Preface

This genealogy of some of the descendants of Alexander Drummond is based upon the voluminous, painstaking data collected and arranged by Josiah Hayden Drummond from 1854 to his death in October, 1902. His interest in genealogy began, and was stimulated, in 1854 when Deacon Alexander Drummond of Bangor (No. 68) gave him his genealogical notes on Alexander Drummond with the expectation that he would continue the work. Deacon Drummond had his information chiefly from the memory of his grandmother, who was the granddaughter of Alexander Drummond. Mr. Drummond found it exceedingly accurate and adopted much of it as authority. He was intensely interested in the study of genealogy and in the course of his work he amassed and arranged a large amount of notes on collateral lines, some of which are included in this work. This material was edited by Mrs. Ralph Conant of Augusta, Maine, and the information from Mr. Drummond's death in 1902 to the present time was carefully collected and checked by Mrs. Conant with the invaluable assistance of Miss Sara Drummond Lang of Waterville, Maine.

Mr. Drummond published A Genealogy of John Rogers of Marshfield and Some of His Descendants in 1898, and A Genealogy of Joshua Bean of Exeter, Brentwood, Gilmanton, New Hampshire, and Some of His Descendants was published in 1903.

The Maine Historical Society has a large amount of comprehensive data collected by Mr. Drummond relating to the families of Bailey, Bean, Blackwell, Cook, Cushing, Dean, Drummond, Foster, Hayden of Taunton, Massachusetts, McClenachan, Parker, Pierce, Rogers, and Williams and many others, as well as two volumes of genealogical notes of Maine families which were presented to the Society by Mr. Drummond. These were indexed by the Society in 1933.

This book is published by Mr. Drummond's grandsons.

Drummond

The Ancient House of Drummond*

Maurice Drummond, the first Thane of Lennox, was descended from the nobility of the Kingdom of Hungary. He was contemporary with Walter, the first great Stuart of Scotland, and King Malcolm III of Scotland, in whose reign the degrees of nobility and distinction of surnames began.

Edward the Confessor, who had fled to Normandy for safety, was called home to reign about 1043 when England was freed from the Danish yoke of Hardy Canatus. Edward the Confessor, King of England, having no children, sent for his nephew, Edward the Outlaw, and his family, who had been sent for safety to King Solomon of Hungary. In the expedition returning to England with Edward the Outlaw was Maurice, a Hungarian nobleman who had charge of the ship.

Edward the Outlaw died in 1057. Upon the death of Edward the Confessor in 1066 the English throne rightfully belonged to Edgar Athelin, son of Edward the Outlaw. Edgar Athelin, apprehensive of his safety at the hands of William the Conqueror at the time of the Norman Conquest, set sail back to Hungary with his mother Agatha, and his sisters Margaret and Christiana. The ship was again under the charge of Maurice, the Hungarian nobleman. The ship was caught in a storm off the coast of Scotland, so they took refuge at the Firth of Forth in Scotland. Here they remained, and Malcolm III, King of Scotland, married Edgar Athelin's sister Margaret in 1067. Maurice, the Hungarian nobleman, highly esteemed by the Queen for his faithful services and for his skillful conduct of the ship, was honored with lands, offices, a coat of Arms suitable to his quality, and given the name of DRUMMOND.

Previous to this time surnames were not in use, men being distinguished by adding their father's name to their own, or the making of a name from some accident from their lives, or something remarkable in their body or mind. It now became necessary to employ a surname in order that the name might descend to posterity, the surname being taken from some notable action, from

* This information is based upon "The Genealogy of The Most Noble and Ancient House of Drummond" published in Edinburgh M.DCCC.XXXI. printed by A. Balfour & Co., and by "a friend to vertue and the family" the Honourable William Drummond, afterwards first Viscount of Strathallan. Collected in the year 1681. "The Author enjoyed the best advantages for the prosecution of his labours, not only in obtaining the use of the several accounts drawn up by previous writers, but in having free access to original papers, and to every other source of information regarding the collateral branches of a Family to which he himself was nearly related, and finally became so distinguished an ornament."

the birthplace, office, or lands, or from a quality of the body. So the Hungarian nobleman, Maurice, received his surname Drummond from the office as being captain director or Admiral of Prince Edgar Athelin. "For Dromont or Dromond in diverse nations was the name of a ship of a swift course, and the captain thereof was called Dromont or Dromoner: for proving this assertion there are authors very famous, such as William of Newberrie, Minfeus in the emendations of his Guide to the languages, John Piccard channon of St. Victor, Caffiodorus, Sigebert the historian . . ."

Pliny tells of a swift ship named Dromon. Thus were the Argonauts so called from the ship Argos. In addition the name Drummond was occasioned from the tempest they endured at sea. Drummond—mont signifies the high hills of waters, or drum which in ancient Scottish language is a height. Und or ond is from the Latin unda, a wave. Thus heights, or high waves of waters.

King Malcolm III also bestowed on this Hungarian nobleman, Maurice, a competent inheritance, and made him Thane or Senescal of Lennox, and as a lasting badge of honor from the King, a noble coat of Arms contrived to represent his condition and achievements. Thus:

"Or, 3 bars unds G; a helmet, wreath, coronet, and mantling fuitable to his degree; and for a crest a bloodhound of the 2d langued, armed, coloured of the 1; with two wyld naked men for supporters, wreathed about the body and head with ivy, each beareing on his shoulder a club raguled, and gaulthrops lying scattered about their feet; with this motto, GANGE WARRILY."

Maurice Drummond was naturalized a Scot, but records are lacking as to whom he married. A Franciscan friar, Adam Abel, in his history of Scotland, refers to the fact that Maurice came into Scotland from Hungary with Queen Margaret "whereof the posterity have preserved an uninterrupted and fixed persuasion." Maurice left two sons, the elder called Malcolm after his master and King. He became the second Thane of Lennox. The other son was called Maurice. From this Hungarian nobleman, Maurice, the father, lineally descended all the families of Drummond. He died on the field of battle at Alnich in 1093 with King Malcolm III and Prince Edward.

Josiah Hayden Drummond, LL. D.

By Hon. MARQUIS FAYETTE KING, of Portland, Me.

Josiah Hayden⁶ Drummond was born in Winslow, Maine, August 30, 1827. He entered Waterville (now Colby) College in 1842, and was graduated in 1846 at the early age of nineteen years. In his junior year he was instrumental in establishing the Xi Chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon, presided at its first meeting, and fifty years later presided at the anniversary exercises, on which occasion he was made the recipient of a magnificent loving cup. His alma mater ever received his loyal support and loving service, and for forty-five years he was a member of its Board of Trustees, being chairman of the Board since 1888, with a record of almost constant attendance. In recognition of his merit, the Institution conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws, in 1871.

Like most farmer's boys, he had largely to depend upon his own earnings to pay the expense of his higher education, and for this purpose a portion of the time during his student life was devoted to teaching. He not only taught in the common schools, but served as preceptor in the academies at China and Vassalboro, making friends among his pupils that continued through life.

He read law under the direction of Messrs. Boutelle and Noyes, of Waterville, was admitted to the bar of Kennebec County in 1850, and was immediately intrusted with an important commission that required his presence in California. There were at this time but few educated lawyers in that State, and the execution of the laws was often in the hands of irresponsible parties. He was admitted to practice in the California courts, and after fulfilling his commission to the satisfaction of his client, was preparing to locate permanently, when he received a letter from Mr. Boutelle advising him of his intention of retiring from business and inviting him to return to Waterville and take the office of his late preceptors.

This appearing to be his opportunity, he returned to Maine, and entered at once into a practice that continually grew in importance. He remained in Waterville until 1860, when, having been elected to the office of Attorney-General by the State Legislature, he removed to Portland, where he continued until his death. He was Attorney-General until 1864, and was subsequently City Solicitor of Portland for several terms. In the early days of the Portland and Kennebec Railroad he was employed as its legal adviser, and took an active part in the formalities which resulted in the union of the several railroads which constitute the present Maine Central Railroad, of which corporation, for more than thirty years preceding his death, he had been Clerk and Counsel. At the time of his death he had made considerable progress in the publication of the history of the several roads.

At the Memorial Session of the Supreme Court of Maine, sitting in Portland, on February 23, 1903, the Hon. Fabius M. Ray, being one of those appointed to speak for the Bar, addressed the Court, in part, as follows:

"Our friend who has left us was endowed with capacity for the enjoyment of the best things of life, so that, notwithstanding his upward of three score and ten years, he never grew old; and those of us who followed him at a distance of a decade found our own increasing years resting upon us all the more lightly for thinking of our brother as not yet an old man. He was possessed of a marked personality. He filled a place in the community, and in our friendship, that was distinctly his own. He reminded us of no one whom we had known at other times and under other circumstances. His role in life seemed to have been conceived especially for him, as in the dramatic art the play is written to meet the genius of the great performer; and so, while the different departments of his work will be taken up and carried on by others, in their own way, he will have no successor. His reputation extended beyond the confines of his native State; his varied abilities were in almost constant demand abroad, where he was a recognized peer of those who had found their way to fame, although, for himself, he was quite content to stay at home and be great within its narrower limits.

Of Mr. Drummond's career at the bar, only the mention is needed to suggest its prominence. For more than fifty years, scarcely a volume of the Maine Reports failed to bear his name upon its pages as engaged upon the one side or the other of many of the most important cases. Not only was he well grounded in the law as a science, but his long experience, aided by a remarkably facile and retentive memory, gave him peculiar advantages. Especially intimate was his knowledge of the Statutes and judicial decisions of our own State, and in addition to this he knew, often as an interested party, under what circumstances and to meet what conditions the Statute had been enacted or the decision rendered; thus, at a moment's notice, he could refer the young practitioner, who applied to him for counsel under difficulties and perplexities, to the volume and page where he would find the authorities for or against the position which he would fain establish. But, notwithstanding the accuracy and breadth of his knowledge, he never posed as a case winner; nor did he refuse to compromise a case which he was reasonably sure of winning before a jury, if thereby he could observe the interests of a client. As was to have been expected, in a career so varied and extending over so many years, there were many triumphs of the sort which bring renown, and triumphs, possibly still more numerous, that the great world knew little about. There were failures, too, that were not failures for the reason that facing inevitable defeat was the only means of averting the payment of excessive damages in cases where compromise was impossible.

Especially was this rule true in his, as in the case of most eminent practitioners, when defending the interests of great business corporations, for which the average jury is presumed to have very little sympathy.

It was not alone the young practitioner, or the man of maturer years, who had pursued his studies in Mr. Drummond's office, who always found him helpful with counsel and suggestion. Nor did he ever, when pitted against his younger brethren of the bar, set up his own superior knowledge and experience against the younger man's deficiencies. There was nothing of asceticism in his nature, nothing cynical, nothing of resentment, unless provoked by aggression. The friend of all, he was prodigal of his favors; if his confidence was sometimes abused, who shall say that he erred in the exuberance of his kind-heartedness.

But after all that may be said of our friend in his public and professional relations, it is the man himself whom we shall remember during the days that yet remain to us; the generous friend whose warm hand clasp we shall feel no more, and the sound of whose voice is now hushed forever.

In politics, both by birth and inheritance, he was a Democrat, and engaged actively in political work even before his majority. In his twenty-second year, he was a member of the State Convention. At this time his party was all powerful in the state and nation, but there was a lack of harmony, and soon came the disruption of the party and the entire extinction of its ancient opponent. Mr. Drummond, always a man of strong feeling, was not satisfied with the position taken by the majority of his party on the questions of slavery and temperance. He believed that African slavery was a wrong for which his generation was not wholly responsible, but should seek to right as fast as possible, by equitable legislation, and that mild laws and moral suasion were insufficient protection for the community against the great sin of intemperance. Upon these issues he joined with those of like views in organizing the Republican party, was a delegate to its first State Convention, and ever after gave that party, on the stump and at the polls, his most loyal support. It was his practice to transact no business on election day, devoting that day to his country, and it was a matter of great pride with him that he had been able to vote at every election, save one, after becoming a freeman; holding it to be not only the right but the bounden duty of every citizen to manifest his interest in government by presence and action at the polls. Three times he went as delegate to the National Convention; first, in 1864, when Lincoln was renominated, desiring, if possible, to secure the renomination of his personal friend, Hannibal Hamlin, as Vice-President; again, in 1876, when Hayes was nominated; and last, in 1884, when he was the successful leader of the Maine delegation in putting in nomination for the Presidency James G. Blaine.

Mr. Drummond was elected to the Legislature from Waterville in 1857, and upon his re-election in 1858 was made Speaker of the House. In 1859 he was elected Senator from Kennebec County, and resigned before the end of his term, to accept the office of Attorney-General. In 1868 he was elected to the Legislature from Portland, and was again made Speaker. His fame as a parliamentarian and as a graceful and easy presiding officer has been second to none. As a toast-master he was equally successful, and fortunate that assembly that had him in either place.

There have been conventions of his party ready to make him their nominee for Congress and for Governor of Maine, and twice he declined the offer of a seat on the Supreme Bench, not that he was devoid of ambition, but generously preferring to give his family the advantages of a lucrative practice in his profession rather than to take for himself a high sounding title with little income.

He was not only an eminent citizen, a distinguished member of the bar, an active politician, but he was more, he was better than a lawyer, better than a politician, he was a philanthropist; there was a fullness and a completeness in his life seldom seen.

As would be expected in a life like his, he had his pastimes. He loved the exactness of mathematical study, and was a frequent contributor to the mathematical magazines, and in correspondence with the higher mathematicians of the country.

He was an omnivorous reader, his law library was second to no private library in the city, and his house was full of books. He was not only an industrious collector of books for his private collection, but was equally interested in building up public and special libraries, being officially connected with quite a number. He was especially interested in genealogical and historical research, was a member of all the local, and many foreign, societies organized for the collection and publication of history. Some of his genealogical work has been printed, but very much more is the manuscript and incomplete. He was elected to membership in this Society in 1894, and its Vice-President for Maine in 1901.

Conspicuous in various capacities, he was yet more widely known as a wise and accomplished Freemason. He was initiated in Waterville Lodge, January 1, 1849, and that year elected Deacon. To enumerate his Masonic honors would be naming nearly every title known to the Craft. He was never entirely relieved of official responsibilities. He gave not only to its exoteric but to its esoteric history his careful study and profound investigation. His advice was sought from far and near, and never in vain; his utterances were everywhere regarded as authoritative. His published Reports on Correspondence, alone, would make more than ten volumes of a thousand pages, and are seemingly exhaustive, almost every question of masonic history, tradition, law and policy are discussed, and we might almost say that, if every other Masonic publication were banished from the earth, the Freemasons would yet have, in his writings, an authentic history and a complete Ahiman Rezon.

It may be truly said of him that no Mason has ever lived who rendered greater service in the cause, or became so universally known and beloved by the Craft.

The home life of Mr. Drummond was especially beautiful. In the bonds of sincere affection all of his household were united, not only in seeking their own happiness, but in making others happy. The tenth day of December was always a day of thanksgiving in this family, for on that date, in 1850, Mr. Drummond was united in marriage with Miss Elzada Rollins, daughter of Benjamin Wadleigh and Lucetta (Foster) Bean, with whom he lived in happy companionship to the day of his death. "She openeth her mouth with wisdom and the law of kindness is on her tongue." Three daughters and one son have graced the family circle, viz., Myra Lucetta; Josiah Hayden (Colby, 1877), who married Sallie Tucker, daughter of Joseph B. Blake of Braintree, Massachusetts, lawyer, in partnership with his father, and his successor as Director and Counsellor of the Union Mutual Life Insurance Company and the Union Trust Company; Tinnie Aubigne, wife of Wilford Gore Chapman, lawyer, of Portland; and Margelia Bean, who died in 1897.

Mr. Drummond had a rule "Never carry shop home," and the happiest moment of the day to him was the time for gathering the accumulated Masonic, genealogic and social correspondence of the day into a parcel for evening consideration. His evenings were usually spent at home, never in idleness but in letter writing or in solving some intricate problem in genealogy or mathematics. He was, however, apparently cheerfully willing to lay these aside for a game with the children, or to entertain a visitor. His versatility was so great that interruption never appeared to be an annoyance.

His funeral was held in the ancient First Parish Church, and notwithstanding a severe storm, the auditorium was crowded, many persons coming from a long distance to testify their love. He was buried in Evergreen Cemetery by the Grand Lodge of Masons, and his grave is marked with a granite and bronze monument, a memorial tribute of more than twenty-five hundred friends and brothers.

FIRST GENERATION

1. ALEXANDER DRUMMOND was of Scottish descent, and undoubtedly was born in Scotland, but emigrated to Ireland, and resided there some time. We have it from the gravestone of his son Patrick, that his place of residence was Cappa.¹ In 1729 he came to America with his family, and is said to have settled at what is known as "The Chopps" on the Kennebec River, not far from Day's Ferry, where he was killed by a falling tree, the following winter in 1730. He was a widower when he came to this country, and the name of his wife is not known. He brought with him the following children:—

2 †PATRICK, b. June 11, 1694.

3 †JAMES.

4 †FRANCES, who was the wife of ALEXANDER CAMPBELL.

5 †MARY.

SECOND GENERATION

2. PATRICK DRUMMOND² (*Alexander*¹), born June 11, 1694, had wife MARGARET. The inscription upon his tombstone is "In memory of Patrick Drummond, Esq., who was born at Cappa, in Ireland, June 11, A.D. 1694: came with his sister and two brothers to America, A.D. 1729, and died at Georgetown, December 28, 1761, aged 67 years." This must include Alexander Campbell, the husband of Frances (No. 4) Drummond, as one of the two brothers. Patrick Drummond was married, and had one child when he came to America. His wife is called Margaret in the Georgetown records. She dying, he married Susannah Rutherford, daughter of Rev. Robert Rutherford, who died Sept. 12, 1771, age 48.² Children were:—

¹ On Aug. 1st, 1884, Mr. Drummond visited what remained of the "Drummond Burying Ground" in Arrowsic, and found only two gravestones standing, several lying upon the ground, and others broken. Soon after, these stones were removed to the "Drummond Burying Ground" in Phippsburg, and later, the headstone of Mr. Drummond's great grandfather, John Drummond was removed to the "Drummond Cemetery" in Winslow, and placed beside that of his wife. Following are the stones which were removed:—Patrick Drummond, Capt. Alex. Drummond, Mrs. Jane Drummond, Robert Drummond, Capt. John Drummond, and John Drummond, son of Patrick. This last stone was finally placed in the Drummond Cemetery in Winslow, beside that of his widow.

Mr. Drummond found oxen grazing on the graves, and they had broken down the stones. It was to prevent further destruction that he removed the stones.

² In the history of Rev. Robert Rutherford, as published, no mention is made of a daughter by this name, but it assumes that his children by his second wife (it must be) were all he had: but he must have been previously married and have lost his first wife before he came to this country. The inscription on her tombstone is as follows: "Here lies ye body of Mrs. Susanna Drummond, the wife of Patrick Drummond, Esq., daughter of Rev. Robt. Rutherford, died Sept. 12, 1771, in the 49th year of her age." In the burying ground at Brunswick is a gravestone inscribed to the memory of John, son of Rev. Robt. and Elizabeth Rutherford; died January 22, 1741-2, in his 25th year. This son must have been born in 1716 or 1717, and Susanna in 1722, before Rutherford came to this country (as he came with Dunbar in 1729). In the history of Rutherford, two of his children, Mary and Lettice, are said to have drowned in landing from a shipwreck, and his next child is recorded as having been born in 1726.

7. MARGARET DRUMMOND³ (*Patrick*², *Alexander*¹) was born in Georgetown and married in 1746 (int. Sept. 11, 1746), Thomas Williams, said to have been born in Boston, and a descendant of Roger Williams, who died in Georgetown, after 1814. He and Capt. Alexander Drummond built a vessel in Arrowsic about 1781. Their children were:—

1. MARY WILLIAMS, b. June 29, 1747.
2. MARGARET WILLIAMS, b. Apr. 4 or 11, 1749.
3. NANCY (ANN) WILLIAMS, b. July 15, 1751.

⁴ This name appears with various spellings, McClanethan, McLanathan, McClenachan, Macclenaghan, Maclenachan, Maclenaghan. He appears to have been a peculiar person, and was the first Church Missionary east of Casco (Portland). In Nov. 1736, the Presbyterian party of Irish emigrants in Portland installed Rev. William McClenathan, a staunch supporter of that Persausion from the North of Ireland. They could not support him and he went to Georgetown, where he was ordained as an evangelist in the first Church established in Lincoln County. In 1747 we find him as Colleague with Rev. Thomas Cheever, Pastor of the Congregational Society in Chelsea, Mass. In 1754 he left this Church and probably went to London, where he took Orders in the Church of England, as he was appointed by the Society for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts, as their Missionary to the "Eastern Frontier of Massachusetts Bay." In 1756 he was at Fort Richmond, using this old structure as an habitation. In 1758 he left, and went to Virginia, then to Philadelphia. We have the following from Major Goodwin's Journal. "Oct. 3, 1756, I detached a party to guard the Rev. William McClenachen down the River Kennebec, to preach at Georgetown." "Oct. 19, 1756. We returned to fort Richmond and there we had the melancholy news of Rev. Mr. William McClenachan's Eldest Son, John McClenachan, Brains beat out By firing a gun, it Killed him Instantly, he was in a float in the Eastern River, sett out and fetched him home."

4. JAMES WILLIAMS, b. July 22, 1753.
5. JOHN WILLIAMS, b. Nov. 4, 1756.
6. JOSHUA WILLIAMS.
7. THOMAS WILLIAMS.
8. PATRICK WILLIAMS, b. 1760.
9. FRANCES WILLIAMS, b. 1763.

(See Williams Family)

9. FRANCES DRUMMOND³ (*Patrick*², *Alexander*¹) was born in Georgetown, married WILLIAM CAMPBELL, son of Alexander and Frances (Drummond No. 4) Campbell. He was born Nov. 15, 1735 in Georgetown, and died there in 1774. ⁵ Jacob Bailey, the Frontier Missionary, and so strong a "Royalist" that he had to flee to Nova Scotia,—in his Diary, under Aug. 20, 1778, says; "Before sunrise passed Cape Elizabeth. At 9 or 10 entered the mouth of the Kennebeck. ————— About 12 we came to anchor in Fiddler's Reach. Went ashore with Dr. Mayer at Capt. Drummond's. Found him a violent son of liberty, and a friend of the French alliance. He, however, treated us with complaisance, and invited us to tarry to dinner; after which we visited Mr. McFadden and Mr. Preble. Towards evening returned and drank tea with Mrs. Drummond. Capt. Drummond having furnished us with a barge, we went about sunset in pursuit of the sloop and overtook her in the gut". May 19, 1774, Rev. Jacob Bailey baptised Patrick Drummond and Eliza Williams. "Aug. 8, 1776. Bp. 3 persons at Mr. Drummond's and Williams."

The culture of the family requires time, patience, and fuller participation by all its members; and for its personal sustenance, interest must be awakened on its spiritual side: its history and biography. The antiquarian search for a family tree is too often the lowest snobbism; but the actual planting and cultivating of the family tree is a different matter. That is worthy of everyone's highest skill and immediate attention.

In America we have a great advantage over the people who lived even a hundred and fifty years ago. In contrast to them, we are a nation of literates: reading and writing are our minimum accomplishments. So for us the widespread keeping of family records is at least mechanically an easy job: spiritually it will require immense effort, before we pour into the work all the love and skill that it demands. The writing of journals, psychological records, and family histories beginning with the here and now should be one of the most grateful tasks for parents: the gathering of souvenirs, memorabilia, drawings, the recording of anecdotes and stories—all these things will build up that past which will form a bridge, over the most turbid autumnal torrent, to a firmer, finer future.

Some of our young people will die before their time, fighting barbarian forces or combating famine and plague. Those who survive them in the family will bear the loss more easily if they do not vanish completely, leaving behind only a few fading photographs. The richer the record, the less of them will die. That is the consolation of the writer and the artist when he faces death: let it also be the consolation of parents and children. Life becomes precious again in the family: let us therefore live and relive its best moments: first in action, then in memory.
