You, and every one of you, are required, in the King's Majesty's name, to take these vagabond Quakers Anna Coleman, Mary Tomkins and Alice Ambrose, and make them fast to the carts tail, and drawing the cart through your several towns, to whip them upon their naked backs not exceeding ten stripes a piece on each of them in each town; and so to convey them from Constable to Constable till they are out of the jurisdiction, as you will answer it at your peril; and this shall be your warrant

Per me

Richard Walderne.

At Dover, dated Dec. 22, 1662."

This inhuman and disgraceful order was executed as far as Salisbury. But religious zeal has never been silenced by persecution. The Quaker preachers returned, and renewed their preaching in Dover and Kittery. The descendants of some of their most violent persecutors became stanch adherents of the Society of Friends. The Quakeresses above mentioned found refuge for a time at the house of Major Nicholas Shapleigh. They doubtless preached more or less at private houses in the vicinity of Sturgeon Creek. At a Court held 15 Sept. 1668, Nicholas Shapleigh, James Heard and Richard Nason, being selectmen, were dismissed from office under the charge of being Quakers, and the election of other selectmen was ordered within fourteen days. The Court further ordered that whatever Quaker shall hereafter act in town affairs shall pay a fine of five pounds. John Heard had been fined, 7 July 1663, forty shillings for entertaining Quakers. The selectmen above named were not Quakers but had shown a decent hospitality to persecuted persons of that sect and may have spoken for freedom of religious opinions.

The Friends of Kittery were in the earliest days of their history connected with the Society in Dover, and there the records of their families may be found. Later their families were recorded with the Society of Friends at North Berwick. No independent records of the Friends in Eliot have been discovered. I think none ever existed. Inquiries for them have been made in vain by many.

The Life and Times of John Fothergill, Quaker, was published in Philadelphia in 1754. Under date of 27th of 4th month, 1721, he records, "Came to J. Morrill's at Kittery," 29th, "Meeting at a place called the Point, Meeting at Portsmouth and in the evening to Kittery again," 3d of 5th month, "Spent night at Francis Allen's at Kittery," 4th, "Had meeting at a Friends house in Newichawanack. People greatly afraid on account of the priests." 18th, "Meeting at Andrew Neal's at Newichawanack." Thus we learn that there were several families of Friends in Kittery and Berwick as early as 1721. It is said that regular religious services were established among the Friends in what is now upper Eliot in 1730. A list of Quakers allowed by the Selectmen is found in the town records under date of 10 May 1734. They were

In 1737 another list is recorded and the following names are added, James Fenix, John Frye, Jabez Jenkins, and James Whit-tam. The following names found on the above list do not appear on the list of 1737. Peter Brawn, William Frye, Reynold Jenkins,

In 1769 a meeting-house was removed from Dover Neck¹ and set up on land of Friend Jenkins, opposite what is now the Allen place. The accompanying illustration shows the site of it. The stone at the corner, where the road from Sturgeon Creek meets the road from the river, served in the old days as a horse-block for dismounting. The church was demolished long ago and the Friends have now no organization in Eliot.

BAPTISTS.

Humphrey Churchwood, member of the Baptist Church in Boston but resident in Kittery, addressed a letter to his brethren in Boston, 3 Jan. 1682, asking that a church be planted in Kittery and that William Scriven be ordained to preach the Gospel. The letter declares that "a competent number of well established people" were ready to form a church.

On the twenty-fifth of the following September Rev. Isaac Hull of Boston organized a Baptist Church in Kittery with William Scriven, Elder, Humphrey Churchwood, Deacon, Robert Williams, John Morgrage, Richard Cutt, Timothy Davis, Leonard Drown, William Adams, Humphrey Axell, George Litten [Lydston] and several women as members. William Scriven removed to South Carolina and it is supposed that some of his flock went with him. It is certain, however, that of the above mentioned Williams, Morgrage, Cutt and Litten died in Kittery, and probably also Churchwood. Leonard Drown died in Boston.

William Scriven came from Somerton, England, and is first mentioned in a deed of land from Elizabeth Seely to him, 15 Nov. 1673. He married Bridget, daughter of Robert Cutt, 3 July 1774, and lived on the little point of land west of the Cutt-Whipple Garrison house, where the meetings of the Baptists were probably held. They suffered various persecutions. Scriven was presented at Court, 6 July 1675, for not frequenting the public meetings on the Lord's day. The charge was not proven. He was constable in 1676. He was licensed to preach 11 Jan. 1682 at Boston, was imprisoned the same year for the expression of his doctrinal opinions about infant baptism, was fined ten pounds and forbidden to hold any religious services at his house.

He with others resolved to leave Kittery and went to South Carolina, probably in 1684, where they settled on Cooper River, not far from Charleston. They called the place Somerton from his birthplace in England. Most of his church removed to Charleston and established a church there. He died at Georgetown, South Carolina, 10 Oct. 1713, leaving eleven children. He was born in 1629.

The First Christian Church of Kittery was incorporated as the First Baptist Church, since some of the legislators objected to the name, on the ground that all religious denominations in this country are Christian. The name was changed to First Christian Church in 1842. This church was organized, 20 Nov. 1806, under the leadership of Ephraim Stinchfield and Moses Safford with a membership of fourteen. The first church edifice was built in 1807 on Tenney Hill, on the road to York by way of Braveboat Harbor. Moses Safford was its first pastor and continued in that office till 27 April 1815. Mark Fernald was then chosen pastor and remained in office till his death, 30 Dec. 1851.

His ministry was a very successful one, and his Autobiography is of great interest to those who wish to know minutely the history of this church. A new church built in 1842 was burned in 1849. The present church edifice, of which a cut is here presented, was dedicated 26 Jan. 1850.

The Second Christian Church of Kittery was organized 25 May 1843. In the summer of 1837 the meeting-house was built at the Foreside. Elder George M. Payne became the first pastor and served in that capacity fourteen years.

FREE BAPTIST CHURCH, KITTERY.

The Free Baptist Church at Kittery Point was organized at the house of Mrs. Susanna Fowler, 10 Nov. 1827, by Elder Henry Hobbs, with a membership of twelve. They worshiped in Braveboat Harbor school-house till their meeting-house was erected in 1828. Rev. Nathaniel Thurston was its first pastor.*

*Further particulars about the churches may be found in the History of York County. See also Coll. of Me. Hist. Society Vol. I, pp. 45-56, and Vol. V, p. 275-286, where Rev. Henry S. Burrage, D.D., has sketched the history of the early Baptists in Kittery.

XII.

CHARACTER OF THE EARLY INHABITANTS.

The settlers of Kittery were almost all natives of England. A few came from Ireland, but their names and their religion indicate their English origin. Further proof of it is their language, for when the first emigrants were landing in Kittery, not more than one in ten of the inhabitants of Ireland could speak the English language. Scarcely a Roman Catholic could be found in Maine before 1799, when the first Roman Catholic Church in Maine was built at Newcastle. Some came from Scotland against their own will. At the battle of Dunbar, in 1651, Cromwell took some prisoners, and not knowing anything better to do with them sent them to Boston, where they were sold to pay their passage. Some were to work seven years to gain their liberty. Some secured it sooner and a small colony of them came down to York and settled in the upper part of that town, which is called locally Scotland unto this day. Sullivan in his History of Maine mentions McIntire, Tucker and Maxwell as among these emigrants. Miss Sarah Orne Jewett adds the names of Leavitt and Bradwardine, or Bradeen.¹ I venture to suggest the names of Warren, Grant and Hamilton² as in the same company. As for Tucker the name was more frequent than any other in Devonshire in the seventeenth century, and I would rather look there than in Scotland for the ancestors of the Tucker family. Both Maxwell and McIntire had grants in Berwick before settling in York.

Almost nothing is known of the English origin of those who came in the colony of Capt. John Mason. The colony was probably organized at London, where Mason married, lived for a time and died.³ I have found nothing in wills, deeds, or court records, to indicate the birthplace or place of residence in England of any of those who came over as servants of Mason. They were carpenters, millwrights and farm laborers, who came for no other motive than to better their financial condition.

A few were fishermen, as Billing and Lander. These with Jenkins are first found among the employes of John Winter at Richmond's Island.

The largest number probably came with Shapleigh from Devonshire. We know that Nicholas Frost, William Pepperrell, John Bray and others came from that county. Of all its towns Dartmouth was best represented in old Kittery. Hence came John Ameredeth, and the Shapleighs lived just across the River Dart, in Kingsweare. Doubtless others came with Shapleigh from this immediate vicinity. The illustration here presented shows from what a beautiful place adventurous men and women came to build them homes in the primeval forests of Kittery, for Dartmouth had been a seaport of importance for centuries before the emigrants left it. Here the fleet of Richard the Lion-hearted assembled to start on his crusade. Twelve miles up the River Dart is still the old Hall called Dartington, reminding us of the name Champenowne gave to his island home in Kittery. In the picture Dartmouth is on the left and a point of Kingswear is seen on the right. Was this Kittery Point? I cannot say, but we know that there was a Kittery Point in Kingswear. Here a brief description of the place may be of interest. "On the opposite side stands the beautiful village of Kingswear, from which the visitor can obtain a fine view of the town and harbor of Dartmouth. Its church and in fact the whole village are memorials of extreme antiquity. An old rhyme runs thus:

When Dartmouth was a furey down,
Kingswear was a market-town.

It presents a remarkably fine appearance to the beholder. The hills rise behind it in scarcely equalled grandeur, and their tops are crowned with wild, furze-clothed mounds, resembling the remains of an old Roman encampment. . . . In passing the village the next object which presents itself is Kittery House, the seat of Gen. Roope, presenting a pretty appearance."¹

From such scenes as this came the pioneers of Maine. They left good English homes and cultivated society, braved the dangers of a voyage of two or three months in small vessels, denied themselves the luxuries and many of what we think to be the necessities of life, hewed for themselves plantations out of the forests, lived in log cabins with few articles of furniture, fought many long years against a wily and treacherous foe on every side and struggled from poverty up to plenty. Such men and women were of heroic stuff. Their energy, courage, industry, persistency and intelligence laid the foundations of a great state and civilization. In greatness of character the settlers in Maine and New Hampshire were not at all inferior to their brethren of Massachusetts. Historians have sung the praises of the Pilgrims and Puritans of Plymouth and Boston, while the settlers about the Pascataqua had no historian in their midst to emblazon their characters and exploits. The religion of the pioneers of Massachusetts has been so much put in the front of history that some may have concluded that all the people who came to Massachusetts towns were very pious and good and that they sought only freedom of worship. The truth is that not one out of ten of the twenty thousand that came to New England before the year 1650 came for religious motives. They came to get land and fish and lumber and minerals, in short to acquire wealth. This is the great motive that in all times has sent forth colonists.

No groups of religious people, organized as churches with pastors as leaders, settled in Maine, unless we except Parson Wheelwright and his followers in Wells, but the scattered settlers were not, therefore, irreligious. They came from religious communities. They, too, were Puritans in general principles, though they allowed themselves and others more liberty in the outward manifestations of religion. The picture that has been drawn and copied of the state of morals among the early settlers of Maine has no historic background in old Kittery. The following citation illustrates the way careless or prejudiced historians have written:

"Left to their own devices, with only spasmodic attempts to establish courts for the trial of offenders, it is not surprising that the inhabitants fell into a state of disorder, or that morals were at a low ebb. Little provision was made for the establishment of the institutions of religion, and none whatever for the education of the rising generation. Wearied with the strife of contending grantors, and finding protection from the savage foe only from Massachusetts, the settlers, though at first resisting, were glad in the end to accept the jurisdiction of that colony. With it came a stable and orderly form of government; with it came schools and churches, and in the end an improved state of morals. The disorderly element was brought under control, and Puritan institutions gave a new tone to society."¹

The charges here made against the earliest settlers of Maine are irreligion, immorality, ignorance and lawlessness. None of the charges are true so far as the settlers of old Kittery are concerned, and I have found no evidence that they are true of the settlers in Gorgeana, Wells, Saco, Scarborough and Falmouth.

At the very first courts were impossible and in general not needed. The settlers obeyed the common law of England. For settlement of land claims and inheritances principally, a court was established at Saco in 1636, and after 1640 all the people of Maine were amenable to courts regularly held. Maine did not wait for Massachusetts to give them a stable and orderly form of government. It governed itself both before and after the submission of its towns to nominal control of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. There was good order among the settlers. The rights of person and property were respected. No protection from the savage foe was needed or received from Massachusetts. The settlers lived in peaceful relations with the Indians till political complications elsewhere stirred the Indians to hostility, and how grandly Massachusetts protected Maine let the tragedies of Salmon Falls, Wells, Black Point and Falmouth tell.

Were the settlers and their children ignorant? Some of them had to make their mark, since schools at that time were not very common in England, but the next generation signed their names to deeds and wills. They had schools in private houses that are unrecorded. They had also religious worship, as has been shown in another chapter. Daniel Paul, Christopher Adams, William Everett, Nicholas Frost, William Leighton, William Godsoe and I know not how many more, were all sea captans. Such men did not allow their families to grow up in ignorance.

Were the earliest settlers immoral? What say the court records? There is not a charge of murder against any inhabitant of Kittery down to the year seventeen hundred and I know not how much later, only two cases of accidental manslaughter with acquittal. The body of one Robert Williams was found in the cellar of John Fabins on the east side of Spruce Creek, and the matter was investigated in the court at Portsmouth. During the first three-quarters of a century there were very few cases of assault, and these were usually the result of intoxication. Such remarkable lack of violence for so long a period speaks well for the character of the settlers. Their common privations and dangers made them protectors of one another.

In those days the use of alcoholic drinks was common among all classes. We are not surprised to learn in the records of court that some persons became intoxicated. Such cases were, however, comparatively few, and the very names of the majority of those who were fined for intoxication are unknown in the subsequent history of the town, showing that many of the misdemeanors, for which some historians have given Maine a bad name, were committed by transient seamen and fishermen. The court records of every seaport present a similar showing down to the present time. There is no evidence whatever that the settlers of Kittery were addicted to drink more than those of Massachusetts. Laws were made guarding and restricting the sale of liquors, and only a few were licensed to sell the same.

A careful study of the court records down to the year seventeen hundred reveals not more than a dozen cases of petty larceny during all that time charged against the inhabitants of old Kittery, and several of these were small thefts committed by children. In this respect the record of the early settlers and their families cannot be surpassed by that of any other portion of New England.

It has been loosely said by some that adventurers came over here in the early days to escape due punishment for their offenses, that they took new names on arrivals, and changed their conduct with their names. I find absolutely nothing in tradition or in records of any sort to support this assertion. The origin of many of the families has been traced back to England, where their names extend back to near the time of the Norman conquest. The settlers of Kittery and of Maine and New Hampshire in general were honest, laborious, and God-fearing people. Their blood was as brave and pure as flowed in the veins of Englishmen.

The most frequent accusation against the children of the earliest settlers was that of belated marriage, for that is what it amounted to, since there was no proof of any misdemeanor except that a child was born too soon after marriage. Good sense would have let such parties alone, as it did later and still does. There is no evidence that the social evil was greater in those days than now; but in a sparse population every offense was noticed. Bastardy was very rare. The court records do not show half a dozen bad women in all Kittery down to the beginning of the eighteenth century, and one of these was sentenced to wear the letter A. It must be remembered that the purity of society in England was not then up to present standards, and that public opinion did not then condemn as it should a lack of chastity on the part of those affianced. Of gross immorality there were very few cases. Most young men were married at the age of twenty-one and young women at the age of eighteen. Large families were the rule rather than the exception. Children were not then an insupportable expense, but in general they were sources of help to their parents. Boys and girls were brought up to work as a matter of necessity. There was no privileged and aristocratic class. All were about equally poor or equally rich. They did not miss the luxuries that were then unknown. The conditions that we would now think hard and almost cruel, created a brave and energetic set of men and women, of whom their more favored descendants ought to be proud. The old families of Kittery are now represented in the high ranks of teachers, professional men and officers of state. For lofty character, enterprise, progress and noble living the people of no section of our country have a grander record.

THE NAVY YARD.

The two islands on which the navy yard is built were in the earliest times known as Puddington's Islands. It is thought that George Purington, who was living in York as early as 1640, was the first one who dwelt on these lands. He was not an owner, for 3 May 1645, Richard Vines, acting as agent for Sir Ferdinando Gorges, gave a perpetual lease of the islands to Thomas, son of Renald Fernald. The rent was two shillings and six pence yearly. The lease was practically a gift to the twelve-year-old son of Dr. Fernald for his father's sake. Thomas Fernald, 9 Sept. 1671, deeded the island next to the mainland to his brother William. This was then called "Lay Clayme" island, perhaps because Purington had laid claim to it. In 1806 this island was in the possession of Capt. William Dennett and was purchased of him by the United States government for $5,500. It then had but one house upon it and was a place for drying fish. It contains about sixty acres. About thirty years ago Seavey's Island, the old home of Thomas Fernald, was purchased by the government and added to the grounds of the navy yard.

The construction of naval vessels was carried on at the island north of these two, called originally Withers Island, then Langdon's, and later Badger's. Here were built the Ranger, commanded by Capt. John Paul Jones, and the frigate America of seventy-four guns, presented in 1782 to the French government. By 1826 the navy yard was well established in its present quarters and many wooden vessels were constructed here. While Benjamin Remick was naval constructor the line of battle ship "Alabama" was built, of seventy-four guns, now called the "New Hampshire" and still in the navy at New York; also the frigate "Santee" of forty-four guns, commenced in 1821 and launched in 1855. She was used for many years as a training ship for the midshipmen of the navy and is still in use at the Naval Academy at Annapolis. The frigate "Congress," fifty guns, launched 16

Aug. 1841, cost four hundred thousand dollars. She was destroyed by the Confederate ram "Merrimac," 3 March 1862, at Hampton Roads, Va. The sloops of war, "Portsmouth" and "Saratoga," were both built by Benjamin Remick in 1841-3, and both are in the navy to-day in constant use after sixty years of service. The "Saranac," the first steam vessel built at the Kittery yard, was launched by him in November, 1848. These were among the fastest ships of their day in the old navy.

The Kearsarge, which sunk the rebel privateer "Alabama," was built at this yard. The last ship built here was launched about twenty-five years ago.

Our first illustration shows the approach to the navy yard from Kittery Foreside. The view was taken from the roof of the hotel. It shows on the left a little of the recently constructed railroad bridge. The immense building on the right is the old Franklin ship house, built in 1820, two hundred and forty feet long by one hundred and thirty-one feet wide. It took its name from the frigate "Franklin" built here.

There are not less than one hundred buildings on the islands devoted to the purposes of war. The yard will be used for the repairing of naval vessels. The second illustration shows more fully the large old ship house and on the extreme left the iron plating shop. There is a glimpse of Crooked Lane, and beyond it is the railroad winding through the Traip estate. The village of Kittery is spread out before us and away over the woods may be seen houses on the west side of Spruce Creek. A little glimpse of the Pascataqua appears in the distance on the left. The work of demolishing the oldest buildings to make room for something better is indicated in the foreground.

The next illustration shows the ship house and iron plating shop on the extreme right, the floating dry dock, the saluting battery on the wall of the timber dock to the right, and the naval store in front to the left. The island on the extreme left is now called Badger's, connected with the mainland by the bridge of the Electric Railroad. A fine residence has been built on its southern point by the late F. E. Rowell, Esq. There are a few scattered houses on this island and no traces of its former business activity. The little island near it is known as Squash Island. The bridge over the Pascataqua to Portsmouth is shown in the distance and the river winding up toward Long Reach. The second Christian Church is on the right of the picture and the spire of the Methodist Church near the center.

The floating dry dock, built in 1852, where many a warship has been repaired, is an immense wooden structure costing eight hundred thousand dollars, but it is now obsolete and will be abandoned as soon as the new dry dock shall be completed. The excavation for this is shown in the fourth illustration. It is being made in the channel that separated the two islands of the navy yard. Its depth is about forty feet, blasted out of the solid rock. It is seven hundred and fifty feet long and one hundred and thirty feet wide. Two traveling cranes are shown in the picture, with which the material of construction is handled. Cofferdams have been built at each end of the channel. This dock will be large enough to contain the largest ships of the world, and will make Kittery navy yard a permanent institution of the United States government. Its cost will be about twelve hundred thousand dollars. The stone mast house stands close by the excavation. The sheet of water beyond is Crooked Lane again with summer cottages all along its shore.

EXCAVATION FOR DRY DOCK.

The part of the navy yard known formerly as Seavey's Island contains the foundry and the naval hospital. Here were quartered the Spanish prisoners taken in the naval battle off Santiago, and here thirty-one of them are buried. The "Reina Mercedes," a Spanish cruiser captured in that fight, is now undergoing repairs here and will be used as a training ship. Thus our government is getting ready to maintain peace, to do with kindred nations the police duty of the world.

The point of land which is directly opposite Pierce's Island has been an obstruction to the passage of the largest ships. The government is now blasting and mining for its removal at a cost of a million of dollars. This was called Henderson's Point from the fact that William Henderson, who married Sarah, daughter of Thomas Fernald in 1700, lived here. Thomas Fernald's house was near the southeastern point of the island, where a little cemetery is seen. Some broken slate tombstones may be found, and one inscription indicates the grave of Elizabeth, wife of Stephen Eastwick and daughter of Thomas Fernald.

HISTORICAL MISCELLANY.

OLD ROADS.

The highways ordered by court and town must not be thought of as modern roads. There were no carriages in the earliest days, and the roads were merely bridle-paths. The earliest one recorded is mentioned in court records under date of 16 Oct. 1649. The court ordered that a highway be cut from the head of Rogers Cove to the head of Braveboat Harbor and on unto the little marsh near unto Captain Champernowne's house and so to William Hilton's at Warehouse Point, the inhabitants of Gorgeana to cut unto a cove near unto John Andrews, and the inhabitants of Piscataquack from William Hilton's to that cove, and to be done by 30 Oct. 1649. It is remarkable that the old name of the plantation of Pascataqua is used here, although this same court had made it the township of Kittery. Roger's Cove was so called, doubtless, from Christopher Rogers, to whom Gorges gave a grant of land on the southwest side of York River. This path had been traveled still earlier, for 27 June 1648, Thomas Crockett was appointed to keep a ferry at Braveboat Harbor and to have for a freeman three pence and for a foreigner four pence per man.

Mention is made repeatedly of this road in the court records, and it was indicted in 1664 for lack of repairs. Very little work had been done upon it. It lay for the most part through primeval forest, over rocky hills and through swamps. In 1658 a road was ordered built "from Ingleby's lot in York right through the woods to Hugh Gunnisons and to some part of Spruce Creek." Thomas Crockett was allowed, in 1659, to keep the ferry "from Hugh Gunnisons to Capt. Pendletons for which he is to have six pence a p'son for his ferriage and to have the use yr of for his life tyme pr'vided he fitt conviently for itt, for the doing we'of the Town of Kittery is to take effectual care upon penalty of the losse of five pounds for y'r neglect." This ferry was in 1666 entrusted to Abraham Corbett, and he was to have for carrying a person to Great Island six pence, to Henry Sherburn's at Little Harbor five shillings, and to Strawberry Bank two shillings and six pence. In 1668 he was confirmed as ferryman and allowed to keep a house of entertainment at the Point.

June 29, 1654, the court put on record that, respecting the country's convenience for traveling from York to Newichawannock and from the latter to Wells, the towns of Kittery and York are ordered to cut out between them from the new bridge on the north-west branch of the York River unto Newichawannock and to make said way convenient for traveling in the nearest and best way; also that the towns of Kittery and Wells join to cut out and build a suitable way between Wells and Newichawannock. This was the road since called "Witchtrot Road" from the fact that Rev. George Burroughs was conducted over this road to his execution in Salem for witchcraft. Those who attended him testified that during storm and lightning as they rode this road Burroughs was calm and untroubled while all the rest were terrified, and this was allowed as evidence that the witches accompanied Burroughs.

July 4, 1659, the town of Kittery was ordered to take an effectual course for making a sufficient bridge for horse and men over the river which lies between Newichawannock and Wells, commonly called the Little River, "whereon that sawmill formerly Mr. Richard Leader's is now built."

In 1659 the court ordered that a ferry be kept at the mouth of Sturgeon Creek.

In 1671 the court ordered that a highway be built from York to the house of Thomas Spinney and that a ferry be kept from a point a little below Pulpit Rock, to connect with a road from Portsmouth to Hampton and Boston. The training men were to cut out the road and the men appointed to lay out the road were Richard Cutt, Thomas Broughton, John Davis, Mr. Weare, Charles Frost and Lieut. Job Alcock. This seems to be the road around the head of Spruce Creek, though when built it terminated at Woodman's Ferry instead of at Thomas Spinney's. The order of the court was renewed 16 Sept. 1679, and the road was to be cut from the house of John Stover in York as directly as possible to Spruce Creek and thence to the house of Thomas Wills. This is the old winding road from Rice's Tavern round the head of Spruce Creek to York. A part of it near Kittery Foreside is called "Lovers' Lane." The distance has been shortened within recent times by the road which crosses Spruce Creek by the bridge at the old Shapleigh Mill.

THE OLD COUNTRY ROAD OPPOSITE BENJAMIN KENNARD'S.

In 1672 Kittery was indicted for not making a good road from York bridge to Sturgeon Creek. This was probably the road that runs on the south side of Frost's Hill.

In 1698 John Shapleigh, James Emery, James Warren, Daniel Goodwin and John Leighton, Selectmen, laid out a highway "From Mr. Curtis' house along the Creek till we come to Capt. Fernald's Land and so run into the old Road that goes to Sturgeon Creek & so up the Road to Maj. Frost's, all to be four rods wide as straight as may be & on the driest Ground & so unto Nichewanick." This road from the head of Spruce Creek northward is in use still. It was laid out by the town rather than by the county.

The road on Eliot Neck was laid out in 1694 "from ye Countrey Road behind Stephen Paul's to Peter Dixon's, running from Mr. Remick's fence along by Humphrey Axell's orchard in that highway we have had lately, which ye sd Humphrey hath lately fenced in, and soe the highway to run from Peter Dixon's to Samuel Fernald's; one rod wide, from the bank as Straight as may be with convenience, and all to run by the River Side."

The Cedar Road, north of Sturgeon Creek, was laid out in 1687 and led from an old landing place, called the Cedars, through land of Nicholas Frost, the beaver trader, down to an island at the mouth of the Creek, called Banfield's Island in 1709, when the same road was laid out again by the selectmen. It then ran from John Brooks' land at the Cedars, by land of widow Frost, across Cedar Brook, through land which Jonathan Nason bought of John Morrell, "by the south side of Richard Chick's orchard." The landing at the end of this road was long called "Tidey's Landing" and was sold by the town to David Furbish and Mehitabel Stacy, single woman, in 1806.

Among the papers of Hon. Mark Dennett I found a copy of the return of a road laid out in 1806 from Portsmouth Ferry to York. It was to begin at Rice's Tavern, run past the house of Capt. Rogers, cross Spruce Creek just north of Broad Cove, then run near the houses of Theodore Parker, Nicholas Weeks, William Parker and between the houses of William Morgrave and Thomas Morgrave on to York Meeting House, which was next northwest of the Court House. Along the old road from York to the head of Spruce Creek and northwest of the meeting house lived in order Mr. Messenger, Mr. Lyman, Col. Preble, Mr. Gilman, Mr. Sewall, William Frost and Mr. Junkins. The distance from Portsmouth Ferry to York by this proposed new road, which was never built, was six miles and one hundred and thirty-five rods, while the distance by the old road over the head of Spruce Creek was eight miles and thirty-five rods.

OLD HOUSES.

Many of the oldest houses of Kittery and Eliot have been described in previous chapters. A few remain, and the following notices of them are taken chiefly from Dr. J. L. M. Willis' description of them.¹

OLDEST HOUSE IN ELIOT, BUILT IN 1727.

The oldest house in Eliot is on the west side of the "Cross Road," near the place where the road passes over the "Great Brook." The accompanying cut shows it. It was built by John Tobey, the great-grandfather of the present owner, Miss Caroline Tobey, in 1727. The eastern part is as originally built. Some additions have been made on the western end.

On the northeast side of the town is the house of Mr. Frederick Frost. It is a large, two-story house built in 1730 by Col. John Frost, grandson of Major Charles Frost. Near by and used as a woodshed is the old Frost garrison house, which is shown on page 177.

The house of Mr. James W. Bartlett near the railroad station was built by Nathan Bartlett in 1740. It is a large two-story house and in a good state of preservation. Here six generations of Bartletts have dwelt. It stands on the site of a previous brick house, which was shattered by an earthquake.

The house of Mr. Horace Bartlett in the north corner of the town was built about 1750 by John Heard Bartlett, who graduated at Harvard in 1747. It has been recently remodeled.

On the south side of Raitt's Hill and near the East Eliot Methodist Church is a house built about 1740 by Eliot Frost, grandson of Major Charles Frost. It is still in good condition and is the home of Mrs. Sarah Raitt.

RICE TAVERN.

The Shapleigh house, by some supposed to be the oldest in Eliot, was built in 1730 by James Gowen, Esq., and occupied by him through life. It has been called the finest specimen of colonial architecture in the town. The present chimney, though large, is smaller by two feet each way than the original one, which was shaken down by an earthquake, 1 Nov. 1755. This house was a little north of the school-house in district number one. It was demolished in April, 1899.

At Eliot Neck, a little to the east of the school-house and on the opposite side of the road, is the so called old Spinney house. It was built by William Welch, who fought in the battle of Bunker Hill. It is a one story house, much out of repair. It formerly stood several rods west of its present location and near the bank of the river. The old cellar still marks the spot.

The house in which Charles Shapleigh lives in Kittery, on the road that runs up the west side of Spruce Creek, was probably built by Col. John Shapleigh between 1750 and 1760.

The old Rice Tavern has been standing over a century and is still a good building. It is beautifully situated close to the bank of the Pascataqua, directly opposite the city of Portsmouth. Here was the ferry landing before the days of bridges and electric roads. Then this tavern was a much frequented place. It is mentioned on the return of the road dated 1806. It is probably considerably older than that date indicates.

The house built by Capt. Benjamin Remick in 1777 is still in good condition. It stands near the bridge that crosses the railroad, not far from Kittery Depot. See page 148.

The house now owned and occupied by Dr. J. L. M. Willis was built by a Mr. Dixon and sold, about 1775, to Dr. Willis' great-grandfather, John Fogg. An old brick in the chimney bears date of 1727. The house was originally of but one story. Another story was added by John Fogg, Jr., about 1815. It was again remodeled in 1870 by Horace Parker, who married Abigail Leighton Fogg. Dr. Willis also owns the place bought of Daniel Fogg by Joseph Hammond in 1722. The old house on this place was built about 1700 and was a kind of grocery and liquor shop, common in those days, kept by Joseph Hammond. It is a large, one-story house with L. and still has the original shutters. It is next north of the residence of Dr. Willis.

Nearly all of the old houses are similar in architecture and were essentially reproductions of the rural houses of England two centuries and more ago. They were generally square houses or nearly so, with a huge chimney in the center or with one at each end. The broad gable roofs and small windows, the low underpinning and front yards, which were usually tastefully fenced in and ornamented with flowers and shrubbery, characterize the habitations of the well-to-do old settlers.

RESIDENCE OF DR. J. L. M. WILLIS.

FOREGLEAMS OF INDEPENDENCE.

The mutterings of the American people that preceded the Revolution were shared by the citizens of Kittery. Oct. 13, 1765, James Gowen, Representative, was instructed by the town to oppose the Stamp Act. Two years later, or Dec. 21, 1767, it was voted that James Gowen, Benjamin Parker, John H. Bartlett, John Dennet, Nathaniel Remick, Elihu Gunnison, William Leighton, John Sparhawk and Dr. Daniel Pierce be a committee to report what they think proper to encourage industry, economy and manufactories, thereby to prevent the unnecessary importation of European commodities.

Sept. 26, 1768, the town voted unanimously to send some suitable person to act for them in convention with such as might be sent from the several towns in this Province to join them, in order that such measures may be consulted and advised as the peace and safety of his Majesty's subjects may require, the proposed convention to be held in Faneuil Hall in Boston. Caleb Emery was chosen for the above purpose. He was instructed to "take all legal and constitutional measures to defend and maintain the Person, Family, Crown and Dignity of our Sovereign Lord George the Third and all and singular the Rights, Liberties, Privileges and Immunities granted in the Royal Charter of this his Majesty's Province, as well as those which are declared to be belonging to us as British subjects by birthright as all other Privileges in said Charter specially mentioned."

At a town meeting held Jan. 7, 1773, a committee consisting of Benjamin Parker, Esq., Charles Chauncy, Esq., and John H. Bartlett, made the following report, which was unanimously adopted:

"The Inhabitants of the Town of Kittery in Town Meeting legally assembled having duly considered your letter of November 20th, containing your sentiments upon the many publick Grievances that we in this Province labor under, and upon the communication thereof to this Town find the same opinion prevailing here, as indeed must be manifest to every one who is not Blinded by Interest of some kind or another. Without going into any other particulars at this time but that which has lately took place, namely, the Independency of the Judges of the Supreme Court; In reply to which we are constrained to say it is very alarming and cannot from ye least acquaintance we have of our Constitutional rights but think it a Dangerous and threatening Symptom, and from all that we can obtain are led to Suspect that their Appointment took its rise more from Party Spirit and Opposition than the Welfare of ye Province.

We shall be ready to Stand by the Respectable Town of Boston in every lawful undertaking for the recovery of many Ancient Priviledges which seem to be wrested from us, and are willing to offer even our lives as a Sacrifice in the Glorious cause of Liberty, if there should ever be occasion. It is with gratitude we reflect upon the many struggles you have had for the common good, and rely upon your future vigilance and care of our Public Rights. May Heaven direct and succeed your Manly and Virtuous attempts to save a Sinking Country, and that we apprehend it is the cause of Truth and Justice you are engaged in may God grant that you finally prevail." A copy of this was transmitted to the inhabitants of the town of Boston.

At a town meeting held Oct. 27, 1774, James Gowen, Nathaniel Remick and William Leighton were chosen "to act as Delegates in a County Congress to be holden some time in November next at Wells by the several towns in this County, there to consider and agree upon some proper measures for the preservation of the Peace and good order of the Inhabitants; also to agree upon some legal and Constitutional Measures in order to defeat the arbitrary tyrannical Plans laid by our enemies to enslave us."

Jan. 16, 1775, Edward Cutts and Charles Chauncey, Esq., delegates to the Provincial Congress, were instructed not to "vote to assume Government, except there should be an open rupture made by our enemies or such unfavorable answer to the Petition sent to our gracious Sovereign as shall make it absolutely necessary to assume Government."

Dec. 13, 1774, the town chose twenty-five of its leading citizens to be a Committee of Correspondence, Inspection and Safety, and a similar but smaller committee was chosen in subsequent years. It is not my intention to write a history of the part taken by Kittery in the great struggle for independence. That work has been well done by another.¹ The entire militia was ready to march long before the alarm at Lexington. Almost every man and youth in the town capable of bearing arms was in the fight on land or on sea.

SCHOOLS.

The town records tell us little about schools in the earlier days. The Court indicted the town for "not providing school and schoolmaster for the youth, according to law," July 1673. In 1669 lots were set apart for the ministry and a school in the parish of Unity. There seem to have been no school houses. Mention is made incidentally that schools were kept in the house of James Webber, which was earlier the house of Rev. William Scriven, also in the house of Capt. William Fernald. May 16, 1734, it was voted "to pay thirteen shillings to Joseph Hill for the use of his house to keep school in." There was but one school, and this was a movable one. It was held in one part of the town for a few months and then in another part, for the convenience of widely scattered inhabitants. About all that was taught was to read, write and cipher. In 1743 it was voted that twenty-five pounds be paid for a Grammar School. This was continued for many years at Kittery, and here youth might fit for college. It corresponded somewhat to the modern High School. It was not till 3 March, 1802, that the town voted to divide the town into school districts. The division was accepted 10 June 1803. From that date to 1810, when Eliot was made a separate town, five hundred dollars were annually raised for schools in addition to the expense of the Grammar School.

A few names of the old teachers appear in the town records. Rev. John Newmarch was one of the first. Ministers then could teach all the week, carry on a farm and preach twice or three times on Sunday. Robert Reed is mentioned as a school master in 1708; Benjamin Gibson in 1719; Simon Frost in 1729; Abner Bailey in 1737; Nathaniel Rust in 1739; John Rogers, son of Rev. John Rogers, in 1741; Andrew Higginson in 1745; John Wheelwright in 1746; Eugene Lynch in 1718; Noyce Pariss in 1723; Christopher "Shergant" in 1725, "if he will accept £45 for a year and pay his own board;" Robert Eliot Gerrish in 1755; and John Parry in 1754 and in subsequent years.

When Eliot was made a separate town in 1810, there were six school districts, and the seventh was divided from the sixth in 1823. District number eight was divided from number five in 1841. None of the school houses existing at the formation of the town is standing except that of district number four. An old school house of district number two, now unused for school purposes, is here presented and sufficiently illustrates the type of "knowledge box" of the past. It is a short distance from the residence of Joshua Frye. Here Gov. John F. Hill began his education, and many others will recall the happy school days spent here.

In 1824 the whole number of scholars in Eliot was seven hundred and the number attending school was three hundred and forty. The school committee received a compensation of from three to five dollars annually for their services, and the teachers got from fifteen to eighteen dollars per month. The length of the school term was about four months. Graded schools were then almost unknown, and the modern methods of instruction of the Normal Schools were uninvented. The teachers just taught without any particular methods, and the scholars took their books home at the close of each day and spent the evening around the fireside in study. They thus made fully as good and rapid progress as do the boys and girls in the schools of to-day.

Eliot used then to expend two hundred and fifty dollars annually for schools, with usually one hundred and seventy-four dollars for a Grammar School of six months. No female teachers were employed till after 1840. Prominent among the teachers were Parson Chandler, William Hammond, William Randall, Alpheus Hanscom and George C. Bartlett.¹

Eliot Academy was built in 1839 and was burned in 1875. The first catalogue was printed in 1840 and the school was continued till 1870. Then the multiplying High Schools and Academies of neighboring towns made this institution no longer necessary to meet the requirements of Eliot inhabitants. The first Principal of the Academy was Israel Kimball, who was born in Wells, 26 Jan. 1812, graduated at Bowdoin College in 1829, became an employee in the Treasury Department at Washington and died 10 Dec. 1890. The number of pupils under his instruction was ninety-six.² Prof. Moses G. Farmer succeeded Mr. Kimball as Principal of the Academy.

The present town of Kittery is rejoicing in the immediate prospect of an Academy of its own. Robert W. Traip by his will in 1863 provided for the maintenance of a brother and two sisters during their life time. At their decease the balance of his property was to be used for the endowment of an Academy in Kittery. In 1897 the last survivor of his family died, and the fund became available, but as it seemed small for the purpose there has been a disposition to delay the erection of a school building on the part of the trustees. A lot has recently been purchased for $3,000, about an eighth of a mile east of the Public Library and near Crooked Lane. The trustees appointed by the Probate Court are John Wentworth, Calvin S. Hayes, Horace Mitchell, Franklin H. Bond, and James H. Walker, all of Kittery.

GREEN ACRE.

Even in such a brief sketch of the educational history of old Kittery as can here be given mention must be made of Green Acre, on the bank of the Pascataqua, in Eliot. From being at first a summer resort for rest to body and soul, it has become a place for the cultivation of intellectual and spiritual life.

²See reprint of first catalogue in "Old Eliot," Vol. II, p. 148-151.

GREEN ACRE.

Its originators were Professor and Mrs. Moses Gerrish Farmer and their daughter, Miss Sarah J. Farmer. To them were added in proprietorship Lieut. Col. Francis Keefe, Dr. J. L. M. Willis, G. Everett Hammond and Martin Parry Tobey. The house, shown in the cut, was built in 1890, "in the midst of a rural paradise," as Neal Dow expressed it. The grounds were selected because of the natural beauty of field and river and because of their historic traditions. This was the ancient homestead of Major Joseph Hammond, and his garrison for protection against the Indians stood a little to the north of the inn. Later, on the bank of the river, the Hanscoms, a race of shipbuilders, launched many a sturdy vessel.

In 1894 Mr. and Mrs. Farmer had passed beyond, and their daughter opened a new chapter in the history of the place. A series of lectures and classes was begun, the object of which was stated by a writer of that date, "To review the progress already achieved in the world, state the living problems now awaiting solution, and suggest the means of further progress." The aim has been to make this a place where people could gather, "who are eagerly seeking the truth that is to bring unity throughout the earth." Thus is seen the greatness of the desire that prompted this institution. Some may call its aim visionary, but all real visions are immense in their scope. The boldness of this one has attracted the attention and the presence of many prominent persons. One of the earliest guests was John Greenleaf Whittier.

The weeks of assemblage, each year, have been given to the comparative study of religion, philosophy, ethics and sociology. Discussions are avoided. Convictions are sought. Love is the controlling motive. The man or woman who can point out a nobler and happier way of living is the one sought. Truth is universal; it cannot be sectarian. There is here no room for rivals in religion.

Moses Gerrish Farmer was for years Professor of Electrical Science at the Torpedo Station, Newport, Rhode Island. In 1897 there was commemorated at Green Acre the fiftieth anniversary of his use of the first electric railway, an invention of his own. The Institute of Electrical Engineers held their annual meeting here. Professor A. G. Dolbear of Tufts College gave an address on "Moses Gerrish Farmer as an Electrical Pioneer."

The various departments of this summer school embrace also music, art, nature study, etc. The program for 1902 has something good for each day in July and August. Distinguished lecturers, not only of America but also from Japan, India and Persia, have had a place upon the program. The end sought is rest and growth for the soul and consequent health for the body.

Green Acre was purchased, in 1902, by James C. Hooe of Washington, D. C., whose intention is to continue the good work so well begun.

ROSEMARY.

Mrs. Moses G. Farmer, whose beautiful life has been beautifully written by Rev. Augustin Caldwell, left in Rosemary Cottage a memorial of herself and of her little son who died in infancy. It was dedicated 31 May 1888, and is under the direction of the Boston City Missionary Society. It is pleasantly situated in Eliot, about six miles from Portsmouth. Hither come tired mothers and their children from Boston for a vacation of two weeks. Seven dollars pay the entire bill for each one. Here they find rest, health, happiness, abundance of food, cleanliness and the spirit of Jesus. No more practical and beneficent exhibition of Christianity can be found.

About forty persons can be accommodated here at one time. There is every convenience and comfort that a home can give. Here many children get their first acquaintance with green lawns and wild flowers and fruit trees. The country is a paradise to them. Here they can swing and tilt and romp and play to their hearts' content. An old barn is the play house for rainy days. Three thousand two hundred and seventy persons have already had here a glimpse of a "real heaven on earth," as a grateful mother expressed it. The home is open to as many as can be brought here, without distinctions of creed or color. Long may it endure as a blessing to tired mothers and little children and a memorial of the motherly and Christ-like love that prompted its erection.

LIBRARIES.

In 1858 Miss Arabella Rice of Portsmouth, whose father was a native of Kittery, left a bequest of $30,000 to found the Rice Free Public Library. In 1874 the trustees organized for business and took charge of the funds. The Library was opened in a room in Austin Block and had about one thousand volumes. In 1889 the Library Building was erected at a cost of $18,500, including the lot and furnishings. The accumulated interest of the fund was insufficient for the purpose by $5,000, which sum was borrowed on the personal note of the trustees, and the debt was paid in five years from the date of the note. The trustees at the time of the erection of the building were Moses A. Safford, President, Ephraim C. Spinney, Treasurer, John Wentworth, Joel Wilson and Edward F. Safford. The library is for the use of all residents of the town and now has about six thousand volumes.

A bequest of about $80,000 was given by the late Dr. John S. H. Fogg of South Boston, a native of Eliot, for a library, to be known as the William Fogg Library. It is to be located on the William Fogg estate, and arrangements are being made to erect the building at once, although by the will the funds do not become available till the death of Mr. Fogg's widow. The building is not to cost more than $10,000. Mr. Fogg left also to the town of Eliot his large collection of historical and other books, valued at $10,000. Thus the building, books and fund will insure to the inhabitants of Eliot for all future time a well-equipped and constantly growing library. Few greater blessings can be conferred upon a town.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

Much that might be said in this chapter will be found in the genealogical notes. There are, however, some historical personages that demand a more full treatment than could well be given there. It is quite impossible to here mention all who have left an honorable record. A few out of many are introduced to the reader, of whom much has been written elsewhere.

THE PEPPERRELLS.

Col. William Pepperrell was a native of Ravistock Parish, Plymouth, in Devonshire, England, where he was born in 1646. His speech indicated that he was of Welsh origin. Nothing definite has been published concerning his ancestry. When a boy he was apprenticed to the captain of a fishing-schooner employed off the coast of New England and the banks of Newfoundland. His parents died early leaving two or three sisters to be helped. One of these married a Phillips, and her sons settled in Saco and Kittery. Another probably married Hon. Robert Eliot.

William Pepperrell first began business in the fisheries at the Isles of Shoals. After a few years he married Margery, daughter of John Bray of Kittery, and in 1682 settled at the Point, where he built a house on a small lot given him by his father-in-law. Here he prospered in business and is said to have become the wealthiest man in New England. This did not then imply the possession of a large fortune. A man worth one hundred thousand dollars was then a very rich man. He built many fishing and trading vessels and sent them to the Banks, to the West Indies and to Europe. He became a leader in the affairs of the colony. He was justice of the peace thirty-five years and from 1715 till his death he served as judge of the court of common pleas. He had command of the fort near his place of residence with rank of captain and in the militia rose to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. He was one of the founders of the Congregational Church at Kittery Point and remembered it in his will.

COL. WILLIAM PEPPERRELL.

For some account of his family see Genealogical Notes. He died 15 Feb. 1734, and was buried in the middle of an orchard near his house. Here a marble structure was erected to his memory by his son, William, about the year 1736.¹ It was purchased in London at a cost of thirty-four pounds, eleven shillings and four pence, and was repaired over thirty years ago by a descendant, Miss Harriet Hirst Sparhawk.

Margery (Bray) Pepperrell died about seven years later than her husband. She was mentioned in the Boston Post Boy, under date of 30 April 1741, as follows: "She was, through the whole course of her life, very exemplary for unaffected piety and amiable virtues, especially her charity, her courteous affability, her prudence, meekness, patience, and her unweariedness in well-doing. She was not only a loving and discreet wife and tender parent, but a sincere friend to all her acquaintance."

The house built by Col. William Pepperrell in 1682 must have surpassed in grandeur any residence in the province. Its spacious hall and staircase are still admired and imitated by recent architects. The house was originally built with about its present dimensions. Sir William added fifteen feet to each end of it, and these additions were taken away by a subsequent owner, so that the present external appearance of the Pepperrell Mansion, saving the curb roof, is about as it was in the days of the elder Pepperrell. The rooms are spacious and the outlook over the harbor is a commanding and delightful one. The cellar and foundations seem never to have been well built. It is reported that some have it in mind to purchase this house and use it as a public historical museum. Its associations demand this, and the people of Maine should see to it that this historical landmark be well cared for and devoted to patriotic and educational purposes.

The description of the Pepperrell mansion given by Mr. Pelatiah Fernald in 1849, is sufficiently minute and accurate. "It was a square house about forty-five feet long and of the width that it now is and had two chimneys, with a sharp roof. Col. Pepperrell carried on the fishing business. At his decease his son, Sir William Pepperrell, took possession of the estate. He made additions of about fifteen feet on both ends of the house and altered the roof to the present form and revised it throughout and built the wharf and four stores and built the tomb and extended his land from the partition wall between Capt. John Underwood, now Joanna Mitchell, and the now Thomas Hoyt, from this line westward up to the lane leading down to Capt. Robert Follet, now J. Lawrence. On the north of the Mansion House was the Great Orchard, so called, in the middle of which he built the tomb. After the war commenced Sir William Pepperrell's estate was called Tory property, and many thought that they might destroy it at pleasure. In the year 1774 my father moved into the Mansion House, so called, to take care of it. Col. Sparhawk having previously built a house for Lady Pepperrell, so called, widow of Sir William. Said house is owned by Capt. Joseph Cutts, where she lived the remainder of her days and died there. At the end of the Revolutionary War all Sir William's estate was considered confiscated or Tory property, because it belonged by will to William P. Sparhawk, who had fled his country and joined our enemies. Therefore our government had orders to sell at public auction all the land and buildings formerly belonging to Sir William Pepperrell as Tory property. Beginning with the Mansion House about the year 1790, as well as I can remember, Capt. Samuel Smallcorn bought the Mansion House and the two lots, one on which the house stands and the other owned now by Capt. Daniel Frisbee, together with the wharf. In the same or next year Thomas D. Cutts bought the said Mansion House of Capt. Smallecorn and commenced a tavern and carried on fishing and built the store that Capt. Daniel Frisbee now occupies. Major Cutts set out all those elm trees around the premises. He flourished for some time, but there was a leak under the house, and in a few years it leaked out and by mortgage became Richard Cutts' property. He carried on fishery and foreign trade for many years, but trusting too much to other people's honesty, he fell in the rear and sold the house and lands to Elder J. Meader and Capt. Jesse Frisbee. Capt. Frisbee in a few years was lost at sea. Elder Meader sold the old Mansion House to Charles G. Bellamy, Esq., and Mr. Thomas Hoyt in the year 1848. They divided the land and took off the bend or room from each end of the house and left it in the same form on the ground that Col. William Pepperrell built it. It is now [1849] owned by Charles G. Bellamy, Esq., who has made a very large repair, and it is likely it may stand another century, excepting fire, as it has stood through all the past."

Sir William Pepperrell was born 27 June 1696. He had only the meager education that could be obtained in the public schools of his time. He was taught to do business, to survey land, to sail a ship, to act as clerk, to manage men. By trading in fish, lumber and West India goods, by extensive ship-building, and by the purchase and sale of large tracts of land he became very wealthy. At one time he owned the greater part of Saco and Scarborough. Saco was first called Pepperrellborough in his honor. He was a justice of the peace at the age of twenty-one and captain of a company of cavalry. At the age of thirty he held the rank of colonel and was in command of all the militia of Maine. About the same time he was appointed one of the Governor's council and held that office thirty-two years, eighteen of which he was president of the board. The people of Kittery elected him as their representative in 1726-7. The office of chief justice he held from 1730 till his death. This obliged him to give some study to law, though he had been from youth familiar with court procedures, having been clerk of court. Like his father he was the owner of slaves. A boat's crew of them used to row him across the harbor. He seems to have been the banker of Kittery and a large region about, and many a mortgage in his favor is recorded in the York Deeds.

He was appointed in 1745 to command the expedition against Louisburg, and contributed out of his private fortune five thousand pounds toward the expenses of that campaign. All know the result. What had been regarded as an impregnable fortress surrendered after a brief siege. In this expedition Pepperrell was accompanied by many of his townsmen as soldiers, and fifty men under Captain Moses Butler went from Berwick. For his success at Louisburg he was knighted and received in London with many attentions. In 1756 he was commissioned Lieutenant-General in the royal army.

He united with the church at Kittery in 1734 and was prominent in its business affairs. George Whitefield was entertained at his house and consulted with reference to the Louisburg expedition, though Pepperrell did not follow his advice. The honors received at home and abroad did not separate him from the companionship and sympathies of his townsmen. The remainder of his life was comparatively uneventful, and he died 6 July 1759.

LADY PEPPERRELL'S HOUSE.

HALL OF LADY PEPPERRELL'S HOUSE.

He was buried in the vault beneath the Pepperrell tomb, and the pall that covered his bier is still preserved by the church at Kittery Point and draped the pulpit at the funeral services held in honor of President McKinley.

He married Mary Hirst of Boston, in 1723. After his death or about 1765, she caused a house to be built near the church, where she resided till her death, 25 Nov. 1789. The house is now occupied by J. Chester Cutts. Its appearance without and within is about as it was in the days of Lady Pepperrell. The accompanying pictures tell more than words can. The hall and parlor have the same furniture as in the old days. The nicely laid wooden floors and the curiously carved post at the foot of the stairs evidence the fine workmanship of the builders.

Most of the property of Sir William Pepperrell was willed to his grandson, William Pepperrell Sparhawk, on condition that he should drop his surname on arriving at the age of twenty-one. This he did and became the second Sir William Pepperrell.

The estates bequeathed by the first Sir William were confiscated in 1778, since their owner was a Tory. The large fortune accumulated by Sir William and his father was soon dissipated, and some of his descendants came to indolent pride and poverty. The name Pepperrell is extinct in America. An association of the descendants of the Pepperrells take some pride in their lineage and seek to perpetuate the memories of the great men who honored their town and their country by noble and patriotic services.

MAJOR CHARLES FROST.

Details concerning the life of this man have already been given in these pages. He was one of the first men of his times and town in civil, military and ecclesiastical affairs. He was honored by election as Deputy to the General Court in 1658 and held that office five years. The date of his commission as captain in the militia is 6 July 1668. He was commissioned as Sergeant-Major, 23 Aug. 1689, to govern and exercise the military forces of the Province of Maine as the law directs.¹

His own petition to the General Court says that "quickly after the death of Major Hooke in the month of January 1694-5 Your petitionr was Ordered by the Right Honble the Lt Governr to take the Conduct and Governmt of all the officers & Souldiers under his Majtys Pay in the County of Yorke,"² He was actively engaged in military service during a large part of his life, leading expeditions for the defence of Kittery and other towns. The Indians hated him for the part he had in their betrayal at Dover in 1675. They assaulted his garrison house and finally laid in ambush for him on his way home from church and so had their revenge.

He served for many years as Justice of the Peace, was one of the Associate Judges of the Province of Maine, and was a member of the Governor's Council in 1693. Perhaps no citizen of Kittery has held more public offices or held them more worthily than he. His own family and those with which the Frosts were connected by marriage were the first families of the Pascataqua settlement. For many years the Frosts of Maine and New Hampshire held a commanding influence in the affairs of town and province.¹

GEN. WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

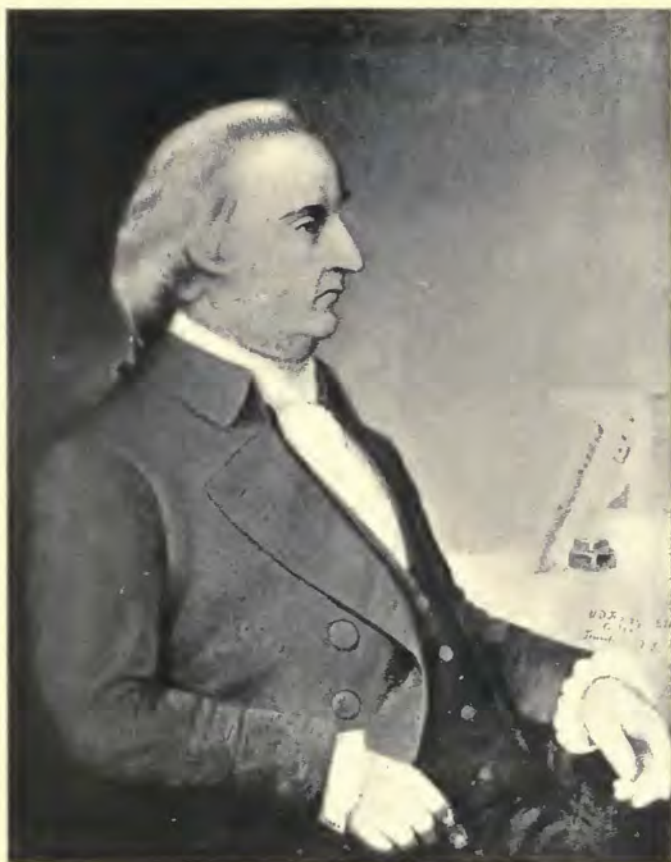

Capt. William Whipple of Ipswich, born 28 Jan. 1695-6, married, 14 May 1722, Mary, daughter of Robert Cutt 2nd. He settled in Kittery, living in the old Cutt-Whipple garrison house, which is still in use. His children were recorded as follows: Mary b. 13 Jan. 1728, m. Hon. Robert Traill 1 Sept. 1748, d. 3 Oct. 1791; William b. 14 June 1730; Hannah b. 15 Feb. 1734-5, m. Dr. Joshua Brackett of Portsmouth 14 April 1760, and d. 24 April 1825; Robert Cutt b. 6 April 1736 and d. 4 May 1761; Joseph b. 14 Feb. 1737-8. Capt. William Whipple died 7 Aug. 1751 and was buried in the cemetery at Kittery Point. His wife died 28 Feb. 1783, and was buried by her son in the North Cemetery, Portsmouth.

Gen. William Whipple, son of the one just mentioned, was fifth in descent from Matthew Whipple of Ipswich. His opportunities of education were only those of the common schools of his time. At the age of twenty-one he had command of a vessel and brought negro slaves into this country. When twenty-nine years of age he settled in Portsmouth, N. H., and engaged in mercantile life. Here he married his cousin, Catherine Moffat. He had two slaves said to have been sons of an African prince. The fight for freedom in the Revolution led one of his slaves to ask and receive his liberty.

He was chosen Representative to Congress, 23 Jan. 1776, and served also for the three following years. This gave him the toga. In 1782 he was made Judge of the Superior Court. All these offices were filled with honor to himself and good services to his country. He died 28 Nov. 1785, aged fifty-four years, leaving no children.¹

HON. MARK DENNETT.

This man was one of the most influential characters in the history of Kittery. Among his papers is found a record of some events in his early life, written by himself. He was born 28 Aug. 1786, son of William and Mary (Adams) Dennett. He says, "In early boyhood I hated the school until about nine years old, when my fancy changed and I liked the school and began to stand at the head of my class. Our school privileges were very limited. I attended to nothing at school but reading, spelling and writing until I was thirteen years old; but I progressed in the old arithmetic at home under the instruction of my father and brother to the rule of three. At thirteen years I commenced the arithmetic at school and during winter term I mastered about one-half of Merrill's Arithmetic. In the spring of 1800 at a short term of six weeks of Grammar School, I progressed in English Grammar so that I could parse simple sentences. In September a term of Grammar School commenced and I attended to the study of Latin, and during the winter I advanced into Virgil and Cicero. In the spring my father said that I must help him on the farm. In the winter of 1801-2 there was no Grammar School, and I mastered the last half of the arithmetic. In the winter of 1802-3 I studied Latin at home and recited my lessons once a week with Rev. William Briggs., Oct. 25, 1803, my father died and the care of the farm devolved on me, and I was thus deprived of school privileges. During the winter of 1803-4 I devoted every spare hour by day and very long evenings to the study of Greek, and in December, 1804, I received a certificate of qualification for teaching the Grammar School from three ministers who were college graduates. Jan. 1, 1805, at the age of eighteen, I commenced teaching the Grammar School in Kittery, and excepting two or three years (when otherwise employed) I continued to do so several months each year until I was sixty years old, when my hearing failed and I declined the service.

"In 1807, my mind being religiously impressed, I was baptized and joined the church, of which act I never repented."

Mr. Dennett was much interested in local history and left some valuable papers that have been utilized in the preparation of this book. He was honored as a leader in his town, serving as selectman for seventeen years. He was deputy to the General Court, 1814-19, and was a member of the first legislature of Maine. He was State senator several times, justice of the peace, and captain and major in the militia. He died 30 April 1883, in the ninety-seventh year of his age. See genealogy of the Dennett family, chiefly compiled by him.

GEORGE MELVILLE FROST, M.D.

GEORGE MELVILLE FROST, M.D.

Son of Joshua and Catherine Shapleigh (Paul) Frost, was born April 27, 1843. He received an academic education at South Berwick Academy, and afterwards was admitted to Bow-doin Medical School. There he received his degree in 1869. He settled at once in Peabody, Mass., and began practice that steadily increased in extent and success.

An epidemic of small-pox broke out soon after his arrival and he came into prominence, both as a physician and a member of the Board of Health. He was a man of strong individuality and clung tenaciously to his opinions until he was convinced they were wrong. This was especially true in respect to the method of treating diseases.

He was a close student of professional literature and spent much time in London hospitals in 1876.

His general ability as a physician won for him the confidence of constantly growing practice. He was the oldest physician in town, both in years and time of residence, a period of twenty-nine years. His untiring devotion to his duties, continued after he knew of his own mortal illness, endeared him to large numbers. And many tributes were paid to his worth both at the public funeral and subsequently by his associates in the Massachusetts Medical Society. Dr. Frost married 9 Oct. 1873, at Beverly, Mass., Asenath Marshall, daughter of Paul F. and Anna (Lefavour) Ober, who survives him without children.

JOHN SAMUEL HILL FOGG, M.D.

Dr. John Samuel Hill Fogg, son of William and Betsey (Hill) Fogg, was born in Eliot, May 21, 1826. He was fitted for college at Eliot Academy, then under the charge of Israel Kimball. After graduation he studied medicine with Dr. Theodore H. Jewett, of South Berwick, attended lectures in the medical departments of Bowdoin, and Harvard, and received the degree of M.D. from Harvard in 1850. He settled in South Boston the same year, in the practice of his profession, and resided there until his death. He served many years on the Boston School Board, and was representative to the Massachusetts Legislature in 1855. He was a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society; of the New England Historic Genealogical Society; of the Virginia Historical Society; and a corresponding member of the Maine Historical Society.

Twenty-one years before his death, which occurred October 16, 1893, Dr. Fogg was stricken with paraplegic paralysis, confining him closely to his room and making him a constant sufferer. A taste for genealogical and historical research, and a youthful interest for collecting autographs, occasionally gratified in maturer age, afforded employment and solace in these years of affliction, and from this slight beginning a collection of autographs was formed in a systematic manner with reference to historical data, the value of which at the time of his death was estimated at twenty-five thousand dollars. His will provided that this collection should become the property of the Maine Historical Society, and provided also for the establishment of a free public library in his native town.

"His unfailing brightness of mind, and patience under the most excruciating suffering, together with the work that he has accomplished, make his case one of the most marvellous in the annals of invalidism."

Dr. Fogg married first, July 11, 1850, Sarah Frances Gordon, of Exeter, N. H., who died March 21, 1871; and second, Mary Griselda Clinch, youngest daughter of Rev. Joseph H. Clinch, D.D., of South Boston, who survives him.

GOV. JOHN FREMONT HILL.

John Fremont Hill, M.D., Governor of Maine, born in Eliot, October 29, 1855, was the son of William and Miriam (Leighton) Hill. His ancestors on both sides have been distinguished men in their day, and the public spirit and interest in the affairs of state which characterize the subject of this sketch seems to be hereditary. Dr. Hill's father, William Hill of Eliot, was in the sixth generation of direct descent from John Hill of Dover, who was born in England in 1624.

Governor Hill's mother was Miriam Leighton, eldest daughter of Andrew Pepperrell Leighton of Eliot, who several times represented his district in the State Legislature, and was State senator for a number of years. Sarah Catherine Odiorne, grandmother of Governor Hill, was a descendant of Capt. John Mason, the original grantee of the Province of New Hampshire.

He was educated in the public schools, South Berwick (Maine) Academy, and the Putnam School in Newburyport, Massachusetts; studied medicine and graduated at the Maine Medical School, Brunswick, completing his studies in his profession at the Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn, New York. After leaving college, Dr. Hill practiced medicine for about a year in Boothbay Harbor, but very soon decided to devote his attention to a business career.

In 1879, he came to Augusta and went into business with Hon. P. O. Vickery, and soon after became his partner, under the firm name of Vickery & Hill. This firm, now a corporation—The Vickery & Hill Publishing Company—is one of the largest publishing houses in the business, with branch offices in Boston, New York and Chicago. Within a short time a substantial fire-proof building, with all modern improvements, has been erected, connected with the former establishment, in order to accommodate the constantly increasing business of the Company.

Governor Hill has taken an active part in the politics of his native State, having always been identified with the Republican party. In 1889 he was elected Representative from Augusta to the Maine Legislature, and served on the Committees of Banks and Banking, and of Railroads, Telegraphs and Expresses. In 1891 he was again elected Representative, and served as Chairman of the House Committee on Railroads. In August, 1892, he was nominated by acclamation as senator from Kennebec County, and sat in the Legislatures of 1893 and 1895 in that capacity, being Chairman of the important Railroad Committee both terms. He was a Presidential elector in 1896, and a member of Governor Powers' Council during the years 1899 and 1900.

At the September election of 1900, Dr. Hill was elected Governor of Maine, by one of the largest majorities ever given in the history of the State. He was inaugurated in January, 1901, delivering an able and business-like address to the Legislature. The manner in which he is administering the duties of his office proves that the State is extremely fortunate in the choice of its Chief Executive.

Governor Hill has been interested in electric railroad development in Maine for some time, being a leading promoter of the Augusta, Hallowell & Gardiner Electric Railroad, which within the past year has extended its line to Togus, the location of the Eastern Branch of the National Home for Disabled Soldiers, and it is proposed to still further extend it to connect with the Rockland, Thomaston & Camden Street Railway, in which Governor Hill is likewise interested.

In addition to these roads, he is identified with a large electric railway and lighting property in Indiana, as well as with the Quincy Gas and Electric Company, the Decatur Gas and Electric Company, and the Peoria Gas and Electric Company, all located in Illinois. A syndicate, of which Dr. Hill is a prominent member, has within a few months purchased a controlling interest in the Somerset Steam Railway, operating in Somerset County, Me. He also is a stockholder in various companies, including the Rockland-Rockport Lime Company, of Rockland, Me., and is a leading owner in the Augusta Real Estate Association, in which the titles of several hotels, valuable business blocks and numerous dwelling-houses are vested.

A business man of large interests, he is naturally prominently associated with the banks of the capital city, being President of the Augusta National Bank; a trustee of the Kennebec Savings Bank; and trustee of the Augusta Trust Company.

In religious views, Governor Hill is a Universalist, being a member and generous supporter of that society. He belongs to several social clubs, among them being the Abnaki Club of Augusta, Me.; the St. Louis Club, and the St. Louis Country Club, St. Louis, Mo. He is a Mason, a member of Augusta Lodge and Cushnoc Chapter, Trinity Commandery and Kora Temple Shrine. He also belongs to the Society of Colonial Wars, is Vice-President of the Pepperrell Society, composed of descendants of the famous family by that name; is a member of the Society of Mayflower Descendants and the Maine Historical Society.

May 19, 1880, Dr. Hill was married to Lizzie G. Vickery, daughter of his partner, Hon. P. O. Vickery; their only child, Percy, was born March 16, 1881. He is now a student at Princeton, of the Class of 1905. Mrs. Hill died April 10, 1893. The Doctor was again married in St. Louis, April 25, 1897, to Mrs. Laura Liggett, widow of Hiram S. Liggett and daughter of Hon. Norman Colman, who was Secretary of Agriculture in the first cabinet of President Cleveland.

At present, Governor Hill and family reside in the Blaine Mansion, on State Street, in Augusta, which was for many years the home of the illustrious statesman, Hon. James G. Blaine. The Governor and wife are royal entertainers and have given many receptions and social events in this house, which have been characterized by their elegant appointments. On the same street, a short distance from the Blaine house, upon a lot recently purchased at great expense and occupying nearly a square in the center of the residential portion of the city, Governor Hill is having erected for his occupancy a handsome and commodious residence, of St. Louis brick, with trimmings of Maine granite, which, when completed, will be one of the finest in New England.

Governor Hill has always been deeply interested in the history of his native town and the genealogy of its old families. It is largely due to his encouragement and financial assistance that this book has been written and published.

MOSES A. SAFFORD, ESQ.

It is a pleasure to the writer to present the face of Moses A. Safford, Esq., and to say a few words about the man who has contributed so much assistance to the production of this history of his native town. He was born 28 Sept. 1833, son of Edward

MOSES A. SAFFORD, ESQ.

D. and Mary R. (Lewis) Safford and grandson of Rev. Moses Safford, founder and pastor of the First Christian Church in Kittery.

He received his education in the public schools of Kittery and at the Institute located at New Hampton, N. H. After finishing his course of study there he read law with Stillman B. Allen of Kittery and was admitted to the bar in 1861. On the breaking out of the Civil War he laid aside the work of his profession for a while in order to answer the call of the government for men and, 27 Nov. 1861, entered the United States naval service. Receiving his discharge in 1865, he returned to the practice of law.

He was Registrar of Probate from 1877 to 1885 and has filled many offices of public trust, having served his town as selectman, town agent and superintendent of schools. As chairman of the Building Committee of the Rice Public Library he devoted four years in the effort to obtain a building worthy of the donor of the fund and suited to the needs of the people. This work he justly regards as one of the most important and useful services that he has rendered to his fellow-citizens.

Mr. Safford has always shown a deep interest in local and colonial history and has contributed several important articles to the Proceedings of the Maine Historical Society, of which he is a member. In the historical traditions of Kittery and vicinity he is an authority, and my walks and talks with him have been delightful and instructive.

Mr. Safford is a member of Naval Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and commander of Edward G. Parker Post of the Grand Army of the Republic. As a gentleman of culture and a friend to every good cause he is all the time exercising a quiet influence to uplift his community in education and good morals. For his family see genealogical notes.

HON. HORACE MITCHELL.

Horace Mitchell was born in Kittery, 3 March 1857, son of Reuben and Hannah (Sayward) Mitchell. His ancestors were among the first settlers of the town, and the family name is widely known throughout New England. He received his education in the public schools of Kittery and in New Hampton Literary Institute and Business College. He then engaged in teaching and taught thirty-four terms, thirty-three of them being in Kittery and one in York. Having served as clerk in the Marshall House at York, and in the Wentworth at Newcastle, his attention was turned to the hotel business. For five summers he conducted the Pocahontas on Gerrish Island, and in 1890 he erected the Champernowne at Warehouse Point. See page 58.

HON. HORACE MITCHELL.

Mr. Mitchell has always been a Republican in politics and an able leader of the party in his district. He represented Kittery in the House in 1891, and Kittery and Eliot in 1893. He was nominated for State senator by acclamation in 1895 and was elected, serving two years. In 1896 the Governor of Maine appointed him a commissioner to examine the State Treasurer's accounts and in 1897 he served as chairman of the same commission. He was Postmaster at the Point during President Harrison's administration and has held the same office since 1897. He has been president of the school board two years and superintendent of schools in 1898-9. In Masonry he has always been interested, being a member of Naval Lodge, Kittery, of Unity Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, South Berwick, and of Bradford Commandery of Biddeford. At present he is Grand Senior Deacon of the Grand Lodge of Maine, Past Master of the Naval Lodge, Past Grand of Riverside Lodge. He is Past Patriarch of Dirigo Encampment, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; Past Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias; and the first Grand Commander and Grand Keeper of the Records of the Golden Cross of the State of Maine. All these offices do not prevent him from doing a great amount of business and taking an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of his native town. He purchased and succeeded to the business of Frank E. Rowell, attorney, in 1901. For family see genealogy of the Mitchells on another page.

GENEALOGICAL NOTES.

The aim has been to give the genealogy of the old families down to a date where those now living can by aid of private records easily connect their lineage. To this end the first four or five generations seemed to be necessary. In cases where genealogies of certain families have been published I have given a few generations only, with corrections and additions that may be of service. In many cases I have been assisted by persons who have devoted years of study to their family history. Some such families have been traced down to the present time. In most cases I have not tried to trace branches of families that removed out of the limits of old Kittery, but have often told where such branches lived and referred to other authorities for further information. For sake of clearness it has been thought necessary to introduce something of the genealogy of families living in York and Dover. Had space permitted, I would like to have given citations from deeds and authority for every statement. This has been done in some instances where the reader might otherwise have been inclined to question my statements. I have not made positive assertions without evidence satisfactory to myself and have often followed a statement with a question mark, although such statement is probably correct. It is quite certain that genealogists of special families will discover some errors. I have carefully compared the dates of published genealogies with the town and church records and this has sometimes caused a disagreement. It has been an effort to cease investigation and to publish an incomplete work: but what genealogy was ever completed?

In the preparation of these notes the manuscripts of Hon. Mark Dennett and of William Fogg have been thoroughly considered and compared with the original town records. This comparison has led to a change of some dates and combinations. Mr. Fogg's notes were of great value, though made before the publication of Maine Wills and York Deeds. Because of such recent helps I have been obliged sometimes to differ from Mr. Fogg's conclusions, especially in treatment of the earliest generations. Mr. Fogg's notes as published in "Old Eliot" contain some typographical errors that are not found in the original, especially in dates and surnames. Much has been contributed to my notes from the private records of many families.

Not only the town and church records of old Kittery have been minutely studied, but also the records of Portsmouth, Newcastle, Dover, York, and Wells have been consulted, and the manuscript collections of Mr. Marshall of York have been utilized. The published records and histories of all towns in Maine and New Hampshire and of many Massachusetts towns have been searched, and weeks of research have been spent at Alfred, Me., Concord, Exeter, and Dover, N. H., Salem and Boston, Mass. It is hoped that many readers will be helped and encouraged to trace out more fully the genealogy of their families. Every American should know his lineage in as many lines as possible as far back, at least, as to the first emigrants. To know well one's self one must know all one's relations.

ABBOT.

Richard Abbot had grants in Kittery in 1656 and 1673. A daughter married John Holmes.

Walter Abbot, vintner, was of Exeter, N. H., in 1640 and soon after removed to Portsmouth. His will was made 15 May 1667. His widow, Sarah, aged 64 in 1681, married Henry Sherburn. His children were Peter, Thomas, William, Walter, John, Sarah who married Thomas Wills, Mary, who married Leonard Drowne, and Elizabeth. Of these John made his will 19 March 1721-2 and named wife, Mary, and children, John, James (deceased leaving sons Michael, Mark and Lambeth), William Laud, Walter, Reuben, Sarah Pickering, Ruth Spriggs and Anna Bratten.

Thomas, son of Walter Abbot, was born in 1643 according to one deposition and in 1635 according to another. He married before 1668 Elizabeth, dau. of John and Julian Green. The Berwick records say he die 18 March 1712-3. He was selectman several times and is called ensign in 1688. Children were:

AMEE.

This name is of French origin, Amie, and the first one who bore it in Kittery is sometimes called Friend in old records. John Amee had wife, Sarah, perhaps dau. of Joseph Gunnison. See Gunnison.

JOHN b. 11 July 1695; died young.

JOHN b. 27 Dec. 1699; m. Sarah Deering? See Deering.

LAWRENCE b. 28 Feb. 1702; pub. to Rachel Dolbe 16 Dec. 1724.

ELIZABETH perhaps, m. Thomas Pillar 5 Jan. 1731.

SOPHUS, pub. to Mchitable Hodsdon 20 March 1740.

The records of this family, that is still represented in Kittery, are insufficient to construct a connected genealogy. Jacob Amee m. Martha Cluff 21 Dec. 1752. John, Jacob, and Edward Amee were bapt. 12 Oct. 1735.

ANDREWS.

John Andrews, born in 1600 as shown by a deposition, was at Kittery in 1640 and signed the submission of 1652. He died in 1671, and his widow, Joan, married, 1672, Philip Atwell. Andrews' children were:

JOHN m. Margaret ———.
 SARAH m. Christopher Mitchell.
 JOANNA mentioned in 1653.
 ANN m. John Billing.
 ELIZABETH m. Thomas Mannerling.

John Andrews, Jr., born in 1652, had wife, Margaret. He and his mother sold land at Braveboat Harbor in 1688. In 1694 administration was granted to Robert Andrews on the estate of his father, John Andrews late of Kittery.

Robert Andrews had wife, Susannah, who administered his estate in 1719. They had children:

SARAH m. John Varrel. Ch., John, Solomon, Samuel, and Hannah, who m. Paul Williams, all named in a deed in 1766. York Deeds, XII 35.

WILLIAM pub. to Margery Walker 21 Nov. 1737. Ch., Henry and William, named in same deed.

MARY m. William Trickey of York before 5 March 1739.

Edward Andrews sold land at Thompson's Point in 1707. He was of Berwick in 1720. He married, about 1709, Sarah, dau. of Arthur and Eleanor (Bonython) Churchwell, granddaughter of John Bonython of Saco.

James Andrews of Casco Bay had sons Elisha and James See Me, Hist. Coll. Vol. VI, p. 340. It was probably this Elisha who married Rebecca Weymouth, 23 May 1712. The name appears also as Andros. Children were:

SARAH b. 24 Jan. 1712-3.

ELIZABETH b. 24 August 1715.

ELISHA bapt. with the two above 2 March 1719-20; m. 16 Feb. 1740-1 Mary Butland of Wells.

JOSHUA bapt. 7 August 1720; m. Olive Emery.

TABITHA bapt. May 1723.

JOHN bapt. 5 June 1726; died young.

MARY bapt. 4 Aug. 1728.

JOHN bapt. 21 March 1730-31; m. Miriam Emery 27 Dec. 1748.

BALL.

John Ball had a grant at Agamenticus in 1649 and was juryman the same year.

Peter Ball is mentioned in Portsmouth in 1667. A deposition in 1672 gives his age as 27. It was probably Peter Ball, Jr., who married, 17 Dec. 1712, in Portsmouth, though his wife's name does not appear in the record. His will is dated 4 May 1752, and names wife Mary, (called also Amy in the will), and children, Peter, Samuel, Susanna Shores (she married Peter Shores 12 March 1737), Margaret and Sarah.

John Ball, perhaps son of the John Ball named above, bought land on the west side of Spruce Creek in 1667. Depositions in 1716 gave his age as about 80 and his wife, Joanna's, as about 70 (York Deeds, X. 34). He sent a petition to Governor Andros in about 1687, saying that he had served in the Indian wars without recompense and mentioning his "numerous family." In 1702 John Ball administered the estate of his father's brother, Richard Ball, fisherman. He and wife, Joanna, sold their homestead to son-in-law, Francis Pettegrew, for maintenance the rest of their lives, 17 June 1717. The following seem to have been their children:

JOHN, had lot laid out in 1698; m. Anne Allen 9 Dec. 1717.

MARY m. Joseph Crocket, Jr., 12 Oct. 1700.

WILLIAM. His widow, Mary, administered his estate in 1695.

JOANNA m. Benjamin Hutchins.

Anne Ball owned the covenant and was bapt. 5 Oct. 1718. This was, doubtless, the wife of John Ball, Jr. The same day were bapt. children, Anne and Mary, and Martha Ball was bapt. 17 March 1722.

Thomas and William Ball, fishermen, sold land in Kittery in 1721. Thomas had a grant of 30 acres in 1703.

Mercy Ball owned the covenant 10 Aug. 1718, and the same day were bapt. William and Mary Ball, infants.

Hannah Ball owned the covenant and was bapt. 28 Dec. 1735, and the same day were bapt. Christian, Rebecca and Dorothy Ball.

The marriage intentions of William Ball and Mrs. Mary Bragdon were published 14 May 1737, and a son William was bapt. 4 Oct. 1741. 12 July 1769, administration of estate of William Ball was granted to his widow Mary.

29 Oct. 1735, Joshua Hutchins and Mary Ball.

13 Nov. 1736, Furber Allen and Mary Ball.

28 Jan. 1737, Richard Fennick [Phoenix] and Dorothy Ball.

8 Dec. 1722, Peter Bragg of Isles of Shoals, and Anne Ball.

M. in Portsmouth 3 May 1720, Edward Hopkins of Appledore in Devonshire, and Joanna Ball of Berwick.

BARTER.

Henry Barter, a Welshman, is said to have come over in the same vessel with William Pepperrell, about 1675. He married Sarah, dau. of Ephraim Crocket and lived at the east end of Crocket's Neck. He died in 1747 and named wife, Jean, in his will. Children recorded were:

SARAH b. 26 March 1693; m. 3 May 1716 James Griddle (or Grindle).

MARTHA m. Samuel Jones. Pub. 8 Feb. 1729.

Henry Barter, Jr., married, 1 July 1722, Mary, dau. of Capt. John and Jane (Cole-Littlefield) Heard. Will, 1765-1779, names grandchildren, Nathaniel and Sarah. Children were:

MARY bapt. 18 Oct. 1724; pub. to Samuel Racklief 26 Nov. 1743.

JOHN bapt. 1 Oct. 1727; named in will.

JANE bapt. 10 Aug. 1729; pub. to William Moore 1 Feb. 1745.

SARAH bapt. 11 July 1730; m. Samuel Hutchings.

HENRY bapt. 11 Nov. 1733; not named in will.

PELATIAH bapt. 23 Aug. 1741.

John Barter married Deborah Keen 15 Dec. 1720. She married (2) Jacob Remick 9 April 1752. It may have been his son, John Barter, who married Ann Adams 1 Jan. 1737-8, and probably had sons John and Mark, who were both soldiers in the Revolutionary Army.

BARTLETT.

The ancestors of the Bartletts came from Normandy with William the Conqueror and fought at the battle of Hastings. Stopham, Eng., is the ancestral seat of the family. Richard Bartlett came to America about 1635 and settled in Newbury, Mass. He died there 25 May 1647. He was a shoemaker.

Richard, his son, married Abigail ——— and died in 1698, aged 77, leaving six children, of whom

John Bartlett, a tanner, was born 22 June 1655. He married Margaret Rust 29 Oct. 1680 and died 24 May 1736. Of his ten children

Nathan Bartlett was born 23 Dec. 1691 and removed from Newbury to Kittery in 1713. He also was a tanner. He married, 10 March 1714-5, Shuah, dau. of Capt. John and Phebe (Littlefield) Heard. He died in 1775.

13. Sylvester Bartlett, born 4 July 1822, married, 30 Dec. 1855, Clementine, dau. of John and Betsey (Ferguson) Raitt. He was educated in the public schools and taught for a time. After his marriage he was engaged for several years with his brother James in the meat business and was interested in shipping. In 1867 he moved to the house built for his brother Justin, who had died the year before. This is on the site of the old Heard house and quite near the old Bartlett homestead. The Heard family and several generations of Bartletts are buried in the field south of the house. Mr. Bartlett was devoted to his home and to the time of his death continued making the most modern improvements upon his homestead.

He united with the Methodist Episcopal Church in early manhood and generously contributed to its support. His religious views were broad and not confined by any creed. Hospitable and social by nature he delighted to entertain his friends in his home, and young and old always found there a welcome. Possessed of an intellect naturally keen and strong and having a most retentive memory, he continually added to his store of knowledge by wide reading and close observation. Many of a younger generation have been entertained by him with recitals from prose and poetry learned in his youth. He always read with avidity the doings of the world at large and delighted to inform himself upon the current topics of the day.

He was elected Representative from Eliot to the Maine Legislature of 1895-6 and was always a staunch Republican. He died after a short illness 24 April 1901. Children were:

BLACK.

Daniel and Josiah Black were settled in York before 1700, and their families are there recorded. William Black's will was probated 1 Jan. 1727-8. It names wife Sarah and sons William and Joshua. William then had children William and Elizabeth, and soon after he and his family moved to Bailey's Island, Harpswell, Me.

Joshua, son of William Black, made his will in 1753, which was probated 6 April 1756. His wife Mary is not named. Descendants are still living in Kittery, and some have changed their name to Blake. Children recorded were:

- BENJAMIN b. 19 April 1719. Not named in will.

BODGE.

Henry Bodge and wife Elizabeth sold six acres to Nicholas Weeks 16 Dec. 1772. This implies that he had been living some time in Kittery. He had a grant of ten acres at a place called "Pudding Hole" 12 June 1673, and a grant of twenty acres in 1682. The last was "by the brook that runs into Spruce Creek," bounded by land of Joseph Curtis. He died in 1696, leaving widow Rebecca. There are many descendants throughout New England. Children:

HENRY, of Charlestown, Mass.

BENJAMIN m. Sarah ———. Ch. bapt. in Durham, N. H.

EDWARD, of Kittery in 1728.

PRISCILLA m. James Bradeen about 1702.

ELIZABETH, perhaps, who witnessed a deed in 1700.

Anthony Brackett was a settler in Portsmouth, N. H., before 1640, and died in 1696. He had children Anthony, Thomas, John, Eleanor, Jane and perhaps others.

Thomas, son of Anthony Brackett, Sen., was born about 1640 and settled in Falmouth, Me., about 1662. He married Mary Mitton, dau. of Michael and Elizabeth Mitton and granddaughter of George Cleeves, the first settler in Falmouth. He was killed by Indians 11 Aug. 1676, and his wife and children were carried into captivity, where she died within a year. Her children returned to Portsmouth. They were:

JOSHUA b. 1671; m. Mary Weeks and settled in Greenland, N. H.

BRAWN.

John Brawn of York married a daughter of William Dixon. John Brawn, Jr., married Hannah Langley and lived for a short time at Kittery Point.

Michael Brawn had a grant in Dover in 1655 and was taxed at Bloody Point 1662-72. Had a son, Michael, born in 1643.

George Brawn of Bloody Point, doubtless son of Michael, married (1) Mary ———, (2) 1 April 1700, Widow Sarah Saunders. She was daughter of Peter Wittum and married William Saunders Dec. 1687. In 1702 Brawn exchanged land in Newington with John Hoyt for fifty acres north of Sturgeon Creek. Children:

SARAH bapt. 12 Nov. 1727; m. William Childs.

ROBERT bapt. 12 Nov. 1727.

BRAY.

John Bray with wife Joan came from Plymouth, Eng. He was a shipbuilder at Kittery Point and died 1689-90. Some genealogists have confused him with another John Bray of York, and have assigned to him two or three wives. There is no proof of more than one. Administration was granted, 11 Jan. 1693-4, to Wm. Pepperrell, Joan Deering and Mary Bray on estate of Joan Bray, deceased. Children were:

JOHN. d. s. p.

JOAN m. Clement Deering 1678.

BRIAR.

Richard Bryer of Newbury married, 21 Dec. 1665, Eleanor Wright and had a son Richard, born 19 Aug. 1667. It may have been the latter who married Mary, dau. of Robert and Mary (Hoel) Cutt (Y. D. VI. 153). Lieut. Richard Bryer was chosen Deputy to General Court in 1702. The Cutts Genealogy errs in assigning the family of William Bryer to Richard.

William Briar, or Bryer, possibly son of Richard by a former marriage, perhaps a brother, married, about 1702, Sarah Eastman. Jan. 6, 1712-13, he was appointed administrator of the estate of his father-in-law, Robert Eastman. He died 5 May 1718. Widow probably married, 19 Oct. 1722, Benjamin Hammons. Children of William Briar were:

DEERING.

George Deering came from England about 1635 and settled at Black Point, Scarborough, Maine. He died about 1645, and his widow married Jonas Bailey. Deering was a planter and shipwright. The name is also frequently written Dearing.

His son, Roger, moved to Kittery before 1663, signed a petition there in 1673 and died 26 June 1676. His widow Joan married William Crafts. She was a widow again in 1696 and died about 1713. Feb. 23, 1691, administration was granted to "William Crafts and his wife on the estate of John Deering deceased, sone of the said Crafts ~~and~~ his wife." So say Probate Records at Alfred, Me. Jan. 20, 1727-8, Mary Deering, aged about 78, deposed that "thirty-three years past Joan Crafts lived in the house where John Hix and his mother, Sarah Hix, now live, and that about fourteen years past the said Crafts died in Possession of said house, reputed to be the estate of Joseph Deering." William Crafts' license to keep an ordinary was renewed May 26, 1785, and after his death Joan Crafts continued in the business of an inn-keeper. Her inn was "near the meeting house." The children of Roger Deering were:

1. ROGER m. Mary ———.

The following sketch is condensed from the Braintree Observer of Nov. 1900.

T. Haven Dearing, M.D., a well known and popular physician of Braintree, received his early education in the common schools of Kittery, in different New England academies, and continued it under special tutors and in special college courses. He taught school for some years in Maine and New Hampshire. He began the study of medicine and subsequently studied at the best colleges of New York, Philadelphia and Boston, and visited the principal hospitals of Europe.

He first settled in Boston, was professor of surgery and dermatology in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, for nearly six years was dean of the college, and was assistant surgeon of a Boston regiment. In the late war he was surgeon in one of the largest hospitals of Washington. Was pension examiner, and is examiner for many life insurance companies.

Since May, 1863, Dr. Dearing has been a resident physician of Braintree, and to-day controls a large local practice, with a firmly established reputation as physician and surgeon. He is president of the South Norfolk Medical Society, is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, the American Medical Association, vice-president of the Massachusetts Medical Society, and member of the Harvard Medical Alumni Association.

While a resident of Boston he was placed upon the school board of that city, has since been for many years a member of the

THOMAS HAVEN DEARING, M.D.

Braintree board and for five years its chairman. In 1889 he was elected Representative to the House. He has always been associated with the Republican party.

Dr. Dearing is a member of the First Congregational Church. He is well known in musical circles, is a member of the Union Choral Society of Braintree and was its president for three years, and is also identified with the Stoughton Musical Society. He was for many years the chorister of the Congregational Church, he is identified with the Masonic order and with the Knights of

JOHN WENTWORTH DEERING.

Honor, a member of the Boston and Braintree Pine Tree Clubs, and president of the latter organization. He is at the present time vice-president of the Massachusetts society of that name and enjoys a very wide and extended acquaintance.

He has always been a strong advocate of temperance and upon appropriate occasions has delivered lectures on this subject, thus gaining added reputation in the vicinity.

John Wentworth Deering, son of Roger and Lucinda (Boston) Deering, left Kittery when about ten years of age and went to New York City, where he had an active and successful business career. In company with Thomas C. Smith he carried on the business of a cotton merchant under the firm name of John W. Deering and Company. The firm was also interested in shipping, and was rated at half a million of dollars. Mr. Deering retired from active business about twenty-five years ago and has traveled extensively in Europe. He now resides in Boston.

Charles Sumner Deering, brother to the two just mentioned, left Kittery at an early age and was educated in public and private schools of Boston. He learned the trade of a jeweler and watch-maker, and for more than twenty-five years has carried on extensive business in Boston and Everett, Mass. He is a member of the Baptist Church and an active worker in Sunday School and in the Young Men's Christian Association. His residence is now Everett, Mass. He married (1) Aug. 1867, Allie Graves, who died without issue Feb. 1869. He married (2), in 1870, Miss Mary Redford, daughter of James and Mary Ann (Gibson) Redford, who were born in England. She was born in Terryville, Conn., 24 May 1844. Their children are Wayland Anderson b. 24 March 1872, d. 17 July 1872; May Annie b. 17 Aug. 1873; Charles Sumner b. 10 Nov. 1876, m. Charlotte Trowbridge of Newark, N. J., 25 Sept. 1901; Henry Herbert b. 7 April 1878.

DENNET OR DENNETT.

The Dennet family is of Norman origin, and Hugh D'Anet is said to have come into England with William the Conqueror. There are many of the name Dennet in England who can trace their lineage back six centuries or more.

Two brothers, John and Alexander Dennet, came from England to Portsmouth between 1660 and 1670. John Dennet died 5 May 1709, aged 63, and was buried at the Point of Graves. He was a carpenter. Wife's name was Amy. Children:

DOWNING.

Dennis Downing, blacksmith, signed the submission to Massachusetts in 1652. He was living in 1690. Name of wife unknown. Children:

DENNIS, probably killed by Indians 4 July 1697. See page 168.

JOSHUA. See below.

John Downing was before court in 1653 for disobedience to his father. John Downing married, a little before 27 May 1684, Susanna, dau. of John Miller of Arundel. April 18, 1720, Benjamin Miller, Jeremiah Miller, Daniel Quick and Hannah, his wife, quitclaim to John Downing, senior, of Newington, a piece of land at Cape Porpoise "in consideration of the charges and expense in maintaining and keeping their honored father John Miller late of Cape Porpus alias Arundel." See York Deeds XII. 124. Sept. 10, 1725, John Downing of Newington and wife Susanna sold to son Benjamin land at Cape Porpoise. Mention is made in the deed of another son John. The Hist. of Kennelbunkport says that this John Downing died in 1727, aged 67.

John Downing married Elizabeth, dau. of Nicholas and Mary (Bickford) Harrison of Newington, N. H. See Landmarks of Ancient Dover, page 158. He died 16 Sept. 1744, aged 85; born, therefore, in 1659. Wife Elizabeth survived him. Elizabeth

Downing, aged 88, deposed, 8 Aug. 1738, that she lived in Scarborough 64 years ago, i. e. in 1674. She was born in 1650 and could not have been mother of the John Downing who married Susanna Miller.

Dennis Downing names in a deed three daughters of his son John, viz., Anne, Alice and Joanna.

The best solution I can suggest is that John, son of Dennis Downing married (1) ——— and had sons Benjamin and John, born about 1659; (2) Susanna dau. of John Miller and died in 1727, aged 87 rather than 67. John, Jr., married Elizabeth Harrison and had children Harrison, John, and Benjamin. This family became very numerous in Newington, N. H., and in Kennebunk, Me.

Joshua Downing was born in 1644, as shown by a deposition. He married (1) about 1675, Patience, dau. of Philip and Patience Hatch, (2) Rebecca, widow of Joseph Trickey and dau. of William and Rebecca (Mackworth) Rogers. See Coll. of Me. Hist. Society, I, 208. He died in 1717, leaving widow Rebecca and children:

JOSHUA m. Sarah Hatch.

ELIZABETH m. about 1698, Jonathan Woodman of Oyster River; d. 17 April 1720, aged 60 years lacking five days. He died in 1750, aged 85.

ALICE m. Richard Downing of Dover, N. H., 24 April 1709.

Joshua Downing 2d married, 28 April 1709, Sarah, dau. of Capt. John and Sarah Hatch of Portsmouth. He was killed by Indians at Wells 18 Dec. 1712. Widow married, 14 Sept. 1713, James Chadbourne 2d. Children of Downing:

PATIENCE b. 9 Feb. 1709-10; m. James Ferguson in 1729.

SARAH b. 8 Jan. 1711-12; d. Oct. 1718.

DROWNE.

Leonard Drowne, born 1646, came from the west coast of England. He married Elizabeth, dau. of Walter Abbot of Portsmouth, N. H. He was a shipwright and lived a little north of Sturgeon Creek. Moved to Boston, where he married, (2) 4 Nov. 1707, Mary Caley. He died 31 Oct. 1729. The Indian War drove him from Kittery about 1692. Savage calls him one of the founders of the first Baptist Church in Maine, in 1682. First wife died in 1704. Children were:

SAMUEL b. 7 March 1676-7; m. 3 Feb. 1698 Elizabeth, dau. of John and Sarah (Hodsdon) Morrell; d. 25 Jan. 1720-21, as his head stone on the old Morrell homestead shows. Children recorded in Boston, Elizabeth b. 20 April 1700, m. 12 March 1720-21 James Wittum in Kittery; Samuel b. 5 July 1704, and had ch., Elizabeth and Samuel, bapt. in Dover 29 May 1736; Solomon b. 26 March 1706; Thomas b. 23 Dec. 1708.

SOLOMON b. 23 Jan. 1681; d. 1730; m. 8 Nov. 1705 ——— and had 11 ch.

SHEN m. 18 Sept. 1712 Katherine Clark in Boston.

SIMEON m. 7 Oct. 1725 Mary Everenden in Boston.

SUSANNA m. John Johnson at Boston.

MARY m. James Kettle of Charlestown 24 April 1712; d. 24 Jan. 1732, aged 39.

ELIZABETH b. 2 Nov. 1699 in Boston.

ELIOT.

Hon. Robert Eliot was born in 1643 and is first mentioned 13 Jan. 1660. In 1662 he was appointed Constable for Strawberry Bank. He lived in Portsmouth, now Newcastle, N. H., Scarborough, Me., and on Gerrish's Island in his last days. Was selectman in Portsmouth in 1679 and 1680, and in Scarborough in 1682 and town's Deputy to General Court in 1685. In 1692 he was appointed one of the Councillors of New Hampshire and held that office with the exception of one year till 1715. Timothy Gerrish recorded in his family Bible: "My father-in-law, Robert Eliot, Dyed in 82 year of his age in March 24th 1724."

A court record, dated 29 May 1683, speaks of "Robert Eliot, who married the relict and administratrix of Ric. Young of Cape Porpus." He and wife Margery deeded land, 13 June 1687, to son-in-law, Emanuel Davis, and Mary his wife. This Mary was probably daughter of Richard and Margery (Batson) Young. In a Bill of Sale, dated 7 June 1692, Robert Eliot names "my wife whose maiden name was Margery Batson." She was daughter of Stephen Batson of Cape Porpoise, whose will names daughter Margery Young.

Robert Eliot and wife Sarah signed a deed 10 May 1702 and again in 1707. This wife was Sarah, daughter of Hon. Nathaniel Fryer of Newcastle, N. H., and was born in Boston 20 July 1656.

It is evident that there were no children by the last marriage, neither could all of his children have been born of Margery. There was an earlier marriage, and his will gives the clue as to who his first wife was. It names as one of the executors "my loving Broth^r Will^m Pepperrell Sen^r." His first wife, then, was a sister of Col. William Pepperrell. Children were:

HUMPHREY m. about 1685, Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Cutt and moved to South Carolina. No positive proof has been found that Humphrey was the son of Robert Eliot, but circumstantial evidence points to that conclusion.

NATHANIEL, witness of deeds in 1698. Cf. p. 72.

SARAH b. 1 Oct. 1687; m. Col. Timothy Gerrish 14 Nov. 1706.

JANE b. 1684; m. (1) 1707 Andrew Pepperrell, (2) 25 Nov. 1714, Lieut. Charles Frost.

ABIGAIL m. Capt. Daniel Greenough of Newcastle, N. H., 16 Dec. 1708.

These four daughters are the only children named in his will, 1718. There may have been an earlier daughter Sarah, who witnessed a deed in 1685 and probably died soon after. See Coll. of N. H. Hist. Society Vol. VIII. p. 356, and Coll. of Me. Hist. Society, Vol. III. p. 210.

HEZEKIAH bapt. 16 Oct. 1715.

EMERY.

Anthony Emery, second son of John and Agnes Emery, was born in Romsey, Hants, Eng., married Frances ——— and came to America in the ship "James," landing in Boston 3 June 1635. He lived in Newbury, Mass., till 1640, then in Dover, N. H., till 1649, when he settled in Kittery. He was often jurymen and selectman. In 1660 he was fined for entertaining Quakers and disfranchised. This led him to remove to Portsmouth, R. I., where he was living in 1680. His children were James, another son whose name is unknown, and Rebecca.

1. James Emery, son of Anthony, was born in England about 1630. He married (1) Elizabeth ———, who died after 1687; (2) 28 Dec. 1695 Mrs. Elizabeth (Newcomb) Pidge, widow of John Pidge of Dedham, Mass. FOLLET.

John Follet signed the Dover combination in 1640. William Follet was a tax-payer at Oyster River in 1659 and was there as early as 1649. He married, 12 July 1672, Elizabeth, widow of William Drew. She was born in 1628, as per dep. This was probably his second marriage. His daughter Hannah married Godfrey Brooking.

Elizabeth, widow of a William Follet, is named, 2 Oct. 1705, with sons Nicholas and Benjamin. The last was then eight years old and had his brother Nicholas as guardian.

Capt. Nicholas Follet was Deputy to the convention of 1689. He left widow Abigail, who married Richard Nason. His children were Nicholas and Sarah, who married John Meader of Dover and had a child born in 1681.

Nicholas Follet 2d married Hannah ——— and lived in Dover and Portsmouth. Was a sea captain and made his will 29 April 1700. Names wife Hannah and children Philip, Caleb and unnamed children under age. A Philip Follet was of Dover in 1671-5 and perhaps was the same who was fined in Kittery in 1698.

Nicholas Follet, 3d, tailor, of Portsmouth, was born 5 Nov. 1677 and married, 12 Sept. 1700, Mary Hull of Portsmouth. He died 29 Aug. 1722. He is mentioned, 36 May 1711, as "heir of all of estate of William Follet of Oyster River." In a deed, 1710, he mentions cousin John Follet of Barbadoes.

John Follet married in Boston, 14 March 1700, Sarah "Gullison," doubtless daughter of Elihu Gunnison of Kittery. He is called a butcher in a deed. Nov. 8, 1719, he "owened the covenant and was baptized at his house being sick." Children:

FROST.

There were three distinct families named Frost in old Kittery, and they have been somewhat confused by genealogists. The family of the first Nicholas Frost is here considered. An old family Bible is said to contain the following record:

"JOHN FROST, Borne Nov'br ye 17th 1558 near Cornbre Hill, Cornwall.
 ANNA HAMBEN, Borne Oct'r ye 8th. 1565 near Caer Bran, Cornwall.
 JOHN and ANNA, Marride, May ye 10th 1582.

THEIR CHILDREN.

JOHN, Borne July ye 15th. 1583, in Tiverton.
 I. NICHOLAS, Borne Aprill ye 25th. 1585, Tiverton.

FROST. ✓

In 1662 Nicholas Frost came from Bristol, Eng., and lived as an apprentice with Francis Littlefield, Senior, of Wells. He took the oath of fidelity in 1669. His wife was Mary, sister to Edward Small. She deposed, 16 June 1677, that she was then twenty-one years of age or thereabouts. This Nicholas Frost is called the "beaver trader." His name appears several times in the Court Records. He and wife Mary sold, in 1674, land on both sides of Salmon Falls Brook and bought land in what is now upper Eliot. In a letter of Ichabod Plaisted to Capt. John Hill it is said that "Nicholas Frost's wife and two children" were carried away by Indians 8 June 1693. Nicholas himself was captured about the same time and was reported as "drowned" in 1698. At this last date his wife was licensed to keep a public house of entertainment. In 1707 she was made administratrix of her husband Nicholas Frost's estate, "late of Kittery, deceased," and Samuel Small was one of the sureties. Administration was granted, 26 Nov. 1712, to "Bartholomew Frost, son of Nicholas Frost, late of Kittery, yeoman, deceased." It is evident that Mary had died. It is also evident from York Deeds, Book VIII., Fol. 123-4, that Nicholas Frost had six children living in 1715. That Nicholas and Mary were his children is proved beyond a question by a court record. Children:

NICHOLAS m. after 1700, Dorothy Mendum.

MARY, mentioned in 1691; prob. died young.

BARTHOLOMEW, witnessed a deed in 1708. He and wife Hannah sold land in 1718. He died about 1723, and his widow m. 12 Jan. 1723-4. David

Clark. Children: Sarah m. prob. Samuel Dennett, 14 Oct. 1746. York Deeds, XXXVI 182. Mercy m. John Lord, tertius, of Berwick. Pub. 2 Dec. 1738. York Deeds, XXXIX. 211. Mary m. prob. John Jones of Scarborough 16 Feb. 1761. York Deeds, XXXIX. 63.

ELEANOR m. 28 Feb. 1711-12, Daniel, son of William Sayer of Wells. Ch., John b. 2 March 1712-3; Mary b. 13 July 1714; David b. 18 Dec. 1715; Jonathan b. 6 April 1716 d. March 1721; Sarah b. 26 July 1719; and Stephen b. 26 Feb. 1721.

MARGARET m. 18 Oct. 1708. William Merryfield.

KATHARINE m. Israel Young.

ELIZABETH m. 4 March 1708-9. John Richardson.

Nicholas, son of Nicholas and Mary (Small) Frost, married Dorothy, dau. of Jonathan and Mary Mendum. He was a mariner. Bought a house in Portsmouth, 10 Dec. 1707. He and wife Dorothy were bapt. in Portsmouth 19 Sept. 1708. She died not earlier than June 1713, and he married, 3 Dec. 1714, Sarah Huntress. He died about 1718, and his widow married Thomas Darling, who soon removed to that part of Dover, N. H., which is now Lee. Nicholas Frost left two children:

NATHANIEL bapt. 15 April 1711: m. Elizabeth ———. Ch., Nicholas, Nathaniel, and Winthrop. The last m. Sarah Tuttle and had five children.

FROST.

George Frost lived at Winter Harbor, Saco, and was appraiser of the estate of Richard Williams in 1635. He served on the grand jury in 1640. Nothing more is known of him, but the fact that several Frosts appear in his vicinity a generation later, that can not be traced to any other ancestor, warrants the belief that he was the father of the following. Goody Frost was assigned to a pew in the church at Winter Harbor next to the pew of Goody Wakefield, 22 Sept. 1666.

REBECCA m. Simon, son of Robert Booth of Saco, who was born in 1641. They removed to Enfield, Conn., and she d. in 1668.

1. JOHN m. Rose ———.

2. WILLIAM m. Mary Wakefield.

1. John Frost of York, fisherman, received grants of land in 1663 and 1669. He was killed by Indians. His estate was divided 14 Nov. 1678, between widow Rose, sons John and Philip, and daughter Annis, wife of Alexander Maxwell. Administration granted to John and Philip on estate of their father, 2 July 1677.

JOHN m. 1674, Sarah daughter of Roger Kelly of the Isles of Shoals. (N. H. Ct. Rec. III. 376.) He died in 1718 at Star Island, leaving widow Sarah, and children: John, presented at Court in 1707 for "abusing his grandfather Roger Kelly." John Frost of Wells, mariner, and wife Abigail sold house and an acre of land in Wells in 1757. Samuel m. Ann, dau. of Edward Cate. They lived in Newcastle in 1723. Feb. 10. 1755, Jane Frost of Portsmouth sold to Samuel Frost, minor, nine acres, originally a part of the estate of her grandfather, Edward Cate of Portsmouth, deceased. Ithamar, left a daughter and only heir, who m. ANNIS m. Alexander Maxwell before 1678.

2. William Frost witnessed a deed at Winter Harbor in 1667 and bought land in Saco of William Phillips in 1673. It may have been he who had a grant of land on Crooked Lane, in Kittery, in 1658. The Indian War drove him to Salem, Mass., where he was living, 1675-9. William Frost, cordwainer, of Salem, bought land in Wells, Me., in 1679, and had various grants and mill privileges in Wells till 1690. His estate was administered in 1690 by Israel Harden, and William Frost, Jr., was bondsman. Roger Hill wrote to his wife, 7 May 1690, "The Indians have killed Goodman Frost and James Littlefield and carried away Nathaniel Frost and burnt several houses here in Wells." William Frost married Mary, dau. of John and Elizabeth (Littlefield) Wakefield, granddaughter of Edmund and Annis Littlefield. Children were:

WILLIAM m. (1) Rachel — and had a daughter born in Wells 30 Sept. 1695; (2) 5 April 1706, Elizabeth Searle in Salem, Mass.; d. in Salem 23 Sept. 1721. 3. JAMES m. (1) 1 July 1696 Hannah Woodin in Wells. (2) Margaret Goodwin.

3. The last named James Frost can not be classified except as the son of William, though no direct proof has been found. The names of his children indicate such relationship, and such is the tradition of his descendants. He married, 15 May 1707-8, Margaret, dau. of William and Deliverance (Taylor) Goodwin and lived in South Berwick. He was a planter and owner of a mill. Both were members of the Congregational Church. His will, made in 1744, was probated 4 July 1748. Children bapt. at South Berwick.

DOLLY b. 30 Oct. 1799.

FOST, FROST, FORST, FOSS.

In all of the several Frost families the name sometimes appears in court records and deeds as Fost. John Fost was in Dover in 1665 and was a juryman in 1667-9, 1671, and 1688. He married Mary, dau. of William Chadbourne, and she is mentioned in Humphrey Chadbourne's will, 1667. He may have married (2) Sarah Gosse 15 Aug. 1688.

John Fost, perhaps son of the above, made his will 17 Dec. 1699, which was probated 17 April 1700. It names wife Elizabeth and following children:

MARY m. James Warren, Jr., about 1692.

HUMPHREY m. Catharine ———. Widow Catharine Frost sold, 16 Nov. 1761, ten acres granted to her husband in 1734, in Somersworth, N. H. Tate says she d. in Dover, 14 March 1776.

MARY.

ELIZABETH.

SAMUEL, under age.

William Fost, named above, married Margery, dau. of Nathan Lord, about 1692. A William Foss married, 26 April 1703, Sarah, widow of Nathaniel Heard of Dover and had dau. Lydia born 7 Jan. 1705. A Lydia Fost married Peter Grant 24 Feb. 1717, and this is the only Lydia Fost I can find. She was then but a trifle over twelve years of age, yet such a marriage is not impossible. William Fost or Frost is mentioned in Dover (Rollinsford) in 1704, 1716 and 1732. Jan. 15, 1735, John Waldron of Dover, and Mary, his wife, Joseph Conner of Dover, and Sarah, his wife, James Richards of Dover, and Margery, his wife, and Benjamin Frost of Rochester, quit-claim to Benjamin Lord of Berwick all right to estate of Abraham Lord and William Lord of Berwick. York Deeds, XVIII. 185. June 9, 1737, William Frost of Portsmouth, mariner, made a similar quit-claim. The children, then, of William and Margery (Lord) Frost were:

WILLIAM m. Elizabeth Snell of Portsmouth, 1 June 1716. He is called "William floss formerly of Nichawannock, now of Portsmouth."

BENJAMIN m. Ann Hodsdon.

William Frost bought forty acres of James Stackpole in what is now Rollinsford, in 1714, and sold the same to Benjamin Hoeg 2 Oct. 1721. This was perhaps the one who married Elizabeth Snell. He returned from Portsmouth to Dover and, 13 Dec. 1741, William and Elizabeth Frost, his wife, of Dover, sold to Giles Seward half of a house with small piece of land in Portsmouth. In these deeds the name is written fforst and Frost. The estate of William Frost¹ of Dover was appraised 29 June 1764, and William Frost was administrator. He is called Frost in the inventory and Foss in the administration.

It was, doubtless, the last named William Frost who married Mary, widow of Benjamin Hanson. June 18, 1739, William Forst and wife Mary sold to Amos Main land in Rochester, which was granted to William Forst, Benjamin Först and Samuel Alley. Children:

MARY b. 24 June 1728; m. Oct. 1751, Samuel Ricker of Somersworth?
CHADBOURNE b. 26 March 1731.
DANIEL bapt. 20 Aug. 1733.
LYDIA bapt. 14 May 1738.

Benjamin Forst married in Newington, 2 Feb. 1735, Ann Hodgdon. Lived at Rochester, N. H. Will, 22 March 1775-20 June 1787. Children: all named in will:

MARY bapt. 13 Jan. 1736.
DANIEL bapt. 1 April 1740.
JOHN bapt. 18 Sept. 1743.
BENJAMIN bapt. 7 April 1745; m. Judith Whitehouse 19 Dec. 1780.²
SARAH bapt. 5 July 1747.
SUSAN bapt. 11 June 1749; born same day.
LYDIA bapt. 9 Dec. 1750.
SAMUEL.
REBECCA.
ABIGAIL.

¹The following were bapt. in Dover. Whether they were children of Humphrey and Catherine Forst or of William and Elizabeth (Snell) Frost is not determined. Humphrey bapt. 3 July 1720; Benjamin bapt. 31 July 1725; William bapt. 22 Aug. 1725; Margery and Lydia bapt. 14 April 1725. The will of Philip Stackpole of Somersworth, 1761, names dau. Lydia Frost. The will of William Frost of Dover, 1780, names wife Elizabeth and ch. John, William, Samuel, Lydia and George, all under age. Nathaniel Frost, "formerly of Dover now of Durham, laborer," conveyed, 10 May 1735, to Samuel Chesley his right in commons of Dover, once belonging to Nicholas Brock. All these Forsts, Fosts and Frosts are given here, in order that they may not be confused with the Frost families of Eliot and Berwick. Some of the descendants now write their names Foss. I think the original name was Frost and was mis-called Fost and Forst, just as the Eliot name sometimes was.

UNCLASSIFIED FROSTS.

Samuel Frost of Somersworth married Esther Mason 13 July 1772, as Tate says. In 1795 administration of his estate was granted to widow Esther. Children:

ESTHER b. 19 Oct. 1772. Prob. died young.

ISAAC b. 5 Dec. 1775.

ESTHER, probably, b. June 1787. Unm.

A James Gerrish appeared in Berwick near the beginning of the eighteenth century, married Mary Wentworth, 17 Feb. 1714 (?) and had three children, Timothy, Mary, and James baptized there in 1724. He may have been son of a James Gerrish who lived in Portsmouth about 1685, and was then about 37 years of age. Much study has failed to connect him with the descendants of the emigrant, William Gerrish. His will, 1770, names dau. Sarah Pulsifer, Olive Pearce, grandson James son of Timothy, and children of son James, deceased.

Timothy, son of James Gerrish of Berwick, married Lydia, dau. of Alexander and Elizabeth Gray, and had children, John, Alexander and Molly, all bapt. 26 July 1748, and James bapt. 1 May 1744, who m. Mary Abbot 14 April 1773. Of these Alexander married Sarah Clark, 12 April 1757, and had the following children:

GODSOE.

William Godsoe, mariner, bought a house lot in Salem, Mass., of John Mason, 15 Nov. 1674. A house lot was laid out to William Godsoe in Salem, 6 March 1678-9, "southward of Will Lords present house." Other purchases of land in 1679 and 1683 are recorded. July 1, 1682, Margaret, daughter of William Lord, sold to her brother-in-law, William Godsoe of Salem, part of a dwelling house. He was then living in the other part. The will of William Lord of Salem, dated 10 Nov. 1685, gives "to my daughter Elizabeth Godsoe fowr shillings." William Godsoe married, 17 Feb. 1680, Elizabeth, dau. of William and Jane Lord of Salem. This may have been his second marriage. He was taxed at Salem in 1683. He was a mariner of Great Island, now Newcastle, in February 1687-8. He married in 1691 Jane, widow of Thomas Withers and settled on the west side of Spruce Creek. He was prominent as a surveyor and appraiser of estates. March 22, 1725, he deposed that he was 80 years of age and that he laid out a lot of land 3 Jan. 1695-6. He was born, therefore, in 1645. His wife (Elizabeth) was born in Salem 26 April 1659. His children were:

WILLIAM b. in Salem 4 March 1680-81. See below.

JOHN, probably; witnessed a deed in 1705.

William Godsoe, 2d, had a grant in 1699. He married Elizabeth, widow of John Surplus and dau. of William and Anne (Crocket) Roberts. She had a daughter, Catherine, by her first marriage who married John Marr. William Godsoe gave, 7 Nov. 1724, land to "my son-in-law John Marr and Catherine his wife." Inventory of his estate 11 March 1731. He also was a surveyor. His children are found partly in the town records, and the rest are named in a deed, dated 6 April 1745, together with widow Elizabeth. See York Deeds, XXVIII. 91.

The Goodwin family is too numerous and widespread to trace further in a town history. I have drawn to some extent from "The Goodwins of Kittery," by Mr. John Samuel Goodwin of Chicago, though evidence has compelled me to differ from many of his suggestions. No effort has here been made to trace beyond the third generation, except one line that lived in Eliot. The above scheme does not account for every Goodwin of even the first three generations. It may be that Adam and David of the first generation left descendants, and it may be that David Goodwin of N. H. in 1670 was of another family and left issue. Such questions are left to the special genealogist.

GOOLD.

The emigrant ancestor of the Goold family was Jarvice Gold, who came from the County of Kent, Eng., in 1635, to Hingham, Mass. He removed to Boston and died there 27 May 1656, aged 51 years. His wife's name was Mary whom he outlived. He was a cordwainer and had two children.

JOHN b. 28 July 1646.

JOSEPH b. 11 March 1649; died young.

John, son of Jarvice Gold, went to Taunton and married, 21 Aug. 1673, Mary, dau. of Robert Crosman. He was a trooper in King Philip's War in 1675 and a soldier in 1682. He outlived his wife and died at Taunton, 14 Dec. 1711. His children were Mary, John, Hannah, Joseph, Nathaniel, Mary again, Jabez, Benjamin, and Elizabeth. Joseph, Benjamin and Elizabeth came to Kittery.

Joseph Gold came about 1702, aged about twenty-two. He married about 1705 Bethiah, dau. of William Furbish, and bought in 1700 Treworgy's or Thompson's Point, in the northern part of Eliot. The farm is now owned by John Raitt. Joseph Gold changed the spelling of his name to Goold, following the example of relatives at Taunton. He died 10 May 1762, aged about 82. Children were:

DAUGHTER m. John Jellison and had child in 1680.

RICHARD m. Susanna ———.

Richard Green senior is mentioned in 1663. He and wife Susanna deed land, a part of the first John Green's estate, in 1687, to their son John. The deed is witnessed by Thomas Green, who was taxed at Oyster River in 1659. John Green, mariner, son of Richard, died before Jan. 1695-6. His only heir, John Green of South Carolina, sold land in Kittery, in 1704. Cf. York Deeds, IV, 83 and VII, 33. John Green, Jr., was a juryman in 1694, Samuel Green, who m. Mary Knight 6 Jan. 1708, "oldest surviving son of Richard Green," with wife Mary, deed land to John Hammond in 1739. Richard Green deeds land to son Daniel in 1704.

Daniel Green married, 31 Oct. 1706, Sarah, dau. of Samuel Knight. Will, made and probated in 1749, names wife Sarah and children:

GUNNISON.

Hugh Gunnison, according to tradition, was born in Sweden about 1610. He was in Boston in 1634, a vintner, "servant to Richard Bellingham." In 1651 he sold his inn, called "King's Arms," and brew house and moved to Kittery, where he kept an ordinary in 1652. He was Deputy to General Court and Associate Judge of the Court of Common pleas. He is last mentioned 4 July 1659 and died before 20 July 1660. His first wife, Elizabeth, died 25 Nov. 1645. He married (2), 23 May 1647, Sarah, widow of Henry Lynn¹ and dau. of William and Alice Tilly. A deposition made 29 June 1670 gives her age as about 51 years. She married (3) about 1660 Capt. John Mitchell of the Isles of Shoals and (4) Surgeon Francis Morgan. She was living in 1673. Children of Hugh Gunnison by first marriage:

SARAH b. 14 Dec. 1637; m. Lewis Tucker; d. 1666.

ELIZABETH b. 25 Feb. 1640. Either she or Elizabeth Lynn m. (1) William Seely, (2) Thomas Cowell.

DEBORAH bapt. 25 July 1642, "aged about 7 days;" m. John Ingersoll.

Children by second marriage:

HESTER bapt. 20 Dec. 1647; m. perhaps, William Rogers, though he may have m. one of the daughters of Henry Lynn.

JOSEPH² b. 31 Jan. 1649.

ELIHU b. 14 Dec. 1649. See below.

¹Henry Lynn was living at York in 1640. He died in 1646 in Virginia, whither he had gone with a cargo. The court records says that he left a wife and four children at Pascataqua in a "very mean condition and very hardly able to subsist." His house and lot in Gorgeana were ordered sold. His children are registered in Boston:

SARAH b. 20 June 1636.

ELIZABETH b. 27 Jan. 1638; living in 1654.

EPHRAIM b. 16 Nov. 1639; m. Ann, dau. of Capt. Richard and Deborah Lockwood. He was living in Portsmouth in 1680.

REBECCA b. 15 Dec. 1645.

²The Gunnison Genealogy says Joseph was unmarried and that he was the sentinel who shot Mrs. Grace Wentworth 27 Sept. 1707. Now Mary Gullison, called also Gunnison in the will, received an inheritance in the Elihu, son of Hugh Gunnison, married (1) 10 Nov. 1674, Martha Trickey, probably dau. of Francis Trickey, who lived next to Gunnison in Kittery. His second wife's name was Elizabeth, and it is quite certain that she was the widow of John Skillin, since Elihu Gunnison, Jr., calls her son, Josiah Skillin, his brother. York Deeds, VII. 231 and IX. 115. Elihu Gunnison lived in Sheepscoot, Falmouth and Kittery. Was a shipwright. Served as selectman, deputy to General Court, and justice of the peace. Was living in 1729. Children:

ELIHU b. about 1676. See below.

CHILD b. about 1677, killed by Indians.

PRISCILLA b. about 1679; m. Nicholas Weeks, 7 May 1700.

MARY b. about 1681; m. Joseph Weeks.

SARAH probably m. in Boston, 14 March 1700, John Follet.

Children by second marriage:

JOSEPH b. 14 Oct. 1690. See below.

ELIZABETH b. 15 June 1694; m. John Walker, 24 Jan. 1714-5; d. 4 Dec. 1715.

THIRD GENERATION.

Elihu Gunnison, Jr., married (1) 6 Dec. 1705, Mary Rawlins in Boston, quite certainly dau. of Benjamin and Eunice (——) Rawlins, and granddaughter of Thomas and Anna (——) will of John Hill, in 1682. York Deeds, V. 18. She is mentioned in a deed, dated 4 June 1686, as owner of land on Champernowne's Creek, next to James Foy. York Deeds, VII. 204. This Mary Gunnison can be accounted for only as wife of Joseph. It may be that a daughter Sarah married John Amee. Sarah Amee, "widow and spinster," sold to her son Stephen Amee, 1 Jan. 1753, land on Champernowne's Creek that seems to correspond to land mentioned in above deed," which land was given by Mr. [or Mrs. The writing is uncertain.] Francis Champernoon to my honored mother Sarah Gullison." York Deeds, XXXI. 199. My theory is that Joseph Gunnison married Mary —— and left daughter Sarah who m. John Amee, and also son Joseph who was the sentinel mentioned in 1707. Moreover, I think that this Joseph Gunnison married in Boston, 14 April 1719, Susanna Shore and had a son, Shore, son of Joseph and Susanna Gunnison, born 12 March 1725. It is printed "Shove." This Susanna Gunnison owned the baptismal covenant and was admitted to the church at Kittery 4 July 1728. I thought first that the Joseph Gunnison of Kittery, son of Elihu, might have married for second wife Susanna Shore, but he had a son born in Kittery 9 July 1724 and could not have had another born in Boston 12 March 1725.

Rawlins. See wills and deeds of Suffolk County. She died 7 May 1726, aged 42. See page 55. He married (2) 3 Sept. 1730, Mrs. Mary (Pepperrell) Whittemore, who was born 15 Sept. 1689 and died in 1769. He was a shipbuilder and died in 1754. Children:

ELIHU b. 8 March 1706. Thrice married.

MARY b. 9 July 1709; m. Thomas Homan of Watertown, Mass., 13 Sept. 1740.

BENJAMIN b. 1711. d. s. p.

JOSEPH b. 3 Oct. 1713; m. Mary Crocker.

JOHN b. March 1715-6; m. Eunice Fernald, (2) Rebecca Norton.

EUNICE b. 18 Aug. 1717; m. William Deering, 22 July 1738.

Joseph, son of Elihu Gunnison, married (1) 11 Oct. 1715, Lydia Burnell in Boston, probably dau. of Samuel Burnell. The Gunnison Genealogy says he married Susanna Follet, for which I find no authority. I have searched in vain for a Susanna Follet. He married (2) 23 Oct. 1729, Elizabeth Lewis, probaly dau. of John and Martha (Brooking) Lewis, (3) 18 Jan. 1734. Mrs. Margaret Nelson, widow of William Nelson of Portsmouth, who m. 29 Dec. 1726, Margaret Swain. Will, 18 Feb. 1745-18 Oct. 1748. Children:

SAMUEL b. in Boston 28 July 1716; prob. died young.

JOSEPH b. in Boston 9 Feb. 1717; m. 3 March 1742-3. Susanna Ayers, and had dau. Lydia b. 2 Sept. 1744. He is called Joseph tertius and is overlooked in the Gunnison Genealogy. June 22 1749 Samuel Burnell of Boston sold to Joseph Gunnison late of Kittery for £618 all right to estate of his father, Samuel Burnell, late of Boston. Aug. 20 1753 Jonathan Burnell of Nantucket sold to Joseph Gunnison of Boston, shipwright, all right to estate of Samuel Burnell. See Suffolk Deeds.

SAMUEL b. 27 Jan. 1720-21; m. Jane Fernald, (2) Alice Fernald.

JOHN b. 21 Oct. 1722; m. 1745, Hannah Hammond. Lived in Portsmouth.

DAVID b. 9 July 1724; m. 16 Jan. 1748, Rachel Ingraham. Moved to Halifax, N. S., thence to Conn.

WILLIAM bapt. 29 May 1726; died young.

CHRISTOPHER bapt. 9 May 1728. Not named in will.

BENJAMIN bapt. 24 Feb. 1733. Not named in will.

MARGARET b. 13 Nov. 1735. Named in will.

WILLIAM b. 4 June 1737; m. about 1758, Rebecca Sherburne. Lived in Gilmanton, N. H.

ELIZABETH bapt. 29 Aug. 1742. Not named in will.

FOURTH GENERATION.

Elihu Gunnison, born 8 March 1706, married (1) 18 Aug. 1729, Elizabeth Eastwick, (2) 8 June 1738, Jane (called also Dorothy) Emerson, dau. of Rev. John Emerson of Portsmouth. She was born 17 June 1715. (3) 19 Jan. 1754, Mrs. Mary Ervin of Boston. He died after 23 March 1778. Children:

HICKS.

Michael Hicks of Portsmouth, born in the Barbadoes, made his will in 1688. His widow Sarah, dau. of Thomas and Jane Walford, was of Portsmouth in 1697. See N. H. Deeds, XI. 265. Michael Hicks and wife Mary joined the church at Newington in 1721.

Dennis Hicks had wife Sarah and bought land at Kittery Point in 1689. His wife was probably daughter of Roger Deering.¹ Their children were:

JOHN m. Elizabeth, dau. of James Davis of Oyster River. Pub. 13 Nov. 1725. He was living near Braveboat Harbor, in York, in 1739. His widow was of Durham, N. H., in 1754 and died at the age of 79. Had son Joseph and dau. Sarah who m. Paul Pinkham.

HILL.

John Hill moved from Plymouth to Boston in 1630. He was made freeman 18 March 1642. Another John Hill was admitted as freeman, at Boston, 6 March 1645, perhaps son of the first. The first John Hill was one of the grantees of "Nashaway" in ¹The Town Records say that land was laid out, 19 July 1694, to "Roger Deering, Robert Mitchell, Joseph Couch and Dennis Hicks, to be divided among themselves as they see cause." There are two other similar records. It may be a division of property of the first Roger Deering among his heirs. The fact also that Joan Crafts, widow of the first Roger Deering, made her home in her old age with Sarah Hicks points to the conclusion that Dennis Hicks married Sarah Deering.

1640 and died in 1647.¹ He seems to have been interested in land speculation in several places.

A John Hill was taxed in Dover, N. H., the 8th of the 10th month, 1639. This could not have been the John Hill of Dover, who in 1659 deposed that he was about thirty-five years of age, for he was, therefore, born about 1624 and would be only fifteen years of age in 1639. If born in 1624, he would have become of age in 1645, and so would well correspond to the John Hill who was admitted as freeman in Boston in that year. John Hill of Dover had wife Elizabeth, and John Hill of Boston married Elizabeth Strong, 16 Jan. 1656. The births of his children so far as known, indicate that the John of Boston was the John of Dover. It is probable that his father, the first John Hill mentioned above, acquired land in Dover and was taxed for it in 1639; that he returned to Boston and died in 1647; that his son John Hill inherited land of his father in Dover and was taxed for it in 1650; that he married Elizabeth Strong in Boston in 1656 and settled in Dover at once, where he was taxed in 1657 and is often mentioned till 1685.²

John Hill lived in that part of Dover called Oyster River, now Durham, N. H. He was a grand juryman in 1668 and in 1671.

¹ Drake's Boston, p. 132. Cf. Davis' Landmarks of Plymouth. See also Drake's Boston, pp. 278, 285, 291 and 313. Suffolk Deeds, Vol. VI, 224. Mass. Colony Records, Vol. II, pp. 136, 212.

² Hist. Memoranda of Ancient Dover, pp. 353, 350, 349, 350, 303. Some have supposed that John Hill of Dover was a brother to Valentine Hill of that place. This is disproved by the fact that John, brother of Valentine Hill, was a merchant of London. His will, dated 14 Dec. 1605, shows plainly that he was not the John Hill of Dover, N. H. See Water's Gleanings, Vol. I, 5.

Richard Hill is mentioned in the Court Records of New Hampshire in 1605. The inventory of his estate was made 3 Jan. 1677-8. A John Hill died in 1682 and left his property to the wife of Francis Champernowne. William Hill was taxed at Oyster River in 1657. He had wife Judith and son William, born in 1646, who had wife Hannah and son Henry. None of these have been connected with the family of John Hill of Dover, neither with the family of Valentine Hill.

A David Hill married, 25 Oct. 1710, Anne, widow of Joseph Couch and dau. of Christopher Adams. He died about March 1717, leaving children, one aged 4 years 8 months, the other 2 years. The first was Anne Hill born 31 July 1712, m. Enoch Staples 24 Sept. 1728, d. 23 April 1742. The other was perhaps Elizabeth Hill, who m. John Cole 24 Oct. 1728. Cf. York Deeds IX, 92.

He was taxed in 1684, after which he is not mentioned. The time and place of his death are not known. His children, so far as known from deeds and incidental mention, were:

1. JOSEPH b. 1657; m. (1) Catherine Knight, (2) Susanna Beedle.
2. SAMUEL b. prob. 1659; m. Elizabeth Williams.
JOHN b. 1661; m. perhaps Sarah Brackett.
BENJAMIN b. 8 April 1665; prob. d. unm.
HANNAH, m. William Frye.

1. Joseph, son of John Hill, made a deposition, 27 Sept. 1682, in which he says he was about twenty-five years of age. He was then a constable. In 1685 he sold to John Smart a farm at Oyster River, situated "by y^e little bay between y^e plantations of Joseph Kent and John Ault." The deed declares that he bought it of his father, John Hill. He married (1) in Kittery, about 1688, Catherine Knight and settled in Dover, where he bought land of Job Clements in 1689. He sold this and a grant, made to him by the town in 1694, to John Downing in 1699. Exception is made in the deed to "a rod square, where my former wife and children are buried." The deed is signed by Joseph Hill and wife Susanna Hill. He had, then, before 1699, married Susanna, daughter of Christopher Beedle. (York Deeds VII. 29.) In 1696 Joseph Hill bought land at Long Reach in Kittery, and it was probably about this time that his second marriage occurred. His will, dated 30 Jan. 1712-13, was probated 5 Jan. 1713. It names the following children. His widow Susanna probably married, 2 Jan. 1724, John Lydston. The marriage was recorded in Newington.

3. SAMUEL m. Hannah Allen.

2. Samuel, son of John Hill, married, 28 Oct. 1680, Elizabeth, dau. of William and Mary (——) Williams of Oyster River. He bought land in Eliot in 1686. He also owned estates in Portsmouth. His will, dated 28 Aug. 1713, was probated 28 March 1823. Children:

- JOHN¹ b. 30 Nov. 1681; lived in Portsmouth.
 ELIZABETH b. 7 Nov. 1683; m. George Marshall of Portsmouth. 25 Feb. 1701-2.
 MARY b. 6 April 1685; m. Benjamin Welch.

LYDSTON.

This name appears in the old records as Lydden, Lisson, Lydstone and in other forms. George Lydden, seaman, bought land on Crooked Lane in 1670. Wife's name was Sarah. He was living in 1691, and she was a widow in 1693 and died before 1698. They had two daughters (York Deeds IV. 138)

MARY m. Richard King.

SARAH m. John Lary. Widow in 1698. M. (2) 1700 Robert Allen. A dau., Sarah Lary, may have m. John Cator 24 Dec. 1719.

Edward Lyddon or Litton lived on the next lot to George. He married Katherine Chadbourne. The administration of his estate was granted to his widow Katharine 18 March 1691. She m. (2) James Waymouth. By first marriage there were two daughters. (York Deeds VII. 199.)

ELIZABETH m. (1) 17 May 1707 Josiah Skillins; (2) 12 Jan. 1723-4 Roger Deering.

MARY. Unknown.

George and Edward Lydston, named above, may have been sons or brothers of Waymouth Lydston, who was living on what is now Eliot Neck in 1662. The inventory of his estate was rendered 9 March 1695-6. His widow's name was Martha. He seems to have had sons Waymouth, mentioned in 1704, and John.

John Lydston married Mary, widow of William Tetherly in 1693. Her maiden name was Mary Roby or Robie. He prob. m. (2) 2 Jan. 1724 Susanna, widow of Joseph Hill. Feb. 24 1752, he deeded land to grandsons, Robey Lydston and John Deering, both of Kittery. He mentions daughter "Barshaby" to be supported in her old age and other grandsons Daniel and "Weyman" Lydstone. Children were:

MARTHA b. 1 April 1695; m. Roger, son of Thomas Deering.

JOHN b. 25 April 1697; m. Abigail Paul.

BATHSHERA, unml.

GIDEON, perhaps, bapt. in 1721. He and wife were members of the church in Eliot at about that time.

John, son of John and Mary (Roby-Tetherly) Lydston, married, 5 April 1722, Abigail, daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Bragdon) Paul. Nothing more has been learned of him. His children were, doubtless:

DANIEL m. 28 Sept. 1749, Mary, dau. of John and Catharine (Lewis) Remick.

WAYMOUTH m. Abigail Spinney.

ROBIE, named in 1752.

Waymouth, son of John and Abigail (Paul) Lydston, married Abigail, dau. of Andrew and Abigail (Wingate) Spinney. Int. Rec. 22 Sept. 1750. The following children are recorded:

JOHN b. 25 Sept. 1751. Rev. soldier.

SARAH b. 12 Sept. 1753.

ANDREW b. 29 Nov. 1755; d. 1 Aug. 1777. Rev. soldier.

ABIGAIL b. 29 Jan. 1758.

ROBEY b. 1 June 1760; m. 1 March 1785 Olive Seriggins. Rev. soldier. Died in Kittery 27 May 1809. Wife living in 1837, aged 73.

MARY b. 14 July 1762.

WAYMOUTH b. 4 June 1764. Ch., Mary Ann, Eunice, Nancy, Nabby, Betsey, Libby and Clarissa, bapt. 6 Sept. 1807.

ANNE b. 5 Nov. 1766.

Daniel Lydston, who married Mary Remick, seems to have died about 1790, for Feb. 8 of that year administration was granted to Gideon Lydston on estate of Daniel Lydston. There is no record of his family, but the following were probably his sons:

GIDEON m. Mary Willey 5 Sept. 1783. Estate administered in 1814. Widow m. Wm. Wherren.

WILLIAM m. Sarah Gowell, 17 Nov. 1780. She was dau. of Capt. John Gowell.

DANIEL m. Nancy Wherren 10 Aug. 1805; drowned 4 March 1814, aged 32. Widow Nancy made guardian, 13 Feb. 1815 of ch. Daniel, Mary Ann, and Aney Coffin.

The children of William and Sarah (Gowell) Lydston were:

JOHN b. 6 Oct. 1781; m. (1) Abigail Cole, (2) Dorcas Deering. Removed to Litchfield, Me.

ROBE b. 23 Feb. 1787. Moved to Bowdoin, Me.

SALLY b. 27 April 1789.

WILLIAM b. 24 July 1791.

TIMOTHY b. 11 Oct. 1793.

NANCY b. 18 Nov. 1795.

THOMAS b. 17 Oct. 1797.

MANSON.

Richard Manson of Portsmouth bought land at Ox Point, Kittery, in 1680, and sold it to his son John and wife Lydia in 1701. Samuel Manson witnessed the deed. Alfred E. Manson of Boston is said to have a full genealogy of the Manson family. Several letters have failed to elicit any reply from him. The records of the family are very meager in Kittery. The following children of John and Lydia Manson are recorded.

ANNE b. 21 June 1703.

MATTONE.

The name is also written Mattown and Mattoon. Hujbrecht Mattone, for so he signed his name to the submission of 1652, married, probably for second wife, Sarah Jones, dau. of John Pearce, from whom he was divorced. See page 41. He left children, Grace who married Richard Pitcher, and Richard, all of whom were of Boston in 1728. See York Deeds, XII. 125. Richard Mattone married Jane, dau. of Edward and Ann (Dudley) Hilton and lived for a time in Newmarket, N. H. Savage says that he was killed by Indians with son Hughbertus 23 July 1706, but the deed above cited contradicts this statement. Compare Historical Memoranda of Ancient Dover, page 178.

MAVERICK.

Samuel Maverick married Amias, widow of David Thompson, whose maiden name was Cole, and lived on Noddle's Island, East Boston. He died in 1681. He was son of Rev. John Maverick of Dorchester, Mass. Samuel's daughter, Mary, married Hon. Francis Hooke of Kittery Point.

Antipas Maverick, probably brother of Samuel, is mentioned as a witness at the Isles of Shoals in 1647. He had a brother Moses, who lived at Marblehead, Mass. Antipas Maverick signed the submission of 1652, had a grant in 1653, and the historian Hubbard says that he got drunk, fell out of his boat and was drowned 2 July 1678. The name of his wife¹ is unknown. There were two daughters:

CATHERINE m. Stephen Paul.

ABIGAIL m. Edward Gilman of Exeter, N. H., 20 Dec. 1774.

MARR.

John Erskine, said to have been son of Hon. Edward Erskine of Gateshead-on-Tyne, and descended from the noble house of Marr, came to America in 1717. See "Old Eliot," Vol. II p. He assumed the name Marr and married, 16 July 1719, Catherine, dau. of John and Elizabeth (Roberts) Surplus. He was a mariner and was wrecked off Cape Cod in 1750, dying from exposure. His wife died in 1770. Children:

JOHN b. 3 Aug. 1720; m. Mary Chandler. Lived on the homestead in Kittery. d. s. p.

MENDUM.

A deposition of Robert Mendum declares that he was born in 1600 (Another says 1604) and that he came to the Pascataqua in 1630, probably from Bristol, Eng. He was at Duxbury, Mass., in 1637 and then was a volunteer for the Pequot War. He remained at Duxbury till near 1644 and may have found his wife Mary there. He was licensed to keep an ordinary at Kittery Point in 1644. He was constable in 1652 and selectman in 1673. Had several grants of land, one east of Spruce Creek. He lived on the Pascataqua just opposite Portsmouth. Died in May, 1682. Wife survived him. His will names a grandson, Robert Michamore. [Muchmore, of the Isles of Shoals.]

Jonathan Mendum, son of Robert, is first mentioned in 1672 and is the only son named in Robert's will. He, too, had wife Mary. There is no record as to birth, marriage and death. Children:

M. 23 Dec. 1781 Elizabeth Mendum and Simon Emery.

John Mendum, born 22 April 1790, was employed for many years by the Eastern Stage Company and drove the accommodation and mail stage from Portsmouth to Boston. He was one of the most popular and careful drivers on the line, so much so that the traveling public would plan to make their trips to Boston on his days of service. He was never known to meet with an accident. Among the young people he was a great favorite. The school boys would watch for his arrival, and when the stage swung down Lafayette Street in Portsmouth they would form a line on each side of the street, lift their hats and cheer. Benjamin P. Shillaber has commemorated him in a stanza:

"Small boys, now clear the way! That dusty cloud
Why, 'tis Jack Mendum, with importance proud,
Driving his stage to the Blue Tavern door."

When the Eastern Railroad was completed from Boston to Portsmouth, he established the Express business between those cities, going to Boston on alternate days with all the express matter in a portmanteau. The business grew and became known as

JOHN MENDUM.

Walker and Mendum's Express. It was sold out to Christopher Jackson, who had been in the employ of Mr. Mendum. This was the beginning of the well-known Jackson's Express to Boston.

Mr. Mendum was a staunch Jackson democrat. He was a kind-hearted man, ever ready to aid others in need. In 1820 he married Adaline Perkins of Wells and had children, Charles, John Albert, Willis Barnabee, Harriet, Anna, Maria, Georgiana, Almira, Angelina, and Augusta. He died 1 July 1848 in Portsmouth. The accompanying picture is from an oil painting now at the old Mendum homestead, 9 Fleet Street, Portsmouth, which Mr. Mendum purchased in 1830.

MILLER.

Tradition says that a Dane named Miller came over in 1634 in the employ of Capt. John Mason. This may have been the Joseph Miller who was a land-owner in Dover earlier than 1647. He is mentioned in an action for debt in 1653.

Richard Miller, first mentioned in 1671, lived at Long Reach and had wife Grace, who administered his estate in 1693. She married, 15 March 1696, Christopher Banfield. Children of Richard Miller were:

SAMUEL m. Mary Neale and disappeared from Kittery in 1696.

NASON.

Richard Nason was living at Pipe Stave Landing in 1639. In 1645 John Baker was presented at Court in New Hampshire "for beating Richard Nason that he was black and blue and for throwing a fire shovel at his wife."¹ Baker was fined five shillings.

Some think that Richard Nason came from Stratford-on-Avon, where there were many of his name at that time and where Nasons still are found. A Richard Nason was bapt. at Stratford-on-Avon, 3 Aug. 1606. He was son of John Nason, who married Elizabeth Rogers 28 Oct. 1600. Richard Nason was a planter and often assisted in surveying. He was a jurymen in 1649 and was accused of "blasphemy" in 1665. The General Court did "not judge him so guilty of that fact as that by our lawe he ought to die," but put him under bonds of forty pounds for good behavior. Philip Chesley of Oyster River was witness against him. The inhabitants of Kittery showed their opinion of him and of his offense by electing him as Deputy to the General Court the next year, along with Thomas Withers. The Court refused to allow Nason his seat, and the persons who elected him in Kittery were called to an account. He was presented at York in 1655 for not attending meeting, and in 1659 he was fined five pounds and disfranchised for entertaining Quakers. He was ensign in 1653, was selectman and held other town offices. His lot of 200 acres was confirmed to him by the town.

John Baker appears in Dover in 1643 and was Deputy from that town in 1650-51. He was taxed as "leftenant Baker" in 1639. A John Baker was living with wife Sarah in Portsmouth in 1681-97. His son, Benjamin, administered his estate in 1697. He seems to have been a man of some prominence. Too much of the common beverage of those days is the probable explanation of the episode mentioned above. See Hist. Mem. of Ancient Dover, pp. 36, 355, 354.

The name of his first wife was Sarah, and the fact that she had children named John and Baker, as well as the incident above mentioned, suggests that she was of the Baker family. Nason's second wife was Abigail, widow of Nicholas Follet. He lived in old age with his son Benjamin. His will, dated 14 July 1694, was probated 15 March 1696-7. His children were all by first marriage.

¹An article in the New England Magazine, August, 1902, pp. 693-4, records a local tradition that the grave of Mrs. Nason is called "the witch's grave," and gives a picture of it. I have visited the grave and copied the inscription. It is some rods from any other grave and its entire length is covered by a thick, rough slab of granite. The family has been unknown in York for more than a century. These facts probably account for the witch tradition. The inscription certainly indicates a woman of worth, tenderly loved. It is as follows:

He married, (2) 4 March 1778, Mrs. Joanna Tilden Moulton, widow of Brig. Gen. Moulton. Samuel Nason removed to Sanford, Me., in 1778 and died at Balston Spa, N. Y., 17 Aug. 1800.

"Here rests quite free from Life's Distressing Care
A loving wife
A tender Parent dear;
Cut down in midst of days
As you may see,
But—stop—my grief;
I soon shall equal be,
When death shall stop my breath;
And end my Time;
God grant my Dust
May mingle, then, with thine.
Sacred to the memory of Mrs.
Mary Nason, wife of Mr. Samuel
Nason, who departed this life
Augst. 28th. 1774.
Aetat 29."

NEAL.

John Neal settled in the Parish of Unity between 1656 and 1662. His wife's name was Joan. He died 18 Feb. 1704. He calls himself John, Senr., though I have found no mention of John, Jr. It may have been his daughter, Mary, who married Samuel Miller about 1693. Amy Neal, probably a daughter, witnessed a deed in 1690. She was a captive with the Indians the same year, and married Samuel Johnson in 1706. James Neal, of whom Andrew Neal was guardian in 1690, is mentioned in 1692 and in 1701. I have not been able to trace any connection with this family of Neals and Walter Neal of Portsmouth, nor Francis of Falmouth, nor the Neals of Salem and of Braintree.

Andrew, son of John and Joan Neal, received the entire homestead. He married about 1694, Catherine, dau. of William Furbish. He died in 1739. Children:

KATHERINE b. 4 Dec. 1695; m. Nathaniel Austin of Dover, 22 Sept. 1714.

PALMER.

Coffin says that William Palmer came to Newbury, Mass., about 1637 and removed to Piscataqua. He was born about 1613 and was living in Kittery in 1642. He sold his farm to Christopher Adams and removed to Cape Porpus in 1675. A daughter Martha is said by Coffin to have married John Sherman of Watertown, Mass. A daughter Sarah married Richard King of Kittery. Another daughter, Rachel, born about 1666, was apprenticed to Peter Glenfield of Portsmouth in 1670.

George Palmer, born 1620, had wife Elizabeth and lived at Kittery Point in 1661. His estate was administered in 1670.

Edward Small came to the Pascataqua about 1632 and was a magistrate in 1640. He sold his land to Antipas Maverick in 1647 and was of the Isles of Shoals in 1653. Nothing more is known of him.

Francis Small was born in 1627, as a deposition shows. Some have supposed him to have been son of the above Edward Small, and the supposition is a natural one but has not been proved. In 1648 he lived in Dover, N. H. Had wife Elizabeth, born 1634. Her maiden name may have been Leighton. In 1668 he bought a large tract of land, known as Ossipee, of an Indian chief and had dwelling house and trading post there, supposed to have been located in what is now Cornish, Me. He was at Kittery in 1668. About 1700 he left Kittery and went to live with his son Daniel at Truro, Mass., where he died about 1714 or 1715. Children:

STACKPOLE.¹

On the southern coast of Wales, about six miles from Pembroke, there rises a columnar mass of limestone, called the STACK ROCK. It is at the mouth of an inlet or pool, which is named from the rock the Stack-pool. A Norman, said to have been knighted by William the Conqueror, built his castle on this inlet and was called Richard de Stackpōl, since pōl in old English meant a pool of water. The castle has been remodeled more than once, yet the foundations remain the same, and it has for about eight centuries borne the name of STACKPOLE COURT. It is at present the seat of the Earl of Cawdor. The Stackpole coat of arms, found in a roll of arms of date about 1250, is a red rampant lion, having a gold collar, on a silver shield. The lineage of the Pembrokeshire Stackpoles for two or three centuries is on record at the College of Heraldry in London. It declares that Sir Robert Stackpole went with Strongbow to the conquest of Ireland in 1168. His descendants became numerous in Ireland, especially in Dublin, Cork and Limerick, holding many official positions. Twenty mayors, aldermen and recorders by the name of Stackpole are found in the records of Limerick from 1450 to 1650.

Until within a century the name was spelled Stacpole. James Stacpole was born in 1652, as a deposition shows, and probably came from Limerick, Ireland, although a tradition says he came from Sligo. He was living in what is now Rollinsford, N. H., in 1680 and in December of that year is mentioned in an account as hauling boards from Thomas Holmes' mill to Cochecho Point. He was taxed in Dover in 1680, 1681, and 1682. About this time he married Margaret, dau. of James and Margaret Warren. From 1693 to 1699 he kept a house of entertainment, or tavern, at Great Works, South Berwick. In 1710 he bought what is now the Samuel Hale estate in Rollinsford, N. H., and here he died in 1736. See page 136. His wife survived him. Children:

JAMES, died about 1706, a young man and a soldier. Unm.

STAPLES.

Peter Staple, as the name was for a long time written, had a grant of land in 1671, and he bought land of Thomas Turner on Long Reach 4 July 1674. He and wife Elizabeth deeded this to son Peter in 1694. March 9, 1679, there were "measured and laid out unto Peter Staple five acres of land by town grant to his wife in her widowhood bearing date in december 13, 1669." See York Deeds, V. Part 1 fol. 87. The town records of Kittery say that 13 Dec. 1669, there were "granted to Elizabeth Edwards five acres of upland joining to ye above said Christopher Beadle's land." This shows that Peter Staple married Elizabeth, widow of Stephen Edwards. Compare page 92. Various deeds indicate pretty plainly that she was a daughter of Robert Beadle, though absoute proof is lacking. The same day that the town granted five acres to her there were granted "to Christopher Beadle ten acres of upland at ye head of ye lot that was his father's in ye Long Reach." The will of Peter Staple, dated 6 June 1718, was probated 7 April 1719. Wife was living in 1720. Three sons named in the will:

THOMPSON.

There is a tradition that Robert Thompson was the emigrant ancestor of the Thompsons of Durham, N. H. It may have been the one who witnessed a deed in 1652. Thompson's Point, just south of the mouth of the Cochecho River, was so called as early as 1644 and probably in 1635. Thompson's Point House was taxed in Dover in 1648. The name of the owner is not given. Perhaps he had died. William Thompson appears soon after. He received a grant of land in Dover in 1656, which was laid out 17 March 1658-9, "beyond Cochecho log swamp." Nov. 8, 1715, John Thompson, Senior, of Dover, conveyed to John Tuttle fifty acres which "were granted to my father William Thompson by the town of Dover." It lay "beyond Cochecho Logg Swamp," bounded on the south with Bellamy

Bank River. There is no evidence that William Thompson ever lived on this grant. Oct. 15, 1656, a grant made to John White in 1651 was assigned to William Thompson. It was in Kittery a short way below the mouth of Sturgeon Creek. Several indications suggest that he had married a daughter of John White. In 1659 William Thompson was presented at York Court "for rebellion against his father and mother-in-law," and he bound himself to the Court in a bond of twenty pounds "that hee will be of good behavior towards all men, especially towards his father and mother." (State copy of Court Records Vol. I, p. 331.) He died in 1676 and his estate was appraised, June 22 of that year, at £52 18s. He left 23 acres, a house and orchard in Kittery and 50 acres in Dover, which he gave to sons William and Robert and to John White. His wife had probably died before 1676. He left children, whose ages were given in 1677 as follows:

1. JOHN, aged 18; m. Sarah Woodman.
2. WILLIAM, aged 16; m. prob. Mary Lovering.
ROBERT, aged 13, "living with Tobey Hanson at Dover."
3. JAMES, aged 11; m. Elizabeth Frye.
4. ALEXANDER, aged 6; m. Anna Curtis.
JUDITH, aged 2.

1. John Thompson married, between 1678 and 1680, Sarah, dau. of John Woodman of Oyster River. He gave a bond in 1684 for proper administration of his father's estate and to provide for "James his lame impotent brother." March 30, 1708, John and James Thompson, "sons of William Tomson late of Kittery," conveyed the homestead at Cold Harbor to Francis Allen. The deed was witnessed by Jonathan Woodman, Robert Huckins and David Kincaid, all residents at Oyster River. John Thompson's will was probated 24 July 1734. Wife Sarah survived him. Children:

- JOHN m. Mary, dau. of Ensign John Davis of Durham, N. H.
 JONATHAN m. Sarah Burnam of Durham, 23 Jan. 1717-8.
 ROBERT m. Abigail Emerson of Durham.
 SARAH m. Samuel Hill of Durham, 12 June 1718.
 HANNAH m. Moses Stevens of Somersworth, N. H.
 ELIZABETH m. Eleazer Clark of Wells, Me., 6 July 1727.
 MARY m. Hubbard Stevens.

2. William Thompson, "living with Richard Otis at Dover" in 1677, probably married, 4 Sept. 1682, Mary Lovering, supposed to have been dau. of John Lovering of Dover. Lived in what is now Somersworth. Had son William, who sold to Samuel Alley, 30 Aug. 1735, land that belonged to his father, William Thompson deceased. This son William died before 8 Dec. 1749, when Samuel Alley conveyed 20 acres in Rochester, N. H., to Elizabeth, widow of William Thompson, and her children.

3. James Thompson married, 3 March 1700, Elizabeth, dau. of Adrian Frye. They were married by Rev. John Pike, in Dover. James was a tailor by trade. Feb. 1, 1709-10, "James Thomson late of Kittery now resident in ye town of York" sold land granted to him by Kittery in 1694 and 1699. The York Records have the following: "York, Oct. 23, 1717, Laid out and bounded unto James Thompson a tract of land, whereon he now liveth, being on both sides of the highway that leads toward Barwick from York Bridge, which said James Thompson purchased of his brother Alexander Thompson for forty acres," 4 Jan. 1713-4. He removed with his family to New Meadows, Brunswick, Me., in 1727. Children:

TUCKER.

Richard Tucker, said to have been of Stagumbery, Somerset Co., Eng., was one of the first settlers of old Falmouth, Me. Wife was Margaret Reynolds. A daughter, Seaborn, married Nicholas Hodge of Portsmouth, N. H. No male descendants. He was probably the one who operated the mills at Newichawannock about 1657.

The estate of William Tucker, "lately deceased," was administered by Nathaniel Fryer in 1666. Grace, wife of William Tucker of the Isles of Shoals is mentioned in 1665. In 1694 Fryer calls Wilmott Tucker his "natural and beloved sister."

John Tucker, fisherman, of the Isles of Shoals, died in 1670 and left all his property to John Ameredeth and wife Joanna.

Francis Tucker, a merchant of Newcastle, N. H., mentioned as late as 1702, deposed in 1681 that he was "about 30 years of age."

John and Lewis Tucker, brothers, were early in Falmouth and moved to Kittery. Lewis was a fisherman at the Isles of Shoals and settled in Kittery as early as 1680. He married Sarah, dau. of Hugh and Sarah (Tilly-Lynn) Gunnison, probably his second wife. May have moved back to Falmouth. Lewis Tucker sold land in Falmouth in 1719, bounded by land of John Tucker. Children:

NICHOLAS b. 1653 as per deposition; m. Jane —; d. in 1717. See will. Ch., William m. in Portsmouth 27 Dec. 1711 Alice, sister of James Grindle, or Grindell. They were published in Boston. JONATHAN b. 16 June 1723.

MARY b. 30 Oct. 1727.

WHITE.

John White, 1604-9, was in Kittery as early as 1640. Had wife Lucy in 1670. Their daughter Hannah married Robert Allen. William Frye calls Francis Allen his "cousin." See York Deeds, VII. 107. This usually means nephew, but in this case I can only explain it as meaning cousin in the recent sense of that word, and this could be only by the assumption that Adrian Frye married Sarah, daughter of John White. Facts seem to indicate that William Thompson married another daughter of John White.

Nov. 7, 1665, Dr. Roads was presented at court for living in a suspicious manner at John White's house. This is the earliest mention of any doctor in what is now Eliot. Thomas Rhodes appears a little later, but there is no evidence that he was a physician.

Joshua White was a deacon in the church at Kittery Point and had a daughter Elizabeth, who married Joshua Fernald, 18 Nov. 1764.

WHITNEY.

Benjamin, son of John and Eleanor Whitney of Watertown, Mass., was born 6 June 1643 and married Jane ———, who died 14 Nov. 1690. (2) 11 April 1695, Mary Poor of Marlboro, Mass.

His son John was born in York, Me., about 1679 and married Lettice, dau. of John Ford of Kittery. Children recorded in York:

MARY b. 12 March 1705-6; m. Thomas Edwards 16 Oct. 1723.

SAMUEL b. 5 May 1707; m. Lydia Spooner 1730. See Hist. of Brunswick, Me., p. 860.

ELIZABETH b. 7 May 1709.

HANNAH b. 17 April 1710; m. Thomas Fernald, Jr., 16 Nov. 1733.

Nathaniel Whitney, probably son of Nathaniel and Sarah (Ford) of York, had wife Hannah and dau. Tabitha b. 16 March 1745-6. Perhaps settled in Gorham, Me.

M. 14 Jan. 1730-31, John Whitney and Susannah Smith.

WILLIAMS.

John Williams was one of the servants of Capt. John Mason. Rowland Williams called himself a planter, "of Virginia," 24 Oct. 1654. He bought land of Thomas Withers in 1674. Had grant of ten acres in 1694. Administration was granted, 26 April 1713, to Mary Hutchins, one of the creditors, on estate of Rowland Williams deceased intestate, and later to Samuel Hutchins. No evidence of any children. "The deposition of Deborah Fennix aged about Eighty years testifyeth that I this deponent remember that John Phillips formerly came from Casco Bay into Kittery and lived at Mr. Thomas Withers' his house sometime & bought a Piece of land of Sd Withers in Spruce Creek and said he had sent for his cousin Rowland Williams To make him his heir and according to the best of my remembrance said that he intended he should have all his Estate and also that he the said Rowland Williams afterwards came and lived with the sd John Phillips and he owned him as a cousin and the said Williams owned sd Phillips as his uncle and the sd Williams died in the possession of sd Estate and I being a near neighbor and acquainted with each of them and I never heard of any other Relation that the sd Phillips had in this country." Sworn 28 Feb. 1728. The same day Elizabeth (Withers) Curtis, aged about 65, and Peter Lewis, aged about 59, deposed to same effect.

Paul Williams signed a petition in 1680. He had a grant of 30 acres in 1699. Married Joanna, widow of John Gaskin and dau. of Daniel Crocker. May 5, 1740, Joanna Williams of Kittery deposed, aged 77, that sixty years ago "I lived with my father Mr. Daniel Crocker at Kennebeck near to one Mr. Tho Webber, said father being nearest neighbor below to said Webber and John Leighton ye nearest neighbor to said Webber above over against Arrowsic mill." Leighton lived on Winnegance Creek, Bath, Me. Children of Paul Williams:

M. 2 Sept. 1750 Joseph Williams and Lydia Witham.

M. 3 Dec. 1801 John Williams and Lydia Fernald.

Bapt. 15 Nov. 1715 Martha and Lazarus Williams.

WILSON.

At a court held in Boston, 28 July 1641, the following record was made, "Gowen Wilson appearing hee & his sureties discharged." He is mentioned there again in 1643. The Norfolk County records say that Gowen Wilson had a son that was born and died in Exeter, N. H., in Nov. 1647. He was appointed cowherd at Exeter 1 May 1649. See Bell's Hist. of Exeter, pp. 49, 50. His name appears on the town records of Exeter 24 Nov. 1650. He was probably related to the Thomas Wilson who signed the Combination of Exeter in 1640 and had a daughter Deborah, who m. John Warren 21 Oct. 1650.

Without doubt it is the same Gowen Wilson who signed the submission of Kittery to Massachusetts in 1652. He had a grant of 24 acres at Goose Cove 19 Jan. 1658, and of adjoining land in 1673, making 45 acres. Was selectman in 1674 and 1675. Name of wife unknown. A deposition, made 24 April 1654, gives his age as 36. He was born, therefore, in 1618. He died between 1684 and 1686. Children:

BARTLETT.

On page 284 it is said that Sarah Bartlett married Stephen Ferguson. This is in harmony with Fogg's notes and private records. Since that page was printed I have received evidence that Sarah Bartlett married, 17 Sept. 1762, Captain John Wentworth, and that Stephen Ferguson married, 28 March 1782, Shuah, dau. of Nathan and Sarah (Shapleigh) Bartlett, who on page 285 is erroneously said to have died in childhood. This matter is stated correctly in the notes on the Ferguson and Wentworth families. ✓

DOWNING.

The court records at Concord, N. H., contain the following entry: "25 June 1656. Dennis Downing and Ann his wife plaintiff against Francis Trickey and Sarra his wife in an action for slander for saying that the said Ann Downing did stand upon her head untill a cup of wine was taken off the heels of her shoows and that the Kings health was drunken, and more she said that the sayd Ann Downing was drunke." Sarah Trickey owned the truth of the charge, and the court declared that a great wrong had been done to Ann Downing, but when Sarah Trickey was searched for to receive sentence, she had disappeared.

Further reflection convinces me that Dennis Downing, mentioned on pages 168 and 361 as killed by Indians, was son of Joshua and grandson of Dennis Downing.

Page 449. Elizabeth Gerrish married Joseph (not John) Mitchell. She was widow of Eliot Gerrish and dau. of Roger and Mary (Littlefield) Deering.

- Page 612. Josiah Mitchell was probably son of Samuel and Martha (Rackliff) Mitchell of page 614.
- Page 661, fifth line. The deposition of Deborah (Lockwood) Phoenix, given on page 797, shows that she was born "about" 1648, instead of 1646.
- Page 658, ninth line. Agnes Phillips m. Thomas Edgerly of Durham, N. H. Her sister Jane m. his brother, James Edgerly.
- Page 655, twelfth line. It is evident that Maria A. Pettegrew, who
m. Rufus S. Scott, was not daughter of Thomas J.
Pettegrew.
- Page 667, twenty-seventh line. James Plaisted m. Sarah, dau. of Rev. Jeremiah and Mary (Shipway) Wise. Cf.
- Page 803, thirty-fifth line. According to N. E. Register, Vol. X.
p. 58, Mary, wife of Rev. Jeremiah Wise died 12 Nov.
1742, aged 62. According to Maine Wills, p. 625, she died in 1748. In either case her age, 62, does not correspond to the date of her birth given on page 415 of this book. Her birthdate perhaps should be earlier, as well as the date of her parents' marriage.

A few erroneous dates will be recognized at once as typographical errors.
