FIRST REUNION OF THE Burton and Robinson Families

SEPTEMBER 18, 1879

At the suggestion of a few members of the families originating in Capt. Benjamin Burton and Dr. Moses Robinson, whose descendants having frequently inter-married, made it desirable that the reunion should embrace both families; a reunion of said descendants was ultimately fixed upon and held on the site of the old stone garrison house, or Burton's Fort, so called, once located on and forming a part of the old Burton farm and homestead in Cushing; which has always remained the property of some one of the family, being now owned and occupied by John Burton.

These grounds selected for the gathering border on the west side of Georges river directly opposite the upper St. George meeting house. The present homestead is situated on a high ridge near the river, between the river and which was a large field descending with a graded slope to the water's edge, bordered on the southern and river side by a young growth of oaks, birches and other trees, which afforded ample shade and protection from the wind for a long table abundantly filled, and the large company who were gathered round it; also for swings and other sources of amusement to the many children that made a part of the gathering.

At a short distance off, and nearer the river, arose the steam and odor of that indispensable adjunct of such occasions, a clam bake, which under the care and supervision of Mr. J. H. Flint, of Rockland, contributed no small share in supplying the craving appetites resulting from a long drive, and fast.

A more favorable place for such a gathering could scarcely have been found among the many beautiful places which border the Georges river; certainly none surrounded with so many natural beauties, and so crowded with historical reminiscences.

The spot, where once stood the old fort, was marked by a flag staff, bearing the American flag; a few only of the foundation stones were to be seen. Here Capt. Benjamin Burton in 1754 located himself and built this fort. It was built of stone and strongly fortified with pickets, and not only proved ample protection for his own family through many a severe attack made against it in after years by the Indians, but was a place of refuge to his neighbors in many a time of peril. More than one person was found present whose mother or grandmother, father or grandfather, had first seen the light of this world in this old garrison house; and from the lips of whom had been heard the tales of what was suffered, done and dared, by those from whom they sprang.

The Robinson homestead is situated on the same side of the river some three-quarters of a mile above the Burton place. It was located by Dr. Moses Robinson, who was one of the earlier settlers, if not the earliest, on the river; having some time previous to Burton's settlement, twenty years at least, located himself and family here as his first home on Georges river. His fifth child, Archibald, was born here, in 1737, being the first white child born among the settlers on Georges river. It has always remained in possession of the family descendants, being now occupied by "Aunt Hannah," relict of Jacob Robinson, one of the great-grandchildren of Dr. Moses. "Aunt Hannah" was present on this occasion, and although the snows of eighty winters had not passed without leaving their trace, there were few of the younger portion, and of later generations of her sex present, who would have cared to try titles with her for power of endurance, or to out-walk, or out-talk her. She gave many interesting reminiscences of the events that had occurred in and around the old fort, her mind clear and memory good; some one should record them for future generations.

After dinner those present comprising delegations from the city of Rockland, towns of Union, Warren, Thomaston, St. George and Cushing proceeded to effect a permanent organization by choosing

George W. Robinson, Thomaston, Treasurer;

C. W. Prince, Thomaston, Secretary;

M. R. Mathews, Warren, Treasurer;

} Vice Presidents.

Isaac J. Burton was selected to give the Historical Address.

Capt. George W. Robinson, on taking his place as presiding officer, read the following address of welcome:

ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

As members of one common family, springing from the same stock, under different names, and with many other family and social relations, we have here met on this historic spot, which was once the earthly home of those from whom we sprang, for a social, annual reunion.

It is an ancient custom, and brought down to us, in every history of our race. The sacred word given to the children of Abraham, not only bear witness of these facts, but make it a part of their religious duty. Bringing down this custom so long neglected by us, of an annual feast gathering, where in obedience to this command, they from every nation under Heaven, would gather together at Jerusalem, and give thanks unto Him, who as Jehovah their God, had made of them a great nation. So would we gather together and humbly acknowledge before Him, from whom all things are and do exist, our heartfelt thankfulness and continued dependence upon Him for all His gifts.

Leaving it for those whose special duty it may be to rehearse the family records, and trace through its genealogy the family ties which show our common origin, I will dwell but lightly on those features and events under which, and through which our forefathers were led to seek this land, and establish thereon their home, and leave it unto us as our heritage. To establish the privilege of worshiping God untrammelled, to furnish for themselves and those born of them homes they could call their own, to this land our fathers came; and through toil and suffering, with undaunted courage and continuous conflict only, were they able to overcome the opposing influence and bring into subjection, not only the wilderness they had chosen for their home but the wild and war-like tribes they found inhabiting it. The toil and suffering, the labor and the conflict, was theirs, and we are now enjoying the fruits thereof.

With thoughts and feelings filled with reverent and thankful remembrance may we now come together and in the revival of those scenes with which they are so closely connected, find a common bond wherewith to bind us more closely together than hitherto it has been our privilege to be. May we each and every one find that it is good for us to be here; and in the happiness we may bestow upon others, find that true happiness which springs from and becomes a part of all true kindness. Desiring to do what I can to promote this result, I would hereby bid you one and all, a cordial welcome.

After which, Mr. Isaac J. Burton being called upon, read the following as a partial historical record of the genealogy, doings and transactions of the earlier members of the Robinson and Burton families:

HISTORICAL ADDRESS.

Did you hear that savage war-whoop, the cry of massacred children, and the wailing of bereft mothers? Did you hear the alarm gun from these walls of defence, and the associated block-house below? No, no! is responded on every hand; their echoes have died out a hundred years ago. And to-day, fellow citizens, friends and relatives, we are here to commemorate the many scenes that have transpired since first our fathers came to this wilderness, tenanted by wild beasts and ferocious savages. We are here, too, to renew family ties and exchange friendly greetings.

Then let no one feel backward in lending a helping hand to make this gathering social, agreeable and profitable to all assembled. Let each bring their little store of history and tradition, that they may be remembered and transmitted to generations yet unborn.

We are able to-day to trace our history back to a remote date. Far across the Atlantic in various countries of Europe we find our pedigree in embryo. England, Wales, Scotland, Ireland and Germany have contributed to compose this band of aspiring Yankees.

It will be difficult at this late day to analyze this heterogeneous genealogy, and assign to each nation its respective part.

The names of Burton and Robinson we first find in England. John Robinson conspicuous among the Puritans went with them to Leyden. The church in which he preached in that land of refuge still stands, and just in front of it may be seen, inserted in the wall of an old house, a tablet on which is this inscription:—"Here lived, taught and died John Robinson, 1611-25;" it is still called the Robinson house.

Dr. Moses Robinson of the Scotch-Irish emigration came first to Cushing, but removed to Warren where he died and was buried in the Pilgrim Cemetery. From him have descended the long line of Robinsons found in various towns around. Of his nine children Archibald the fifth was the first white child born in Warren, Jan. 31, 1737. The third son, John, married Sarah Carver, descendant of Gov. Carver of Plymouth; hence the given name Carver among the Robinsons. Of Moses 2d children the oldest son, Moses, (4th,) married Jane Burton; and the sixth, Betsey, married Wm. Burton.

Moses 3d died 1777, said to be the first buried in the old graveyard in Cushing. Moses 5th, of Warren, married Elizabeth Ludwig of Waldo-boro. Here comes in the first German tincture in the Robinson lineage. In the fourth generation among the most renowned is Hon. Edward Robinson who married Joanna A. Parsons of Cushing, subsequently N. J. & P. G. Fales of Thomaston. He was a ship captain, merchant, and State Senator; was presidential elector in 1840, and candidate for Governor in 1843-4.

Capt. Oliver 2d married Margaret Patterson, was cashier of Thomaston bank. Time will not permit us to speak of the numerous individuals that constitute the six generations of the Robinson Lineage; but we will give an opportunity for any who wish to speak for themselves; suffice it to say, as a race, they are an honorable and industrious class of people, have occupied many trustworthy positions in society, and have done much to build up the towns of Thomaston, Cushing, St. George and Warren; besides emigrating to various towns and states of the Union.

Of the antiquities of Georges River there is none more involved in mystery than the tradition of what is presumed to be an under-ground house, situated on a farm in Cushing, that has been in possession of the Robinson family from the first settlement of the town to the present day. When the emigrants first came to this river, they found on that farm remains of an underground house of large dimensions; it was situated on a point of land formed by the river and a deep creek. The structure was built of hewn timber, and had an underground passageway leading from the creek into it, made also of hewn timber, which was high enough for a man to walk erect and with width sufficient to admit a good size boat. The house had been built long before any permanent settlement had been in this vicinity, as it was in a state of decay when the Scotch-Irish emigrants came, and appeared as if it dated back to a remote time. There are various ideas expressed about it, but its mystery has never yet been unraveled.

We pass now from the Robinson lineage to notice that of the Burton family: We have already shown that these two families were intimately connected by early marriages; subsequent history shows that later generations have also intermarried, so that a complete biography of either lineage could not be written without frequent allusions to the other; therefore we shall have frequent occasion to allude to the Robinsons while speaking of the Burtons.

The indissoluble union of these families rendered it expedient to hold a reunion together upon this ancient farm, around the ruins of a fortification that protected our sires and our mothers from the savage arrow and scalping-knife. But we defer any further abstract remarks, till we have given a brief biography of Burton lineage.

So far as we have been able to learn, the name Burton had its origin in England. The definition of the name is tackle. (Ropes and pulleys for raising weights.) The first of the name brought into public life was Sir Edward Burton, who was created knight banneret by Edward after the battle of St. Albans in 1460. (Banneret, a military rank conferred only upon those able to bring a certain number of vassals into the field.) We next trace the name to Ireland. Sir Charles Burton, the first baronet, was Lord Mayor of Dublin in 1753, and one of the representatives in Parliament. In 1758 we find an association of Burtons in Pollacton Co., Ireland, where a coat of arms was created, and the following motto adopted: Dus provid ebit (God will provide). Sir Charles Wm. C. Burton was 5th Baronet and son of Lieut. Benj. Burton of 19th Lancers. Before passing to Ireland I should have mentioned Robert Burton, a writer of the 17th century, who was born at Lindley, Leicestershire, 1576. His learning was said to be various and extensive; he was author of Anatomy of Melancholy. We leave the rest of the Burton history of England and Ireland and introduce to you Capt. Benj. Burton with Alice Lewis his wife from Ireland, who was among the first settlers in Cushing. We are able to trace his ancestors directly to Wales, where his father or grandfather, having joined Cromwell's army, went with it to Ireland and assisted in subjecting that country to the Commonwealth. At the close of the war he probably settled in the north part of Ireland where we found Capt. Benj., whom we just introduced, getting up a colony to go to America, among whom was his father, who died on the passage over. At the age of 27 Benj., with the rest of the colony, arrived safely in Georges River in 1736. Nine years subsequent to this date, on the 16th of June, he was in a battle at the capture of Louisburg where he acquired a good degree of credit; and on his return was appointed commander of the block-house, in what is now Thomaston, near where the toll-bridge is.

On the 19th of July the Indians made a successive attack on the place, burnt a number of houses, killed several cattle, and killed or captured a citizen. This act so exasperated Burton, and a spirit of retaliation, that he and Lieut. Proctor with a company of 19 men pursued a band of Tarratine Indians, and having overtaken them Burton severed the head of one from his body with a blow of his sword; and Proctor dispatched another. History brings us now to the ground on which we stand. In 1754, one and a quarter centuries ago, a block-house of stone was created here by Capt. Benj. Burton and by him occupied; to render it a more complete protection, it was surrounded by picket. Two years elapse, when on the 24th of March, 1756, the united Indian tribes made a furious attack upon this fortification, commanded by their inveterate enemy, whom if possible they were determined to slay. By hard fighting and skillful tactics they were repulsed; not however till they killed two men, scalped another and left him nearly dead. Do not these acts, my friends, awaken within you a spirit of patriotism? does it not tacitly and emphatically say, the land our fathers' blood has stained is dear, is dear to every American Patriot?

It is narrated of Capt. Burton by Cyrus Eaton, Esq., that on one occasion, (in which war, not informed,) being some distance out with his wife and four children, when an alarm was given by the dogs, he took one child on his back, one under each arm, while his wife took the other and all escaped safely into the fortress.

One of his daughters imbibed the spirit and courage of the father; often in the absence of a garrison she would stand guard on the top of the fortress while the father was laboring in the field.

Nearly half a century elapsed, when on the night of the 20th of March, 1763, this unflinching soldier, who had passed through two wars, perished in his boat while coming from the fort at Thomaston, home. His ashes repose in the cemetery near where stood that fort; but after the desecration of that hallowed ground where heroes sleep, the headstone that marked his grave was transferred by his grand-daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, to the cemetery near the Baptist church in Warren.

Peace to thy ashes now mingled with earth;
And peace to thy soul departed from earth;
No more shall the cannon thy slumbers disturb;
Ne'er shall the war-whoop by thee be heard.
Here on the banks of Georges fair shores
Rest noble warrior; thy conflicts are o'er.

Of the eleven children of the second generation all we boys lived to be married except John, who died at the age of 19. Two of the family, William and Jane, as before stated, married Robinsons. William remained here on the old farm, and his posterity, even to the fourth generation, are here today and live in the very house their ancestors built. William's occupation was farming and ship-building. Thomas removed to Calais. Benjamin's life was more complicated than either of the brothers. Partaking largely of his father's warlike characteristics he espoused, at an early age, his country's conflict with her formidable foe. On the 16th of December, 1773, Benjamin B., at the age of 23 was one of the seventeen men that constituted the "tea-party" on board the British merchant ships in Boston harbor; he was stationed in the hold to attach the tackle to the chests, and did not relinquish his position till 342 chests of tea were steeped in salt water. This was Benjamin's first act of rebellion against John Bull.

In 1779 measures were taken to defend the coast against the incursions of the British army, and Burton, who had been commissioned Lieutenant, stationed with a force at Camden. In February 1780, during intense cold weather and while the snow was from three to four feet deep, he went with a flag of truce to Biguyduce, where the British were quartered, to procure the release of Eliakin Libby of Warren, who had been captured from a lumber schooner. The Penobscot Bay was frozen sufficiently hard to enable him to cross directly from Camden to Biguyduce on the ice; and having procured the release of Libby returned in like manner. In 1781 Burton returned to Biguyduce under less auspicious circumstances. On a passage from Boston to St. George he was taken prisoner, conveyed to the British fortress and imprisoned in a room with Gen. Wadsworth, who a short time before had been taken prisoner at Thomaston. The summer before, Burton, in the capacity of major, had served under Gen. Wadsworth. This intimate acquaintance enable them the sooner to devise plans for their escape, and prevent their being sent to England as was the intention of Gen. Campbell. The Major being a carpenter by trade, procured a gimlet ostensibly to make toys, but really to cut a hole through the top of the room that was ceiled with boards; this he accomplished so ingeniously that he was not detected though they were guarded and closely watched. An aperture was made by boring off a board, leaving a little at the four corners; the gimlet holes were filled with brown bread about the color of the ceiling which prevented the incisions being seen. The work consummated they waited for a stormy night and made their escape, and arrived safely at Thomaston where they were received with acclamations of joy. At what time Major Burton was promoted to Colonel I have not ascertained. He died in Warren, May 24, 1835, at the advanced age of 86. A low marble stone there marks his resting place.

Of the third generation of Burtons there are but few left that we know of. The fourth generation is quite numerous and some of them are tinctured with the old war spirit. Captain Isaac of the third generation (deceased), in the war 1812-13, surprised a British barge that came up the river, setting fires to vessels. His step-mother, Mrs. Wm. Burton, made herself useful on the occasion by procuring ammunition. His brother, Wm. 2d, one of the nineteen children of Wm. Burton, was a ship-builder and served as coast-guard in the war of 1812-13. He was killed in Warren by the falling of a tree. I. J. Burton, his only son, true to the definition of the name, has for forty-two winters acted as tackle to raise the young minds from A B C to mathematics' high degree; and for forty-five summers has been employed in ship joinering and house carpentering the most of the time.

A number of the fourth generation were in the war of the rebellion. Elbridge served about four years in the First Maine Cavalry; was corporal and commissary sergeant. Numbers of the name through nearly all generations have been ship-masters and master mechanics. There have been no ministers except those that have descended through the female lineage. The same is true of doctors; as to lawyers I don't know as there are any to be found.

In 1635 we find that three Burtons came from Europe here in different ships; Thomas, 19 years of age, came in the ship Elizabeth; Jonathan, 17 years old, came in ship Matthew; George, 23 years old, came the same year. Whether these are linked with our ancestry or not I am not able to say; nor where they located I know not.

This old fortification, around whose ruins we stand, was in 1758 guarded by six persons: Benjamin Burton and Thomas Carny, sergeants; Christian Power, John Green, Joseph Andrews, Cornelius Thornton and John Burton, privates. We find a John Burton here today in possession of the farm although one hundred and thirty years have passed away. When another century shall have passed away, may it still be found in possession of the name and guarded by the same patriotic spirit that characterized its primitive owners. We think we are justified in making the assertion, that in this building Dr. Robinson established the first Sabbath school ever held in America.

Friends, as we stand here today, in quietude, we know nothing of the fears and sorrows of our ancestors who have passed away. With an historical eye let us look into this old structure and see mothers weeping for loved ones slain; wives for husbands moaning, and children bewailing murdered fathers. Look at the slain about the fortress, and the young men weltering in their gore, with their scalps torn from their heads. The thought, even at this late day, is repulsive to the human mind. What then could have been the feelings of those who witnessed the scenes.

Look again just down the river and see two boat loads massacred and scalped by a band of merciless savages, their blood mingling with the waters, their bodies a prey to wild beasts. See, too, from the east and from the west, strong men, with their wives and helpless children, coming to this and other fortifications for refuge. Now, let us contrast our situation with theirs and lift up our eyes in adoration to God, for the blessings we today enjoy, which have been transmitted to us through the blood and toil of our noble sires.

May we emulate their virtues while with charity we depreciate their errors, knowing that they, like ourselves, were mortal; we are still so, while they have put on immortality; and we trust and hope are enjoying the rewards of a life that was spent amid toils and hardships, fears and sorrows. The day is coming when the dead shall arise; and if we are permitted to recognize each other, we shall meet them on the other shore, where parting and sorrow will be no more.

On motion of C. Prince, a vote of thanks to those who had been instrumental in getting up this reunion, and whose care and labor had added so much to its happy and successful realization, was unanimously tendered.

In the almost impromptu gathering of these family connections, thus, for the first time brought together, but little had been or could be done to arrange and make a part of their record, the many interesting facts connected with and composing a part of their family history. Mr. Burton in his record has been able to embrace many interesting incidents not found elsewhere, and was also able to tell us of others which are not embraced in that record.

It was expected that some one of the Robinson family would have been prepared to give more fully than Mr. Burton was able to do, a particular history of that family. But the one most depended upon for that duty was unavoidably absent, so that but little was presented in that direction.

Of the European ancestors of the Robinson family little is known with any degree of certainty. It is only known that quite a number of those who ultimately became settlers on the Georges River, came over as early as 1719 from North Ireland, being mostly of Scotch descent, having left Ireland because of the unfavorable surroundings connected with a residence there of those holding to the Protestant faith. Some of these first settled in Londonderry and other adjacent towns in New Hampshire; others resided for a short time at Penamaquid, Boston and other places along the coast; and who through the favorable inducements held out by Samuel Waldo, Esq., the then owner of what was called the Waldo patent, including that portion of the coast now embraced in the towns of Waldoboro, Friendship, Cushing, St. George, Thomaston, South Thomaston, Rockland and Camden, were finally led to make a permanent settlement in this neighborhood.

Dr. Moses Robinson and his brother Andrew, it is most probable, was one of these, for we find him located near Broad Cove, in the present town of Cushing, with his family of four boys, viz:—Joseph, Moses, Jr., John and Hanse, some time at least before June 31, 1837; at which time it is known Archibald, his fifth son, was born, being it is said the first white child of the settlers born on the Georges River.

This farm he afterwards left in charge of his sons, and in 1754 took up lot No. 22, in the upper town, now Warren. Andrew, his brother, was unmarried; his business as far as can be learned, embraced engineering, for he was often employed in the building of fortifications in the vicinity, and was employed in strengthening the old fort at Georges River at the time of his death, which occurred 1742.

In the years that followed, the names of Dr. Moses and his sons are often found in the records of those days. Sometimes as occupying and working his farm in the upper town; sometimes as inmates with the other settlers of the Block House and old fort, in what is now Thomaston; and sometimes at Burton's fort.

The farm at Broad Cove, after being held by one or more of his elder brothers finally came into the possession of Archibald, above mentioned, and has remained in possession of some one of his family down to this day. Most of Dr. Moses children and grandchildren married and settled in the vicinity (several of them marrying and settling on the opposite, or eastern side of the river), from whom sprang a large circle of relatives, a circle that has increased to quite large dimensions; many children of the seventh generation being present at this gathering.

Of those bearing the name of Robinson in the towns of Union, Warren, St. George and Cushing all, with a very few exceptions are branches of his family; and also to quite an extent is this the case in Rockland and Thomaston.

Of his daughters we find that Margaret his 7th child married Moses Rivers of Cushing; Mary his 8th child married Matthew Kelloch of St. George, whilst of his granddaughters, Hannah married Samuel Gilchrest; Elizabeth, Elijah Hall; and Mary, Capt. Samuel Watts; all of St. George, from whom and whose children have sprung the numerous families bearing the name of Gilchrest, Kelloch and Watts, in St. George, Cushing, Warren and Thomaston; these again branching off through the female portion into other names too numerous to mention.

A genealogy of these families, as far as it has been in our power to obtain is hereunto annexed, being copied in most cases from Eaton's Annals of Warren, and History of Thomaston and Rockland.

The officers of this gathering were appointed a committee to select time and place of reunion for next year.

After prayer by the Rev. Mr. Tyler, and the singing of the Doxology by all present, the meeting was declared adjourned until again called together by its officers, by whom this Record is respectfully submitted.
