PREFACE.

IT has been not inaptly said by someone, that genealogy is the "life history of the dead." Certainly no apology is needed in presenting this volume, in which the endeavor has been to perpetuate the memory of this single name and transmit to posterity an interest in those through whose veins the blood of their emigrant ancestor flowed.

Genealogy, as we know, has frequent reference in the Old Testament, and is quite complete in the history of the generation of man, while only two references occur in the New Testament. In the ancient sense, as now, it refers to pedigree, or line of ancestors. The genealogist necessarily must find a very limited field for his labors, restricted as he is to the ramifications of a single family.

We of this later generation realize the virtues handed down to us by our ancestors, whose rugged lives and struggles we appreciate; therefore, in this present work, it has been the aim of the genealogist to secure fullness and accuracy in the records of those who have attained distinction, and, by diligent research, to rescue from oblivion those less fortunate.

When all the difficulties of compiling such a work as this are considered, the gathering of scattered fragments of family history from all quarters and made to fit into a harmonious whole, it cannot but have a value and interest to the families concerned. It is not a complete work—no work of the kind can be—for much data necessary for perfecting it has been lost; early records of births, baptisms, marriages, and deaths have been mislaid, destroyed, or are incomplete.

The Davidsons, or Davisons, have heretofore had no collected genealogy of the family published; therefore, in presenting this volume, it is the desire of the genealogist to awaken in all who bear the name, or who are connected with the family of which it treats, such pride and interest that they may preserve to future generations the same dignified line as unsullied as it has been in the past.

In the preparation of this work I am largely indebted to Mr. A. H. Davison of Rock Rapids, Ia. ; to Mr. E. H. Davison of New Britain, Conn. ; and to Mr. S. M. Davidson of Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y., for valuable aid.

I have not altogether a disinterestedness in this work, for through my wife comes a share in the heritage of all the good done by the "giants in those days" who bore the family name.

Yours respectfully,

H. R. R. C.

DAVISON GENEALOGY.

EARLY in the sixteenth century (1520) the Clan McDarmid, or McDavid, was prominent in the Highlands of Scotland, and in 1560 the county of Dingwall, Scotland, was settled by the descendants of this Clan. From this stock sprung Nicholas, son of Malcolm of Dingwall, the ancestor of this family in America. Nicholas, b. about 1580, upon reaching manhood, early in the seventeenth century, found his way to Lynn, England, where he married, and had, among other children, a son, Nicholas, born in 1611, the emigrant who came to America about 1630 as the agent for Governor Craddock.

Nicholas Davison, Davidson, or Davisson, as in his will his name is spelled three different ways, m. Joan Hodges.

CHILDREN.

DANIEL, b. at Charlestown, Mass., 8 April, 1639.

SARAH, b. 1647 ; m. 24 March, 1665, Joseph Lynde, or Linds, at Charlestown, Mass.

(DECREE OF COURT IN MYSTIC BRIDGE CASE.)

Oct. 27, 1648.—"In answer to the petition of Nico. Davison in the behalfe of Mrs. Cradocke for the repayving & Mayntayning of Misticke bridge by the Country, the sd. Mr. Davison being sent for the evidence he can give having been herd & examined with the records of the Generall Court it appears that though the Generall Court did engage for an exempt from rates for that yeare & finishing the same on their owne charges which accordingly hath ben pformed; but it appears not that in the least the Generall Court did ingage to the repayving thereof the court being satisfied with the records doe order that the sd Misticke bridge henceforth shall not by the country any way be repayved & that the passage for Travellers shol be over the ford which is above the bridge. And further, for the preventing future charge about bridges & high ways it is ordered that all bridges & high ways in the limitts of the severall townships that now are or hereafter shall be by the severall townes in whose limitts such bridges & high wayes are by them made, repayved & mayntayned. By both."

Nov. 11, 1647.—"Upon ye petition of Nico. Davison for ye 100£ due to Mrs. Glover it is ordered ye 100£ should be paid him and when it is paid assurance must be taken of Mr. Davison, of ye Colledge to ye Countryes use & Mr. Petrs to pay 50£ to ye Colledge."

May 10, 1648.—Mr. Davison is charged in statement of Cargo Ship Planter with freight 91£ 16s.

Oct. 27, 1648.—"Mr. Davison appears as a witness in the matter of ye countrys liability to repair the 'Mistick' bridge which the court found the country not bound to do." See decree.

Oct. 19, 1649.—Following the courts finding of facts it was ordered "Mr. Samuell Mavericke, Mr. Nicholas Davison and Mr. Thomas Lobe are by the Court and by consent of the parties chosen and appointed Commissioners to regulate auditt and finally to determine accompts from the beginning of the world to this day betwinxt Mr. Sampson Lane and Mr. Richard Cutts, &c. &c. &c."

Oct. 15, 1650.—Nicholas Davison presented petition to the court praying the satisfaction of money long since paid out by Mrs. Cradock. The court found the money not paid for country but for individuals—refused.

May 6, 1657.—The above mentioned petition was renewed and a like answer returned.

May 27, 1652.—This Court having p'vsed a paper presented by severall gentlemen concerning the setting of trade and the well improvement thereof doth thankfully accept of their paynes and good endeavours therein & doe therefore thinke it meete to elect a counsell as is suggested to make a triall of what with God's blessing may be effected; to which end this court doth desire Mr. Nathaniel Duncan of Boston, Mr. Thomas Broughton, Mr. Nicholas Davison, Mr. Richard Russell, Capt. Thomas Clarke & Capt. Thomas Savage to be the Councell to consider all sorts of trading and to consult about the best ways of improving the same and to meete together in some place in Boston or Charlestowne, where themselves shall appoyant & having agreed of such things as they conceive to be good & profitable for the advance of trading to p'sent the same to the next following session of the Generall Court to be approved of ye sd. Court se it good."

May 18, 1653.—On petition of Nicholas Davison authority was granted to any persons who would repair and maintain the Mystic bridge to charge toll of 1 c for each person & 6 c man and horse & 12 c carriage.

The early records of the Society of Mortlake and of the township of Brooklyn show that Joseph was prominent in its ecclesiastical and secular affairs. He was a member of the committee chosen to secure the incorporation of the township. In 1756 "Dea Davison" was a member of a committee of five to hear complaints and apply the discipline of the church and this committee was soon called to sit in judgment upon one of their own numbers who was charged with drinking to excess in the house of "Captain Putnam," the "old Put" of Bunker Hill and of the Revolution.

(This offender was probably Major Holland.)

Joseph Davison was one of the organizers of the First Church of Brooklyn (then called Mortlake) in 1734, of which he was one of its first deacons. He came from the church at Pomfret, nine miles north of the present town of Brooklyn on a tract of 1200 acres of land which he and Stephen Williams and Joseph Holland purchased in Mortlake in the year A.D. 1725.

The following extract is taken from a letter written in 1886 by E. H. Davison, one competent to speak of what he declares, and is an estimate that needs little variation to be applicable to the several collateral branches during the same generations :

From the early records of the Mortlake Society, it appears that Joseph Davison, when a young man (about 20 years of age), purchased the tract of land and made his home there, as has already appeared, and from that time to this his descendants, in direct line, have been identified with that society; and his bones, with those of his family and of his descendants for five generations, now rest in the quiet, pleasant town of Brooklyn, Conn., and my father, brother, and myself own burial plots adjoining our grandfather's.

I am proud to say that no descendant of Joseph Davison was ever accused of any misdemeanor, and without exception all have been industrious, respectable, and thrifty people.

Joseph was a God-fearing man and was a deacon in the First Church in Brooklyn, and I believe it to be a fact that every one of his descendants, male and female, in the line of Peter, his youngest son, have become members of the Church of Christ in their early life; and from what I know of the descendants of the older son, Joseph, I believe their record would confirm a similar statement with regard to them.

(1886) E. H. DAVISON.

NOTE.—He does not mean to omit reference to other brothers, except on account of want of acquaintance.

JOSEPH DAVISON.

The following is a copy of the inscriptions on the tombstones in the old burial ground south of Brooklyn Village, obtained from E. H. Davison of New Britain, Conn.

The stones are of common trap rock, but are in a good state of preservation :

In Memory Of
 DEACON JOSEPH DAVISON who died July ye 21 1757 in ye 54th year of his age.
 And though I sleep here
 d,
 under groun
 Yet shall wake at ye trumpet sound.

In Memory Of
 ON
 MRS. MARY DAVIS
 late widow to Dea. Joseph
 Davison who died April ye 17th in ye 67th year of her age.

" In lettering the stones there was not room for the 'd' of 'ground' and the 'on' of 'Davison,' so they were placed above the line as in the above copy."

Inscriptions taken from tombstone over John Davison's grave at Hardwick, N. Y.:

Mr. John Davison, died Dec 29th, 1815, 82 years old.

Now be administered by a friend

The longest life must have an end.

View this my grave. Alas! how frail a spot of earth is now my all.

Over his wife's grave:

Mrs. Mehitable Davison died Feb. 28th, 1829 in the 94th year of her age.

60. Peter, b. 15 May, 1739 (Joseph & Mary Warner), married (Canterbury Town Rec.) Apl. 28, 1768, Abigail Woodward (b. Apl. 4, 1743; d. Mch. 28, 1791), daughter of Deacon Thomas Woodward. He died May 4, 1800 (old style) and was buried on what was then his farm in west part of Brooklyn, Conn. He was a captain in the Revolutionary War. E. H. Davison says he has the commission signed by Jonathan Trumbull in 1776 as Colonel Governor of Conn. He and his wife were admitted to Brooklyn Church Dec. 9, 1770.

Capt. Peter m. 2nd, 6 Nov. 1791, Mrs. Susannah Weaver.

The following is a copy of the inscriptions from the tombstones in the family burial lot of Peter Davison, which is located in the west part of Brooklyn, Ct., on what was then his farm, known as "Ram's Head." In this little burial ground, which is enclosed by a substantial stone wall, are several other graves.

In Memory of

MR. PETER DAVISON

who died May 29, 1800, aged 61 years.

On the dear bosom of his God
the dying saint relies;
There lays his feeble flesh
to rest & every care resigns.

In Memory of

187. ELIZABETH, m. 13 Aug., 1812, James Randal, and had issue, two daughters:

1. REBECCA, b. 7 July, 1814.

2. ELIZA, b. 27 Aug., 1816.

86. Thomas, s. of Jonathan & Keziah Parke, b. Nov. 18

1725, at Preston, eldest son of Jonathan Davison 1st of that place, m. Mrs. Mary (Kingsley) Stoddard of Lebanon, Conn., and settled in the latter place. By her first husband Mrs. D. had 2 sons, viz.: Samuel Stoddard, b. Oct. 31, 1753; d. at Chester, Warren Co., N. Y., about 1825; and Azariah Stoddard, b. Feb. 1, 1755.

Mr. Davison removed from Lebanon to Wilmington, Vt., in the fall of 1772 or spring of 1773. Thence he removed to Pownal, Vt., where he resided at the time of the battle of Bennington, Aug. 16, 1777. Thence he removed to Bennington, and thence to Middletown, Vt., in the spring of 1790, where he died April 25, 1795, "aged 69 years, 5 months, and 7 days." He was a farmer and mechanic, following mostly the business of a carpenter and millwright. He was a very pious man; but was so deaf for some years previous to his death that in order to hear the preacher on the Sabbath he was compelled to sit or stand near the pulpit. His death was the occasion of a revival of religion at Middletown, which resulted in the conviction and conversion of 30 or 40 persons, who united with the Congregational Church at that place. It was remarked by a pious, though somewhat quaint member of the church (Joel Frisbie) that Thomas Davison, like Samson, had slain more at his death than during his life.

Mary Kingsley, the wife of Thomas Davison, 2nd, died at Middletown in 1802, aged about 70.

CHILDREN.

188. URIAH, b. at Lebanon, and drowned there while a young man.

Asa Davison served five years in French and Indian War, and eight years in Revolutionary War. "Asa Davison left his company at Cambridge in Sept., 1775, to join the northern expedition of Benedict Arnold, but after suffering incredible hardships he arrived at Cambridge on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 23rd." (See History of Windham County.)

"Asa Davison marched in the 'Lexington Alarm' April, 1775, from Ashford, was in service 10 days (p. 5). He enlisted in the Third Regiment, Col. Israel Putnam, in the Fifth Company, under Thomas Knowlton, May 6, 1775; was discharged Dec. 10." "Connecticut Men in the Revolution," p. 55. From A. C. Bates, Sect. Conn. His. Society.

The Record and Pension Office, War Department, Washington, Feb. 4, 1897, gives the following record: "The records of this office show that one Asa Davison served as a private in Captain Nathaniel Webb's company, 4th Battalion Connecticut forces, commanded by Col. John Durkee, Revolutionary War. He enlisted March 1st, 1778, to serve eight months, and was discharged Jan. 1st, 1779." The records also show "that Asa Davison served as a private in Captain Nehemiah Rice's company, Eighth Connecticut Regiment, Revolutionary War. He enlisted Aug. 16, 1779, to serve six months, and was discharged Jan. 15, 1780." The records further show "that one Asa Davison" served as a private in the 1st company, Fifth Connecticut Regiment, commanded by Lieut. Colonel Sherman, Revolutionary War. His name first appears on the roll for March, 1782, and he was discharged June 22, 1782.

Asa Davison purchased land in Preston, Conn., in 1772. He died at the home of his son Ezra (2d child), aged 95, in —, 1831. He had lived in Grafton, N. Y., during the last years of his life.

DAVIDSON, LUCRETIA MARIA.

A remarkable instance of early genius; born at Plattsburg, N. Y. When but four years old a number of her little books were found to be filled with rude drawings, accompanied with explanatory verses written in characters of the printed alphabet. From an early age every leisure moment was devoted to reading. The earliest of her productions were written when she was nine years old. So early, so ardent, and so fatal a pursuit of intellectual improvement is unparalleled, except in the cases of Chatterton and Kirke White.

In October, 1824, a gentleman who knew her intense desire for education placed her at a female seminary, where her incessant application debilitated by disease, and she died before completing her seventeenth year. A biographical sketch, with a collection of her poems, entitled "Amir Khan and other Poems, the Remains of L. M. Davidson," was published by S. F. B. Morse in 1829. Although a great part of her compositions were destroyed, 278 remain. See "Life of Catherine M. Sedgwick," 1843.

"Poems by Lucretia Maria Davidson, with Illustrations by F. O. C. Darley." Edited by M. Oliver Davidson, New York. Published by Hurd & Houghton, Riverside Press, Cambridge, 1871.

"Poetical Remains of the Late Lucretia Davidson, Collected and Arranged by her Mother. With a Biography by Miss Sedgwick." Boston: Crosby, Nicholas Lee & Co., 1860.

DAVIDSON, MARGARET MILLER, POETESS.

Sister of Lucretia Maria. Sharing her sister's precocity, she began to write at six years of age. At ten she wrote and acted in a passionate drama in society at New York, and notwithstanding the warning of her sister's fate, her intellectual activity was not restrained.

Margaret's poems were issued under the auspices of Washington Irving, and the works of both sisters were published together in 1850. A volume of selections from writings of Mrs. Margaret M. Davidson, the mother, with a preface by Miss C. M. Sedgwick, appeared in 1843. Lieut. L. P. Davidson, U. S. A., the brother of Margaret and Lucretia, who also died young, wrote verses with elegance and ease. From Dict. Amer. Biog., Drake.

See "Life and Poetical Remains of Margaret M. Davidson," by Washington Irving. London: David Bogue, Fleet Street. Late Filt and Bogue.

AN ORIGINAL AND HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED ODE*
BY LUCRETIA M. DAVIDSON.

I.

Awake, awake, my lyre,
And tell thy silent master's humble tale;
In sounds they may prevail—
Sounds that gentle thoughts inspire;
Though so exalted she,
And I so lonely be,
Tell her with different notes, make all thy harmony.

II.

Hark! How the strings awake!
And though the moving hand approach not near,
Themselves, with awful fear,
A kind of numerous trembling make.
Now all thy forces try,
Now all thy charms apply,
Revenge upon her ear the conquest of her eye.

*Original in possession of S. M. Davidson, Fishkill.

III.

Weak lyre, thy virtue sure
Is useless here, since thou art only found
To cure but not to wound
 And she to wound, but not to cure.
 Too weak, too, wilt thou prove,
 My passion to remove,
Physic to other ills, thou'rt nourishment to love.

IV.

Sleep, sleep again, my lyre,
For thou can'st never tell my humble tale
In sounds that will prevail,
 Nor gentler thoughts in her inspire ;
 All thy vain mirth lay by,
 Bid thy strings silent lie—
Sleep, sleep again, my lyre, and let thy master die.

The following is the story of the marriage of Miss Margaret Miller to Dr. Oliver Davidson, as told by Mrs. S. H. Bailey, née Platt, who received the same from her mother :

Miss Miller had been invited by Mrs. Bailey's mother to spend a year with them in Plattsburg. She was then (1803) a young and beautiful girl, fond of society, and went frequently to visit relatives in town (Plattsburg). Dr. Davidson, a young physician, had but lately moved to Plattsburg. They met at parties and other social functions, and their acquaintance soon ripened into a feeling of a more serious nature, namely, love. Mrs. Bailey's father (Mr. Platt) felt much annoyed at the growing intimacy and discouraged its continuance. Mr. Platt felt himself to be Miss Miller's guardian, at least for the time she was absent from her mother's care and influence, and he knew that he would be blamed for any matrimonial alliance contracted during her visit at his home. One morning Mr. Platt was called to town on business, expecting to be absent all day. A few hours after he left, Dr. Davidson appeared at the house, on horseback, with a pillion attached to his saddle. His mission became apparent when he asked for Miss Miller, who evidently was expecting him. He invited her to return with him. Mrs. Platt, who overheard the conversation, became suspicious, and pleaded with her to remain at home; but in vain, for she persisted in going with him. Soon after they had left, Mr. Platt unexpectedly returned. His wife, who was watching for his return, went to meet him, and, before he dismounted, told him briefly of Miss Miller's departure and what her fears were. Mr. Platt immediately turned his horse, and rode with all possible speed, in the hope of overtaking his ward. He went directly to his brother's (Mr. Theodorus Platt) and, on entering the door, saw Dr. Davidson and Margaret Miller, who were standing before a magistrate, the marriage ceremony being then in progress. As the question, "If there be any objection," etc., was being asked, Mr. Platt stepped forward and said, "I have one, most emphatically;" and then stated that he was, for the time, Miss Miller's guardian, and that her family had not given their consent to the marriage. After a full discussion, the magistrate decided that, both being of age, the ceremony could legally go on, and pronounced them man and wife. All was forgiven; and Dr. Davidson, who was a kind and excellent man, became a most devoted husband and father. The families always lived afterward on terms of close intimacy.

Mrs. Bailey tells of the many pleasant and happy months spent in that hospitable and lovely home, which everywhere showed evidences of a cultivated taste; where a charming circle of friends gathered, and which, in after years, was to be known to the world in all its detail through the poetic genius of the talented daughters, Lucretia and Margaret.

190. Thomas, 3d s. of Thomas & Mary (Kingsley) Stoddard, born July 14, 1763, at Lebanon, Conn.; m. Jan. 19, 1791, Abigail Miner, b. Dec. 11, 1765, at Woodbury, Conn.; bap. 23 March, 1766; and eldest daughter of Dea. Gideon

Miner, senior, of Middletown, Vt.* (See Ancient Hist. Woodbury, p. 643, for account Miner family.) Previous to his marriage, and owing to a stiffness in a knee joint, occasioned by a fever sore, while living in Bennington with his father, his pursuits through life were necessarily confined to such as required no great bodily labor. He was, however, so far successful as to leave his family in comfortable circumstances at the time of his death, which occurred at Middletown, on the 21st of Nov., 1790, at the age of 34. He was a professor of religion, as was also his wife; and his funeral sermon was preached by the late Rev. Lemuel Haynes, then of West Rutland, Vt. His wife died at Saratoga Springs, Jan. 31, 1844, aged 79.†

*Mr. G. M. Davison has in his possession a copy of Morse's Geography used by Thomas Davison at this period, containing his handwriting and autograph.

His monument, which stands in the burying-ground at Middletown, contains the following inscription :

IN MEMORY OF

Mr. Thomas Davison, Junr.
who died Nov. 21st, 1799
in the 35th year of his age.

An angel's arm can't snatch
me from the grave;
Legions of angels can't confine me here."

† Her monument in the new cemetery at Saratoga Springs to which her remains were removed from the old burying-ground in 1861, bears the following inscription :

Abigail,
Mother of G. M. & C. Davison,
Died Jan. 31, 1844.
Æ. 78.

So Jesus slept. God's dying son
Passed through the grave and bless'd the bed;
Rest here, blest saint, till from his throne
The morning break and pierce the shade.

CHILDREN.

386. GIDEON MINER, b. at Middletown, Vt., Nov. 12, 1791.

387. CLEMENT, b. Nov. 23, 1794, at Middletown; m. Oct. 17, 1818, Elizabeth Newman of New York, b. in 1789 at Bedford, N. Y. She was a daughter of Maj. Elias Newman, a Revolutionary soldier, and afterwards Sheriff and Surrogate of Westchester County, and at one time a candidate for Governor of the State of New York. Mr. Davison and his wife resided for several years in Brooklyn, where they had two children, who died in infancy. They resided at Harlem, N. Y., in 1861.

192. Jonathan, s. of Thomas, b. Sept. 2, 1769, at Lebanon (recorded Jan. 29, 1796, Joseph Rockwell, Register; also at Middletown, on 13th day of Oct., 1833); m. Chloe Richardson, b. June 16, 1774; a step-daughter of May & Phinehas Clough of Middletown, Vt., where they settled, and where he died in the spring of 1812; and his wife died March 1, 1813.

CHILD.

388. JONATHAN. Survived his parents, and removed to the West.

Clough's residence was about a mile south of the house of Thomas Davison, 3d. He was a militia Major during the Revolutionary War and so active a patriot as to become an object of hatred and vengeance among the Tories. The following is an account of an effort to take his life, but which was happily frustrated:

A Tory, by the name of Irish, who resided two or three miles from Clough, and who had probably been instigated by others, was the agent selected for this purpose. Armed with a heavily loaded musket, he placed himself in a secluded spot on Clough's farm, watching the movements of the latter, and waiting for an opportunity to execute his design. In some way this fact became known to Gen. Isaac Clark of Castleton (an active officer of the Revolution and of the War of 1812, who was, in turn, watching the movements of Irish). It was not long before Clough was seen approaching from an adjoining field, unconscious of the presence of either foe or friend. On his attempting to climb a fence, Irish drew up his gun, and while taking aim at his intended victim, Clark hastily pointed his rifle toward Irish, and shot him dead, thus saving the life of Clough. Clark ever after this was known by the name of "Old Rifle." Clough lived till the early part of the present century, and died ripe in years and honors.

228. Captain Paul, s. of Asa & Sarah Pride; b. 1765; d. 19 Feb., 1805, from injuries sustained from being thrown from his horse; m. about 1785, Sally Gould. She was b. 1765; and d. at Lima, N. Y., 21 Oct., 1844.

The records of Ashford, Conn., show that Paul Davison purchased land in Ashford in 1785 and 1787. In the summer of 1778 Paul Davison and his brother-in-law Jonathan Gould went from Connecticut to the wilds of Western New York. They located on land where Lima, Livingston Co., N. Y., now stands, thus being pioneers in that portion of the country. Paul Davison was attracted to the new country while under the command of General Sullivan in a campaign against Indians and Tories. Paul and his brother-in-law cleared a little space of ground, built a log cabin, and on the cleared ground planted corn, potatoes, beans, etc. Paul Davison then returned to assist in moving his family, which consisted of his wife Sally (Gould) Davison and her mother Mrs. Abbott, also Paul's two little children. In the spring of 1789 Paul Davison, wife, two children, Mrs. Abbott, and Asahel Burchard started in an ox-cart drawn by a span of oxen over the route of "Sullivan's trail" towards their new home in Genesee Valley. The difficulties encountered by this pioneer family were very great. They made slow progress during the day, very often being obliged to clear away fallen trees and build temporary bridges. At night Mrs. Davison, children, and Mrs. Abbott slept in the cart, while Paul Davison and Asahel Burchard slumbered beneath the ox-cart during the whole journey. The trip consumed three weeks. For two years the family pounded all their corn in a "stump mortar." Captain Paul Davison and some of his pioneer neighbors took six or seven bushels of corn in an Indian canoe down the Genesee River to the mill; on their return the canoe upset, wetting the corn meal and unfitting it for use—a great loss to them. At the time of his death, Paul Davison was living on the land he settled. The first death in the settlement was Mrs. Abbott. The first white child born west of Geneva, N. Y., was Lorina, a daughter and third child of Paul Davison.

From "Conn. Men in the Revolution": Paul Davison marched from Pomfret in the Lexington Alarm, in service 20 days (p. 20). Paul Davison enlisted in Capt. Abbott's Co. Eleventh Militia Reg., 1776 (p. 463). Rec. and Pension Office War Dep., 4 Feb., 1897: "It also appears that Paul Davison served as a fifer in Capt. Nathaniel Webb's Company, 4th Conn. Reg., commanded by Col. John Durkee. He enlisted 2 June, 1778, to serve three years, and was discharged 10 Jan., 1781." From the Dep. of the Interior, Bureau of Pensions, Washington, 11 Mar., 1897: "Martin, Lorina, Jonathan, Fanny, Betsy, and Olive Davison, children of Paul and Sally Davison, made application for pension 12 Jan., 1852, and their claim was allowed for the actual service of their father as a fifer in the Connecticut troops, Revolutionary War, for a period of three years; a part of the time he served under Col. Durkee. He enlisted at Ashford, Conn."

251. Septimus, s. of Aaron & Lodicy Martin, bap. at Brooklyn, Ct., 26 July, 1801; m. at Brooklyn, Ct., 16 Oct., 1826, Margaret Holbrook of Abington. His sister Clarissa lived with him until his daughter Frances married, and then resided with her. He was Judge of the Court until he was 70, at which age he was released. From a newspaper clipping we learn that Capt. Septimus Davison died at the age of 83. At the funeral Rev. Mr. Beard read the Scriptures and the Unitarian choir sang. Many citizens were present. He was a kind neighbor, intelligent citizen, and an honest man. He was a hotel keeper for twenty-two years—at South Coventry for a number of years, and at Brooklyn, Ct., two years. Many offices of trust were committed to him, and promptness, good judgment, independence, and integrity showed him to be a public man.

Extract from Hartford "Courant," November 6, 1886:

"Mr. and Mrs. George L. Davison of Brooklyn will celebrate their golden wedding on the 9th inst. with a large family gathering. Mr. Davison's great grandfather, Deacon Joseph Davison, was one of the pioneer settlers of eastern Connecticut, and in 1723 he bought 1,200 acres of land, which was afterwards included in the present town of Brooklyn; and with about thirty others organized its first church. Since that time (for 163 years) his descendants in direct line have resided continuously in Brooklyn, and have all been among its most respected citizens. Mr. and Mrs. Davison have two sons—the older, George W. Davison, is treasurer and agent of the Rochester Machine Tool Company, builders of steam engines and machinists' tools, of Rochester, N. Y.; and the other is E. H. Davison, secretary and superintendent of the American Hosiery Company of New Britain. A niece of Mr. and Mrs. Davison, who was left an orphan at an early age, was brought up as a daughter in the family, and is now the wife of Julian Griggs, chief engineer of the Scioto Valley Railroad of Ohio. The children and grandchildren are all expected home for the golden anniversary."

Extract taken from Putnam "Patriot," of Dec. 2, 1887:

"ELISHA H. DAVISON.

"There died in our village one week ago to-day one of the humble, unobtrusive men who so richly adorn their Christian profession. Elisha H. Davison, as his pastor said, was a great man, not in anything worldly, but in goodly character. About two months ago he was severely hurt while loading a team with logs at our station. Although he apparently recovered from that injury, he had continued weak and ailing ever since, and on Thursday night took a bad turn, as observed by his wife. In alarm, the doctor was sent for, but on his arrival he announced that his services could not avail. Mr. Davison had but a few hours to live. He was conscious when this announcement was made, and cried out, 'Praise the Lord!' He had his house in order, and had no further work to do to be ready for the grim messenger, and he yielded up his spirit to the God who gave it, trusting in the faithfulness of that Being whom he had so long served with pure heart to be rewarded at the general resurrection. He was 65 years and 9 months old. He leaves a wife and six children, three of whom are with their mother.

"The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Methodist Church, of which the deceased was a member. The house was crowded by the friends and neighbors of the family, who came to pay the last tribute of respect to their departed friend. After the sermon, Mr. George M. Morse in a most feeling manner expressed his respect for Mr. Davison, whom he knew and owned as a dear child of God, whose labors and life corresponded with his profession. He related some instances that came under his own observation, to show how zealous had been his course of life to promote spirituality whenever the way opened.

"The sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Butler, pastor of the Methodist Church.

"SERMON.

"PSALM xxxvii. 37 : 'Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright : for the end of that man is peace.'

"David had seen men given up to all manner of wickedness ; others, in a certain sense, who were upright, but were ungodly ; and then again those who followed but evil with their whole heart. He had seen those like Enoch, Elijah, Moses, and other worthies, and saw the great difference between the evil and the good man, and in comparison he had said, 'Mark the perfect man.' What is it makes a man upright and perfect ?

"I affirm that Elisha Davison was a man of that character. The end of such a man is peace.

"Who is the perfect man ? Is it he who makes loud professions in the churches and is not respected ? But mark the perfect man, who brings his Christian life up to men, and does not degrade it in their eyes. He makes God's Word his guide; Christ, his sanctified example. This man found Christ, he had his sins forgiven, and he found in Him a source of bliss, and taking the Bible as his guide was baptized.

"There are those who profess perfection, and yet do it to gain interest with men and not God. The life Elisha Davison lived was in Christ. He loved the Church, and stood by it in its struggles. He did not neglect the sanctuary nor the prayer meeting. These he felt he needed as a means of promoting his spiritual life, and when he stood and warned his fellow-men, all the Christian graces were shown perfected in him. And why? Because he trusted alone in the Crucified by a consecration of his entire self.

"Such a man is perfect. He was just and faithful as a husband and father, as a neighbor, and before all men.

"Such is the perfect man. Not that he is without mistakes. No one can have perfection of mind, or will, or body, nor ever had, except Jesus Christ. Neither is it heart perfection; but it is in his heart to be so, and God counts it for righteousness.

"Elisha Davison was a great man. Not as the world estimates greatness, but as God does. Can I say too much of this man? Your hearts reply in the negative.

"The Church has lost a grand master. No man ever honored his church more. We shall all miss him. Many a time he has inspired the preacher by his devotedness, as he was seen with uplifted eyes and hands, continually praying that he might be a blessing to the people.

"Elisha Davison was a citizen well worthy of the respect of the community for his uprightness and simplicity of character. His face, like Moses' when on the mount with God, shone with God's glory.

"At nineteen years of age he became a Christian, and for forty-six years he had served God, and mounted higher and higher, and reached out continually for greater spirituality.

"His last meeting here all will remember. He prayed to be like Cornelius—a just and devout man, who feared God. He did not deem his Christian duty done merely by being in his place in the church meetings. He was devout in his heart, and abandoned to God.

“To show his integrity of character I will mention what an esteemed lady said: ‘If Elisha Davison failed in his word, I would not know whom to trust.’ So said all his neighbors.

“Thank God, then, that there are other such men in Putnam. You have confidence in them as men of God. God keep them pure as long as they abide with us, and multiply them an hundred fold.

“Elisha Davison came here thirty-five years ago a Christian man, and with the exception of a short period was a member of this church. He was a faithful, trustworthy, and humble man who walked out on the promises of God.

“Sinners die and go out in the dark. A Christian meets the messenger of death with no disturbance, no matter when he comes. He has God’s assurance that He will be with him in the valley of the shadow of death, and he knows it will be well with him in the end. David, who saw the difference between these two deaths, cried out, ‘Mark the perfect man . . . for the end of that man is peace.’ He has gone before. He has gone to the One altogether lovely. Whatever others may say, I believe his soul has gone to God.

“Friends and relatives, most of you are resting in the same God whom your dear relative trusted. Commit yourself more fully to Him, and in the time to come you will all realize His supporting grace, and you will meet Him in all unending life of bliss. You know his constant endeavor was to promote your Christian welfare. Some of you have not chosen his way. As you look upon him for the last time, say, ‘I will meet father in heaven.’

“Neighbors, a great man has fallen. No, he has risen higher than ever before. He has attained that holiness of heart without which no man can see God. Your presence here attests your faith in this man’s devoted Christian character and your wish to honor him. In your last moments may you have the same assurance of divine help to sustain you, and may you also, like our dear brother, be able to say, 'Praise the Lord! He doeth all things well!'"

Here he established the first newspaper printed in that village (the "Saratoga Sentinel"), and was its editor and proprietor for about twenty-three years; during most of which time, and until 1848, he was Clerk in Chancery for the 4th Circuit of the State of New York. He also originated and superintended the construction of the second railroad made in the United States (the Saratoga and Schenectady), was the commissioner and disbursing officer of the Utica and Schenectady railroad during its construction, and originated and superintended the construction of the Saratoga and Washington railroad, holding the office of president of the company for several years. His wife, who had proved his solace in every trial and sickness, who had been a sharer in his sorrows as well as joys; who had contributed much towards the training of her children to positions of usefulness, respectability, and piety; and who had been an invaluable companion and mother, died at Saratoga Springs, deeply lamented, but with the full assurance of a glorious immortality, on the 6th April, 1861.

He settled in Randolph, Crawford Co., Penn., about one mile from Hickory Corners, in 1820. He came from Otis, Mass., with other brothers, in ox teams, being on the road 31 days. The "Crawford Journal," in speaking of his death, says:

"Nathaniel Davison, the oldest inhabitant of Randolph township, was buried on Sunday. 'Uncle Nat,' as he was familiarly called, was born in Massachusetts, 16 Oct., 1793, making him ninety-three years, six months, and ten days at the time of his decease. He came to Randolph township in 1820 and settled on the farm where he died. To write his history since coming to this community would be the same, as regards his struggles with pioneer life, as the history of all the first settlers. The span of his early existence stretched back over nearly all of the Constitutional period of our Government—a period in which more historical events are crowded than any other period of like duration in modern times. He enjoyed good health and a great degree of activity of body and mind up to within a few months of his death. He was strictly temperate and regular in his habits, firm in his purposes, polite and dignified in his deportment, and ever diligent in acquiring knowledge that would enable him to see a high idea of life."

426. William G., s. of John & Lydia Wood; b. 15 March, 1804; m. 8 May, 1832, Jane Ann Maria, youngest dau. of Eliphalet and Ann (Sacket) Reed; d. 2 March, 1870. She died about 1890. Remained strong until death, and was walking to church when she dropped dead with apoplexy.

William G. left his home at Otis, Mass., in 1823, and went to Crawford Co., Pa. In 1824 he built a shop on a stream $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles east of Blooming Valley, nearly opposite the residence of the late Luther Marsh. Here he manufactured wooden bowls, which he turned out by hand with chisels, the modern rapid machine for the purpose then being unknown. This shop was standing since his death; it was a rather primitive affair, the boards being held together with wooden pins. In 1826 he returned to Massachusetts. In 1832 he married and returned to Pennsylvania and purchased land adjoining Mr. Thomas Delamater on the west and built thereon. In 1834, tiring of his wild life, he returned to Otis and bought the heirs' shares of his grandfather's old barn place, which were willed by Zephaniah, Jr., to his brothers and sisters. Not satisfied with the East, he again, in 1838, returned to his place, where he resided till about 1867, when he sold his farm (except that portion which belonged to his son Wesley) to Mr. Henry Delamater, and bought a small farm, a little farther west, in the same neighborhood. Here he resided until his death. His remains were interred in the new cemetery north of Blooming Valley. Early he became a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with which he fellowshipped for many years, but finally suffered expulsion, or of his own accord severed connection, for questioning some points of creed not in accordance with their understandings of scripture. Afterwards worshipped with the Second Adventists. His wife also united with him.

441. Judge Norman, s. of Paul & Sally Gould; b. at Ashford, Ct., 16 Aug., 1786; m. at Avon, N. Y., 9 Nov., 1806, Huldah, dau. of Benjamin (b. 1 May, 1760), and Sarah (Clark) (b. 18 Feb., 1764), Brown. He d. 26 March, 1841, at Davisonville, town of Atlas, Lapeer Co., Mich. She was b. near Albany, N. Y., 4 March, 1786; d. at Highland, Oakland Co., Mich., 10 March, 1848.

Notes on the pioneer life of Judge Norman Davison and family taken from the "History of Genesee Co., Mich." (published in 1879 by Everts and Abbotts of Philadelphia):

"Judge Davison and family were the second to settle in the town of Atlas, Lapeer Co., Mich. They came from Avon, Livingston Co., N. Y., where he had a farm and hotel. Judge Davison and sons Paul Gould and O. Perry, in June, 1831, came to Detroit, then followed the 'old Saginaw or Indian trail' into the wilds of Lapeer Co. They selected and purchased 'Government lots' where the village of Davisonville and adjoining farms now are, their land entries being the second in Lapeer Co., and second in town of Atlas. (Atlas and Davison, Richfield, and Forest townships were detached from Lapeer Co. and annexed to Genesee Co. by an act of Legislature, in honor of the Davison family.)

"Judge Davison and sons erected for themselves a rude shanty, and commenced the foundation and frame of a two-story house; when completed it was second in the township, the lumber being obtained from Rowland B. Perry's mills in Grand Blanc, Genesee Co.

"The original house, remodelled, stands on its old site, on a bluff, with the Kearsley River winding along below the bluff, with the 'old Indian trail' close by, where in early days this pioneer family saw many a band of Indians pass in single file from Detroit on towards Saginaw Bay country. In the fall of 1831, leaving his two sons to the task of continuing the work commenced during the summer, Judge Davison returned to Avon, N. Y., for his family; they went to Rochester, took the canal boat to Buffalo, thence by lake route to Detroit. Arriving in Detroit he engaged board for his family, while he with the two youngest sons, aged twelve and ten, started afoot over the new roads, made worse by fall rains, to the new home in Atlas township. Paul Gould went to Detroit after the family, with two yoke of oxen and carts, and it took one week for the family to make the return trip. Their nearest neighbor to the west was two and one-half miles distant, and to the east none nearer than Port Huron. Judge Davison was a carpenter and millwright. He erected a sawmill in 1833, followed by a grist and flouring mill in 1836. The supplies for these mills, such as machinery, iron, nails, etc., were obtained by long and weary trips to Detroit. Pork was $30 a barrel, flour $15 a barrel, and other commodities to correspond.

"Under the 'Territorial Laws' Norman Davison was appointed by Governor Mason, Judge of the Courts. He was a member of the Convention that met in Detroit the second Monday in May, 1835, to frame the first State Constitution of Michigan. When Congress prepared to settle the Toledo War by surrendering a portion of the State to Ohio and Indiana in exchange for the Upper Peninsula, Judge Davison was one of the delegates that assembled at Ann Arbor. He also had business relations in Lapeer with the Harts and Whites, pioneer settlers of Lapeer. He was of large, commanding form, stern and autocratic. Judge Davison and son Gould platted the village of Davisonville, Gould being a surveyor; they set aside free lots for two church sites, school grounds, and a cemetery, all of which are used for those purposes to-day. Well does the early wayfaring traveller remember being directed long and weary distances along 'Indian trails,' through dense forests with 'way marks' spotted on the trees to 'Davison's Mills.' Where the forests spread their dense shade is now cultivated fields, lawns, and country homes; where the Indian once pursued his game, turnpikes, railroads, and bicycles are substituted; the hum of the spindle, grind of the mills, and scream of the locomotive have taken the place of the yell of the panther and howl of the wolf."

He was the fourth son of Morris Miller Davidson and his wife Elizabeth Shrimpton Davidson, née Stratford. His early life was spent in New York until the death of his father, which occurred October 24, 1854, when he removed to Jamaica, Long Island, with his mother. The facilities for education at that place were not so good as in some other parts of the State, therefore the family moved to Schenectady in October, 1857, where the educational opportunities offered seemed unexceptionable, that city being at the time the seat of one of the foremost colleges in this country. The war of 1861, however, changed this centre somewhat, and Union College lost prestige.

The mother of our sketch died in 1861. Young Davidson and his brother Oliver were allotted to the care of an uncle in Canada. The time spent there was short, owing to the death of an aunt. The two brothers were sent back to New York, and they, though only eleven and thirteen respectively, made the journey alone, which in those days was a great undertaking.

Our subject at this tender age was sent to Philadelphia and placed in the care of Matthew W. Baldwin, the celebrated engineer and locomotive builder, under whose care he spent four years acquiring the details of the business, learning thoroughly the various branches. While located there, the invasion of Pennsylvania by General Lee's troops was threatened, the call for troops was urgent, and young Davidson responded, and went to the front, serving as a private in the Thirty-second Regiment Pennsylvania Militia until the retreat of Lee at Gettysburg. In 1867 he again went to New York, and became engaged in the draughting-room of the Noretz Iron Works, then located at the foot of Twelfth Street. A position was afterwards offered him in the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, then forming a line of steamships to ply between San Francisco and the Orient. His first voyage was on one of the newly built steamers, the "China," which left New York in June, 1867, by way of the Strait of Magellan, for San Francisco, arriving in Yokohama in October of the same year.

He remained in the East for several years, and by travel and experience, and a close observation of Oriental life, gained a large knowledge of Eastern affairs and men. His selection by the company for various positions of trust was a flattering testimonial to his capacity for the work entrusted to him. In 1871 he married Miss Angelica Malcolm Ryan of Philadelphia, whose meeting with him at Yokohama, after a voyage of 15,000 miles, had all the charm of a romance. A residence of three years at Yokohama brought them in contact with the life of that Eastern capital. The vicissitudes encountered by Mr. Davidson were many, and the story of the shipwreck of the "Herman" and "Relief" on the coast of Japan would fill a volume.

In 1874, tiring of his life in the East, and longing for home, he came to Dutchess Co., N. Y., where his brother was engaged in various enterprises more or less successful; and there for the past twenty years a business career has been successfully pursued.

Mr. Davidson has aspired to only one political honor, that of candidate for the Assembly. The local papers at the time commented upon the convention which nominated Mr. Davidson by acclamation as the most representative and enthusiastic Assembly convention ever held in Southern Dutchess.

Mr. Davidson's home is at Fishkill-on-Hudson, situated on a point which overlooks the Hudson and the surrounding country—places of varied beauty and of historic memory.

Mr. Davidson's great-grandfather was one of the signers of the Constitution of New York State in 1777, and he came of a family on the paternal side who have in a long line served the State and the nation since colonial days.

His grandmother, as also his aunts Lucretia and Margaret Davidson, were writers of elegant verse, and were personal friends of Washington Irving, Miss Catharine Sedgwick, and others in the literary world of the time. Among the heirlooms preserved by Mr. Davidson is a brooch with the hair of Lord Byron, who was an admirer of Lucretia and her verse. His father was an eminent lawyer in New York City in the early fifties.

POEMS BY MR. S. M. DAVIDSON.

MARCH.

A cloudy day in March that greets
The passer-by, hurrying against the blast ;
The melting snow, the muddy streets,
All signs of spring in grayish cast.

The birds hover low along the bay,
The mist's like rain in the air ;
Evidences of the coming May
Are best guessed than seen anywhere.

One day of sunshine, then of cloud,
Is the type of our life in its change ;
But each day's blessing is ever endowed
With conditions to meet its range.

On the hillsides, under the larch,
Spears of tiny grass do cling ;
Oh, how the spirit tires of March,
Waiting for the long coming of spring !

Along the fences streaks of snow
Like threads of silver among the brown ;
The robin's note to let us know
How soon Nature into life will bound.

Chilling winds from the icy West
Have uses all their own,
In drying roads, and all that's best,
Preparing the ground until seed is sown.

March is the month of the eagle's flight,
As it soars high above the peaks,
Eagerly awaiting the other birds' plight,
Thus its daily food it seeks.

Rooks and crows and other birds throng,
Rising above the hills and meadows away,
Making merry with caws and song,
Through the lights and shadows of a windy day.

FRAGMENT.

Oh, to be where the languorous lilies grow,
Beyond the storm-clouds of winter's blast,
Where life is warm, and nature alone bestows
Its power, and where sunshine ever lasts.

No spot on earth can banish care ;
Shadows come, no matter where we roam ;
It is not here all things are ever fair,
The heart makes any place a home.

Forever pining for a change that brings
Life's comfort to the weary ones of earth,
Finds disappointment in the very things
That seem so fair and good at first.

Cherish all the beauty and the love
That each day brings in its daily course,
To hold them all as gifts from above,
That nothing at last may be counted as loss.

Abstract from letter of Mr. Oscar Davison, dated 6 Aug., 1897:

"I have been in the stage-coaching business since 1850, and from 1852 had mail contracts in connection with my coaches between here [Yarmouth] and Digby until the railroad was built, and to Shelburne until the present time, when they are about opening a railroad over the first half of the road from here, which we suppose will be completed in about a year; when, probably, what is known as 'Davison's Coaches' will cease to be."

The following was written by Mr. A. H. Davison:

"Cynthia A. Thompson was left motherless at age of four years. To this was added the calamity of a tyrannical stepmother, which made her life a tale of sorrow. In the years of young womanhood she was frail; gave no promise of the strength she afterwards manifested. At the age of seventeen she had gathered sufficient learning to teach school. This was made possible by industry and a chance opportunity to attend Waterford Academy a term or two. She taught a few terms in rural schools before her marriage. Among the accidents of every-day life, occurred at this time the one for which I am under some slight obligation, the fact of being at all. Young Wesley Davison some way was led to take her to and from her school on Mondays and Fridays a few times, and in short, they concluded not to look any further, and a matrimonial treaty resulted greatly to my advantage, I apprehend, at least, as between the chance of being born great and wise on the one hand and the chance of not being born at all. I prefer to accept my lot in a spirit of thankfulness.

"My father had only limited opportunities, and as a result failed to obtain but a limited education while young, but being a good reader, has become well informed, if not educated. His parents were poor, surrounded by a wilderness, in a region where the soil yields liberally only where vigorously encouraged. His early life was given to opening up to cultivation soil that ought to have been passed by for the fertile lands West, where human toil has a greater reward. He accepted his lot bravely, and the courageous example of my parents is a better heritage than any wealth that might otherwise have been gained. But my parents have always possessed a comfortable home, and have prospered as much as the average of people who never depart from the line of strict economy and exact honesty."

951. Arthur Henry, s. of Wesley & Cynthia Thompson, b. 6 March, 1857, near Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Penn.; m. 4 Aug., 1879, at Cambridge, Pa., by Rev. William Grassie, Amadella Van Marten.

Arthur H. Davison, b. March 6, 1857, on a farm one and one-half miles east of Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa. In youth, when not at school, he worked upon the farm. His parents were always anxious to furnish their children every educational advantage within their reach and means. First attended the rural district school (schoolhouse half a mile south of Delamater's Corners) until thirteen years of age, when he began attending the village school at Blooming Valley. In the fall of 1873 he attended State Normal School at Edinboro, Pa. The following winter began teaching in Townley district school near home. This was a trying time for the boy teacher (not yet sixteen years old), with pupils older than he, and not at all disposed to good order. The summers of the years 1874 and 1875 he managed a cheese factory; in the winter of 1874 attended Edinboro State Normal School. Winter of 1875, ——. In spring of 1876 started West, with the intention of going to Black Hills, the newly discovered mining region. On account of Indians who were on war-path, and entreaties of mother not to go, he spent the year in Platte County, Neb., where he taught two terms, and did some work on the farm of his uncle James Compton. In spring of 1877, he reëntered Edinboro State Normal School, where he remained (except winter terms, when he taught at home in Delamater school) until June, 1879, graduating with one year's studies beyond prescribed course.

Married August 4, 1879, Ida Amadella Van Marten, b. Aug. 9, 1858, one mile north of Blooming Valley, where her father settled when the country was new. Marriage ceremony was performed at Cambridge, Pa., by Rev. William Grassie, less than one hour before they took the train for Iowa. Mrs. Davison was educated in the district school at the farm near Blooming Valley, and at Edinboro State Normal School.

They settled at Rock Rapids (where he began teaching as principal of town schools, Sept. 13, 1879), having come West with nothing definite in view, except a determination to find work at his chosen profession, for which he had had a thorough training. He taught five terms, then resigned to accept the office of County Superintendent of Schools, by appointment to fill vacancy. He was twice elected by the people, serving till Jan. 1, 1876. In November, 1883, with Charles Creglow, purchased "Rock Rapids Review," which he edited about one year as a Republican paper. In 1885 purchased "Lyon County Reporter," a Republican paper, which he edited and published till August, 1887.

During the years from 1885 to 1897, he has engaged, to greater or less extent, in real estate dealing, the rapid increase in the value of land making the business profitable when wisely conducted. In 1883 was elected to Iowa House of Representatives for Lyon and O'Brien Counties. In 1895 the Republicans of the county unanimously asked that he be given the State Senatorial nomination; but after nearly 1,700 ballots, the counties having a larger vote took the nomination. In May, 1896, was admitted by the Supreme Court of the State to practise as attorney and counsellor-at-law in all courts of the State. For years he has been member or President of City School Board, and is Chairman of Public Library Board. In his youth he united (at Blooming Valley, Pa.), with Methodist Episcopal Church. Withdrew some years ago, at the time Rev. H. W. Thomas was convicted of heresy. His wife is a member of the Congregational Church. He has been member of a few civic societies, including A. O. U. W.; K. of P.; I. O. O. F., A. M., American Knights Templars, and has travelled the desert with the Mystic Shrine worshippers.

William Torrey Harris, whose name has become so generally known on account of his achievements in the work of education and the literature of education and philosophy, was born on a farm, on which he labored a large part of the time during early life. His pupil life began at the age of four years; from this age till he arrived at eight he attended summer terms of twelve weeks each at a country school one and a half miles distant from his father's farm. From this date he attended winter sessions of school, and during the next few years attended the city schools of Providence, Woodstock, Worcester, and Andover Academies, leaving Andover in 1853, when he began teaching. In 1854 he entered Yale College, but did not complete the course of study, but withdrew at the middle of the junior year. Early he acquired the habit of thought and philosophical study. In 1858 he began teaching in St. Louis, Mo., and rose rapidly till 1868, when he became City Superintendent, a position he held till 1880. His work here and his annual reports soon drew the attention of the educational world.

In 1867 he founded, and has since edited, "The Journal of Speculative Philosophy." At the close of his work at St. Louis, in 1880, he established his home in the "Alcott House" in Concord, Mass., and has, as before, kept his pen busily engaged in philosophical writing. He has been honored by Yale College with the degree of M.A., by the Missouri State University with the degree of LL.D., and being made "a member of Academy" by Minister of Public Instruction of France, by election to Presidency of National Ed. Association in 1875, as U. S. Delegate to International Ed. Congress at Brussels in 1880, and by numerous other positions and other recognitions of the first importance.

His writings include about forty articles in Johnson's Encyclopedia and the editorship of the department of Philosophy. Numerous lectures (including those before the Concord School of Philosophy, of which he was one of the founders), numerous articles in the leading magazines and in many of the educational periodicals of the country. He is author of Appleton's series of Readers. In 1889 President Harrison named Dr. Harris for Commissioner of Education, a position he fills to such perfect satisfaction that President Cleveland has deemed it wise to continue him in office. Since taking the Commissionership the work done and publications issued are sources of extreme satisfaction to educators and friends of education. To-day he has few if any peers in the fields of educational philosophy, and ranks as one of the finest thinkers of the day.

JONATHAN TRACY Recorder.

The above is a true copy of record. From Book 1st. Page 98, of Land Records.

Attest, O. P. HEWITT
Town Clerk.

PRESTON, Apr. 8th A.D. 1861.

The foregoing is the first deed upon record to the Davisons in Preston. A division occurred between them and George Hawkins December 9th, 1703, from which the following is an extract, going so far as the description of Thomas Davison's part.

"To all Christian people to whom these presents shall come Know Ye that whereas we Thomas Davison Peter Davison & George Hawkins all of Preston in the County of New London in ye colony of connecticut in New England have formerly purchased a piece of land lying in Preston above sd of Daniel Mason of Stonington and this above sd land is bounded as followeth beginning at ye west corner at a white oak tree marked standing before John Guiles door & from thence running Southwardly course by ye land of Samuel Sterry until it comes to a red oak tree marked then turning eastwardly & running to a white oak tree marked standing in a hollow then turning a Northwardly course & running by ye said john Guiles land to ye first mentioned bound, which Land being now divided & bounded each mans division is as followeth and i Thomas Davison do take my division at ye South eastwardly corner at a white oak tree marked & running by ye land of ephrian herick to a red oak bush marked it being on a northwardly course then turning & running on a westwardly course upon a line to a red oak tree marked & so on ye same course tile it meteth with ye divisional line that is between Samuel Sterry land & ye land now mentioned, then turning a Southward by ye Land of Samuel Sterry to a white oak tree marked then turning on an eastwardly course to ye first bound mentioned of ye division." (See Preston Land Record Books, p. 25.)

1703-4, January 3rd, deeded his hundred acres to Ephraim Herick for £20 silver money & a parcel of land lying between Thomas Davison's land & the town line—"which i the sd peter Davison have given Ephraim herick order to give a deed of that parcell of be it more or be it less unto my Brother Thomas Davison, the receipt thereof I the sd peter Davison do hereby acknowledge—" (see Book 2, page 19) and on the same day

Eph. Herick deeded to T. D. a piece of land lying between the said T. D.'s land & the town line— & running easterly to the brook being part payment for 100 acres from peter"—and by his order i ye sd herick do now give this Deed unto his brother Thomas Davison" (see Book 2 page 11).

1720, Apr. 12. T. D. bought five acres of land for 40 shillings of James Rix on the westerly side of Dillings Brook & extending to it. (Preston Land Records, Book 3, page 185.)

1736, March 29. Jonathan Davison, Thomas D. John D. & Jedediah Williams & Hannah Williams his wife divided the estate of "Their Honored Father Thomas Davison late of Preston deceased." This instrument is quite lengthy. Book 5, pages 1 & 2.

1737-8, Mch. 10. Samuel Davison deeds to Thomas 31 acres of land for £93. Book 5—170.

1739, July 10. Roger Billings deeded to Jonathan, Thomas & Samuel Davison and John Davison of Stonington & Jed. Wms. & wife "for divers good causes & considerations together with love & Good will" all the right title &c. &c. which he the sd Billings, had or ought to have in or to the tract of land that Thomas Davison late of sd. Preston deceased died in possession of. Book 5, pages 217 & 18. (This puzzles me. Billings' wife I think was Abigail Denison & I find no mortgage to him.)

1741, Apr. 28. Jed. & Hannah Wms. deed to Thomas D. for £13 "a certain lot of land which was laid out to ye above sd Hannah by order of ye court of Probate as part of her portion out of her Hond. father Thomas Davison's farm." Witnesses by Jonathan Davison.

Kizia Davison which was the name of Jonathan D.'s wife & daughter & should have been so in the will of which I sent you a copy. I think I wrote it Heziah. I have since examined the probate records & find it Keziah. The K so much resembled an H that I made the mistake & the Judge did not notice it.

And that name "Margreen" I think, although it looks like nothing else, was intended for Margara. The will of Jonathan Davison is recorded in Norwich Probate Records (Book 1, page 254).

1745, Oct. 25th. Deed John Davison "Yeoman" to Jonathan —5 acres of land for £40 old tenor. Book 6, page 133.

1753, Apr. 9. Hezekiah Davison was admitted an elector.

Christopher Davison, son of John & Elizabeth his wife, born 1749, (no. 18).

Thus I find Thomas Davison having at various times almost all the offices then in the gift of his townsmen.

1694, Aug. 15. Thomas Davison, Peter Davison & George Hawkins took a deed of 300 acres of land of Daniel Mason of Stonington and in 1702-3 a highway was laid out "Northward of the house of Thos. Davison" & "near the new House of George Hawkins."

1703, Dec. 9. Their division was made.

1703, Dec. 24. Ephm. Herrick deeded a parcel of land to Thomas Davison, for the consideration of one hundred acres of land to him paid by Peter Davison, brother of the said Thomas Davison.

This Ephm. Herrick, I think, came from Beverly, Mass., & bought 140 acres of land of Danl. Mason in Nov. 1694. His land joined the Davisons.

1720, Apr. 30. James Rix deeded 5 acres of land to Thos. Davison for 40 shillings.

FROM HISTORY OF SCOTLAND, CONN.

Subsequent to the Revolutionary War. "After the return of peace Scotland Parish procured a bell for its meeting house steeple. According to popular tradition it was cracked upon its first journey, returned as unsound, and was again cracked in its hanging, once more re-mended and again re-cracked during the ringing which celebrated its successful return. By further mischance it was twice more disabled, sent back and returned before its final exaltation and installment in the steeple.

In June 1791 Doct. Cogswell reports that the subscribers for a bell voted "not to have the bell which is now in use here, nor any other of Davison's, but to apply to Doolittle's, New Haven."
